HON. JOHN WILCOX, ex-Senator from Mariposa county, who for some time past had charge of the paddock gate at both Ingleside and Oakland tracks, has struck it rich, we are happy to state. It's a winning lottery ticket, calling for $7,500. As Mr. Wilcox has not been basking on the sunny side of Easy street for the past ten years, the host of friends of the veteran will be glad to hear of his windfall.

IRENE E., by El Rio Rey, has foaled twins (a colt and a filly) by imp. The Judge, and mare and foals are doing well at W. O'B. Macdonough's Menlo Stock Farm. A. B. Spreckels purchased Irene E. and The Judge of Zeke Abrahams some time ago. The Judge is a beautifully-bred horse, being by imp. Loyalist (sire of Lissak) out of British Queen, by Nubourne; second dam Miss Vivian, by Rattle; third dam Subterfuge, by Sir Hercules.

THERE was a report in circulation at Newport yesterday that an Eastern syndicate of turfmen composed of Mike Dwyer, Alfred Hennon Morris and others had been formed to build another track at New Orleans, to be operated next winter. "Billy Little, the New Orleans turf correspondent who is at Newport, stated that if the syndicate was an assured thing and operated another track in the Crescent City one of the tracks would have to close up.—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

A MEMPHIS (Tenn.) dispatch of April 21st said: Charles Patterson leaves to-morrow for the East with Ornament, May Hempstead, Macy, Algol and W. Overton. He handles the latter three for John W. Schorr. The Schorr stable will be split, part going to St. Louis and part to Chicago. Tommy Burns goes with the Chicago division. W. J. McGuigan ran Sea Lion up to $300 over his entered price to day. R. Kirkwood & Co. and J. & F. Grefer both claimed Ben Frost. The judges awarded him to the former.

SECRETARY GRATZ HAELEY has a scheme. It is to establish a new mile record and have it done over the Newport track. He thinks that 1:38½ of Libertine's has stood to the credit of Harlem long enough. The Newport track is certainly very fast and on a favorable day imp might do the trick, to say nothing of what some other speedy ones now at the track might be able to do under light imposts. The prize to be contended for will probably be $400 with $250 extra if a new record is established.—Daily Racing Form.

AT the first day's racing at the Newmarket (England) spring meeting Tuesday the Lorillard-Beresford stable's colt Pascota won the maiden plate, 500 sovereigns added to a sweepstakes of five sovereigns for starters, for two year-olds Wild Olive was second and Pea Soup finished third. There were fourteen starters, over the last furlong of the Ditch mile. Land Rail won the two-year old selling stake. Sardone was second and Olivette third. The race is of five sovereigns each for starters, the winner to be sold by auction for 300 sovereigns.

TWENTY-FIVE of the horses engaged in the Inaugural Handicap to be run on the first day of the St. Louis meeting have accepted. Their names and weights are as follows: Sateuma, 120; Boanerges, 117; Dr. Sheppard, 115; Time-maker, 115; Macy, 114; Ulysses, 108; Harry Duke, 107; Buckvidere, 107; Skate, 106; The Elector, 106; Dare II, 101; Fervor, 100; What'er Lou, 99; Forbush, 97; The Professor, 95; Judge Steadman, 95; Basquill, 94; Belle of Memphis, 94; Ed Farrell, 94; Our Chance, 92; Lady Hamilton, 92; Lizzie Cavalier, 90; Whirlaway, 90; Zarina, 88; Albert C., 85.

ON Monday evening Barney Schreiber met Thorpe's valet and told him to get Thorpe to ride Levy in the first race yesterday. "And whether he wins or loses, you take him," said the genial Dutchman. "I think he can win and want Thorpe up, but afterwards I don't want anything of his caliber around my barn." Levy won, ridden out, from the poorest class of horses that could be gathered together, and Thorpe's valet is not sure whether he can sell or will have to feed him. There were eight three-year-olds behind Levy, and as bay is going up, saddle horses and any kind of horses should be cheap now.

CHARLES PATTERSON, it is said, will have only eight horses in his string on the metropolitan circuit this year. He will give ten of his string to his brother George and Hiram Pierce to race in the West, and will race here with Ornament, Heber Jones, Burlesque and May Hempstead. James Dupee, the lightweight colored jockey who was quite successful in the saddle during the New Orleans meeting this winter, has been engaged by Patterson for the season. It is claimed by the racing men who saw the boy ride this winter that he has perfect hands, and that he sits a horse as comfortably as the late Isaac Murphy.

SAM HILDRETH put on his war-paint Saturday and bid Hurly Hurly up to $2,000, at which price the filly was knocked down to the well-known trainer-owner. It seems that Hildreth was sore on account of Clawson. He says he had third claim on Clawson all winter and wished to ride him on Chihuahua Saturday, but Mr. Corrigan claimed him, and the judges decided in favor of Mr. Corrigan. Hildreth says that he ran up Hurly Hurly on that account and not because Mr. Corrigan hoisted Lucky Dog earlier in the season. At $1,250 the daughter of Reilly and Helter Skelter is considered a bargain. Mr. Corrigan retaliated by claiming Chihuahua for $775, which is pretty near his full value.

AT the next monthly meeting of the Board of Stewards of the Jockey Club resolutions are certain to be passed that all exercise lads, grooms and stable help must obtain licenses from the Jockey Club before they will be permitted to enter the grounds of any racing association. No charge is to be made for the license, and it is probable that badges or buttons will be issued to racing stables to be distributed among their helpers. This rule would probably have been passed at last Thursday's meeting, but on account of the Washington races no quorum was present. The object of the amendment is to rid the turf, as much as possible, of the pest of touts whose sole object is to fleece unsuspecting race-goers by giving them spurious information on the plea that they are connected with a racing stable. Many a turf scandal has had its origin in the sinister talk of these irresponsible blatherskites.—"Centaur" in N. Y. Advertiser.

JACK ADLER, the well known announcer in the Benninga ring, is having hard times trying to pronounce Prestidigitatrice. When the filly won a few days ago the bookies and clerks were waiting for a chance to guy him if he got tongue-tied in trying to get the name out. They were expecting it, as Adler spent over an hour practicing the name the night before. Sure enough Adler broke down and the people in the ring had a lot of fun at his expense. When Prestidigitatrice won the Mount Vernon Stakes yesterday every one in the ring was prepared for another comedy, but Adler fooled them. Here is the way he announced the race: "All right, bay filly, by Springfield—Active, first; Chimissette, second; Sister Fox, third." Adler is not the only one having trouble with this filly's name. Quite recently a number have rechristened her and she is more commonly called "Presto." Prestidigitatrice is bad enough, but there will be more fun coming when the Morrisies start their other two-year-old Huizilopochtli.

A DISPATCH from Lexington, Ky., brings information that John E. Madden, former owner of Hamburg, has bought all of the Woodburn crop of yearlings. It is an important transaction and one that will be sure to reap a good round profit for the shrewd turfman. Seventeen of the youngsters—seven fillies and ten colts—are by Falsetto, out of the following dams: Barbiche, dam of Miss Dixie and Dolando; Veronica, dam of Vengeance; Addie C, dam of Chorister, Chant, Rexsetto and Amelia II; Vermula, dam of Colonel Atmore; Penumbra, dam of Pancho, Penn P., Perhaps and Josephine; Queenly, dam of Elizabeth and Mount Washington; Quickmarch, dam of Two Step, Pottowattomie and Old Pepper; Virgeline, dam of Roland Reed and Old Saugur; Itinerate, sister to Mary K.; Jennie June, dam of Alto June and Myrtle II; Glimpse, dam of Glee Boy, Glance and Pouting; Ca chuca, dam of Flute, Fresno, etc.; Manola, dam of Protection, Tremola, etc.; Minnarette, dam of Lady Washington; Lady McDonald, dam of Dundee, King Mac, etc.; Pearl Thorn, dam of Counter Tenor, Pearl Set, etc., and Cambrie, dam of Nellie Osborne and Moch. Twelve head—five colts and seven fillies—are by Hermance and out of such well-bred dams as Grecia, half sister to Petrel; Areca, dam of Juna, B Flat and Kentucky Belle; Canaria, dam of Catbird, of Kingbird and Coronet; Acoustic, dam of Dominion, Vocalic, Telephone, etc.; Lucetto, dam of Keime, Shanty Bob, Saleetta and Lucid, and Idler, dam of Deform, Truant, Quindaro Belle, King Idler and Nell Swift. The remaining one is by Lisbon out of Patrimony, the dam of Patron, Lisimony, Keenan, Inheritance and Numeroet.

ON Monday last, at Memphis, the negotiations were concluded by which Ornament and May Hempstead were purchased by Messrs. W. P. Norton and H. P. Headley. Mr. Patterson disposing of the two cracks for an amount reported to be $35,000. As it is well known that Mr. Patterson declined $25,000 for Ornament offered by an Eastern breeder last fall at the close of the racing season, and as May Hempstead is still considered the best two-year-old in the West, the price given above is doubtless correct. Mr. Headley is well known as the proprietor of Beaumont and La Belle stock farm, near this city, and as the breeder of Ornament, as is Mr. Norton as the owner of Wenonah Stud (home of Meta, Hypocrite and other famous broodmares) near Hopkinsville, Ky. Mr. Norton is a young man of ample means and is well known as a club man in New York, where he resides the greater portion of the year. Both horses will be raced this season in the colors of Messrs. Norton and Headley. May Hempstead is still at Nashville, where she has about recovered from the accident which temporarily stopped her racing. She was not seriously injured by the collision, a bad jar being the only effects, but that accident was followed by a light attack of the fever, from which nearly all of the horses in the South have suffered this spring. She is now considered all right and both she and Ornament will, in a few days, be shipped to Louisville, whence they will go East in charge of Mr. Patterson. Ornament will, next season, probably retire to the stud and will be located in the vicinity of Lexington, probably at Beaumont, the place where he was foaled.—Thoroughbred Record.

A Dry Year Opportunity.

No race meeting was held under the auspices of the Agricultural Association at the Napa track in 1897, and none will be held this season. So said a Director of the Association this morning. The last meeting held here two years ago was not a success financially, and a number of the Directors had to go down into their pockets when the time came to settle bills. They are not disposed to keep doing that sort of thing.—Napa Register.

In this year of drought in California there are a few counties in the State where good crops of fruit, hay and grain will be raised in spite of the fact that the rainfall is far below its normal amount. Two of the most conspicuous in this regard are Sonoma and Napa counties, the beauty of whose scenery and the product of whose vines are praised by tourists and connoisseurs the world over. Thousands of dollars have been expended by the enterprising citizens of these counties in making known the many advantages of climate and soil possessed by their sections, the purpose being, of course, to induce a desirable class of people to purchase land and build homes among them. Some of this money has been expended very judiciously and some of it otherwise.

This year Napa and Sonoma counties have an opportunity to conspicuously advertise their many advantages over other parts of the State, that should not be allowed to pass unheeded. In some portions of California where annual trotting meetings have been successfully conducted in the past, there will be none this year owing to the utter failure of the grain and hay crops. In Napa and Sonoma these crops promise to be better than usual. If the Santa Rosa and the Napa people will announce to the public that a week's meeting will be given this year in each of those towns it would attract more attention to the Sonoma and Napa valleys than could be drawn in any other manner. Santa Rosa has an excellent track, but no meeting has been held there for years. There is nothing more certain than a well managed trotting meeting can be made to pay a profit there. Santa Rosa horsemen are as enthusiastic as any in California, and some of the best breeding farms, on which are some of California's choicest stock, are located in that vicinity. Napa has a splendidly appointed and fast track, and, like Santa Rosa, is easy of access. The last meeting given in Napa was in 1896. It was not a financial success, because the Association tried to give $1,000 purses in a $500 year. It was a praiseworthy attempt, and the meeting was a success in every way except that the receipts were a few hundred dollars less than the disbursements. It was not the fault of the directors, but a result of the hard times, that the gate receipts and entrance money were less than usual, and had the purses been as small as those given by other associations that year, there would have been a balance of profit. This year if the directors of the Napa Association will arrange for a meeting and make as good an effort as those of former years, they can be "on velvet," as the slang phrase goes, before the gates to the track are thrown open; that is they can be assured against loss even though the gate receipts should drop far below any former record. It is to be hoped that the citizens of Santa Rosa and Napa will not allow this dry year opportunity to escape them. It will be an advertisement that will be worth a great deal to both counties and can be had not only without expense, but can be made to pay a profit.

Rate of Speed Measured.

A horse traveling a mile in three minutes travels a quarter mile in 45 seconds and covers 29 feet and 4 inches in a second.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:50 travels a quarter in 42½ seconds and covers 31 feet in a second. A 2:50 horse will gain over a 3:00 horse 1 foot and 8 inches in a second and 70 feet and 10 inches in a quarter.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:40 travels a quarter in 40 seconds and covers 33 feet in a second. A 2:40 horse gains over a 2:50 horse 2 feet in a second and 80 feet in a quarter.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:30 travels a quarter in 30½ seconds and covers 35 feet in a second. A 2:30 horse gains over a 2:40 horse 2 feet in a second and 75 feet in a quarter.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:20 travels a quarter in 35 seconds and covers 37 feet 8 inches in a second. A 2:20 horse gains over a 2:30 horse 2 feet 8 inches in a second and 93 1-3 feet in a quarter.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:16 travels a quarter in 34 seconds and 38 feet 9 inches in a second. A 2:16 horse gains over a 2:20 horse 1 foot and 1 inch in a second and 36 feet and 10 inches in a quarter.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:12 travels a quarter in 33 seconds and covers 40 feet in a second. A 2:12 horse will gain over a 2:16 horse 1 foot and 3 inches in a second and 41 feet 3 inches in a quarter.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:10 travels a quarter in 32½ seconds and covers 40 feet and 7 inches in a second. A 2:10 horse will gain over a 2:12 horse 7 inches in a second, 19 feet in a quarter and 76 feet in a mile.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:08 travels a quarter in 32 seconds and covers 41 feet 3 inches in a second. A 2:08 horse will gain over a 2:10 horse 8 inches in a second, and 21 feet 3 inches in a quarter and 85 feet in a mile.

A horse traveling a mile in 2:04 travels a quarter in 31 seconds and covers 42 feet 7 inches in a second. A 2:04 horse will gain over a 2:08 horse 1 foot and 4 inches in a second, 41 feet and 4 inches in a quarter and 165 feet and 4 inches in a mile.

A horse traveling a mile in two minutes travels a quarter in 30 seconds and covers 44 feet in a second. A two-minute horse will gain over a 2:04 horse 1 foot and 5 inches in a second, 42½ feet in a quarter, 170 feet in a mile.

A two-minute horse will beat a three-minute horse 1,760 feet, or just one-third of a mile, both going the full mile.

John R. Gentry, traveling a mile in 2:00½, covers 43 feet 9 2-3 inches in a second. Star Pointer, traveling a mile in 1:59½, covers 44 feet 1 1-2 inches in a second and will gain upon John R. Gentry, both going to their records, 53 feet in the full mile.

Alix, traveling a mile in 2:03½, the fastest trotting record, covers 42 foot 7½ inches in a second. Star Pointer will gain over Alix 1 foot 7 5-6 inches in a second.

The fastest pacing record to date, 1:59½, is 197 feet faster in the full mile than the fastest trotting record, 2:03½.

Kentucky Trotting Association.

The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association has announced through Secretary Horace Wilson the following stake program for the meeting next October. The events close in June:

- The Kentucky Trotting Futurity, for three-year-old trotters, $16,000.
- The Futurity, two-year-old division, $5,000.
- The Futurity, for two year-old pacing division, $1,000.
- The Transylvania, for 2:13 class trotters, $5,000.
- The Ashland, for 2:11 class trotters, $4,000.
- The Tennessee, for 2:09 class pacers, $4,000.
- The Walnut Hall Farm Cup, for 2:17 class trotters, $3,000.
- The Bluegrass, for 2:19 class trotters, $2,000.
- The Wilson, for 2:19 class pacers, $2,000.
- The Johnston, for 2:24 class trotters, $2,000.
- The West, for 2:29 class trotters, $2,000.
- The Kentucky, for three-year-old trotters, $2,000.
- The Lexington, for two-year-old trotters, $2,000.

The aggregate value of these events is $50,000, to which is to be added $25,000 to be given in purses. This makes a total of $75,000, more money than will be hung up by any other association in this country this year. Several of the fixed events are renewed for the twenty sixth consecutive time, namely the Kentucky, the Lexington, the Bluegrass and the Ashland. This year's Futurity is the seventh, and is now considered a choice prize indeed. Oro Wilkes, 2:11; Nelly A., 2:13; Beuzetta, 2:06½; Oakland Baron, 2:09½; Rose Croix, 2:13½, and Thorn 2:14 won it in the order named. In it this year are the best in the land, and it promises to be a grand race.

The heaviest betting race in the world is the famous Transylvania Stake, for although there are larger stakes trotted, it has become so noted that the honor of winning it is considered above the money value. The winner of this event is usually the alleged champion of the year. It will be noticed that it has been cut down from 2:14 to 2:13 this time. Just what difference this will make in the race cannot be foreseen. The action was caused by other associations offering stakes for the 2:14 class, and the Kentucky Association desired as possible to retain the distinctness. Among the horses which the change admits are Bingen, 2:12½; American Belle, 2:12½; Baron Crisp, 2:12½, and Oratorio, 2:1.3

The Walnut Hall Cup has been increased $500 over what it was last year. It promises to be a popular stake.

Colusa's Spring Meeting.

Up in Colusa county, where ten thousand acres is not considered an extra large grain field, and where the breeding of the light harness horse, though engaged in by many of the farmers, has not been classed as a leading industry, they are going to give a race meeting next month. Among the residents of Colusa is a gentleman by the name of E. C. Peart, who is a trotting horse enthusiast and it is to his efforts in a great degree that this meeting is due. Some time ago the Colusa Jockey Club was organized. Oscar Robinson, a leading attorney of Colusa, was elected President, and F. E. Wright named as Secretary. Mr. Peart was selected as the manager and a spring meeting was announced through the columns of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. The date selected was May 10th and the balance of the week following. Over $2,000 in purses were advertised and a letter from Mr. Peart, bearing date of April 25th is at hand giving the names of the horses entered for the various events. Considering the "dry out" that has come upon that section in common with many other portions of the State, the entry list is a good one. There are now over thirty horses in training on the Colusa track, and the prospects for a successful meeting are excellent. This is not a regular district meeting, but is rather a home affair gotten up principally to encourage the few breeders of trotting, pacing and running horses who live in Colusa county. That good contests will be the result is certain, and that the Colusa county people, and residents of the adjoining counties will attend in large numbers is a foregone conclusion. The programme with list of entries as sent us by Mr. Peart is as follows:

FIRST DAY.

Trotting, 2:20 Class. Purse $140—Billups, Cameo L., Tilton B., Duke, Colusa Futurity for trotting foals of 1895. Value of Stake $174—Don Mentor, Golden Rose, Fairrose colt, Colusa Belle.

Running 5-8 mile dash. Purse $100—Entries close May 9th.

SECOND DAY.

Trotting, 2:24 Class. Purse $100—Prince, Cameo L., Mary P., Talovey, Tilton B., Billy Doty.

Trotting Stake, two-year-olds. Value $275—Genevra, Laura Q., Rosie Waldstein, Olivette, Summeret Queen. Elmont, Cricket, Sutor, Lena's Second, Mamie K., Luc ras, Yale, Alex Brown, Silver Bell.

Hurdle Race, one and one-quarter mile, over four hurdles. Purse $90—Entries close May 10th.

THIRD DAY.

Trotting, one-half mile heats, for horses without records. Purse $100—Don Greeley, E. C. Wilkes, Silver Queen, Dora Doe, Lottery J.

Pacing, 2:40 Class, did not fill, but a purse will be made in its place.

Running Handicap, one mile. Purse $100—Entries close May 11th.

FOURTH DAY.

The Peart Stake for Yearling Trotters, one-half mile heats. Purse $125—C. W. D., Charley, Lady Elsie, Susie R., Lady Rose, No Name, Wallflower, Cydria.

Trotting, two-year-olds that won no money in two-year-old stake—Purse $90—Entries close May 12th.

Trotting, 2:40 Class. Purse $90—Lottery J., Billy Doty, Lena Holly, Valdemar, Mary P.

Running, five-eighths mile dash for Colusa county horses—Entries close May 12th.

FIFTH DAY.

Trotting, free-for-all. Purse $100—Billups, Cameo L., Duke, Tilton B.

Trotting, 3:00 class. Purse $75—Lottery J., Don Greeley, Colusa Belle, Golden Rose.

Running, three-quarter mile dash. Purse $90—Entries close May 13th.

From the Islands.

HONOLULU, April 10, 1898.

DEAR BREEDER:—The first number of your paper issued since the change of ownership has reached me, and I must congratulate you on the improvements made. Knowing your readers are interested in the doings of horses down here, I send you the summaries of the races held on the track at Kapiolani Park yesterday. There was a general suspension of business in the city during the afternoon, and it seemed as though all Honolulu was going to the races. The grand stand at the track was filled by 1:30 o'clock, and the club and private stands were occupied with gaily dressed holiday parties. There must have been fifty carriages immediately to the right and left of the judges' stand, and as the Hawaiian Government Band was present, the lovely scene was enlivened by beautiful music. How these Kanakas can play! I think their music is as sweet and soul-stirring as any I have ever heard.

The day was fine, though there was perhaps a little too much wind for fast driving. The track is a very good one, much better than I expected to see, but the horses entered had been worked very little, consequently were in no condition to go fast miles. The whole of the Waikiki road, which is the name given to the drive which leads from the city to the park, had been nicely sprinkled, and the same treatment had been given all the driveways inside the grounds, adding much to the comfort and pleasure of those who attended.

The prices charged for admission to the track were as follows:

Jockey Club Stand, $1.50; Grand Stand, $1; Bleachers 50 cents; Carriages, $1, and 50 cents for each occupant.

The officers of the day were:

Committee of Arrangements—W. M. Cunningham, Jas. Dodd, J. J. Sullivan, Chas. Bellina, Jas. Quinn, Wm. Norton, C. J. McCarthy.

Judges—Capt. A. N. Tripp, Dr. F. L. Miner, Capt. J. H. Black.

Starter—C. B. Wilson, with W. T. Monsarrat as assistant.

Timers—J. J. Torbert and S. G. Wilder.

Clerk—T. P. Cummins.

In Charge of Saddling Paddock—Horace Crabbe.

The races were well contested in most instances and the betting was lively. Several swell bets were made—one of $850 even being placed in three sections by an admirer of Sympathetic's Last for that old member of By Holly's San Francisco string to win the three-quarter mile dash. The summaries of the races are as follows:

Running, three-eighths of a mile dash for Hawaiian bred horses, purse $50—Chas. Joe Daniels first, Twinkle 3d. Time 0:39.

Trotting and Pacing, 3:00 class, purse $75. Mile heats.
Irish Lassie	1 1
Violin	2 2
Time—2:38, 2:32½.

Running, one-half mile dash, purse $50.—Royallist first, Twinkle second, Joe Daniels third. Time, 0:51 1-5.

Running, three-quarters of a mile dash, purse $50.—Magnet first, Sympathetic's Last second, Royallist third. Time, 1:17½.

Trotting and pacing, mile heats, three in five, purse $100.
Wela Ka Hoo	2 1 1
Creole	1 2 2
Telephone	dis
Time—2:41½, 2:33, 2:34, 2:37 4 5.

Creole broke continually after the first heat and could not be kept on his feet by his driver.

Running, mile dash, purse $100. Sympathetic's Last first, Joe Daniels second. Time 2:05.

Trotting and paces. Mile heats. Purse $75.
Watermelon Joe	1 1
Time—2:41½, 2:42.

We learn that there are quite a number of horses coming here from California, and at the big meeting to be given June 11th it is given out by those in "the know" that the island records will all be smashed. I shall let you know all about it when it comes off. Yours truly,

THE SOJOURNER.

[We desire to thank our correspondent for his very interesting letter and request that in future letters he will give the pedigrees of the heat winners at least if it is possible to obtain them.—ED BREEDER.]

From Oregon.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—A few lines from this, the land of plenty, may be cheerful reading to you Californians just now. As I write a mild web-foot shower is coming down and you can nearly see the young grass shooting from joint to joint, while the wheat fields are waving in a luxuriant growth of wheat, knee high to the next Governor of Oregon, who is a pretty tall man, from the feet up. Everything looks good in Oregon this year, crops of all kind are better than usual, with an increased acreage, while the prospects for prices are equally as good as the crops. With the prospects for good crops people here are in good spirits, and are arousing from their state of lethargy, to that of activity. Many are the things that show a marked improvement here over last year, and the one that is attracting some attention just now is the race meeting to be held at Irvington Park, June 25th to July 4th. Portland has always been a good race town, and the absence of racing last season has made the the people here over anxious to see good racing again. We are pleased to announce that good men are at the back of the meeting here, who have plenty of money to keep their obligation. The programme is being arranged this week for a mixed meeting and fully $12,000 will be hung up in purses.

Wm. Ayers whom the horsemen and public have utmost confidence in will most likely handle the speculative part of the meeting, which has the promise of being very good as the farmers in this country have money in the bank, and one dollar per bushel for wheat is the hand writing on the wall, for their growing crops. Harness horses have been shut out in Montana this season, and no doubt a goodly number will be here, and we cordially invite the California horsemen to come up as well, and get a bite of green grass, and breathe and take the ozone of Oregon. We have quite a number of horses in training throughout this country, and we promise our visiting horsemen entertainment of high class order. The meeting here is the opening of the North Pacific racing circuit which includes Spokane, Tacoma, North Yakima Walla Walla in Washington, Victoria and Vancouver in B. C., Portland, Pendleton, Independence, and La Grande in Oregon and Boise City in Idaho. Readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN can look out for the program in next issue.

Yours truly,

PHOENIX.

Races at Lemoore.

A great deal of interest is being taken by the local people in the coming racing events to be held at Lemoore, Kings county, on May 20th and 21st, under the auspices of the Lemoore Track Association. Indications point to a large number of entries and a big attendance. The following is the programme of the two days races as prepared by the Committee on Races—R. Scally, Wm. Grider and Chas. Bailey—the races to begin at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp of each day.

FIRST DAYS RACES—First Race—Running—Saddle horses three-eighths mile and repeat.

Second Race—Trot or Pace—Buggy horses, three to start, best two in three, track horses barred.

Third Race—Running—Ladies' race, lady riders, one mile dash.

Fourth Race—Running—Novelty race, one mile, pay at each one-fourth. Four equal moneys.

SECOND DAY'S RACING—First Race—2:40 class, trot or pace, best two in three, three to start.

Second Race—Running—Ten-mile race, no more than five horses to start in each string, three strings to start, one rider for each string, rider to change horses at judges' stand.

Third Race—Trot or pace, Free-for-all—Three to start, best two in three.

Fourth Race—Running—Free-for-all, one-half mile and repeat, three to start.

Entries will close on May 16th, at 6 o'clock P. M. All correspondence to be addressed to W. D. Madden, Secretary of the Association, P. O. box 305, Lemoore, Cal.

The harness races will be held under the rules of the National Trotting Association of 1896-97.

Horse-Breeding for Farmers.

The most profitable horse for the average farmer to raise would be the largest and highest quality of draft horse that he can possibly raise. Be sure to get size and quality by selecting the best quality of draft mares of good, smooth finish and as large as possible and breed them to the highest class and best quality of draft horse that you can possibly find and then feed them so as to give them a continual growth from their mother's milk to the time they are ready for the market, which is between four and five years old. By this kind of breeding, with the proper care, you can produce a draft horse that will weigh 1,500 to 1,800 and possibly 2,000 lbs. This class of heavy draft horse has become very scarce and high and some very rare specimens have sold as high as $300 per head here lately. There would be plenty of money in raising them at the present price. An exporter who is buying several carloads each week for the English market shipped recently forty head of draft horses weighing from 1,500 to 1,800 lbs, for which he paid $205 per head, so you can see these horses are nearly as high as they used to be and will continue to get higher all the time. The medium grades have not advanced so much, while the small and rough horses have advanced but little.

The next in demand is a bus horse. If you have a small compact, smooth mare that is not suitable for raising the coach or light-harness horse breed to her a Percheron and you will get a nice bus or express horse that will be about as profitable as the heavy draft. The demand is increasing for them every day. They weigh 1,300 to 1,400 lbs.

There is no question but that there is going to be a great shortage in the supply of horses for a few years to come. There has hardly been any colts raised since 1894, and we have not begun to feel the effect of these short crops of colts as we will in a few years more. We believe the best quality of draft horses in one or two years will be as high as they ever were. There is a great export demand upon us, and it is increasing every day as business increases and it will not be long before this class of horses will be extremely high. The horse business has a grand future, and we believe there never was a time when it offered so great inducements for breeding and raising good horses as at the present time. The scarcity of good horses and the strong demand both foreign and domestic surely means high prices and a stronger demand than ever was known before.

Racing at Redding.

There will be a race meet at Redding during the month of June. Several weeks ago a committee of business men circulated a subscription list about the town and secured subscriptions amounting to over $600.

E. A. Marshall has secured permission from Under Sheriff Bassett, owner of the Redding race track, to make all the necessary improvements and to use the track for racing purposes.

The programme of the meet will include running, trotting and pacing events. A feature of the programme will be a match race between Mr. Marshall's bay mare Ruby M., 2:12½, and J. J. Grinnell's bay mare Ruby.

What They Say of Us.

"I desire to compliment you on the improvements made in the BREEDER. It will be a pleasure for me to still continue to contribute from time to time such matter as I feel capable of writing."—F. W. Covey, Superintendent Palo Alto Stock Farm.

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN comes to us this week enlarged and bettered in its make-up. New departments have been added, and in its present shape the BREEDER will not suffer as to matter or form when compared with the best turf journals on the other side of the Rockies—Salinas Journal.

We are glad to note a marked improvement in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, which has passed into the control of Mr. Judson K. Moore, formerly of this State. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, since its foundation by Joe Cairn Simpson, has been one of the best turf papers, and it now would seem to be better than ever.—New York Trotter and Pacer.

I wish to compliment you on the change you have made in the BREEDER—first in the quality of the paper and second in the good, live, up-to-date turf news that has appeared in it lately. In its present shape I think it is one of the best in the country. Long live the BREEDER and long may it prosper!—James H. McCormick, Trainer for Burns & Waterhouse.

A COUPLE of Modoc county farmers have contracted with parties in the central portions of the State to pasture 600 head of horses at the rate of $1.50 per head per month until the first of December. They will be taken to Modoc county this week. The contractors are only responsible for the horses that might stray from the band, and then only at the rate of $10 a head.

Raisins for Horse Feed.

A raisin grower near Fresno who was unable to sell his crop last year at remunerative prices, thinks he is solving the problem of decreasing the supply of pudding fruit. He is feeding raisins to his horses instead of barley. Here is the way he puts it for the Fresno Republican:

"Barley is worth $30 a ton and raisins from $18 to $30. It is difficult to sell good raisins for over $20 a ton. Some time ago I concluded to use raisins as horse feed instead of grain. An experiment I bought an old horse and fed the animal twelve pounds of raisins a day. The nag was worn out and poor, but in a short time he began to fatten and grow sleek. The food seemed very nourishing and the horse became plump and full of life. I sold the animal back to the original owner for $30—three times what I gave for him.

"Twelve pounds of raisins a day is equal to twenty pounds of barley. At the present price of grain this would make the food value of raisins about $60 a ton, leaving a profit of $42 a ton over the actual selling price of $18. The raisins also make good cattle and hog food, but I have not experimented much in that line.

"Horses seem to relish the raisins and keep in good condition while being worked. Several of my neighbors will follow my example and use raisins for stock feed. This is a good way to get rid of the surplus now in the hands of the farmers."—Visalia Times.

Colts That Sell Best.

An Ohio correspondent recently inquired as to the colors of horses in market, stating that buyers in his locality make quite a difference in price on account of color. His question was referred to Chicago and Buffalo reporters, whose replies are given below. "Watson" writes from Chicago: It is hard to give an exact answer as to the discount on horses of undesirable colors. On work horses it does not make so much difference, but where a buyer wants a fine driver or coach horse he will pay a big premium for the right colors, which are bays, browns, chestnut sorrels and blacks. Our Buffalo correspondent says: For drivers bays or chestnuts without white marks are the most sought after, all other points, such as style, action, etc., being equal, but good roans also sell well and come next. In drafts dark bays or well-spotted dapple grays have the preference, with good roans next; but if well built, chunky and without blemish the color marks do not seem to make the same difference in prices proportionately for these as for drivers or coach horses.—National Farmer and Stockman.

News From the North.

[Portland Rural Spirit.]

Miss Mann, the dam of Bill Frazier, 2:14, has foaled a bay filly by Alexis, 2:18 this spring.

Printers Ink, by Altamont, out of the good race mare Little Maid, 2:18, is the pride of Marion county.

Was there ever a case recorded of anyone making much or little by running down their neighbor's horse to a prospective buyer?

Wm. Belond writes from Seattle that he will have Royal Jib, 2:20½, Diario and Tom Padden in training this season and will enter them here in our July meeting.

Ed Mosher who has been employed on the Baldwin ranch in California has returned to Oregon. After visiting his parents in Independence, he will get together a stable of trotters and pacers for the circuit here this year.

August Fricksen of this city has purchased from Jerome Smith, of Vancouver, Wash., the good green pacer Arline by Malheur out of the dam of Ella T., 2:08½. This filly has shown some very fast miles in her work, but has never faced the starter yet. She has been placed in Sam Casto's hands and will likely make the green pacers go along some.

The Portland Racing Association organized for the purpose of holding a series of race meetings here, have leased the Irvington race track for a term of three years paying the first years rent in advance. Mr. G. H. Dammeier of this city has been selected secretary and manager of the new organization and will have full control of the entire meeting. The placing of the management in the hands of one man is a wise move, for it often times happens that business comes up that needs immediate attention, and it is better that authority be given one man to act on such occasions without the delay of calling a meeting of five or more directors. Mr. Dammeier has outlined his plan of management and to use his motto is to pay as he goes. He has the money in the bank to operate on, and every horse will be paid promptly and strictly as per advertised conditions. He intends to give his first meeting June 25th to July 4th, and will hang up no less than $10,000 for a mixed meeting. The programme of which will be out within a week. Men and teams will be put to work on the track at once, and everything will be put in first-class condition for the opening meeting.

Sulky Notes.

When Gocher Gets the Pictures.

When Gocher gets the pictures of the drivers from "the coast" And scans their physiognomies—it is no idle boast To say he'll think he's struck the finest-looking lot of men That ever sat behind a horse or drove a half in :10. There'll be Durfee with his glasses on, a smile upon his face, As though he knew McKinney's colts were first in every race; And when the Secretary sees the "phiz" of "Farmer" Bunch, To get a Boodle ticket he will surely have a hunch. On looks he'll think this coast will surely take a lot of beating When he gazes on the countenance of handsome Tommy Keating; And that man in white, McDowell, will be giving him no blarney If he writes, "I drive the champion of all—grey Carlyle Carue." And Nelson, who has driven many heats below 2:20, Can give some people cards and spades and beat them then a plenty Van Bokkelen's photograph will look as handsome as the rest, And Stinson, though he carries weight, will be among the best. Johnny Perkins, Maben, Lafferty and Bill "Diablo" Murray, If all were grouped upon one card would create such a flurry That the California ladies would come from far and near And beseech the Secretary for the handsome souvenir. Then Hodges from Los Angeles, and Franklin, Holmes and Crow, With Baker, Gray and Hellman, are good-looking as men go; And Bigelow, Hoy and Sullivan will never stop the clocks, Though Hogoboom might talk one down, and so could Milo Knox. John Hippen's not a homely man, of course he doesn't class With Owens, Nash and Pender, or Donathan or Haas. Dan Mizner, Edge and Bandow, Dennis Gannon, yes, and Hines, And Tom Smith of Vallejo—none too old to hold the lines— And when they get their licenses I'll wager you a half That each and every one will make a handsome photograph. Ben Chaboya and Alviso, tho' they both have Spanish names, Are loyal to the stars and stripes, and admired by our dames. Pete Williams, when it comes to looks, is not outside the money, And quite a few brunettes will say, "Mista Cecil is ma honey." There are many more I don't recall and all have looks to burn, And each must face the camera and be licensed in his turn. So this is why I say that when their pictures reach the East Mr. Gocher 'll think he's surely got a rich pictorial feast, And he'll swear this State has got the finest-looking lot of men That ever sat behind a horse or drove a beat in :10.

D. L. H.

REMEMBER that the Pleasanton meeting will be held to day.

THE 17 hand pacer Big Ike 2:13½ is in "Lon" McDonald's string.

NANCY HANKS 2:04 foaled a boy colt by Bingen 2:12½ on April 6.

COL. KUSER 2:11 won the principal races at the meeting at Nice.

COLUSA's entry list is published in full in this department this week.

THE British trotting record is 2:24½, made in 1893. The pacing record is 2:29 4-5.

TOMMY BRITTON, 2:11½, is touted as the best thing in Ed Geers' string this season.

A FILLY by McKinney was bred to that horse last year, and will foal in a few days.

THE first mare bred to Guy Wilkes after he was taken to Ohio, has foaled twin fillies.

NEARLY 2,000 patents have been issued for horse shoes, but the old shoe is still in use.

NUTWOOD 2:18½ has 99 producing sons, while 75 of his daughters have thrown standard speed.

IBEX, a son of Commodore Belmont and Lilac, by Tomahawk, is now located in Mendocino county.

OTTINGER, 2:09½, will be raced in the East this year, his new owner having already placed him in the hands of a trainer.

THE 2:27 class, pacing, for the Detroit Blue Ribbon meeting, failed to fill and has been declared off. The other events filled well.

C. W. WILLIAMS says that he will be obliged to turn away at least 200 mares whose owners wish to breed to Allerton, 2:09½.

HONOLULU horsemen will hold a big meeting June 11th. Read our correspondent's account of the meeting held there on the 9th inst.

THE entrance fee for trotters and pacers at the Breeders Meeting will be five per cent., with five per cent. additional from money winners.

H. W. COIL, of Woodland, owns a two-year-old colt by Gossiper, out of a mare by Vasto, that is one of the best-looking youngsters in that county.

FROM the way they are going it looks as though the McKinneys will be right up in the front rank of money-winners in California again this season.

IT is generally conceded that there will be no docked horses in the cavalry. Uncle Sam is a sensible old person and don't buy stub-tailed horses.

STAR POINTER, the champion pacer, in pacing a mile in 1:59½, would have beaten Alix, the champion trotter 197 feet, when she made her record of 2:03½.

P. L. NASH is training a string of horses at the Hollister track for the Breeders' meeting to be held at Oakland in June. He has that fast but heretofore erratic pacer Col. Benton, 2:14½; Menlo Belle, 2:27 and a two-year old colt by Col. Benton that is said to be very fast.

MR. T. D. SMEDLEY, of Bradford, Penn., has two fillies by Star Pointer, 1:59½, that will be watched with much interest as they are to be campaigned this year.

WE are informed by "Farmer" Bunch that no more mares are wanted this year for Boodle, 2:12½, as it is his intention to campaign him on the California circuit.

THERE has never been a hopped horse purchased for export to Europe. One set of harness is all that the Europeans can be induced to place on a horse.

HAZEL DELL, 2:15, by Stranger, is stone blind, and took her record after she lost her sight. She will be trained again this year and is much faster than her record.

THE price of good road horses has advanced materially in Oregon during the past few months. Animals that went begging last year at $40 now bring $100 readily.

WE are informed by "Farmer" Bunch that no more mares are wanted for Boodle, 2:12½, this year, as it is his intention to campaign the horse on the California circuit this year.

CHOICE brood mares are selling far too low. In less than two years the men who have secured good brood mares will more than double their money and will have the produce besides.

A PHILADELPHIA paper is authority for the statement that the daily attendance at the annual meetings of the Bethlehem (Pa.) Fair Association varies from 40,000 to 60,000.

MR. VAN BOKKELEN will take his string of trotters East this year. He has Stamboulette entered in the 2:19 class at Detroit this year, and we hope he will win first money in that $2,500 purse.

"TROTWOOD" sententiously remarks that when the Southerners face the Spanish foe in battle "they will come on Tom Hal pacers, dead game and ready to go in 1:59½, dead beats and out for blood."

B. O. VAN BOKKELEN has Wayland W., 2:12½; Stamboulette, 2:19½; Ellert, 2:19, and two or three others in his training stable at San Mateo. He drove Wayland W. a half in 1:06 the other day.

MR. BECKERS was asked by telegram from an Eastern man recently to set a price on Zombro, 2:11. He named $10,500 as the figure in his reply. It is said that the Easterner was ready to give $5,000 cash.

LAST year 9,000 broncos were killed and canned for shipment to Europe at the Linnton, Oregon, packing company's plant. They are driven in from the ranges and are generally very small and wild as deer.

S. H. CRANE, the well known horse breeder of Turlock, has taken twenty head of horses to Dyea, Alaska. They cost him about $75 each delivered in Alaska, but it is said he will receive double that amount for them.

THE trotters and pacers are moving faster in California this year than ever before. From all the tracks where training is going on come reports of fast quarters and halves, and it begins to look as though the California records will be smashed this year.

HORSE owners in this part of the State will wish it were not such a far cry to Inyo county, where good pasturage can be had for horses at sixty cents per head per month. Two hundred and fifty head were driven to Inyo from Santa Barbara county last week.

COL. PARK HENSHAW's trotters are in the hands of James Sullivan again and are being worked at the Willows track. The Colonel thinks he will make eighteen or twenty entries for the races to be held during the first two weeks of the Breeders Meeting, which will open at Oakland, June 25th.

Is there anything the matter with your bike? Take it to W. J. Kenney, the Bikeman at 531 Valencia street and he will make it as good as new. Or if more convenient to you he will rent you a new or a second hand sulky, for one day or a year. He buys and sells sulkies or builds new ones to order.

OWING to the great scarcity of feed in California pastures this year, thus making it especially hard on horse breeders, Mr. Green has concluded to reduce Directum's fee from $100 to $75. At this figure the champion trotting stallion of the world should certainly be well patronized by those who wish to breed horses that will race.

F. W. KELLEY, secretary Pacific District Board of Appeals of the National Trotting Association, is authorized to issue licenses to drivers and riders for this Coast. Applications should be sent to him at the office of the Association. Licenses are issued free of charge, but the application must be accompanied by photographs of the applicant.

ABADINE, by Wilkesdale, owned by Mrs. J. P. Callendine of Sacramento, has foaled a colt by Diawood, 2:21½, the crack two-year-old son of the great Diablo. This is Diawood's first colt and is marked exactly by him. Abadine has won many prizes in the show ring at the State Fair, although she is but five years old, and Mrs. Callendine places great value on this colt.

EUROPEAN horsemen are trying to buy Stamboul, 2:07½, former champion trotting stallion and present champion of the show ring. His owner, Mr. E. H. Harriman, of New York has been asked to place a price on the horse, and says it will cost more to get him than European buyers have yet paid for an American horse. As Stamboul was bred in California everyone in this State takes a pride in the great champion.

THE Golden Gate Park Association held a meeting last Tuesday evening and appointed the following committee on track: J. W. Thompson, Frank O'Kane and E. J. Gallagher. The Association proposes to hang up prizes for trotting horses owned by people who have never raced them for money, the event to be held on Decoration Day. Jim Chesley, Ed Aigeltinger and others will have their nags out, and the proceeds of the day will go to the improvement of the speed track of Golden Gate Park.

DIRECTLY, 2:07½, is now in the string of Geo. West, the Chicago trainer and driver, and is said to be doing well and showing all his old-time speed. Directly is now six years old, but has never succeeded in reducing his two-year old mark. Mr. West thinks the little black fellow can go faster than his mark by several seconds if he gets to the races in good condition.

Few cities in the United States can boast of as beautiful a drive as that known as the White House Road at Portland, Oregon. Its natural beauties are grand, winding along as it does on the banks of the Willamette. The Multnomah Driving Club, of which H. C. Breeden is President and W. S. Wisdom Secretary, expended $1,200 last year in keeping this road in shape and by so doing assisted materially in advancing the interest in road horses in that community.

AN adjourned meeting of the Board of Review will be held at the Palmer House, Chicago, at 11 o'clock A. M., on Tuesday, May 10, 1898. All communications intended for the consideration of the Board must be forwarded to the secretary not later than April 30th. The Board of Review is empowered to act in place of the full Board, with the same authority and jurisdiction, and at the above meetings will consider business arising in each and all of the districts.

NASSAR a bay stallion 15.1 hands high, weighs 1100 pounds, one hundred pounds more than is accidentally stated as his weight in the advertisement in this paper, and is for sale. He is by Stamboul and like all that great sires produce has size, style, finish and beauty. He is a square gaited trotter and will be very fast if trained. The dam of Nassar is Oakland Maid 2:22, who started in 11 races, was never beaten, and has produced Princess 2:19. Nassar is one of the grandest road horses ever driven in this city. Apply to Chas. S. Neal, Manager of the Fair estate, 230 Montgomery street for price and particulars.

THE sale of Derby Princess, 2:08½, to Mr. Fleischman for an Austrian purchaser adds one more to the growing list of expatriated "cracks." Since the close of the racing season no less than six 2:10 trotters have been sold to the foreigners, the list comprising Countess Eve, 2:09½; Que Allen, 2:09½; Baron Rogers, 2:09½; Athanio, 2:10, and Senator A., 2:10, beside Derby Princess. It is interesting to note the prices that have been paid for the flyers. Que Allen and Athanio were bought at auction in New York and at a cost of $4,600 and $2,800 respectively. The others were all acquired privately, the published prices being: Derby Princess, $6,000; Senator A., $4,000; Countess Eve, $1,500, while Baron Rogers' price was never divulged.

THE annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association was held Tuesday evening of this week at the office of Secretary Kelly, 221 Geary street in this city. After some desultory talk on the subject of incorporating the association, A. H. Cohen was appointed a committee of one to draw up incorporation papers and submit the same to an adjourned meeting of the members to be held May 26th. The Directors of the association also held a meeting at which the condition requiring "five per cent from entries and an additional five per cent from starters" in the races to be held at the summer meeting was changed so that the extra five per cent will only be required from money winners. The question of incorporating the association is one of vital importance to every member and at the meeting to be held in May there should be a large attendance, and a full discussion of the matter in all its phases. It may be the very best thing for the breeders and owner of harness horses to do, and it may not, and the facts can only be determined by every one interested being present, hearing the arguments pro and con and acting on the matter according to their best judgment.

IN his paper The Phoenix, Capt. Tom Merry writes as follows of the horses in training in Southern California: "Dr. C. Edgar Smith's two McKinney youngsters are simply superb, and can satisfy the most skeptical as to their ability to set a fast clip. The Native State colt in the same stable has improved more than any horse at the track. All these are in charge of Mr. P. W. Hodges, who was at one time in charge of the Edgemont trotters. I like him very much. I saw Mr. Erkenbrecher driving Galette, 2:12½, to his road wagon the other day and the big black mare looked just about as finely as she ever did in her life. She is by one of Southern California's neglected sires—Jud Wilkes, as stout and knurly a little horse as one could find in a day's drive. John Pender, well known in Oregon, is at the track with several good ones, all of them in the tyro ranks. One of these is a colt by Ed Wilkes, son of Red Wilkes, and I cannot remember having seen a much easier mover than this fellow. He also has a colt by McKinney which is his own property and which can step a few steps himself. The Santa Ana horses are keeping very quiet and I do not hear much from there, but they must certainly know how fast the untied horses are now moving at Los Angeles and they would not keep on persevering with the horses that did not stand some show to beat them. Hence I look for several surprise parties to emanate from the city of alfalfa and pumpkins.

THE manager of the Oakwood Park Stock Farm writes as follows concerning the consignment of sixteen trotters and pacers that will be shipped east in a few days to be disposed of at Fasig's blue ribbon sale: "I desire to point out that this is a speedier lot than has ever before left this establishment. There is absolutely not a poor or mediocre one among the number, it being Mr. Boyd's express instructions that we should ship the best and the best only. Our trainer will accompany them and be prepared to show everyone in harness under the watch." These are a few samples of the stock: A two-year-old sister to Derby Princess; a sister, 2, to Owyhee (by Charles Derby—Ida Wood, by Simmons—Ida W., br Mambrino Patchen—thoroughbred) will show quarters in 37 seconds, a trotter; a brother, 2, to Wm. M. Lent (Charles Derby—Directress, Director), will show a quarter below 37 seconds, a trotter; a trotting sister, 2, to Charles Derby; Klatawah, 2, 2:18, and two others will probably show quarters in 35 seconds; a two year old trotting sister to the great Diablo, 2:09½, that will show quarters in 36 seconds; a pacing sister to Flare Up, 2, 2:22, that will show quarters below a 2:20 clip; a three-year-old gelding by Charles Derby that will pace a quarter in 32 seconds without boot or hopple; a two-year-old brother to Cibolo, 2:13½, that will show a quarter below 34 seconds. The foregoing are simply specimens; every youngster will show under the watch quarters from 40 seconds down to 32 seconds.

Running at Sebastopol, Cal

ANNUAL MEETING P. C. T. H. B. A.—In order to make amendments to the constitution of the above-named association, before the contemplated summer meeting was held, or entries made in the purses offered, the annual meeting was called April 26th. Inasmuch as many of the directors and members favored incorporating the society, that was held to be the main object of the meeting, though there were still more important subjects to consider. Far more important, in my estimation, than incorporation, as I have regarded that as being worthy of more consideration than was necessary to meet the wishes of the members.

Incorporated or not it did not seem that the scope of the Association would be affected, and yet after the discussions, and after the opinion of men well qualified to decide, I am firmly impressed with the belief, that for the interests of all concerned, it will be better to adhere to the old plan.

"Let well enough alone" is a maxim of long standing and when amended by adding, "that well enough," when susceptible of improvement, must be improved, or at least suggested improvements tried, no fault can be found with the motto. A constitution was adopted January 9th, 1890—races under the auspices of the Association were held previous to that year—was clearly susceptible of improvement, and as only the annual meeting of the association could make amendments, under the provisions of the constitution in place of that meeting being held in December it was decided by the Board of Directors that it should be held on the 26th of April, the required notice having been sent by the secretary to the members at the stipulated time. Involved with the question of incorporation the members present resolved that there should be an adjournment to the 26th of May, when articles of incorporation would be in readiness, and the meeting could then decide whether to incorporate or not, and nominators to stakes, already closed, could signify their acquiescence to transfer them to a different association from that in which the engagement was made. The question then of incorporation is paramount, as that will involve others of vital interest to breeders, owners, and all connected with harness horses. So far as I know other associations, of like character, are not incorporated. This may be wrong, whether right or wrong it has little bearing on the question, in all its aspects, here.

The whole, the only debatable point is whether incorporation will be advantageous or detrimental to the interests depending. If anything is to be gained by incorporation by all means incorporate. If it is advisable to depart from the course that has been followed since the organization of the association change it, but there must be tangible grounds for the departure.

The only disastrous year since the P. C. T. H. B. A. came into existence was 1897, and even that left a surplus in the treasury. Quite true that another season of the same kind would so cripple it that the probabilities are that it would have to close. Grave mistakes in 1897. Not necessary to recapitulate these now, so well known that even those "who run can read" the most objectionable features, and that information can be used to future advantage.

The first thing to consider is entries, and that a far larger number of entries will be obtained by adhering to the old system, than will follow incorporation, is fairly well assured.

The question was raised, after the adjournment of the meeting, that after incorporation a person who was in arrears for entrance fees, or was subjected to fines, would incur the danger of attachments. That, in fact, any pecuniary obligation to the Association would render the person incurring the obligation to that summary process of law. This will surely deter people from taking the risk, and while it will be an advantage to the Association to be enabled to make collections that otherwise might be troublesome to secure.

More will be lost by diminishing the number of entries.

"Fields" are the foundation. With plenty of entries, and, consequently, a prospect of a good many starters, interest will be awakened as soon as the entries are published.

When race-going folks become satisfied that every effort will be made by the officials in charge to secure honest racing, the attendance will be commensurate with the attractions offered.

In this section of the country, at least, large percentages of the spectators, at either running or trotting contests, are speculators, and again, by far the largest proportion of every assemblage desire no other advantage than a fair game. There are "sure thing gamblers," "trick-of-the-loop operators" in every field in which a temple to Dame Fortune has been erected, and only the most strenuous efforts will be successful in thwarting their schemes. I feel assured that hereafter there will be no lack of watchfulness on the part of the association in regard to this vital point, and as the programme adopted will make the task much easier it is fair to infer that after that is established, by the opening days proving conclusively that nothing will be tolerated that has the semblance of wrong doing.

Absolutely assured—I take it upon myself to say—that the closest surveillance, the most careful attention, will be paid to secure the closest compliance with the rules of the National Trotting Association.

Reducing the entry fee from "five per cent additional from starters" to five per cent from money winners was a wise move, and in my opinion a still further reduction would have been advantageous to the association.

But again, I will take it upon myself to state, that, beyond any question, should the two weeks' racing, now advertised, prove moderately successful, entrance money will be cut down to the smallest figure. It will not do to follow the racing methods exactly. With entrance free there would be unwieldy fields. Horses put in for no other purpose than to help some one else, taking a long chance when it costs nothing to take it. The intention of the P. C. T. H. B. A. is to make all the money possible for the owners, and whatever the conclusions reached on May 26th, whether it is held to be advisable to incorporate or not the aim will be to further the interests at stake. Still it is an imperative necessity that owners and trainers second the association in doing all in their power to advance the interests they are more interested in than all others.

"No use" in dodging the situation that this year climatic conditions are more unfavorable than any other season for many years past. The meeting of the association, which is billed to commence June 25th, is of more than ordinary importance.

The keynote of the California campaign. With a good list of entries on June 1st other places will have their way clear, and the result a better circuit than anyone anticipates.

PALO ALTO—Glorious Palo Alto! Whatever the result may be, should the time come when neither thoroughbreds or trotters are roaming over the fields or congregated in paddocks and stalls that which has been accomplished in the way of breeding horses there will never be forgotten. A hundred years from now, it may be, that some enthusiast of the horse world, will make a pilgrimage to the home of Electioneer, Palo Alto, a whole lot of champions of the olden time, interested in everything connected with the home of these horses of the equine race.

Still more glorious!! In the flight of time, what the founder of Palo Alto did for California, for the Pacific Coast, for this whole country, in fact, the whole world, will be properly appreciated and the name of Leland Stanford be revered wherever the English language is spoken.

When the animosities, the jealousies, the desire to belittle, the worst features of human nature, viz: the refusal to recognize real worth when that might imply a lessening of the importance of people they were interested in, are overcome by the mellowing influences of the future, when men will be judged by what they did, "Governor" Stanford will be placed, where he is justly entitled to occupy a position as one of the great benefactors of the human race.

Never will there be a full recognition of the man. Future biographers may give him the credit of what the records prove; never one, unless personally acquainted, intimately acquainted, will portray him as he was.

"The gowd is but the guinea's stamp,
The man's the man for a' that."

A painful subject for me to discourse upon, and every visit to Palo Alto intensifies the feeling.

There is a recompense. In the department which appropriately comes under the sphere of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, Palo Alto is still entitled to be called one of the great breeding farms of the United States, and though the founder of it is no longer at the head, his ideas are still carried out, and it is likely to prove that the future, as well as the past, will demonstrate the wisdom of the teachings.

A bright sunshiny morning when I left San Francisco on my last visit to Palo Alto. Altogether too bright when rain would be so acceptable. Pleasant, however, and when a companion from the East expressed his wonder at a California April day, I could only wish that it was a counterpart of the usual California April day.

Palo Alto, attractive as it was to him, was at its worst. Plenty to admire, but had there been the usual growth of grain and grass, doubly engaging. Some amends for the drought. As fine a morning as one could wish, albeit a little warm in the sun, and the journey on the cars and the trip from station to the trotting stables was a pleasant journey. Up the avenue, palm-lined and with a growth of trees outside, in themselves a study, past the outskirts of the University, along the fields where brood mares and their foals were reveling in the sunshine, the matrons apparently content to crop the alfalfa and ryegrass, the youngsters more intent on having a jollification; running in groups, in couples, the younger of them satisfied to make circles around their dams so far as could be told all of them appreciative of the good things furnished.

A long round; unfortunately on a day when the public is debarred from the premises where the horses are kept, and while it is imperative that one day in the week should be free from the throng of sight-seers, gates locked, and a general embargo laid, it gives the opportunity to see the place apart from the excitements of the work on the track. My Eastern friends were delighted. So different from April days in their home, that had a charm, the changing views another, and when the horses were exhibited there was nothing but admiration.

And there were good grounds for approval. Betonica, from whom so much is expected, could not be in better shape, and if looks were to decide the championship he would have a good chance in the show. Pasonte, my favorite could also challenge competition were the judgment to be based on form, and Peko, and—and the handiest way, and at the same time the most comprehensive, will be to say that so far as good looks and good condition can go, on that score, they would challenge competition with any lot that could be selected from the stud farms of the continent. There has been a decided improvement in the appearance of the campaigners of 1897. Betonica has grown into a magnificent big horse—if a four-year-old can be called a horse—Pasonte has "dropped down," increased in substance, developed, and should she fail to come up to my expectations—and these are so high that I look for a foremost place for her, the very top notch—I shall be seriously disappointed.

Mr. Covey kindly gave me the following accounts of the "work-outs" for the week previous to the visit. It must be borne in mind that these were not trials, simply before starting on their eastern journey. Anything but a good showing would have debarred them from being of the party sent, and when it is taken into consideration that the Palo Alto tack is many seconds slower than any other of the California tracks, the time made is remarkable. Never before so fast time as that of Betonica, and Pasonte, and the driver, Howser, about sixty pounds overweight, assured me that in every instance he could have knocked off a whole handful of seconds from the time made.

The recent work outs at Palo Alto of horses consigned to Wm. B. Fasig & Co's Blue Ribbon Sale is as follows for the past week: Betonica (3) 3:10½, mile 2:13; Peko, 2:11¼, mile 2:15; Pasonte (4) 2:13; Nordeau (3) 2:17¾, mile 2:18½; Hyita (3) Dexter Prince—Helena 2:11¼, mile 2:23¼; Lillian May (3) Advertiser—Lady Nutwood, mile 2:24¼; Elevada (3) Dexter Prince—Ella 2:29¼, mile 2:31; Whips Jr. (3) Whips—Marion 2:26¼, ½, 1:18, 1:15, 1:13; Idolita (2) Monaco—Edette, mile 2:24½.

These miles and halves were work outs not trials of speed to see how fast they could go.

Yours truly,

F. W. COVEY.

The horses, of course, are the main attractions at Palo Alto. That is, to people who have a fondness for the "noble animal."

So much to be outside of that part of the establishment, that even those who are horse devotees forget about them when other scenes are presented.

There is an outlying field which it is safe to say, not one visitor in a hundred to Palo Alto ever saw. One in a thousand would be a safer estimate as it is his beyond the stables, and away from either of the approaches. The accompanying cut is a very poor representation of a part of the field, the trees being dwarfed, and the aqueduct in the foreground marring the picture.

The yard between the main stables attracted the admiration of the Eastern visitors. Of such proportions that a dozen views, at least, would be necessary to give anything like a true conception, and were pen-pictures substituted several columns necessary to make the description tangible. The one given is one of the first row of stables erected, and in which have been stabled some of the most noted of the Palo Alto horses.

Flambeau and Racine now occupy the two stables on the right of the picture. These two horses are a study in themselves. Racine unquestionably one of America's great race-horses. Flambeau in the opinion of many his superior, though after seeing trial runs at Palo Alto, and races in ## Shall the Breeders Incorporate.

Between now and May 26th of this year, at which time the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will hold a meeting in this city, the members of that organization must make up their minds as to whether it is wise or not to incorporate the association under the laws of this State. For many years the Breeders' Association has occupied an enviable position among organizations of like character in this country, and so far as numbers are concerned, we believe its membership leads that of any similar association in America. Since its organization it has taken a leading position in harness horse matters, and the constant aim has been progress, although there have been times when the shots fell short of the mark. During the past years of its life many departures from old customs and diversions from ancient practices have been made by its officers, sometimes with marked success, at other times a much different result, though failure has never yet been the end reached. During those halcyon days when entrance money and admission fees could always be depended upon to provide a surplus at the close of a meeting, there never occurred to the members or the officers the thought that the plan of organization was particularly at fault.

As a well-known statesman has remarked however, a surplus is much easier handled than a deficiency, and although a surplus still remains in the Breeders' treasury, the time may come in time of war and drought and hard times when a deficit will confront the association, and it has been given as a legal opinion that in such a case the Board of Directors or any one of that body will be personally liable for the debts incurred by the organization. Here is a state of affairs that is not pleasant contemplation for a director who gives his time to the association without remuneration or hope of reward, and in all the P. C. T. H. B. A. there is not a man who wishes to see such a responsibility placed on the members of the Board.

It was then suggested that by incorporation under the laws of the State there is a way out of this difficulty and that the responsibility incurred will then be transferred to all the members instead of having it saddled on the Board of Directors. Here was a plan that looked to be just the thing, and there was a seemingly unanimous expression of opinion by the individual members that they were willing to make the change and each assume his proportion of all responsibilities that should rightfully rest on his shoulders. Since the question has been discussed it has been suggested that after incorporating as is proposed, an owner of horses will find his property liable for entrance fees or dues he may owe the association itself. At the present time the penalty for non-payment of these claims is suspension from the rights and privileges of racing on all tracks, and this has been found to meet all requirements and proves very effective, all agreeing that the punishment fits the crime and is sufficient. To add to suspension the right to take property to pay entrance fees is certainly too severe and few horsemen will wish to lay themselves liable to such a law and may refuse to make entries to meetings conducted by a regularly incorporated organization.

These ideas may be all wrong, but they have been suggested by men whose knowledge of law is recognized and they are proper subjects for consideration by each and every member of the Breeders' Association and by every man identified with the interests of the light harness horse.

There is another phase of the situation. It is proposed to incorporate without stock under the laws which permit the incorporation of organizations not formed for profit. It has been asked "Would there be as much incentive to energetic action in such a body as in one where stock was issued and the holders thereof entitled to such profits as would accrue from successful meetings." The Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association was not organized for profit. It gave meetings each year, successful and otherwise, and moved along after the manner of most organizations of the kind, but finally came out victorious having a $9,000 surplus in its treasury when merged into the later association. The California and the Pacific Coast Jockey Clubs were organized for profit, and the magnificent grounds, grand buildings and successful meetings are testimony to the workings of this plan.

These are but a few of the questions that will arise anent to the subject of incorporation and the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN sets them forth as food for thought during the few weeks that will elapse before the meeting. The greatest danger to the trotting horse interests in California will be lethargy of the trotting horse owners. This subject of incorporation has already created quite a stir in the ranks and we hope it will cause still further excitement. In a multitude of counsel there is wisdom. Let us talk the matter over until May 26th and then meet and act as we each think is for the best, and the best plan will win.

Norfolk.

Of all the old importations to the Pacific Coast two horses are so prominent as to overshadow all others.

Belmont, Norfolk. The picture of the first named was presented in the issue of April 2d, and now Norfolk appears as the frontpiece of this number.

A slight sketch in the "special department" gives a small part of his history. His own great achievements in California; and as the sire of El Rio Rey, Emperor of Norfolk, The Czar, Flood, Ralston, Ballot Box, a host of other good performers, sons and daughters still further exemplifying the value of the blood of the "first American Derby winner"; warrant the conspicuous place given.

Washington Park Stakes.

Tuesday next, May 3d, is the date for the closing of the entries for Washington Park. The stakes are so liberal, headed by the $10,000 American Derby prize, that they should attract a most liberal entry list. Over $100,000 will be hung up in added money during this meeting. The club that has taken the task of re-opening Washington Park upon its shoulders should have the support and assistance of every horseman who has the best interests of racing at heart, and those who make the number of entries in these stakes as liberal as possible will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are assisting in the upbuilding of high class and honest racing in America.

FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS is the big sum hung up by the Overland Trotting and Running Association for the horses to compete for at its two weeks meeting beginning June 11th. The trotting and pacing events are given in the advertisement in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, and are for $500 or $1,000 each. Three or more running races will be given every day and the whole programme is one of the best offered by any association this year. Entries close May 15th, and there will be a liberal entry from the California stables.

Harlem Closes Tuesday.

The Harlem Club entries close next Tuesday. Last year the meeting at Harlem was one of the best in America. The contests were close in a very large proportion of the events, and there was a season of honest racing as free from scandal as any meeting ever held in America. There are some liberal stakes offered for the meeting this year, and the amounts are ADDED in every instance. This is a factor that is worthy of consideration by every horseman who has an entry to make this year. And the simple announcement that Col. M. Lewis Clark will act as presiding judge will attract the entries of those who ask for a fair field and no favor. Remember, the stakes close next Tuesday.

AS THE Masonic Festival in aid of the Widows' and Orphans' Home at Decoto approaches, the interest in it increases regularly in the city. Not only are the merchants and the general public displaying enthusiasm, but from the country come daily letters of inquiry and encouragement, and it is probable on the 9th of May when the fete will be opened by Senator Thomas Flint, Jr. of San Juan that the city will be full of visitors. The ladies of the Order of Eastern Star, as well as the wives and daughters of Masons, are displaying most commendable energy in interesting all their friends in the success of the Festival.

ALFRED SEALE of Mayfield has two trotters now in training at the San Jose track in John Phippen's string that are for sale and worth speculating on. They are Rinconado 2:17 by Eros out of the great brood mare Accident dam of five in 2:30 three of them below 2:20, and Sans Gene a filly by McKinney out of Accident. Rinconado should be able to trot a mile in 2:10 or 2:12 this year and ought to be a great winner in the dash races. The filly by McKinney is grandly bred a fine individual.

THIS is the last call. The State Fair colt stakes for trotters and pacers close Monday next. Also the Stanford Stakes to be trotted in 1900. Entry blanks can be had at this office. Read over the advertised conditions in this issue and get your entries made out and mailed in time.

REFERRING to the winning sires in Australia, a Sydney paper of March 19th says: "A few facts connected with the winning sires tell how the first half-dozen stand this season, when the doings at the V. R. C. Meeting are included with the past half year. It would appear as if it is going to be a very close thing this season between Lochiel and Trenton. The figures as they now stand are: Lochiel £10,932 against Trenton's £10,291. Should Resolute's feet stand to him and he remain well right through the A. J. C. A. Autumn Meeting he may put a different complexion upon it. Up to the present Resolute is Trenton's best representative, his winnings amounting to £3,246, while Survivor is at the head of Lochiel's list with £2,409. The Lochiel performers are, however, 39, which have scored 74 wins, while Trenton's representatives are 28 with 40 wins. Amberite is keeping Carbine's name pretty well up the list, seeing that this season, Mr. Duggan's colt has won £5,419 out of the £6,577 credited to the Australian ex-champion, whose stock racing this season numbered 20, with 26 wins to their credit. As a rule, the sire whose representative wins a Melbourne Cup heads the winning sires' list, but unless they do extra well at the back end Gozo will not be on top, his figures now standing at 32 performers and 33 wins for £6,054, of which Gaulus, secured £3,508. However, there is plenty of time yet for such as Gaulus, The Grafter, Reaper and others to pick up some good races. For a young sire Zalinski is doing well, his four performers showing eight wins for $1,743, and there is little doubt but what in a season or so this fine horse will be high up in the winning stallion list.

JAY BIRD, Guy Wilkes and Adrian Wilkes were foaled the same year. Adrian Wilkes is sire of nineteen trotters and twenty-three pacers, a sum total of 42 in 2:30 list of which Roy Wilkes, 2:06½, is the best one. Jay Bird is a sire of 63 trotters and one pacer and his son Allerton, 2:09½, is the most noted one. Guy Wilkes has to his credit 48 trotters and five pacers. Hulda, 2:08½, is the best of his produce. The variation in number of produce of each sire is not much nor is there a great difference between records of produce of each. There is one great fact shown in history of these sons. Each shows great ability to throw great and extreme speed which is a very strong fact shown all way through the Wilkes family.

PROMINENT trotting horsemen of Chicago are negotiating with the Wheaton Driving Park Association for the purchase of the grounds and buildings owned by that organization and situated at Wheaton Ill. Many of the leading turfmen of the city have pledged their support and the deal is expected to be consummated in a few days. The grounds at Wheaton comprise eighty acres of land, with one of the fastest mile tracks in the country. Four large barns are located on the property. An association will be formed by the Chicago men and a modern grand stand and more stalls and barns will be erected. A big trotting and pacing meeting will be given this summer, and also weekly matinees will be held.

AN exchange says: "A broken-winded horse is rarely seen in Norway. The fact is accounted for by the statement that a bucket of water is always placed within reach of a horse when he is feeding, and the animal alternately takes a mouthful of hay and a sip of water." The Norway horses must be trained by a health reformer. Any horse that will alternately take a mouthful of hay and a sip of water is a "bird."

which they both participated, my preference as a racehorse was for Racine. Both have done fairly well in the stud for the opportunities afforded, as many winners, the get of both, testify.

Both can be classed as well-formed horses of good size that should get good stock for other purposes besides racing. Flambeau has still other characteristics. A thoroughbred horse 16½ hands in height, weighing 1358 pounds, the largest chest measurement of any horse I ever put the tape on, he is a better exemplar of the claim that thoroughbred blood can be used to advantage, where size and strength are desired qualities than pages of writing.

Thoroughbred blood has been a prominent factor in establishing the great renown of Palo Alto as the nursery of fast trotters, and now comes Betonica to establish its "prepotency" in the other branch of harness horses. The following cut shows what may be termed the open part of the main yard, stables on every side but the West, and that is hidden by trees. Live oaks principally, and a more attractive picture would be that representing the yard above the part represented, but unfortunately, the light was wrong to illustrate that portion of the grounds.

The frontispiece, the representation of Norfolk, is far from being out of place at this date if even thirty-four years have elapsed since he was brought to California a great race horse, one of the greatest, a great sire, a son of a great race horse and a great sire.

The first time I saw him was in March, 1863, and rather a sorry looking individual he was, as a short time before he had been engaged in a desperate battle with a youngster of his age. So desperate that it was almost impossible to separate these two-year old combatants, and while Norfolk showed palpably that he had been in the fight "the other fellow" was still worse off.

Mr. Alexander priced him at $800, but we, General Harrison, of Lyons, Iowa, and myself, decided to pay $1,000 for a son of imp. Knight of St. George and Meriam the dam of Magenta and Mamona.

Fortunate and unfortunate, the handsome colt died on his way to Iowa, and far better—judging from subsequent events—that it was not Norfolk. The next sight of him was in St. Louis. Mr. Robert Alexander—the Kentuckians still call him Lord Alexander, and if not legally entitled to the title, far better, one of Nature's noblemen.

Asteroid and Norfolk were members of the "string" and he offered the choice for $5,000. The Lexingtons had yet to make a mark. One if not the first to run, was the Motto filly, the first high-priced offspring of Lexington sold. She did not come up to expectations. At that spring meeting however, at St. Louis there was nothing but glory for the clan. Norfolk won so easily, and that after running away the full mile before each heat of the race, that there was nothing to measure him by. Asteroid won, Sue Lewis won.

After the first heat of Norfolk's race Mr. Alexander was offered $10,000 for him; after the race Mr. Theodore Winters paid $15,000 for him. Not necessary now to tell the story of the extra dollar. Mr. Winters was a delegate from California to the National Democratic Convention held in Baltimore, and his friend, Charles Marsh, took charge of the colt to "carry" him to Patterson, New Jersey, to fill his engagements there, "old" Ansel was training him, James L. Eoff accompanied the party. The noted driver led people to think that he was manager, and as he was a Californian and a friend of Mr. Winters, it was easy work for him to make people believe the story. In fact it was not necessary for him to deceive, the conclusion was jumped at that the astute reinsmen was in charge.

Norfolk won the first American Derby with apparently greater ease than his race at St. Louis. After running away twice in his first race he won the heats in 1:46½ and 1:47, every horse in the race excepting Tipperary "shut out" in the first heat. In the Derby he simply galloped in front of the twelve starters with such good horses as Tipperary and Kentucky far in the rear. The St. Louis race had given the "tip." In the pools at Patterson Norfolk brought $1,150, Tipperary $600, Kentucky $400, all the others combined $330. Thus Norfolk was the favorite over the field, and Eoff won a pot of money, a good lot of the losses, it was claimed, being owing to the belief that Eoff was in control and the colt was "not neant." Hon. John Morrissey, was a big loser. He was also a power in the racing world of those days. The executive committee of the club ruled off James L. Eoff "for ever" for "collusion and fraud perpetrated;" Charles Marsh censured; Norfolk not allowed to start again on the track. Queer, decidedly queer, something unique to convict a man of collusion and fraud when all claimed against the criminal was that he had inveigled Mr. Morrissey, a man that was supposed to know all the ins and outs of gambling of all kinds, into losing his money. A "celebrated case" surely, Never another like it and it may be that it will never have a parallel, unless the requirements of "modern racing" demand something analogous.

At all events it was an embargo against Norfolk returning from California. The admirers of Kentucky thought he had a chance to beat the horse which handled him so easily in the Derby, and had Mr. Winters signified a desire to have the embargo removed it would have been cheerfully "raised." Not that kind of a man the California owner of the champion, and he would not recognize the wrong even so far a request would imply.

So much to be said about Norfolk that a much larger space would be required than can be awarded now, but some time in the future the chapter will be completed.

LICENSING DRIVERS.—It was a wise move, in one respect, the Board of Review resolved upon, not to call a special meeting of the N. T. A. Congress to rescind the rule regarding licensing drivers. Faulty as the working of the rule was it has so little bearing that all the discussion it has elicited was truthfully termed a "tempest in a tea pot."

There cannot be any reasonable objections to a license rule. It has worked well whenever tried, and in place of being a drawback to sports, kindred to harness-racing, has been found beneficial. The impression among a few drivers that a license is derogatory is certainly based on a wrong foundation. As well might a lawyer claim that a license to follow his profession is a lowering of his dignity, or when a physician or surgeon has to show his diploma that he is disgraced.

Not necessary to apply to the secretary of the N. T. A. for licenses on this coast, as the secretary of the Pacific Board, F. W. Kelley, 22½ Geary street, is authorized to issue them.

Drivers known to Mr. Kelly do not require any other endorsement, and those who may doubt his personal knowledge can secure that of the postmaster of the town in which they reside. Blanks will be sent on application to the secretary, and as all necessary information can be obtained from them, all that is required by those applying for a license is to request him to send them.

NOTWITHSTANDING previous announcements, as new subscribers are coming in in greater numbers than was anticipated it may be as well to repeat that the "special department" of this paper is a reflection of my individual opinions.

Prone to be somewhat decided, and, with what may be termed ultra-progressive ideas, when an "old veteran" expresses them, it would not be fair to let others bear the blame. I hope, however, that something will be found to intertest, and, still better, instruct; the work incurred is emphatically a labor of love.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

HOOF-BEATS.

BRITOMARTIS, trained by Jimmy Coffey, made a very good showing in the first race. She is by imp. Inverness out of Beauty, by St. Blaise, and is therefore a half sister to Tryst, also owned in California.

MR. WALLACE JOHNSON'S bc Disraeli yesterday won the first of England's classic run off this season, the 2,000 Guineas. The Duke of Portland's Wantage was second and Prince Soltykoff's Ninus third.

WRIGHT HAKVEY, an old colored jockey, who was found in the last stages of consumption several days ago at the Emeryville race track, where he had been living in a box stall among the horses, died yesterday at the Alameda County Infirmary.

MR. P. S. P. RANDOLPH has purchased from Messrs. A. H. & D. H. Morris the two-year-old colt Rhodymenia, by Mars—Dulce, and from R. W. Walden & Sons, the two-year-old colt Tyran, by Tyrant—Queen Bess. Reported price $1,800 for the pair.

THE Pacific Coast Jockey Club has again engaged the services of James F. Caldwell to do the starting at Ingleside during the season 1898-99. His starting during the season about to close have been far above the average and no better selection could have been made.

THE Chicago, Union Pacific and Northwestern line, with its daily service of through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars, to all Eastern points, and all meals served "a la carte" in dining cars, offers "comforts in travel" nowhere reached in a higher degree of perfection. Passengers leaving San Francisco on the 6 P. M. train arrive in Chicago in 3½ days, and avoid the necessity of changing cars en route. For tickets and sleeping car reservations call on or address R. R. Ritchie, General Agent, No. 2 New Montgomery street, Palace Hotel, San Francisco, Cal.

It is reported that O. Bradley has refused an offer of $15,000 for his crack colt Greatland. This colt has valuable Eastern engagements, being in the Great American, Tremont Hudson and Expectation Stakes for 1898 with the Brooklyn Jockey Club, and in the Junior Champion, Juvenile, Great Eclipse and Nursery Stakes at Morris Park, and in the Kentucky Derby and Clark Stakes for 1899. He is also entered in all the fixed events for his age at Oakley and Latonia, and it is his owner's intention to nominate him for the Quickstep and Hyde Park stakes at the coming meeting at Washington Park.

IRVING P. DIGGS, of Woodland, breeder of Diggs, Sutton Arbaces and Olinthus, was on hand April 27th to see the last named win the Corrigan Stakes in gallant style, carrying top weight. Lily Wright, the dam of Olinthus, has been a veritable gold mine to Mr. Diggs, and this season was mated with imp. Brutus. When the result of this union stands up the chances are that the Woodland breeder can get a larger sum than he did for either Diggs or Sutton. Galen Brown deserves great credit for the way he has brought Olinthus to the post in his races, and Jockey Henry Shields rides the colt to perfection, too. Sombre was killed off going the first three furlongs, and maybe she was not quite up to a bruising race.

AT the spring meeting of the Trotting Association of Vienna, Austria, the Buffalo bred stallion, Charming Chimes, 2:17½, won a hard fought race, in which he met such good ones as Viola Belle, Lord Caffrey, Lee Simmons, Nutshell and Boabdil. There were fourteen starters, and the race was a dash of one mile and three-quarters. Some of the American drivers who handled the ribbons were Horace Brown, P. Curran and H. Teppan. Bodimer, late of Buffalo, drove the winner in a red-hot finish, by a nose, trotting the last quarter in 0:33, and the race was at a 2:17 gait. Charming Chimes was an outsider, and the mutuels paid at the rate of 20 to 1 to win, and 14 to 1 for the place. On the same day the American stallion, Que Allen, 2:09½, won a dash race of 2,600 metres, defeating Athanio, Azmon and Bravado, also American.

NEARLY one thousand horses were sold for export in Chicago between March 25th and April 10th. All of them were of standard bred type, many of them with fast records. The prices ranged from $500 to $6,000. The exportations have steadily increased for the past three years. The credit for this industry, which will bring millions of foreign money to this country, is due to the men who have developed and advanced to its present high standard of excellence the American standard bred trotter and pacer. The love of sport formed the foundation upon which fortunes have been made. The industry has drifted into one of pleasure and profit, and will be followed for centuries to come provided the sport and pleasure feature is maintained upon such grounds as to command the respect and support of the better element of society.

SEVERAL of the gentlemen riders made clowns of themselves April 28, the only one that really acquitted himself creditably being W. S. Hobart, who bestrode William O'B. Metaire ought to have won and would have done so had Forsland made his move a little earlier, for Metaire was going great guns at the finish. Skinner had no chance with the crazy Mike Rice. Atticus was outclassed. Tulare's runaway perhaps hurt his chances, and while he may have been the best horse in the race, Mr. Hume is no Garrison, no, not even a "Pop" Weaver. O'Fleta fretted himself almost to death before the starter sent them away, and Little Cripple, no fancier of weight, had Gamage on his back. Young Hobart, however, rode William O'B. as well as any professional could have done, saving every inch of ground and having a bit left for the wind up.

A BUTTE special to the Chronicle reads: Entries for the stake events to take place in Butte and Anaconda this summer have closed and the result establishes the fact that the racing season in Montana will far exceed any previous year. The twenty named events have no less than 820 nominations, more than forty-one to a stake, and it is believed that more than forty nominations will be received May 7th for the Labor Day Handicap, the $5,000 stake to be contested at Anaconda September 5th. The four leading events so far closed are as follows: The Montana Derby, $2,500, for three-year olds, at one mile and a quarter; the Daly Stake, $2,000, for three-year olds, one mile and an eighth; the Silver City Handicap, $1,500, for three-year olds and upward, one mile and a quarter, and the Copper City Handicap, $1,500, for three-year olds and upward, one mile and a quarter. The Derby has 36 entries, the Daly 41, the Silver City Handicap 30 and the Copper City Handicap 41.

Rheumatism and Horses.

CORNHILL, Tex., March 24, 1896.

Please send me six bottles Gombault's Caustic Balsam by express. Your Balsam is the best liniment I have ever used, both for horses and myself. I have used it on myself for rheumatism with good success. I doctored four months and spent $120 for doctor and medicine with no results, but since using your Balsam I can work around on the farm. Would like the agency for this county.

OTTO A. BEYER.

THE twins foaled recently dropped by Irene E. at the breeding farm of A. B. Spreckels claim Eolo as their paternal parent and not The Judge, as has been incorrectly stated.

For Sale.

NASSAR, bay stallion, 15½ hands high, weighs 1,100 pounds; foaled 1891; sired by STAMBOUL, 2:07; dam OAKLAND MAID, 2:22 (dam of Princess, 2:19½), by SPECULATION; second dam LADY VERNON, 2:29½. NASSAR is a horse of size, style, finish and beauty of conformation, is bred in ultra-fashionable lines, a square-gaited trotter, and will be very fast. His sire was a race horse of rare quality and the sire of race horses. OAKLAND MAID, the dam of NASSAR, was in her day the Queen of the California turf, starting in 11 races and winning them all. Her produce have all been very fast. For further particulars apply to

Coming Events.

April 30-May 1.—San Francisco Fly-Casting Club. Fifth series of Saturday and Sunday contests. Stow Lake, Golden Gate Park.
June 8-9.—West Michigan Fly-Casting Association. First Angling Tournament. Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Fly-Casting Club.

On last Thursday evening, April 26th, the San Francisco Fly Casting Club held a regular meeting in the Mills Building. There was a full attendance of members, and considerable routine business was disposed of.

Today at 2 P. M. and tomorrow at 10 A. M. the fifth of the season's contests between the members will take place at Stow Lake.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday evening, May 10th, and the sixth contest for the season is booked for May 7th and 8th.

Lines.

It is vitally important to a fly-caster that his line should fit his rod. A rod with a given "backbone," or stiffness, will cast a line of certain weight to the best advantage and with the greatest ease to the caster. No rule can be laid down for this, because the backbone of the rod is an unknown quality. The best way is to go to a reliable tackle dealer who is himself a fly-fisher, and have him advise you what weight of line to use. In waterproof silk lines the weights are expressed in letters from A to G, the latter being the heaviest. These lines come in lengths of 25 to 50 yds., both tapered and untapered. I prefer a tapered line; it is so braided, never twisted that the last 20 or 30 ft., on each end gradually tapers to almost the thickness of the leader, and this gives greater weight beyond that distance; and this is of advantage in long casts. If it is not possible to find a fly-casting tackle dealer near you, write to any advertiser in Forest and Stream [or the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN] and tell him what kind of a rod you have, and ask his advice about a line to suit it. These men are the leading dealers in America, and know their business.

Better a line a trifle too heavy than too light for a rod. A limber rod will cast a heavy line better than a reversed combination. A man with a tolerably stiff rod, such as I like, who has a line only a little too light for it, is troubled to get his flies out, and tires his arm with the effort.

There are silk lines which have a copper wire in them, but never having used one, nor ever seen one in America, I cannot imagine what the wire is for. In boyhood's days horsehair lines were used and I have braided them by keeping three crow quills filled with hair from the tails of horses, taking care that the ends in the quills were replaced by other hairs; but that kind of line will not suit the fly-fisher of today, and I was only a hand-liner then. The fly fisher must have a line which will not add to its weight by absorbing water, hence waterproof silk is best, but never put such a line in salt water, or it will be ruined. Do not use any kind of a cotton line for fly-casting, for they will kink, and may smash a tip by a sudden check in the rings. Lined lines may be waterproofed by several formulas, which I have, but can't give them in detail now.

The essential points in a line for fly-fishing are: Flexibility, incapacity to absorb water, and so increase weight, and the absence of all tendency to kink. If you will imagine yourself with a fighting trout 40 feet away, and with a twisted kink which will not go through the loop at the top of your rod, you will clearly understand why a limber, kinky line is to be avoided if you wish to avoid oratorical efforts when not speaking in public. If your purse will stand it buy only a braided silk, tapered waterproof line; they come high, but they last long. I have three of different weights which have been in use for from twelve to fifteen years, and seem as good as ever. I test them each year, and from one there is gone about 5 ft., from each tapered end, mainly in knots cut from leaders, but in two instances a break in a weak spot. These lines cost from $2 to $5, but they were worth it. A lot of inferior lines would have cost more during the same time, and might have failed me in an emergency.

What do we fish for? Not for fish because we can go to market and buy them for much less than it costs to go to the trout streams. Of course I refer only to the man of business who is "chained down" for eleven months in the year, and continually sings, with Dr. Bethune:

"Oh, that the willow's leaf were free,
And the dogwood were in flower

Like Silas Wegg, I can't help "dropping into poetry" at times, for the angler is a lover of nature, and all nature is poetry. Just now the trout season is on and the angler's blood is stirred as he sees:

"Daffodil,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty."

Lines on fish, or on fishing seasons, seem to have been crossed or have been bought so near that induction resulted in the above conglomeration of lines cast in pleasant places.—Fred Mather in Forest and Stream.

Salmon in the Sacramento.

The United States Fish Commission has been planting each year some 30,000,000 young salmon in the Sacramento river for the purpose of keeping up the supply of this valuable fish. Heretofore there has not been any systematic efforts put forth in looking after the young fish to ascertain the conditions pro or con of the planting.

The Commission have assigned to Deputy Cloud Rutter the duty of studying the young salmon in the waters of the Sacramento Basin, and for some days past he has been engaged in that work. In company with State Deputy J. H. Davis and County Game Warden Helms, Mr. Rutter went up to the mouth of the American river last Saturday, so it is noted in the Sacramento Record Union, where a small mesh seine was employed to determine whether or not the young fish were present in that part of the river in any considerable numbers.

The result, Mr. Rutter says, was very satisfactory. A great many young salmon from one to two inches in length were taken, enough to convince him that the river is well stocked with them.

Mr. Rutter will pursue his investigations further up the river. Sacramento will be his headquarters during the summer, but in his absence he will probably employ some one to continue the investigations in that vicinity. He will travel by boat and make a thorough inspection of the river. Mr. Rutter is evidently a gentleman who thoroughly understands the science of fish propagation and the special duties assigned to him.

Mr. Davis is in charge of the State patrol launch Quinnet, and is looking after the fishermen along the river, collecting the licenses, etc. Both gentlemen were the guests of Warden Helms at dinner last Saturday.

Striped Bass.

These game fish are being caught quite frequently with rod and line at present; up the river at Antioch they are reported to be running in schools and afford quite a little sport to the angler. A friend of Mr. H. J. Wiese recently sent him two fine large fish caught at that point. On Putah creek, Woodland and Davisville anglers have caught them in fair numbers recently, using angle worms for bait. A dozen or more were hooked by smelt fishers over on Oakland wharf last Sunday. W. R. McFarland had a number of strikes at Rodeo on Sunday, but was unlucky in landing. Mr. and Mrs. Nat Turner had better luck at the same time and place. One of their fish was a four pounder. W. F. Shattuck is credited with landing a 20-inch striped bass at the Rodeo wharf, he used a white smelt belly and spile worm for bait.

The "Dagos" are making plentiful hauls of striped bass between San Pablo and Pinole; as a positive fact it has long been notorious that fish of an illegal size could be procured in the markets at any time, following this, as a matter of course, the restaurants all serve them. One market dealer, Paladini, was arrested recently, but once a year is accepted as a compliment by these gentry. The immense number of small bass that are continually caught and sent to market have no doubt retarded a sport that is destined to make San Francisco bay fishing far famed. It will be however only a question of time and persistence in effort until our anglers will strike the keynote and find the method and means to make this wary and gamey fish dally with rod and line as he does in the East, where the striped bass anglers, in the vicinity of New York at least, outnumber the trout fishers ten to one.

Trout Fishing Ordinance in Placer County.

Recent action by the Supervisors of Placer County in regard to trout fishing will be of interest to the angling fraternity, the ordinance, which was approved March 8, 1898, reads as follows:

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Placer do ordain as follows:

SECTION 1.—Every person who, between the first day of December of any year and the first day of June of the following year, takes, catches or kills any trout from or in any of the waters of said County of Placer, or has in his possession between said time, any trout taken from said waters (except as provided in Section 632, of the Penal Code of California, as amended [and approved February 25, 1897, as to steel head trout, and the taking of trout by the United States Fish Commission and the Fish Commissioners of this State], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and upon conviction thereof in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100 or by imprisonment in the County Jail not less than twenty-five days nor more than one hundred days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 2.—All ordinances or parts of ordinances in conflict with this ordinance are hereby repealed.

Sec. 3.—This ordinance shall take effect on the 15th day after its passage and approval.

Map of Mt. Tamalpais and Vicinity.

A. H. Sanborn, C. E., and P. E. Knapp have just issued a very convenient and handy map of Mt. Tamalpais and vicinity, showing that portion of Marin County extending from Sausalito to Bear Valley, and from the coast inland to Point Reyes Station, Nicasio and San Rafael. It will be invaluable to all interested in that section of the country; tourists, trappers, bicyclists, anglers, hunters and residents. The work shows wagon roads, railroads, streams, and elevations of all principal hills and ridges. Particular attention has been given to the delineation of the most practicable trails. The aim has been to make the map clear, simple and accurate. It is issued in folder form in three colors, with leatherette covers, for pocket use, and is now on sale in the book-stores.

Black Jack and Butler Jack tried Lake Lagunitas Thursday.

Sequel creek has afforded Santa Cruz anglers good sport since the 1st inst.

George Walker and Del Cooper had very good luck on the Lagunitas last Sunday.

Monterey anglers are agitating the extension of the close season for trout until May 1st.

Mr. J. Gunn took a fine lot of steelheads with the fly in the "white house pool" on Sunday.

Marin county streams were well whipped last Sunday, the majority of the fishermen had very poor luck.

Near San Andreas, Calaveras county the local anglers are making good catches in Murphy's creek.

H. F. Muller fished up stream on the Paper Mill, from the Point to Camp Taylor, with fair success last Sunday.

Frank Dolliver took a four and a half pound fish and some thirty smaller ones out of the "white house pool" on Sunday.

D. K. Fasier of Monterey recently fished in the vicinity of the Cachagua and in four days outing is credited with 700 trout.

The Castroville fishermen are enjoying surf fishing at present, the beach near Milligan hill is said to be the best place for surf fish.

F. M. Haight and C. Huyck fished from "North Bend" to the Point Sunday; a fair number of nice trout in their creels was the result.

Harry Wiese and some friends whipped the San Pablo last Sunday; a moderate catch was made; the water is extremely low in that stream.

Visalia anglers who have been fishing in the Kaweah river recently state that the "royal coachman" is a potent factor in the day's sport.

Fred Markus and A. Terry fished in Lake Lagunitas Friday of last week. They caught about thirty fish averaging eight or nine inches.

Chas. Precht and J. Gibbs Jr., fished down the stream from Nicasio last Sunday. They caught seventy six to eight inch trout between them.

W. S. Kittle, in the Country Club waters last Sunday, caught less than a dozen trout that made up in size and quality what the catch lacked in numbers.

Pike fishing in Cache creek, Yolo county, is affording great sport to the natives. Some fish weighing as high as twelve pounds have been caught. Woodland, Davisville and Dixon fishermen also take a try at pike with a deal of success.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:
Alpine—Deer, Sept. 2 to Oct. 15.
Alameda—Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 15.
Colusa—Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 15.
Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Contra Costa—Deer, July 20 to Sept. 2. (Use of dogs prohibited).
El Dorado—Doves, July 20 to Feb. 1.
Fresno—Market hunting and shipping game out of the county prohibited.

Humboldt—Grouse and Wilson snipe, Sept. 1 to Feb. 15. Killing of waterfowl prohibited between one-half hour after sunset and one-half hour before sunrise.

Kern—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
Lake—Deer, Aug. 1 to Oct. 1.

Los Angeles—Shipping game to markets outside of the county prohibited.

Marin—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 15.

Madera—Market hunting prohibited.

Monterey—Deer, July 15th to Sept. 1st.

Orange—Doves, Aug. 1 to Feb. 1. Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).

Riverside—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.

San Benito—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. (Market hunting prohibited).

Santa Barbara—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 14. Use of hounds prohibited. (Market hunting prohibited).

San Diego—Shipping quail out of the county prohibited.

San Luis Obispo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. Doves, July 15 to Dec. 1. (Use of hounds prohibited. Hunting for markets situated outside of the county prohibited).

San Mateo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. (Use of dogs prohibited).
Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. (Shooting from boat at high tide prohibited).

Shasta—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1.

Sierra—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.

Sutter—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Doves, July 15 to Jan. 1.

Trinity—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.

Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game out of the county prohibited.

Ventura—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).

At the Traps To-Morrow.

Four events are scheduled for to-morrow. The California Wing Club will hold their regular live-bird shoot on the Ingleside grounds; judging from the interest shown in last month's meeting a large attendance of the members and their friends is expected. Across the bay the Reliance Club will have their regular shoot at blue-rocks on the Webster street grounds and the Golden Gate Gun Club will also hold a regular shoot at blue-rocks on the Pacific Tournament grounds just across the creek.

Near by on the Empire grounds the event of interest to shooters will be the open-to-all handicap pool, and class merchandise shoot.

The programme for high guns embraces one event at ten birds, handicap, entrance 75 cents, next a race at twenty targets thrown from the Maugtrap, entrance, $1, handicap, followed by a ten-bird handicap match, entrance $1, the fourth event is at fifteen birds, handicap, (from the Maugtrap), entrance $1.50. The merchandise shoot will commence promptly at 1 P. M., and will be at twenty-five targets, class shooting. The prizes are divided into ten classes and embrace a variety of valuable and useful articles.

New Gun Club Association.

The San Joaquin valley trap-shooters were represented last Sunday by delegates from Visalia, Merced, Stockton, Madera, Bakersfield, etc., at a meeting in Fresno (after the Fresno Gun Club's annual tournament) for the purpose of the organization of the San Joaquin Valley Gun Club Association. A. T. Hyde of Merced was elected president, and Ed Downing of Visalia secretary and treasurer. The vice presidents will be elected, and the regular committee appointed, at an adjourned meeting of the association which will be held on May 15th.

Brass Shells and Smokeless Powder.

Reloading smokeless powder cartridges is impracticable, and in answer to the many letters of inquiry regarding this question "The American Field" of recent date publishes the following:

It has been the common experience of persons using reloaded smokeless powder cartridges to have a large number of shells so reloaded to rupture in the guns. Extensive experiments carried on by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., and by the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, with shells, guns and smokeless powders of nearly every known manufacture, have alike failed to remedy for this difficulty. Experiment shows that after the first firing with smokeless powder the metal of the shell undergoes a slow but decided change, the exact nature of which the best experts have as yet failed to determine. No immediate deterioration attends the shooting of smokeless powder; for, by reloading and shooting immediately, the shells may be shot many times with no sign of rupture. If, however, the fired shells are allowed to stand for two or three days, no matter whether they are cleaned or uncleaned, wet or dry, loaded or unloaded, the result is always the same, namely—the metal becomes brittle, and rupture of the shells at the next discharge is probable. Various proportions and kinds of material used in the manufacture of the brass have been tried. The brass has been subjected to physical tests, to determine its tensile and crushing strength; chemists have examined shells before and after firing, to determine the exact corrosive effect of the gases of combustion; the products of combustion of various powders have been carefully analyzed; experiments have been made to ascertain if galvanic action is responsible for the brittleness; but all to no avail. Experiments show that this brittleness is characteristic of all smokeless powders and is in no way due to the material used in the shells, process of manufacture, or kind of gun used. No manufacturers of rifle ammunition are to-day able to successfully and satisfactorily produce a smokeless powder shell suitable for reloading; and for this reason, the Winchester Repeating Arms Company cautions against the reloading of smokeless powder rifle ammunition, and wishes to do its utmost to discourage this practice.

The Sport is on the Increase.

The growth of target shooting during the last few years may be figured from the fact that the various target companies of the United States manufactured and put upon the markets somewhere in the neighborhood of 30,000,000 targets. Ten years ago 3,000,000 would have been near the correct figure. This year the output is estimated at about 35,000,000, and it is more than possible that these figures are more below rather than above the actual number. This shows what an amount of powder and shot is consumed in the sport of trap shooting, when targets alone are trapped. Trap shooting thrives but slowly at first, but is now bounding upward with gigantic strides. The expense attendant upon a day's sport at the traps is the chief cause for its not growing into favor more rapidly. Five dollars does not last long when targets cost 2 cents each and when shells cost from 2 cents up to 3½ cents each. On account of this expense many of the Eastern clubs have reduced the price of their targets to 1 cent each at which figure it can trap them with a chance of coming out more than even, on the "pick-ups"—that is, targets shot at but not hit—often giving the club a handsome profit.

Fresno Tournament

The annual shoot of the Fresno Gun Club took place at Fresno last Sunday, April 24. Seven races were shot out by the San Joaquin valley trapshooters. The moneys were divided into 50, 30 and 20 per cent, targets extra. H. V. Armitage made the best score during the day, breaking 115 blue-rocks out of 125. The shoot was conducted by H. V. Armitage, W. J. O'Neil and Sam Thompson, who acquitted themselves satisfactorily to all in attendance. The program and scores in detail were as follows:

First event, ten targets, 50 cents entrance, class shooting, three moneys—

Alameda Trains.

There is good reason to believe that efforts on the part of representatives of the trapshooters, who frequently shoot on the Alameda grounds, will meet with success in inducing the railroad people to make regular stops at the Junction when trap-shoots are being held. The trains at present stop only at certain hours of the morning and afternoon.

Napa Gun Club

The scores for the regular club shoot of the Napa Gun Club last Sunday at twenty-five targets were as follows:

Reams	20	Dawese	9
Pickett	18	Holden	7
Muller	12	Reynolds	7
Marshall	11	Shanahan	6
Wilson	10	Fine	3

The following scores were made in a series of seven races at six blue-rocks, viz:

Mansfield	4	2	2	3	5	3	1
Pickett	4	5	6	4	4	4	5
Reynolds	4	4	2	2	2	2	2
Holden	3	2	3	3	2	3	1
Muller	3	2	5	3	3	5	2
Dawese	3	3	3	4	4	5	4
Fine	4	2	3	2	3	3	4
Reams	4	4	5	5	6	4	4
Chord	4	4	6	3	3	3	4

But ten members of the Stockton Gun Club faced the traps at Jackson's baths last Sunday. It probably was an off day for the boys, the shooting being below their usual averages. Out of 50 targets, the scores of Longers, 46 and G. Ditz Jr., 44, were the best.

At the Ingleside Traps.

The Olympic Gun Club shoot at blue-rocks last Sunday was well attended by club members and representative trapshooters. The principal event of the day, the regular club medal race, shows a number of very good scores. This event is a handicap race, twenty five being the highest possible score. The three scratch men were Nauman, Webb and Haight. Seven of the men entered exceeded the limit of breaks. Harvey McMurchy, of Syracuse, shot as a guest of the club. The score in detail of the club shoot is as follows:

A match at fifteen targets, entrance $1.00, followed the club shoot. Fourteen men were entered. A summary of the scores is as follows:

A. Webb	15	Klevesahl	14
C. Nauman	15	Neustader	13
W. Sears	14	C. Shaw	13
F. Feudner	14	P. McRae	13
H. Justins	14	H. C. Golcher	10
H. McMurchy	14	L. D. Owens	9
G. A. Haight	14

*Birds only.

Seventeen men entered in the open twenty bird race which took place in the afternoon. The club added $10 to the purse. The scores were:

A. Webb	19	P. McRae	17
H. McMurchy	19	C. A. Haight	16
Neustader	19	H. H. White	15
W. J. Golcher	18	L. D. Owens	15

W. Sears	18	F. J. Schultze	14
Flickinger	18	Smith	13
Klevesahl	18	"Jones"	11
F. Feudner	17

Webb and Nauman divided first money, $7.85. Nauman, Golcher, Flickinger, Sears and Klevesahl took second money, $5.85, between them. Feudner and McRae made third money, $3.92, and fourth money, $1.95, was taken by Haight.

In the coursing match on the first round: Nauman beat Webb, 10 to 9. Klevesahl turned down Flickinger, 8 to 6. McRae put Golcher out, 9 to 8. Justins shot White out, 8 to 7. Feudner and Haight had a "no-go" on 9 each and Feudner won the shoot-off. On the second round: Klevesahl beat Nauman, 9 to 8. Justins put McRae out, 9 to 8. Feudner ran a bye. The pool was divided between Justins, Feudner and Klevesahl.

At the Sacramento Traps.

At the Spoonbill Gun Club's blue-rock shoot last Sunday at East Park, Sacramento, the races on the program and the scores were as follows:

First race at ten targets—

Smith	7	Roberts	6
-------	---	---------	---

Second race at ten birds—

Smith	6	Chapman	5
Steigler	6	Flohr	5
Roberts	6	Soule	4

Third match at fifteen birds—

Chapman	9	Steigler	7
Soule	9	Flohr	6
Roberts	8	Smith	5

The next event was the medal shoot at twenty-five birds, which resulted as follows:

Eckhardt	23
Smith	21
Wormar	21
Chapman	21
R. Roberts	21
Flohr	21

Another twenty five bird match resulted: Eckhardt 21, Roberts 18, Smith 16, Chapman 13, Ste

Professional, Expert or Amateur?

The refusal of the Los Angeles Gun Club to award the individual championship medal for Southern California to W. H. Seaver, of this city, has created a large amount of discussion among local trap-shooters. The refusal was based on a claim made by the club that Mr. Seaver was a professional. The facts connected with the race are not clear to us at present, but whether Seaver was a professional or not or whether the club acted in good faith or not cuts no figure with the main issue, viz: professionalism—this proposition will come up for settlement, and that in a decisive manner, before long. This question has been positively settled in the Eastern States, the initiative having been taken by the Hudson River Trap-Shooters League, who will bar "manufacturers' agents" during the coming season from all competition in the prize events, whether cash or merchandise. The term "manufacturers' agent" is synonymous with "professional" and includes any one in, or representing, a branch of trade interested in the sport. Whether this strict interpretation and application of the professional shooter can or cannot be applied on the Pacific Coast, where circumstances and conditions are radically different from those in the East, is an open question. We are inclined to believe that the question is not at the degree of magnitude at present that it has acquired in the East. A number of trap-shooters, strictly amateurs, can be found in the Pacific Coast states, and territories who are ready and willing to give the "trade" representatives a run for their money at the traps any time. The sport can be regulated for the present in a manner perfectly satisfactory to all concerned. The conditions governing events, whether for medals, cash or merchandise, can easily be stipulated in a way to control the class of entries in all events. The amateur, whether a novice or expert, can still enjoy the sport to the top of his bent without fearing the "bugaboo" of professionalism, nor need he be at great loss or expense, and the game will not be in danger of being broken up. When it comes to a question of shooting for coin the line of demarcation between the two classes is microscopical, the true spirit of sport is smothered, and the desire for gain and profit, as it is the more or less proficient, presents the entering wedge of disruption. The following assertion may be of little value in determining the particular class standing of a shooter, but we are aware of several instances, where shooters by reason of some temporary pyrotechnical skill at the traps have tried to work their short lived reputations as "experts" to induce "manufacturers' agents" and other representatives of the trade to supply them with guns, ammunition, etc., so that they could pose as full fledged "pluggers." This issue is one that probably will come up for consideration and disposal by the Board of Governors before the coming state tournament at Ingleside.

Match Shoot at Live Pigeons.

J. A. R. Elliot, of Kansas City, defeated Fred Gilbert, of Spirit Lake, Ia., in a 100-bird match at live pigeons for the Kansas City Star Cup and $100, by a score of 90 to 86, at Watson's Park, near Chicago, on Tuesday, April 26.

May 22—Olympic Gun Club (blue-rocks), Ingleside.
May 29-30—California Inanimate Target Association, Annual tournament, Ingleside.

The gray squirrel is protected in Los Angeles county.

A black bear weighing 600 pounds was recently killed near Sterlingville, Oregon, after a hard fight.

Reports from various parts of the State are frequent as to Chinese pheasants becoming numerous and evidently thriving.

Al Green, of Hollister, was severely wounded by a "wild boar" one day last week while out hunting on his Lone Tree ranch.

Al-Palmer has leased the grounds at Birds' Point. They will be put in thorough condition for trap shooting. It is rumored a new gun club will be organized.

The Rio Vista gun club have their grounds located on the Glenn place a short distance from town. The club is getting ready for a series of tournaments during the summer.

The shoot of the Tacoma and Seattle Gun Clubs for the possession of the fishing and shooting trophy recently won from Tacoma by the Elliott Ray team was postponed until May 1st on account of the tournament at Wallace, Idaho.

A new and unique society has been formed in Sacramento. Charter members who can comply with the required conditions will be eligible to two degrees. The first degree requires the applicant to say that hereafter he will neither own, control nor entertain any dog. The second degree requires the member to swear positively, without reservation, that hereafter he will neither ask any person to take a drink, nor accept any invitation from another to take a drink, where intoxicating liquors are sold by the glass.

The Salinas Index is responsible for the foregoing—Dogs and whiskey make an awful mixture; those Sacramentans are liable to do anything during the hot weather. They'll forget all their troubles, however this fall when the California Steal Works open up.

MAHWAH, N. J.

MR. H. CLAY GLOVER, Dear Sir:—I have used your Disemper Cure with good satisfaction, and as for your Mange Cure, it is the best remedy for skin diseases on dogs I have ever used. Yours respectfully, JOHN N. LEWIS.

Standards.

ENGLISH FOXHOUNDS—The head is large, but not heavy, brow pronounced, but not high, of good length, making girth about 16 inches. Nose: long and wide. Ears: set low and close to cheek. Neck: long and clean; without throatiness. Shoulders: long, well muscled, sloping and the true arm long and muscular. Back and loins very muscular; couplings wide, even to raggedness, with slight arch of loins. Back ribs very deep. Girth of chest 30 inches in a 24-inch tall dog. Hindquarters very strong, elbows set straight; neither in nor out. Legs: perfectly straight and strong; large size of bone at ankle, all important. Feet: round, cat-like and strong. Stern: gradually arched, carried gaily over the back, fringed with hair and tapering to a point.

Color: black, tan and white, black and white, and various pies of white and the color of the hare and badger.

Coat: dense, short, hard and glossy.

SCALE OF POINTS.

Head	15	Elbows	5
Neck	5	Legs and feet	20
Shoulders	10	Color and coat	5
Chest and back ribs	10	Stern	5
Back and loins	10	Symmetry	5
Hindquarters	10
Total	60

AMERICAN FOXHOUND—The American Foxhound, while differing in many respects from the English, should be judged from the same value of points. The American hound should be smaller and lighter in bone and muscle. Dogs should not be under 21 nor over 23½ inches, nor weigh over 57 pounds. Bitches should not be under 20 nor over 22½ inches, nor weigh over 50 pounds.

Head: medium size with the muzzle in harmonious proportions. Skull: rounded crosswise with a slight peak—line of profile nearly straight—with sufficient stop to give symmetry to the head. Ears: should reach to within one inch of end of muzzle and be thin, soft in coat, low set and closely pendant. Eyes: soft, medium sized and of varying shades of brown. Nostrils: slightly expanded. The head as a whole should strongly denote the hound "character."

Neck: clean and of good length, slightly arched, strong where it springs from the shoulder and gradually tapering to the head, without trace of throatiness. Shoulders of sufficient strength to give leverage and power—well sloped, muscular, but with clean run and not too broad. Chest deep for lung space, narrower in proportion to depth than the English hounds, 28 inches in girth in a 23½ inch tall hound being good. Well sprung ribs should extend well back, a three inch flank allowing springiness. Back and loin: broad short and strong, slightly arched. Hindquarters and lower thighs: well muscled and very strong. Stiffles: low set, not too much bent nor yet too straight—a happy medium. Elbows: set straight, neither in nor out. Legs and feet of great importance. Legs: should be straight and placed squarely under the shoulders, having plenty of bone, without clumsiness, strong pasterns, well stood upon. Feet: round, cat like, not too large, toes well knuckled, close and compact, strong nails, pad thick, tough and indurated by use. Stern: Strong in bone at the root, of medium length, carried like a sabre on a line with the spine, having a good brush. A docked stern will not disqualify but simply handicap according to the extent of docking.

Color: black, white and tan preferable, though solid colors and various pies are permissible.

Coat: rough and course without being wiry or shaggy.

The form should be harmonious throughout, and should show the blood quality and hound character in every aspect and movement.

Kennel Club Notes.

Entries are coming in at rapid rates since the appearance of the Premium List. The assurance of a large entry list, from present indications, is guaranteed. The judging of the greyhound classes will be by B. Haymon Esq., of Chicago. Superintendent Oldham will probably be in charge on Monday morning.

We call the attention of intending exhibitors to several important changes in some of the classes, viz: the limit of weight in the bull terrier class is 35 pounds or under instead of 25; the weight in the classes for pointer bitches has been changed from 55 pounds or over to 50.

In the Irish water spaniel class there will be novice, limit and open classes for dogs and for bitches. The entries in this class will be numerous enough to make the change from the original arrangement in the Premium List imperative.

The article "Retrievers, and How to Break Them," by Sir Henry Smith, which was published in Blackwood's Magazine last year, will soon be issued in book form.

BENCH SHOWS.

May 13-21. San Francisco Kennel Club's bench show, San Francisco. H. H. Carlton, Sec'y.

COURSING.

April 30-May 1—Union Coursing Park. Regular meetings every Saturday Sunday and holidays. Drawings every Wednesday evening 909 Market street.

D. J. Ladd, judge of the coursing at Agricultural Park, Los Angeles, has resigned.

At the recent Bulldog show in New York, $20,000 was the estimated valuation of the dogs exhibited.

A reference to the Kennel registry this week will show the whelping of Mr. H. A. Wegener's Peg Woffington properly noted.

Old Hall Paris, the well known prize collie, will be in the stud for about two months at John Clapperton's kennels, Medford, Mass.

Dr. J. T. Enos' brown cocker spaniel Seal has a local reputation in Salinas that gives him credit for being a remarkable sagacious canine.

Richland Duke, the prize-winning mastiff at the Minneapolis show last year and St. Paul last month, died on April 9th from poisoning, it is believed.

A perusal of Dr. Glover's book on dogs will be of great value in suggesting many good ideas for the conditioning of your dogs for the coming bench show.

The sales of St. Bernards noted in our registry column was made through Urnella, Urioste & Co. of this city. The dogs were shipped on the Newport last Wednesday.

Chas. M. Fisher's fine English setters White Wings and Queen have been taken over to the Tamalpais Gun Club grounds. They will be put in the pink of condition for the coming bench show.

Miss Corona Riccardo of the Grand Hotel, the owner of the young bulldog Dick Croker (Sum Total—Saturnista) has in this dog a remarkably fine specimen of the breed; he is brindle in color. "His Bowwows" will be seen at the coming show. Bulldogs are a society fad in the East now; the 'Frisco public will see the real thing in bulldogs when Dick is on the bench.

A recent acquisition to the ranks of royal bred dogs on the Pacific Coast is the grand, rough-coated St. Bernard Alto Millo No. 42 985 (Judith's Sir Belvedere No. 25,530—Santa Rosa No. 15,421). This magnificent dog was purchased from Mrs. A. W. Lee (owner of the Alta Kennels, Toledo, Ohio) by Thos. H. Browne, Esq., President of the St. Bernard Club of California, for Messrs. Cutten and Greenbaum, owners of the Humboldt Kennels, this city. Alto Millo is without doubt one of the best specimens living of the St. Bernard breed. His measurements and typical massive skull are unequalled by any St. Bernard in America to-day. He stands 35½ inches high at the shoulders and weighs 225 pounds, he was whelped July 18, 1895. The new owners of this dog are sanguine that he will make a ranking record on the coast; incidentally we might mention that all the previous purchases of St. Bernards by Mr. Browne from the Alta Kennels have made grand records, notably so Ch. Grand Master, Victor Watch, Florence and Marchioness of Bote. The recent purchase of the great St. Bernard bitch Princess Rachel (Ch. La Prince—Judith's Rachel) is in line for a good showing also.

Alta Millo, for a young dog, has made some fine wins on the Eastern circuit at the leading shows, viz:

First, also special for best in the show, at Indianapolis 1896; first, also special with Rex Watch for the best pair in the show, Louisville, 1897 and second in the free-for-all class at Grand Rapids, 1898.

Humboldt St. Bernard Kennels (J. E. Cutten, proprietor) has sold the R. C. St. Bernard dog Brian G. 36104 (Reglov—Cleopatra) and the R. C. bitch Queen of Las Vegas 42,397, (Major Bellville—Lady Bellville) to W. Molina, of Guatemala, Central America.

WHELPS.

H. A. Wegener's cocker spaniel bitch Peg Woffington (Ch. Red Roland—Jessie M.) whelped April 17, 1898, 4 dogs and 2 bitches to Dufferin Pastime (Viscount—Polly Pastime.)

H. A. Wegener's cocker spaniel bitch Polly Pastime (Ch. Woodland Clipper—Margarita) whelped April 27, 1898, 4 dogs and 2 bitches to Ch. Viscount (Ch. Pickpania—Tootsie.)

Cattle Breeding in California.

FOURTH PAPER.

The time may come that some of the small farmers in California will have to rely on a more certain return from their breeding operations than is now afforded, or rather it will be better to state that in order to realize on the capital and work expended there will be a wide departure from the systems that now prevail. Premature now, perhaps, to consider any other question than that of furnishing beef, milk and its products, and even the consideration of blending the various families, to combine the prevailing breeds so as to give the best results when beef and milk are both desired, thought to be outside of reasonable discussion.

Undoubtedly true that the beef breeds and the milk breeds have been brought to such a state of perfection that little is to be expected in the way of improvement.

Clearly defined the differences, and though some enthusiasts may claim that there is only a shade of actual difference, the general acknowledgment is proof to the contrary.

By choosing breeding animals that were noted for milking qualities among the Durhams it was thought that a race could be established that would combine beef-producing and lacteal supply in an eminent degree.

Fairly successful the experiments made many years ago in that line, but not sufficiently so to warrant the expectation that any one breed could displace the others. Better, so far as the tests can furnish the proof, to cross the breeds. Jersey on Durham has proved very good and some rare milkers obtained from mating the Jersey bull on the Durham cow. Quite well established that combinations of that kind can be made advantageously, so far as securing milk-giving capacity goes, and also a fair inference that the hybrids will also be superior to the full bloods of the male line in furnishing beef. A steer of the cross mentioned at two, three or four years old would not only be a great deal larger than one of entirely Jersey blood, but also take on flesh more rapidly. Disposition has a great deal to do with assimilating the food given, and an animal which is contented to rest quietly after receiving its rations will acquire more flesh than one which is not so lymphatic. While it is reasonable to expect that there will be a modification of parental traits in the progeny, the difficulty attending cross-breeding is that the cross cannot be relied upon, the characteristics of one parent predominating.

The first cross is usually the best, that is, when two breeds (especially when one is pure, the other a mongrel) are united the progeny will be better than when obtained from uniting the half-breeds. And yet when the endeavor is to secure as much of the best qualities of both as possible is the aim, then the union of the mixed breeds will effect the purpose.

Thus a person who aims to get the best return by supplying beef will surely go wrong when he forsakes the recognized beef-producing races, and, of course, the same reasoning will apply to those who are engaged in milk producing and the products therefrom, as the dairy breeds will best fill the bill.

In the third paper of this series the production of draft cattle was touched upon, and though it may appear that to breed cattle for the purpose of labor was taking a great many steps backward, now that horses are so hard to dispose of at any price, it may be well to guard against the recurrence of the present situation.

Beef is always in demand, and though in season like this anything that eats hay and grain entails heavy expense; when there was no lack of provender horses were a "drug," cattle ready sale. Whenever the labor market for horses is supplied it cannot be otherwise than a great depreciation in values follows. A surplus of working oxen does not entail the same loss, as there is another chance to dispose of them, and at the same time when a part of the working force is thus provided for, the smaller number of horses bred will ensure a better price.

In several of the European countries the farm work is mainly done with cattle; in Thuringia, cows do by far the largest proportion of the labor, and according to consular reports, "they are worked the year round, their owners claiming that it makes but little difference in the quantity or quality of their milk."

POULTRY.

Breeding Hens for Egg Production.

All breeders are aware that "like produces like" in all breeds of animals. No doubt there are exceptions to this rule, but if this axiom be kept in view the right line will seldom be deviated from when the finest hens for breeding are selected and they are kept in a separate yard with a male fowl not related to them, and again in addition that eggs used for hatching are those laid by the hen herself. Better results have been found by employing this last-named method in preference to using eggs taken indiscriminately from those laid by the whole flock. Where possible, hens conspicuous for the large number of eggs they have produced should be selected for the breeding pen. While it is impossible and certainly impracticable in the majority of cases to keep individual records of egg production, yet ample knowledge can be gained on this point to enable one with a sufficient degree of certainty to make such selections as will aid him to greatly improve his flock in the desired particular. There is perhaps no time in the life of the fowl that will indicate its vigor so well as the moulting period. Fowls that moult in a short time and scarcely stop laying during this period have, as a rule, strong vigorous constitutions, and if properly fed give a large yearly record. On the other hand those that are a long time moulting are found to not possess the vigor and strength necessary to properly digest and assimilate their food, and therefore are not good egg layers.

If it is found necessary to select fowls without a knowledge of their dispositions during the moulting period, to predicate a selection upon, some indication of their egg-producing powers is found in their general conformation. A long, deep-bodied fowl is to be chosen rather than one with a short body, whose underline is not unlike a half circle. A strong, vigorous, hearty fowl usually has a long body, deep chest with a long and quite straight underline. Other things being equal, the large-bodied fowls of the egg breeds are to be preferred. As a rule fowls bred for egg production are larger bodied than those bred for fancy points. It is a serious mistake to select eggs for hatching during the spring months from a flock of mixed hens composed in part of some good and some poor layers, for no matter how poor a layer a hen may be, the chances are that the most of her eggs will be produced during the spring and early summer months. A hen that has laid many eggs during the winter months is quite likely to produce fewer eggs during the spring and early summer months than one that commences to lay only on the approach of warm weather; and hence the time is unpropitious in which to make a selection. Spring time is nature's season for egg production. It follows, therefore, that a larger per cent of eggs will be obtained from poor layers than would occur at any other season of the year.

When the strongest and most vigorous fowls have been selected, mate them according to age and with due regard to consanguinity, that is to say, a two-year-old hen with a one-year-old male or a one-year-old hen with a two-year-old male, taking care, however, that they are not too near akin and that new blood be introduced on one side or the other at least every two years. One of the most potent causes of loss in rearing fowls is unskillful breeding. How frequently do we hear of large numbers of the young dying without apparent cause and yet generally when inquired into it will be found that they have been bred from old birds without any infusion of fresh blood in the stock for years, or that they are the offspring of pullets' eggs. Chickens springing from such sources are weak and delicate and seldom attain perfection. To have pullets strong and healthy is of the utmost importance. If the object be strong and healthy chickens, the male ought to be restricted to six or at the most eight hens—exception, however, can be made with the Leghorn family, which can be given a limit of ten as their powers of fecundity are stronger than is found in other breeds.

NOTES.

After chickens have started their feathers, the most critical period is passed and they are likely to live with reasonable care.

The poultry does best and is most profitable when it has free range of the farm and garden. Some grain will be eaten by the fowls but they will pay for it many times over in eggs and meat, besides destroying grasshoppers, worms and insects.

A poultry breeder says a farmer will feed a bushel of corn to produce six pounds of pork worth 60 cents, while this bushel would keep a hen a year. She would lay at least twelve dozen eggs, which averaging eighteen cents per dozen, would equal $2.60, and she would rear a brood of chickens worth as much more, making a total of nearly $5.00.

Many no doubt would be surprised to learn that the American hen paid nearly twice the profits that were earned by the American railroads in 1895! A business that will return the original investment, and give a fair profit besides, to say nothing of a large increase over the original number of breeding stock, all in one season, is a pretty good one, is it not? A flock or even a pen of pure bred fowls has often done this if the right start was made and good management prevailed.

Where grasshoppers are thick, a few turkeys will do good service, and quickly convert the grasshoppers into Thanksgiving cheer.

No fortunes are made from hens, but anybody can make hens pay their way and leave a balance on the right side of the account.

For the first three weeks with chicks dry oatmeal three times a day with grit and plenty of milk or water will make a healthy, rapid growth.

For hens of the heavy breeds a favorite ration is a mixture of buckwheat, oats and barley. It produces plenty of eggs and has no tendency to fatten.

Some of the western egg farmers seem much taken with the Hamburg-Leghorn crops. The eggs are rather too small and light-colored to suit the taste of the Eastern market.

Soil that contains a great deal of fine gravel is excellent for poultry. Every time it is dug over a lot of sharp grit is brought to the surface. Such soil is as a general thing naturally well drained.

Young chickens drink very often, and quickly soil the water with their dirty bills and feet. The automatic fountains, or other fountains that hold a great deal of water, will quickly get stale, and should be scalded out as soon as they begin to smell bad or they will breed disease.

SHEEP.

A New Breed of Sheep

The wool growers of the United States will await with interest the final result of the experiments which the Agricultural Department of the University of California has been prosecuting now for the past three years with the idea of evolving from a cross of the Merino with the Persian a new and distinct type of sheep. The males of the Merino and the females of the Persian are used. The object is to combine the advantage of a large fleece of fine quality with the ability to produce mutton of the best class from the same flock. So far the experiments have not been carried far enough to permit the announcement of definite results. However, the indications all point that complete success will be attained. If a type of sheep that will produce wool comparing favorably in quality and quantity with that of the Merino and at the same time will equal or even approach the Southdown in mutton production, the California experiment station can be congratulated on one of the greatest successes of recent years in the improvement of domestic animals. It is claimed for several breeds that this result has already been obtained, but the sheep growers who are best acquainted with the different types of breeds will appreciate to how limited an extent this is true.

SHEEP AND WOOL NOTES.

Large quantities of sheep were driven through San Andreas, early this week on their way East, for green fields and pastures new.

One hundred and ten years ago twenty-nine sheep were carried to Australia. These have expanded into 120,000,000 and some of them are about the finest in the world.

Give the sheep on the farm plenty of straw. They will convert it into the richest kind of food for crops. On any good farm, with good management, a flock of sheep will pay for its winter keeping in the manure it makes.

Twenty-three thousand of the 33,000 head of sheep which were pastured on Santa Rosa island have been sold and shipped.

The age of a sheep can not be told by the teeth after five years, as they then have a full mouth. At one year old they have two center teeth; at two, four; at three, six; at four, eight; at five, ten.

Many level-headed farmers have kept their faith in the poor, despised sheep, despite the low prices in recent years. Sheep will both feed and cloth a man, which is more than can be said of other farm animals.

Generally sheep can be turned into the pastures first, but before this is done see that the ewes are properly tagged, and that the lambs are docked and castrated. Keep salt where they can help themselves.

PHÆTON.

That the breeders of coach horses in France have succeeded in establishing a distinct type of horses in further proved by the cut of Phæton presented above.

That of Admirable, frontispiece in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of April 16th, and the cut of Indre to the same paper are so nearly alike that they might be taken for the same animal were the markings omitted. Then Phæton (sire of Indre) coming so very close in the general conformation, that any one at all conversant with horses can not fail to be struck with the resemblance.

The article appended was written by M. A. Van Schelle, commissioner from the Belgian government to study American horses, or rather the horses of the United States and the methods of breeding pursued here, and his report will be received with great interest by the breeders of harness horses. Thoroughly conversant with French methods of breeding the "demi-sang"—half-breeds—his article on that subject, will be well worthy of study. In some minor points, far from being in accordance with history, it is safe to accept it in the whole, and therefore it is given in its entirety, reserving criticisms for the future.

No great amount of argument is necessary to prove that only in those countries where government aid is extended to the breeders of horses can improvement, development and maintenance of excellence go on uninterrupted and uninfluenced by national financial conditions. A stable government's money is always available, whereas during hard times and during periods of depression in equine values private individuals decline to invest the amount of money necessary to purchase first-class breeding horses, with the result that retrogression takes place instead of advancement. It matters little how government aid is proffered to breeders, so long as the grants are sufficiently large to warrant the purchase of the very best stallions in different numbers, and the offering of their services to the public at a very small and fee. Foremost among the greater nations of the world in the perfection of its system of aiding its horse breeders stands France, the haras at Le Pin having been established in 1680, and the good work of improvement carried on ever since without noticeable interruption.

The idea of systematically improving the horse in France was developed in the time of the Crusades, hence originally under the feudal system. When the Moors were hurled back from the Spanish march of the Frankish realm by Charlemagne's invincible troops, in the very beginning of the ninth century, hundreds of stallions from the desert came as the spoil of war, to the Frankish warriors, and later, in the Crusades, the descendants of these horses proved their vast superiority. Rivalry between the feudal war lords stimulated their vassals to the improvement of the horses in every fighting band, and so the good work went on until in 1680 the royal haras was established at Le Pin for the purpose of ameliorating the native breeds by the infusion of the hot blood of the desert. The stallions first kept in this haras have left their mark indelibly on the French breeds, though from the parent stock in the course of two centuries and a quarter breeds and types varying very widely have been produced.

Nothing tries the horse resources of a nation so hard as war; and from the first the French breeders have always been the best mounted in the world. From the early war horse stock has been developed the French Coach and the trotter of today, the use of the good work in the native stock, using the thoroughbred as the ameliorating agent and the product of the cross as the foundation of the present magnificent type. Very briefly stated, such is the history of the foundation on which France has built her horse resources, and the accepted model of which is today conceded the world over to be the best for carriage use, with the Yorkshire Coach and Hackney bred on the same lines.

Like you people here, the French have evolved their trotter from the native stock, using the thoroughbred as the ameliorating agent and the product of the cross as the foundation of the present magnificent type. Very briefly stated, such is the history of the foundation on which France has built her horse resources, and the accepted model of which is today conceded the world over to be the best for carriage use, with the Yorkshire Coach and Hackney bred on the same lines.

In founding the government haras the French officials had a single object in view, to wit, to produce a horse of "blood and bone," of size and substance, beauty, endurance and speed, that could be used in harness or under saddle—that would carry a soldier, his arms and his horse, go a long distance on the road attached to the heavy carriage. He must be able to trot or gallop fast, go long distances and endure great fatigue without breaking down. As much of the work was required at the trot, trotting harness under saddle were not introduced as early as the present, and, in fact, the actual speed test was not alone governing the verdict, but individuality, action, and general fitness to perpetuate the breed entering into the judges' decisions. The horse that filled this bill had to be a strictly useful animal, no dress parade "dude," nor undersized fast one, was accepted. The government bought the stallions that were awarded the prizes, and when the horses were placed in the haras, the breeders were asked to pay stud fees ranging from five to thirty francs—$10 to $60. Thus was the good work begun and though the demand of the times have changed as civil station has advanced, the basic methods have changed but little—the old principle of buying the stallions proven by actual test to be the best, at liberal prices, and standing them at nominal fees, still prevails.

Instances are quite plentiful in France to-day of stallions that cost from 12,500 to 20,000 francs, standing at fees ranging from ten to thirty francs—stallions that have proved themselves the best of their years on the trotting track. From the very beginning, absolute soundness and freedom from all constitutional or hereditary defect has been insisted on by the government examiners, and since the passing of this century, has a stallion been permitted to stand for public service in France without first being examined as to these qualifications. If "approved," he might safely be bred to—it rejected, the shafts fairly yawned for him. As civilization advanced the demand for a finer, equally large, and enduring, though faster horse grew apace, and the demand was supplied by selection and introduction of large, strong-boned, finely-finished thoroughbreds. The race course was continued in use as a means to sift the good from the bad; wise laws were passed prohibiting the use of undersized or unworthy stallions; stricter regulations surrounded the acquisition of government money; and the grant was increased from year to year; the very foremost talent in the nation was employed to manage the various government haras and this brings us down to some thirty-five years ago, since which time the methods have not been materially changed, save in the way of the progress that would naturally be made under such circumstances by so progressive a nation as the French.

A description of the methods now in vogue will, therefore, serve to call attention to the wisdom displayed by the French people in perfecting their favorite breed. Never for a moment in the evolution of the Coach and Trotting branches of the demi-sang, have the French breeders lost sight of the strict utility of the horse, and while speed has been increased as the result of the progress, as it has been in the United States, size, substance, beauty of conformation, endurance and style have been increased in like measure. The result is the development of the type now accepted all over the world as the best for coach and carriage horses—"in heavy harness," as your phrase is. Beginning with the race course, as the great sifter, or more properly, separator always the greatest factor in the improvement of light horses—we find that the French government annually adds to trotting races an enormous sum of money. In 1897 a total of 1,748,512 francs was added to purses for trotting races directly by the government or through government influence. Here is the official statement without change, save that instead of francs the amounts are expressed in dollars: By the government, by direct appropriation, $8,970; by government societies, $75,060; by the Societe d'Encouragement du demi-sang, $77,180; by that society, a further donation in the name of the government, $12,000; by the Societe des Societes de France, $4,400; by the Comitees de la race dans les departements, $22,000; by towns (in which meetings are held), $12,825; sundry donations (under the law), $13,267; from entries (to government endowed races), $70,460; less fees reverting, $13,395—$57,65; which several sums being added together represent a total of $319,683, which from figures I see in your turf papers is considerably more than is offered in your G and Circuit this year.

In addition, an equally large, if not larger, sum is spent each year in the purchase of breeding stallions. The conditions of the leading trotting futurity of France provide that the government may buy any of the entered no sex; and as most of the best producing mares are nominated their three-year-old colts are under option of purchase to the government. The racing season shows up the best in strong contrast. Annually each autumn, the government commissaries announce that they will hold a sale of the best of the government's stock, and there the breeders assemble their horses which they desire to sell. The commissaries, on the appointed days, make their selections, taking so many "trotters" and so many "carrossiers" (a latter being carriage stallions—the difference between the two being that the former has been raced and the latter has a lower rate of speed to recommend him. None but the choicest individuals are purchased—nothing in the line of beauty, size, action or endurance, being sacrificed to speed, and special care is exercised to pick out these stallions which best combine these essential points. The carrossiers must be horses of the most commanding presence, beauty and high action, with fair road gait—as you express it—speed, indeed the stallion that is not a good stepper and cannot show that amount of speed, will not be selected. In short, the carrossiers are identical with the trotters, except in point of speed.

The stallions on which these defects are held are first looked over and the best bought. Then the others are culled over and if any breeder has even a score of good ones he may sell them all to the government. To show the enormous benefit to breeders of this system, it may be mentioned that M. L. Lallouet of Samelle, sold 7 trotters and 9 carrossiers to the commissaries last fall for an average price of $1,613; and M. Paul Brion, of Caen, sold 23 stallions, all old for an average price of $1,310. Naturally the fast trotters bring the highest price. The holder of the three-year-old trotting record for French stallions, Quirinal, was bought for the sum, I think, of $6,600, and his fee in the stud will, most likely, not exceed fifty francs ($10). When bought, these stallions are allotted to the various haras according to the character of the country in which they are situated. Down in the low districts the stallions of highest quality, hottest blood and finest bone are placed; these characteristics serving to neutralize the more phlegmatic traits of the native mares. On the other hand, up in the limestone plateaux, where the mares are of fine mould, the thick heavier-set, bigger-boned stallions are used; and thus the balance of power is preserved.

The fees asked for the services of these government stallions will seem at first a little above, ridiculously low to people of your country. What private breeder in the United States, or indeed in any other country, could afford to pay $6,000 for a stallion and then offer his services for ten dollars per mare? Not one; yet from five francs ($1) to fifty francs ($10)—and only the latter in few cases—is all that in all France is charged owners of mares. Who cannot under such circumstances command the services of a good stallion for his mares, no matter how moderate his means may be?

At the years pass, the stallions are shifted from haras to haras, and the breeders of the district in which they stand are thus all given a chance to breed to the most famous sires—for the owners of mares residing in the district in which a haras is located, have the first opportunity to breed to the horses kept there. To obviate trouble an elaborate and absolutely just plan has been adopted in dealing with the owners of mares. Naturally there will be an overwhelming demand for the services of a famous sire, say a successful sire of speed, far beyond his capacity. Breeders are required to nominate their mares prior to a stated date—the date of closing being set by law and duly advertised each season. When that day arrives, the directeur d'haras, has a nominal national arranged in tabulated form—but it will pay better to describe an actual instance in point. Last spring 167 mares were made to a stallion that was limited to 80 mares. The directeur first selected the noted producers and booked them; then he discarded those that were the least well favored and arranged the rest under one head. Lots were then drawn to the number required to make up the full complement of 80, and the mares remaining were bred to other stallions. In this way, the breeders acquire an opportunity "to breed the best to the best"; the encouragement they receive is very great and the individual payments are mere bagatelles, though in the aggregate they go a long way toward the support of the various haras.

When foaling time comes around, accurate lists of foals are kept and the records are complete in the office of the chief directeur, who is second in command to the minister of agriculture only, for many decades. Under such regulations, with such methods, and directed by men of the highest talent, who must win their way to their positions by sheer force of merit, is it any wonder that the French trotter is as he is to-day—the typical horse for carriage use? Briefly and necessarily imperfectly described as these methods are above, it is easy to see that the French breeders go about their work so intelligently and systematically that they are bound to succeed. A. VAN SCHELLE.

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climate and crop conditions up to Tuesday last is based upon reports received from Weather Bureau Stations, the telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company, and many reports scattered throughout the State.

Shasta County—Still dry. Grapes are doing nicely. Good prospect for a fair crop of apples. A good deal of stock has been driven north during the week.

Glenn County—Prospect for wheat improving. With reasonable weather will have feed for stock and some wheat.

Butte County—Northwest winds. Oranges setting finely; good crop anticipated. Hay and grain crops very light.

Sacramento County—Crop, a look badly. Weather very unfavorable for grain. Hay cutting commenced; will prove a fair crop on account of failure of grain.

Yolo County—Fruit trees making big growth; foliage heavy. Prospect brighter unless fruit should drop off on account of drouth.

Solano County—Some early hay being cut; crop very short. Cool south winds early part of week beneficial to grain. Apricots and prunes better than expected. Hot, north winds ripening cherries fast. Rain needed to insure vegetable crop.

Placer County—Grain and hay still green and fresh; grass beginning to dry. Strawberries and cherries coming on. Fruit growers irrigating.

El Dorado County—Dry weather continues to reduce prospects for all crops. Practically no hay or grain, but fair chance for partial crop of pears, prunes, apples and wine grapes.

Merced County—Very dry. Summer fallowed grain looking well. Hot north wind. Crops burned.

Stanislaus County—Crops still doing well inside canal district, but outside, no returns need be looked for.

Fresno County—Grape vines sprouting rapidly. Good supply of water in ditches. Cutting first alfalfa crop. Vineyardists report presence of thrips, and prospects that the pests will do great damage.

Kings County—No grain. Apricots and prunes failing off badly because of too warm weather. Pears doing finely.

Tulare County—Dry and warm. Ditches running full for irrigation. Planting citrus trees.

Kern County—Usual April rainfall failed. Some grain may be harvested but will be a short crop from a small area. Fruit crop will likely be very light.

Sonoma County—Late sown grain will prove a short crop unless rain soon comes. Vineyards making good growth. Planting corn; but ground too dry to bring it up without rain. Haying will commence soon.

Napa County—Hay and grain good. Cherries and peaches good; apricots few; fruit yield generally good.

Alameda County—Hay and grain turning rapidly; yield will be very light.

Lake County—No rain; outlook not good. Hay and grain on summer fallow or very early winter plowing will yield a good crop, but late sown except on very best land will amount to nothing. Second cultivation in orchards and vineyards only possible where the first was done early. Feed drying fast; prunes very good; grapes well started.

San Mateo County—Hay and grain poor; grass drying; barley heading out; pears and apples look well.

Santa Clara County—Grain and feed turning dry.

Santa Cruz County—Need of grain sadly felt. Pumping plants running day and night to irrigate orchards. Hay and grain will not mature without rain soon; farmers have given up expecting any grain this year.

Monterey County—Poor prospects for any crops, except possibly a little hay near foot-hills.

San Luis Obispo County—Pasture completely dried up. Cattle shipments continue. No change in grain. Fair prospects of fruit crop.

Ventura County—Poor prospects for barley. Oranges and lemons turning out far better than expected. A beet sugar factory in course of construction. Irrigated lands will produce a fair crop of apricots.

Los Angeles County—Bassett. Grain crop will be almost an entire failure; some hay will be made. Dairies. Hay and grain almost total failure. Deciduous fruit crop will be poor. Los Angeles. Feed drying up fast; fruit looking good; berries of all kinds looking well. Palmdale. Continued drouth. No prospects for grain. Pomona. Deciduous fruits doing as well as could be expected. San Fernando. Hay and grain a failure; stock suffering for feed.

San Bernardino County—Too late for rain to benefit grass much. Valleys looking badly. Fair peach and small apricot crop.

Riverside County—Hot and dry. Orange movement exceeds equipment to handle it. Hay and grain situation better.

Orange County—Prospects for hay and grain poor; fruit trees looking well.

San Diego County—Crop conditions unchanged.

Eureka Summary—Night fogs and warmer weather during days have counteracted to some extent deficient rainfall. Crops are doing well.

Los Angeles Summary—Too soon to report effect of hot wave at close of week, but will probably still further reduce crop of fruit. Sugar beets injured by hot, dry winds.

CATTLE.*Nevada Board of Health Regulations vs. California Live Stock.

The members of the State Board of Health met at Carson on the 22d inst. The Attorney General read the laws pertaining to the organization and duties of the Board. Several dispatches from persons desiring to bring horses and sheep to Nevada from the 36th parallel of latitude was laid before the Board.

Under the law of the State it is the duty 'o have all live stock coming into the State from the infected or scheduled district inspected, and heavy penalties are prescribed for violating the orders of the Board relating to the enforcement of quarantine regulations.

The Board decided to establish a quarantine station at or near Verdi, which is near the California line on the Central Pacific railroad. There are good facilities for watering stock at that point, and lumber for corrals, etc., is cheap. Stock from the infected district are subject to quarantine for ninety days, and as the whole State of California is now in the scheduled district, it is not probable that cattle from that State will be permitted to be removed to the ranges in Nevada for at least three months.

RESOLUTIONS REGARDING TRANSPORTATION OF LIVE STOCK.

Dr. Patterson offered the following resolution:

WHEREAS, Under the climatic conditions at present prevailing on the Pacific Coast, our State is threatened with the invasion of large bands of cattle, horses and sheep from regions lying within the quarantine line established by the United States Government; which animals are likely to convey diseases dangerous not only to the live stock of this State, but also to the health and well-being of our people. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we pray the Governor of this State to issue his proclamation forbidding the introduction of all horned cattle and horses into this State from across said United States quarantine line except during the time between the 15th day of November of each year and the 15th day of February of the next succeeding year; also excepting horned cattle and horses in transit by rail across this State. Horned cattle and horses in transit not to be allowed to leave the cars within the boundaries of this State except for the purpose of temporary resting and feeding at the quarantine station herein-after provided for and to be established.

That all sheep entering the State from across the quarantine line be required to undergo inspection at said station by an officer of this Board, who shall if he finds them entirely free from all infectious or contagious diseases issue a certificate to that effect; which certificate shall relieve them from the restrictions otherwise imposed. But if such certificate be not granted, then said sheep shall not be permitted to leave said station except to be loaded upon the railroad cars and conveyed without the boundaries of the State.

Resolved, That a quarantine and inspection station be established at the town of Verdi, Washoe county, Nevada.

Resolved, That the owner or owners of sheep making application to this Board for inspection of their flocks and for bill of health for the same be required to accompany said application with a deposit of two and one-half cents per head on the number of sheep in said band in compensation of services of inspector.

Resolved, That the above resolutions be adopted as the regulations established by this Board of Health for the government of the movement of horned cattle horses and sheep from the quarantined districts into and within the State of Nevada.

The above resolutions were unanimously adopted and the same are to go into effect at once.

NOTES.

Our correspondent at Marysville writes us as follows: A number of stockmen who have made their headquarters in this city for the past two weeks are fretting over the gloomy prospects ahead of them as feed promises to be very scarce. The stockmen who brought their sheep from Southern California and their cattle from Hollister and other places, are traveling all over this northern section of the State in search of pasture. The first bunch of grass cattle of the season came into town on the 23d from the lower country. They are very passable, taking into consideration the scarcity of feed in that part of the State.

We learn from Wheatland, Cal., that the foothill pasture in that locality is in a much better condition than one might suppose. The grass began to grow earlier than usual this spring and obtained almost a full growth before the lack of rain was noticeable; but few complaints of poor feed are heard.

The Nevada Board of Health has consented to have the quarantine station for stock from infected districts established a short distance east of Reno. This makes it more convenient for shippers east and north and south. No cattle from the scheduled, that is, infected territory, will be permitted to remain in Nevada, but sheep that are free from infectious and contagious diseases, may remain in the State if their owners comply with the State laws.

Large numbers of cattle are reported on their way to Siskiyou from Southern California; feed in Shasta County is plentiful and with late rains good crops are insured; cattle on the ranges and meadows now in that county look fine and will provide excellent beef next fall and winter from that section.

A gentleman who arrived in Yreka a few days ago from below, says the cattle in the southern half of the State look poor and hardly able to stand up. Old straw discarded as unfit for any use, is fed out to keep the poor creatures alive, while some are shipping corn from the East to carry them along until next season.—Yreka Journal.

The largest fence in the world has just been completed on the Mexican frontier by the Erie Cattle Company. It is 75 miles in length, and was built to keep the cattle from running across the border and falling an easy prey to the Mexican cow punchers.

J. J. Hebborn, Superintendent of the P. I. Co. in Monterey county, shipped 250 head of cattle to the Sacramento valley this week.

William Casey, a stock-raiser and farmer near San Ardo, was in Gonzales this week, says the Tribune of that city, having come here with a band of 160 cattle. Mr. Casey was looking for feed for his stock and entered into negotiations with Phil Collins by which they will be fed until such time as the danger of starvation in the south is past. As an inducement, Mr. Casey agreed to give Mr. Collins one-third of his herd if the latter would look out for the remainder. This Mr. Collins consented to do and drove the cattle to his place in the hills across the river, where feed is plentiful as compared with other places.

Cattle are being sent northward as speedily as possible from Monterey county to Sacramento river points.—Monterey Cypress

The Stockton Independent says that hay is going to be worth big money in view of the prospect of a dry season. Farmers in that section are asking $25, and are not anxious to sell. Live stock is consequently dropping in price. Horses are valued at $10, and cattle are about as low—good cows selling for about $15 each. Sheep are coming to this county from the San Joaquin in large numbers.

On the 25th inst. a train load of stock from the drying pastures of Tres Pinos were unloaded at Wheatland to be driven to a foothill range in Yuba county near Browns Valley. The train consisted of 16 carloads of horses and 14 of cattle and calves. The animals, while not in the worst condition, showed marked signs of the lack of feed. This lot was in much better condition than the train load shipped there the week before last.

California shipments of cattle last week to Colorado, Utah and Nebraska were over 5,000 head. This one consignment of stock required fifteen trains. Each train had eighteen cars and there were twenty head of cattle to the car. The Santa Fe people are making arrangements for sixty trains of eighteen cars each so as to handle a vast quantity of cattle within the next two weeks. This means the shipment of 20,000 head of cattle.

All cattle from California coming by rail into or through Utah will be inspected at Wadsworth, Nev. The Utah State Board of Health has determined upon the Nevada town as the most convenient place for the inspection, and as soon as a capable inspector is found he will be dispatched thither.

The office will carry no salary. It will be a fee office and for a time at least very profitable, for thousands of cattle will be shipped from California eastward through Utah within the next thirty days. As a fee of probably 2 cents an animal will be allowed, the inspector will be able to make an excellent compensation.

The feed for stock in the southern part of the State is so short and of such inferior quality that stockmen are bestirring themselves to meet the emergency by securing pasture lands in other portions of the State, says the San Luis Breeze. The largest consignment that has left the south pulled out on the Southern Pacific on the 24th inst. The number of cattle in the shipment was between 1,000 and 1,100 head. They were from the R. T. Buell ranch at Buell flat, coming over the Pacific Coast railway in two trains of sixteen and twenty-one cars respectively. They were transferred through the cattle chutes to the Southern Pacific cars. There were thirty-two big cattle cars in the train that left for the north. Five engines were used in pulling the train up the grade. Mr. Buell has secured pasturage for these cattle at Calistoga. Many other heavy shipments will probably be made within a few days.

Eastern Nevada cattlemen say that the drought will strike Nevada on account of the little snow on the mountains. The Humboldt river now contains only 10,000 inches of water.

L. H. Sweetser, whose horned herds are among the largest that roam the State of Idaho, has returned from California, bringing the news that Will White has purchased 8,000 head of cattle from the Promontory Cattle Company for which he paid $200,000, says the Salt Lake Tribune. This makes, he says, a clean-up for the company which has found cattle-raising at long range unprofitable for many years past. What the intention is with reference to the ranch, which is one of the most extensive on the line of the Southern Pacific, is not known, but the belief prevails that it also is waiting for a buyer. The principal owners in the company were the Crockers who were unable to give the enterprise their personal attention, and who have long expressed a desire to retire from it. Mr. Sweetser continued on his way to Yale, Ida.

Many of the farmers here will plant sorghum on land which is now too dry for other crops. Sorghum makes a splendid forage crop, as much as twenty tons per acre having been harvested on dry land, and the entire growth is a nutritious food for cattle, says the Chino Champion. It is said that it will grow wherever Egyptian corn will grow, and even stands drought better than the latter.

Thirty cars of cattle were shipped from the Montana Union stock yards on Tuesday last. The cattle were bought by Mr. Thebo of Seattle and are destined for the Klondike. D. D. Walker sold 500 head and the Montana Meat company about 150. The animals are all 4-year-old steers and brought the highest price paid in these parts in many days.

We do not expect the coming war with Spain to effect beef prices to any great extent, says the Rural World. It will be a naval war from start to finish, excepting the small army in Cuba, and canned and salt meats will be mostly in demand. There will be no more mouths to be fed than now; and the packeries have already supplied the governments with sufficient amounts for all expected emergencies of the coming year.

DAIRYING.*Making the Dairy Cow Pay.

The dairy cow, to be a money maker, must be a good individual. Fortunately for the dairy interests, the views of those engaged in the business have been broadened of late through results shown in experimental stations and by the aid of modern devices. A good deal less attention is paid at the present time to minor points of fancy and theory, as well as even to the kinds of breed, for now with scales and test a good producing cow is sought for, irrespective of what particular breed she may belong to, and leaving all theory out of the question. To study dairy characteristics or to have theories are well enough in themselves, and may be indulged in by those who can afford to pay for such pastime, but for those who rely upon dairying as a means of subsistence or improvement in their earthly condition, it is far better to rely upon well substantiated facts. To make a success in dairying one should first find out what a cow is producing and what such production costs, and from this date learn if the business is likely to be a paying one on the lines established. We believe in the development of breed but not in following breed blindly. All good cows are not of one breed, nor are all cows good belonging to one breed. Cows and their conditions should be studied. It is not always the largest producing cow that makes the most money, for it is found that cows differ in their capacity to assimilate feed as well as the labor required in extracting their milk. In a test made at the Pennsylvania Experimental Station it was shown that a cow producing 296 pounds of butter gave a profit of $31 in one year, while one producing only 279 pounds made a profit of $61 a year, and then this seeming anomaly was found in the cause named above. Again, an observing dairyman tested his herd with a Babcock test, and found he not only had cows that belonged on the unprofitable list, but to such a degree that it took all the profit of a 265 pound yielding cow to compensate for the loss on one of these. When two of these cows, one profitable and the other unprofitable, were kept together the poor one ate up all the profits of the other, and there was nothing made. When the unprofitable one was sold the other returned a profit of $20, so that one cow was thus proven to be just that much better than two.

Many cows are unprofitable because of their treatment. One of the best ingredients to put into a cow's rations is brains. Let the man who feeds and cares for her use brains. Mr. Hyatt, one of the most noted dairymen of Wisconsin, say that "the ration of all rations for the dairy cow is kindness," and he is right. The use of brains confirms this. Don't expect the cow to make something out of nothing. Don't expect her to give a big flow of milk if treated unkindly.

Next comes the feed. Do not scrimp the cow on feed, for this is not economy. Give her good feed and plenty of it and if she does not pay for the outlay, then get a cow that will. Fortunately, the cow is able to digest and assimilate a large quantity of coarse feed, provided it be of good quality. She cannot make butter enough to reach the paying mark out of dry grass, or even hay, although these feeds are good in their place. There is no way to make a cow milk well but to feed her well and feed her on those foods that go to the production of milk. The fattening ration is not adapted to a liberal flow of milk. Succulence is one of the essential qualities in the cow's feed, therefore roots and e silage afford the readiest means of securing this. Another important consideration is the composition of the food. Milk is a nitrogenous product, and it is a well-established law in animal economy that fat carbohydrates never make protein in the animal body. It naturally follows, then, that if you want to produce a nitrogenous product like milk that we must furnish the required amount of nitrogenous matter in the feed. Our farm feeds are usually deficient in this element (the most potent factor in the food of man and beast), while it is at the same time the most expensive. One of the agricultural problems of the day is how to grow more nitrogenous feed on the farm. The Danes and Canadians are furnishing the English consumer with pork, which he willingly pays from 2 to 3 cents per pound more for than he does for our maize-fed pork, because it is better flavored and grained, due to more nitrogenous foods, such as barley, peas and milk having been fed to their hogs. We can make as good a quality of butter on maize, oats and hay as the world affords, but we cannot make it as cheaply on these carbohydrate foods, nor can we develop the cow to her highest capacity and usefulness on this kind of ration. Clover, beans, bran, peas, cotton-seed meal and linseed meal are the principal nitrogenous foods which are in part fed to cows.

It is in the matter of feed that the best judgment must be used, in order that the fullest capacity of the cow may be developed at the lowest possible expense consistent with the desired results.

Sire and Grandsire of ALL the 2:10 Performers ever Produced in Oregon and Washington.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

Alameda, at $100 the Season.

(WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGES.)

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities. In having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a pacing-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electioneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Prince. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONTs.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

NOTE—Besie Rankin, by Altamont, sold November, 1897, brought the highest price obtained for a harness horse at public auction in California during the year. Address

THE FASTEST OF THE GUY WILKES FAMILY

(REGISTERED 0232)

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

J. H. White's Stock Farm, Lakeville, Cal.

TERMS—$25 FOR THE SEASON

SEYMOUR WILKES was sired by the King of the Wilkes family, Guy Wilkes, 2:15<sup>1</sup>, dam Early Bird, by Playmail (brother to Barney, 2:25<sup>1</sup>); second dam Lucy, by Odd Fellow (son of Chloroform); third dam by a son of Williamson's Belmont; fourth dam by Blackhawk 767. Playmail was by Mike 3403 (he by Vermont 322, out of the Peniger mare), out of Kate McDonough (dam of Ella Lewis 2:27, and grandam of Saladin, 2:05<sup>1</sup>).

SEYMOUR WILKES stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a seal brown in color, and in conformation is one of the most symmetrical of any in California. His qualities as a level-headed, game and speedy race horse are known to all horsemen. He is the fastest son of the mighty Guy Wilkes, and on his maternal side traces to the very best of sires and dams. He has an iron constitution, and all owners of good mares that want horses that will have breeding, size, bone, quality, good disposition and extreme speed should not overlook this horse. His service fee is placed at a very low figure considering his merits. He never was bred but to a few mares, and his progeny are models of perfection. Mares can be shipped direct to the ranch via steamer "Gold." The best of care taken of them on the farm, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Pasturage $3 per month. For further particulars apply to

The Greatest Trotter in America,

Has trotted 40 heats as a three-year old better than 2:27 1-2, 31 in 2:20 or better and 12 in 2:15 or better. Won 13 races out of 17 starts as a three-year-old, and a total of $5,400 in his three-year-old form.'

ZOMBRO, 2:11 (Registered No. 28,029), brown stallion, foaled in 1892, stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,200 pounds, and is one of the most perfect formed horses in America. His career on the turf in 1895 stamps him as one of the greatest three-year-olds the world has ever seen.

ZOMBRO, 2:11, sired by McKinney, 2:11<sup>1</sup>, son of Alcyone, by George Wilkes.

ZOMBRO, 2:11, first dam Whisper, by Almont Lightning, son of Almont 33, dam by Mambrino Pilot 29.

ZOMBRO, 2:11, third dam by Edwin Forest 49.

Whisper, the dam of Zombro, was bred and raised by Gen. W. T. Withers, of Lexington, Ky., and is a handsome brown mare, 16 hands high, weighing 1,150 pounds. She has never been beaten in the show ring, always carrying off first prize.

ZOMBRO, 2:11, won the first prize over all three-year-old stallions at the Horse Show in San Francisco in 1895.

This grand stallion will make the SEASON of 1898 at SACRAMENTO RACE TRACK, from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st, 1898. Terms, $30 cash at the time of service.

ELMO

By Mohawk, His Dam by a Son of Sir Richard. A Double Type, Fast Trotter and Coach.

THE LEADING Sires in America up to Lexington's Day
AND THEIR DESCENT, TRACED IN THE FEMALE LINE.

Perhaps the earliest of the thoroughbred sires of note in America was the chestnut English horse, Jolly Roger (known in the land of his nativity as Roger of the Vale). He was sired by Roundhead (son of the invincible Flying Childers and Roxana, latter dam of the famous Lath), and he first saw the light in 1741. Jolly Roger traced on the dam's side to the Burton Barb mare. He got Spanking Roger, Nancy, Bonny, Jenny Cameron, Polly Flaxen and others. Imp. Mary Grey, also by Roundhead and almost a full sister to Jolly Roger, had seven fillies by that horse, showing that the breeders of those days did not mind inbreeding.

Imp. Monkey, by Lord Lonsdale's Bay Arabian, foaled in 1725, imported in 1747 when twenty-two years of age, was one of the first English horses brought over. Nathaniel Harrison, of Brandon, Va. (to whom the ex Presidents Harrison probably traced), was his importer. The horse died in 1754. While he did not sire any celebrated racers, his blood was quite highly esteemed and was in the veins of such well-known later-day racers as Mollie McCarty, Tyrant, Fitz James, Hidalgo and all the great Hennie Farrow tribe.

Othello, a black horse by Crab, foaled in 1743, was imported by Gov. Sharpe of Maryland, and got quite a number of foals, among the number Stella, Selima and Ebony. Spark even preceded Othello to this country. He got Pacolet, &c.

Imp. Janus was foaled 1766 and imported to Virginia about 1752. He was by Janus (son of the Godolphin Arabian and the Little Hartley mare) out of a daughter of Old Fox, and traced on the male side to a Bald Galloway mare. Imp. Janus' descendants are to this day noted for their good looks, strength, speed, endurance and excellent feet. Clodius was perhaps his best son, and a daughter was pronounced the fastest animal in the world. Wagner, Norfolk and Freeland, turf champions, had Janus blood in their veins, as did Printer and other early-day sprinters.

Imp. Traveler (Moreton's) was imported to Virginia about 1753, and he got many good ones, including Bellair, Lloyd's Traveler, Yorick, Tryall, Partner, Ariel and Silverlegs.

Imp. Silver Eye, a chestnut horse by Cullen Arabian and tracing on the dam's side to the house of the Old Vintner mare, first saw the light in 175-. His name he run across at intervals in running out pedigrees, and he got several fair ones.

Imp. Wildair, by Cade (son of the Godolphin Arabian), foaled in 1753 and imported to the Colony of New York in 1762, was the sire of the unbeaten mare, Slamerkin, Bashaw and others of note, and in 1772 was reshipped to England, where his service fee was 40 guineas, a high price in those days.

Imp. Fearnought, an undefeated race horse by the unbeaten Regulus, foaled in 1755 and imported by Col. John Baylor, of Virginia, in March, 1764, also got many excellent performers, among the number Symme's Wildair, Babraham and Black Selima. Imp. Fearnought was a brother to Careless, also never defeated upon the turf, winner of ten King's Plates. Imp. Fearnought also got Fitzhugh's Regulus, Specimen, Showman, Godolphin, Brilliant, Harris, Eclipse, Shakespeare, Virgin, Camilla and Betsy Pringle.

Imp. Shark, an invincible race horse by the same sire as O'Kelly's unbeaten Eclipse (Marske), was foaled in 1771 and imported to this country about 1776. He begot many superior racers, among the number Annette, Americus, Black Maria, Opossum, Shark and Virago.

Imp. Obscurity, a chestnut horse by O'Kelly's Eclipse, was brought to Virginia in 1784, when seven years of age. Many good racers trace to this horse.

Imp. Medley, a gray horse by Gimcrack out of Arminda by Snap, and tracing to the dam of the two True Blues on the mother's side of the house, was foaled in 1776 and imported by Malcolm Hart, of Virginia, in 1783 or 1784. He died of colic in Southampton County, Va., in 1800, the property of James Wilkinson. Medley was a splendid sire, one of the best ever imported up to that time, and got, amongst others of note, the Opossum Filly, Pandora, Atlanta, Bel Air, Boxer, Calypso, Grey Diomed, Grey Medley, Lamplighter, Quicksilver and Virginia. His sons and daughters did well at the stud and the blood of imp. Medley is rightly considered of the best.

Imp. Messenger, a gray horse, foaled 1780, by Mambrino out of a daughter of Turf, stood for years in and around New York and got several good winners, among them Miller's Damsel, who was the mother of the undefeated American Eclipse, and her brother, Bright Phoebus, who once distanced Sir Archy. He was also the sire of Mambrino, who begot Abdallah, and he in turn was the sire of Rydyk's Hambletonian, the founder of the greatest trotting family known.

The blood of imp. Citizen (son of Pacolet), imp. Alderman, imp. Bedford and imp. Medley (latter by Gimcrack) flows in the veins of most of the "clinkers" foaled in Virginia from 1810 on. Boston had this blood. Bertrand's dam was Eliza by Bedford. The Opossum Filly was sired by imp. Medley.

Imp. Citizen was a bay horse, foaled in 1785, and tracing on the mother's side of the house to a mare by the Byerly Turk Pacolet was the best of his get.

Imp. Alderman was also a bay horse, foaled in 1787, got by Pot 8-os (son of Eclipse), and tracing his line of female descent to a mare by Old Merlin. He was imported to Richmond by John Banks.

Imp. Dare Devil, a bay horse by Maguet, foaled in 1787, was imported to Virginia by Col. Hoomes in 1795, and many of our greatest racers trace so Col. Hoomes' Dare Devil mare, the one out of imp. Trumpetta. Much earlier than this (in 1741) Dabster (son of Hobgoblin) was taken to Virginia from England, and one comes across this strain of blood in a pedigree once in a great while.

Imp. Gabriel, a bay horse foaled in 1790, sired by Dorimant and from a daughter of Highflyer, died on Col. Tayloe's Virginia estate when but ten years of age, yet he got Oscar and Post Boy, two very high-class race horses.

Imp. Bedford, by Dungannon—Fairy, by Highflyer, foaled in 1792, was one of the crack sires of Virginia in the early part of the present century. He was owned by Col. Hoomes, the Old Dominion's most distinguished breeder of early times. Bedford got Gallatin, Fairy, Eliza (dam of Bertrand and Pacific), Elus, Lady Bedford, Lottery, Nancy Air, Shylock and several others of little less note.

Imp. Saltram, winner of the Derby, was imported to Virginia by William Lightfoot in 1800, when the horse was twenty years old. This son of the unbeaten Eclipse got a few foals, among them the dam of the great Timoleon, and his blood is highly prized.

Imp. Expedition, chestnut horse, foaled in 1795, was a thoroughbred much esteemed by breeders. He stood in New Jersey in 1802 and for many years thereafter and got a host of turf performers of reputation, among the number Boxer and Sea Gull.

Among the crack racers of America up to 1805 might be mentioned Meade's Celer, by imp. Janus, foaled 1776; Lloyd's Traveler, by Moreton's imp. Traveler, dam imp. Jenny Cameron, by son of Fox; Yorick, by Moreton's imp. Traveler; dam imp. Betty Blazella, by Blaze, second dam the grand race mare, Jenny Cameron, spoken of above; Tryall brother to Yorick, one year younger; Mark Anthony, foaled 1779, by Lee's Mark Anthony, dam Fanny, by Lee's Mark Anthony, inbreeding with a vengeance; Regulus, by imp. Fearnought—imp. Jenny Dismal, by Old Dismal; Goode's Brimmer, foaled in 1776 or 1777, by Harris' Eclipse—Poll Flaxen, by imp. Jolly Roger, Virginia Nell, by imp. Highflyer—Lady Bull, by Baylor's Gallant; Bellair, by imp. Traveler; Calypso, by imp. Medley—Selima, by Yorick Grey Diomed, by imp. Medley; dam by Sloe; Cincinnati, foaled 1784, by imp. Bay Richmond, dam by imp. Fearnought; Virago, by imp. Shark—imp. Gunilda, by Star; Black Maria, foaled 1795, by imp. Shark—Maria, by imp. Clockfast; Leviathan, foaled 179-, by imp. St. George—by Clodius; Gallatin, Fairy and Cup-Bearer, all by imp. Bedford; Oscar and Post Boy, by imp. Gabriel. In last week's issue we spoke of the champion American racers from 1800 up to the present, so that a very good idea can be had of our turf celebrities from the beginning of racing in this country.

In the early part of the nineteenth century the Diomedes, Bedfords, Medleys and Sharks were the most highly prized of the gallopers, they ranking about in the order named. Then came the Sir Archys, sweeping nearly everything before them, while the sons and daughters of American Eclipse afterward were little less renowned as racers, then those by Timoleon, Marion, St. Charles and Bertrand, all sons of Sir Archy. These horses held sway until the progeny of imp. Leviathan (imported 1830), imp. Margrave (imported 1835), imp. Trustee (imported in 1835), imp. Priam, winner of the Derby (imported in 1837), imp. Sarpedon and imp. Glencoe began to attract attention. A few years later imp. Sovereign and imp. Yorkshire were brought to our shores, and the leading American-bred stallion from 1844 to Lexington's time was Boston, who sired Lexington, Lecompte, Bostona, Tally-Ho and Nina.

Virginia was the leading early horse-raising colony, and as far back as December, 1752, good racing was had there. It was at that time that Col. Tasker's celebrated English bred mare, Selima (by the Godolphin Arabian), with three others, including Jenny Cameron and a mare owned by Col. Cameron, answered, at "Gloucester race ground, Virginia," the challenge offered by Col. Bird's Tryall to all horses which could be brought against him—a sweepstakes, 500 pistols, distance to be run four miles. Selima won this race, as in fact, she did all others in which she was engaged. Later Maryland, under the governorship of Sir Robert Eden, became nearly as noted a racing ground as Virginia, Annapolis having the leading race course. Apollo, Silverlegs, Volunteer and Regulus were among the celebrities brought there to race. There were good "race grounds" also at Harlem, Colony of New York, Gloucester, Philadelphia, Nottingham, Alexandria, Upper Marlborough, Chesterton, Leonardstown and Baltimore. In 1774 the famous Wildflyer was foaled, and about this time the lovers of racing were talking of the running ability of the "Overseer's Mare."

In 1790 George Washington, "the father of his country," acted as one of the stewards at a race meeting given in Alexandria, Va., and during that meeting ran Magnolia, which horse unfortunately did not win. Mr. Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the Federal Constitution and also became President of the United States, had better luck, his colors being carried to victory by the "Roan Colt."

After the War of the Revolution racing was revived in Virginia by Messrs. Hoomes, Tasker, Eldon and Goode; in Maryland by Govs. Ogle, Ridgley, Wright, Lloyd and Sprigg, and in South Carolina by Messrs. Hampton, Washington, McPherson, Alston and Singleton. Col. Hoomes became the leading breeder of Virginia and imported Diomed (first winner of the Epsom Derby), Bedford, Buzzard, Stirling, Spread Eagle (Derby winner), Arch Duke (Derby-winner) and Cormorant. Diomed, an old horse at the time of his importation, made a great name at the stud in this country and his fame was perpetuated by his son, Sir Archy, who got a larger number of turf celebrities than any horse that ever had a home in America. Among those sired by imp. Diomed were Top Gallant, Truxton, Ball's Florizel and Potomac, all champion race horses in their day. Bedford was also successful, but the remaining stallions imported by Mr. Hoomes achieved no great distinction.

Col. John Tayloe came upon the turf in 1791 with the afterwards celebrated horse Bellair, Noantaker, Grey Dornier and Calypso. Virago (called also the Irish Beauty), purchased of Mr. Johnson by Col. Tayloe, became, through her running, even more renowned. Black Maria, also owned by Col. Tayloe, but sent to Gen. Hampton, of South Carolina, to race, won all the money hung up by the club (presumably the South Carolina Jockey Club at Charleston). Many years ago thereafter Col. Richardson's horses won all the money hung up by the club. Col. Tayloe's Gallatin and Cup-Beaver, both by imp. Bedford, were the best racers for a couple of seasons, then Mr. Wade Mosby's Amanda, by Grey Diomed, took their measure, she in turn being beaten by Col. Tayloe's Topgallant, who afterwards fell a victim to the prowess of Major Ball's Florizel. The last-named champion were by imp. Diomed, as was Gen. Andrew Jackson's Truxton and Richard Dennis' Potomac. General Jackson also owned the Opossum Filly, by imp. Medley, and Pacolet by imp. Citizen. In 1809 Col. Tayloe, Seldon and Hoomes, withdrew from the turf and were succeeded by Messrs. Johnson, Mosely, Wilkes, Wynn, &c. Col. William R. Johnson at once became recognized as a leading turfman on account of the superiority of his Sir Archy, son of imp. Diomed. He offered to run that celebrity for $10,000 against any horse that could be brought against him, but as no acceptance of the defi was to be had, Sir Archy was retired to the stud. In our opinion he got more great racers than any horse in all American history, among the members being Lady Lightfoot, Timoleon, Reality, Betsy Richards, Henry, Bertrand, Marion, Flirtilla, Sally Hope, Janet and Gabriella.

Following is a list of horses that as sires of racers stood very high in the estimation of lovers of thoroughbred horses in America. They were either the best in the land or very nearly that, and those from the earliest days of racing up to Lexington's day are given. The pedigree on the dam's side of the house is traced to the "tap-root" mare in every

Joe Piggott, her rider, is also a Californian, and was raised in the San Rafael Orphan Asylum, from which institution he was taken by the late Henry Walsh (who adopted him) about five years ago. He was with W. O'B Macdonough while Mr. Walsh lived and for a season or so thereafter, then signed a contract to ride for A. B. Spreckels. After that gentleman retired he signed with Ed Corrigan, and continued in his employ for over a year. When that contract expired he signed with H. L. Frank, of Butte, Mont. That turfman will race in Montana after he leaves here, and may go to New York. Piggott is thoroughly honest, and in our opinion there are not above about half a dozen horse-pilots right now in America that beat him riding a race horse, with a chance of his being close to the top of the heap ere many years have passed away.

Saddle Notes.

OLD-TIME Jockey George Barbee has turned up at Newport with six racehorses.

EUGENE LEIGH has bought Parson, by Paramatta—Sir Himyar, from Major Thomas.

RICHARD CROKER has sailed for England to oversee the operations of his racing stable.

NUNCOMAR, who was getting into racing shape very nicely, is down with catarrhal fever and a very sick horse.

UTOPIA, brother to George Palmer (by Ecuador—Kitty Gunn) won a five furlong race at Memphis, April 26th.

"CURLY" BROWN has been engaged to do the starting at Detroit, Fort Erie, Montreal and Windsor next summer.

MRS. A. M. LINNELL's good Deceiver mare, Clara White, has foaled a colt by imp. Trentola, the handsome son of Trenton and Gondola.

TOM BUTLER of Butte has leased the racing qualities of Negligence and Yule to H. L. Frank. They will be raced on the Montana circuit.

BURNS & WATERHOUSE will make an all summer campaign in Chicago with from fifteen to twenty horses and Jockeys Thorpe and Woods.

DR. ROWELL recently fired Yemen, Captive, Grannan and St. Lee for Sam Hildreth. B-namela was gelded. This lot will be turned out until next winter.

ED CORRIGAN has shipped all his mares and foals to the Monument Farm, near Sacramento, and on Friday or Saturday will send his racing stable to Chicago.

H. L. FRANK has purchased McLight for a well known Montana horseman and W. D. Randall will campaign the Macduff horse; $1,700 is said to be the price paid.

JIMMY McDONALD, manager of the Menlo Stock Farm, says that one of the best looking yearlings in the State is a half-sister to Valenciennes. The youngster is by the unbeaten Ormonde.

WILLIAM WALLS, an exercise boy employed by E. J. Baldwin, Ingleside, dislocated his right leg Monday morning as the result of being thrown from a horse at Twentyninth and Mission streets.

ADDIE CHIPMAN, own sister to Quirt, dropped a colt foal on the 27th inst. at Sonoma by the good horse, Del Norte. William Dixon owns the mare and her baby galloper, and left to-day to see them.

JOCKEY N. TURNER will go with Gene Leigh and ride for his stable on the Chicago tracks. J. Gardner will do the riding for the division of the Leigh string that Charley Hughes will train and campaign at St. Louis.

CHARLES GREEN, of St. Louis, who now owns the Kentucky Association track, at Lexington, Ky., is credited with an intention of dividing the property into town lots. No Kentuckian seems to have the price to buy the track for racing purposes.

By Mr. Belmont's orders both the Clark starting machine and the one used by Fitzgerald at New Orleans have been put in position at the Withers mile starting post, where trial starts will be given between now and the opening day of the Westchester meeting.

It was a great day for the sons of Brutus, no less than three getting home in front during the afternoon, viz: Hohenlohe, Twinkler and Claudius. Brutus is a No. 1 on the Bruce Lowe plan of breeding, and surely ranks No. 1 as a sire, everything considered.

THE racing qualities of the following colts and fillies, foals of 1896, have been leased by J. B. Haggin to James McLaughlin until the close of the racing season of 1899: Jim Byrne, Ordinate, Sol, Surrender, Cavalleria, Colonel Tenny, Eighteen Carat, Miss Order, Classique, Diminutive, Lady Lindsey, Water Girl and Prosiac.

HENRY BYRNES will take a string of horses from Rancho del Paso. W. L. Stanfield will be on hand with Valenciennes, George Miller and others. Farrar & Tuberville will take Flashlight and three useful platers. By Holly will have a mixed crowd of bread-winners, while H. L. Frack and W. D. Randall will take all their horses to the North.

DICK CLAWSON will ride in the East this season. It is doubtful at present whom he will ride for. He is under contract to Atkin & Lottridge, but they are not averse to disposing of this contract to any responsible racing man. In all probability J. W. Schorr, the big Western brewer, will get the boy, but John Mackay is trying to secure his services for the Daly-Haggin stable.

THE California Jockey Club, in order to prevent any complications, have removed the suspension against H. M. Mason, trainer of Lobos, but Judge Murphy says it is highly probable that his entries will not be accepted at Oakland in the future. While the C. J. C. has a perfect right to refuse any turfman's entries, it looks rough in view of the testimony elicited and the votes of the P. C. J. C. stewards.

THE promising three-year-old Michael III. fell dead at Gravesend Wednesday after an exercise gallop of a mile. The colt was thought to have a decidedly good chance of winning the Metropolitan Handicap at Morris Park.—Daily Racing Form. W. M. Murry sold this good son of imp. Islington to Charles Dwyer last summer for $5,000, and he was one of the best youngsters in California last spring.

EUGENE LEIGH bought Rey del Mar after he had won a selling race at Newport a few days ago; but, learning that his former owner (Rice) was grieving over the loss of his horse, he returned him for $400, being $100 less than Leigh had paid for the old selling plater. At private sale Leigh has bought the three-year-old filly Ten Pins, by Tenny—Austeriv, and the three-year-old colt Brown Fonso, by Fonso—Falerna.

STARTER JAMES F. CALDWELL left before the last race Monday. His work during the winter has been, taken all in all, of very high class order, and he will return next season with the good wishes of all racing men.

A PECULIAR point about the crack colt Lobos is that he was foaled when his mother, a Cheviot mare, was but three years of age, and Lobos will not be two years old himself until about May 15th. That he should run half a mile early in March in 0:47½ speaks pretty well for the baby galloper. The dam of Lobos was very speedy, but met with an accident before she ever went to the post that necessitated her retirement.

THE veteran English racing judge, Richard Johnson, is dead. For more than forty years he has acted in the capacity of judge, his career commencing in 1844. He was clerk of the Doncaster course in 1850, and placed the horses for every Manchester Cup from 1863 until his retirement, in 1885. Mr. Johnson was a native of Yorkshire and, like a great many racing officials in this country, graduated from the newspaper ranks.

E. I. ROBINSON has run out the pedigree of Mt. McGregor to the tap root mares and on the Bruce Lowe plan he should be a wonderful success as a sire, having an abundance of the blood of the members of the 3, 8, 12 and 14 families, besides "running blood" galore. We knew he was a runner, but we did not know that he was bred on such "sire lines" until Mr. Robinson showed us the pedigree of the son of Day Star and imp. Miss McGregor.

SAM GAMBLE, the well known trotting horse man, got back last Sunday night from his extended Eastern trip and attended the races at Oakland yesterday. While away he visited New York, Cincinnati, Lexington and Nashville. He was present at the opening of the racing season at Newport, across the Ohio from Cincinnati, and was much pleased with the exhibition of horses on "court day" at Lexington. Mr. Gamble looks exceedingly well and says he feels that way.

J. M. MURPHY has sent Carnero and his much-talked-of two-year-old Streamer to Louisville, so neither started at Memphis. Carnero is reported to be in good condition. Trainers who have seen him work say that he will be a hard horse to beat in all-aged Western handicaps. Great things are expected of Streamer, and it is said that Murphy has refused an offer of $6,000 for him. He is by Top Gallant, dam Kittie Gunn, by Virgil, out of the dam of Moyne, the dam of Glenmoyn.

TOD SLOAN rode his first race of the season in the East at Aqueduct Monday. He can scarcely have enjoyed the experience, for incidentally he was thrown, left at the post and fined. He was on two favorites, the talent being largely goveined by the preference for the jockey, and he did not even get a place in either race. The honors of the day were not for the little jockey, but for Sam Doggett, who won the first on Sanders, the fifth on Ben Ronald and the last on Rotterdam.

At a meeting of the P. C. J. C. Stewards Monday night T. H. Cooke and his horses, Chihuahua and Break o' Day were ruled off the track. The infraction of rule 156 of the American Turf Congress relating to persons offering to or entering into an agreement to bid or not to bid on the winner of a selling race was the cause for his punishment. The principal testimony against Cooke was an affidavit made by J. B. Earnshaw. This sets forth that Cooke approached him on April 26th to run up a horse owned by Ed. Corrigan and divide the run-up money. The proffer was declined.

BARNEY SCHREIBER's two-year-olds, all of which will be raced at Washington Park and Harlem, are in training at the home farm near St. Louis. The list is here published. In the names of many of the dams of the youngsters, Ohio Belle, Virgie D. Lemon Blossom, Parolee, Laraminta and Innocence, for instance, Chicago race patrons will recognize old-time acquaintances of merit. The names are as follows: Ulm, b c, by Balgown—Pennyroyal; Jerry Hunt, b c, by Servitor—Innocence; Stuttgart, b c, by Balgown—Ohio Belle; Hunch, ch g, by Culprit—Miss Hall; Berne, ch g, by Kasson—America; Zurich, ch g, by Zolein—Virgie D.; Good Hope, ch f, by Col. Clark—Gratitude; Sedalia, ch f, by Kasson—Ottawa; Berkeley Rose, b f, by Balgown—Lemon Blossom; Genua, b f, by Balgown—Parolee.

DOLLIE REGENT is once more a member of Dick Rome's stable. A few days ago the daughter of Montana Regent was boosted and taken from Rome by Gene Leigh for $900 after she beat Nancy Seitz. Monday she made her first and only start in Leigh's colors, and, carrying a swell commission of Leigh, was beaten and subsequently claimed by Jimmy Carter for $500. Yesterday he original owner, Mr. Rome, offered Carter $600 for her, but the offer was not accepted. Rome finally accepted Carter's proposition, and for $700 again became the owner of the filly. Dollie Regent, directly and indirectly has cost the ex-master of La Belle a lot of money at this meeting. The day she beat Nancy Seitz Mr. Leigh stood to win upward to $5,000 on the Pepper filly, and Monday he was reported to have bet $1,500 on the Montana Regent filly.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE Farmers' Agency Company, Limited, held a sale of thoroughbred stock at Dunedin on Friday. There was a very large attendance, but the great majority were onlookers. The following is a list of those offered: B f by St. Clair—Legerdmain, 2 years, Mr. R. Hastie, St. Clair, 41 guineas; b f by St. Clair—Mistral, 1 year, Hon. H. Mossman, St. Clair, 40 guineas; ch m Pique, by Gorton—Malice, aged, Hon. M. Mossman, St. Clair, 10 guineas; b f British Queen, by St. George—Britomarte, 1 year, Mr. Curran, Oamaru, 18 guineas; b f Beatrice, by St. Clair—Dione, 2 years, Mr. White, Ophir, 14 guineas; b h Beadonwell, by St. Clair—Dione, aged, Mr. H. Martin, Becks, 15 guineas; b g Blazer, by St. Clair—Mountain Lily, 3 years, passed at 255 guineas; ch f Belle Clair, by St. Clair—Dione, 4 years, passed at 120 guineas; br h Black and Red, by Maxim—Aqualate, 5 years, Mr. H. Goodman, 100 guineas; b h Lobo, by Le Loup—Winifred, aged, Mr. O. R. Wise, Oamaru, 44 guineas; br g Remorse II., by Jacinto, 6 years, Mr. W. Gardiner, Papanui, 125 guineas; b m Ulster, by Sou'-Wester, aged, Hon. H. Mossman, St. Clair, £10; b c Antares, by Castor—Hilda, 4 years, Hon. H. Mossman, St. Clair, 100 guineas.—New Zealand Referee.

THERE was a rumor about Tuesday that fifteen carloads of horses will be shipped from Rancho del Paso shortly to a farm in the State of Illinois. Most of them will be yearlings and two-year-olds. Of course, it is intended to sell them, but they will be shipped earlier than customary on account of the price of hay and grain. Superintendent Mackey has contracted with a firm in Illinois to furnish him with hay at $8 per ton. This is a slight difference in the price—$26—which prevails here. When the train arrives the Rancho del Paso colts will be shipped to New York and put under the hammer. It is also likely that there will also be a sale of Rancho del Paso horses at Chicago, where there will be a big demand for thoroughbreds this season.

It takes nearly eleven columns of the Standard this morning to publish the list of nominations for the 20 stake events scheduled for the Butte and Anaconda race meetings. There are 630 nominations, being about 41 to the stake. Of the leading events the Montana Derby, worth $2,500, has 36 entries; the Daly Stakes, $2,000, 41 entries; the Silver City Handicap, $1,500, 30 entries, and the Copper City Handicap, $1,500, 43 entries. Marcus Daly has the largest number of entries in each event. The other stakes are the Young Miss, $1,000, 34 entries; the Montana Hotel, $1,000, 30; the Last Chance, $1,000, 29; the Bitter Root, $1,000, 46; the Silver Bow, $1,000, 46; the Northwestern Handicap, $1,000, 44; the Deer Lodge, $1,000, 45; the Ogden, $1,000, 41; the Yellowstone, $1,000, 47; the Ravalli, $1,000, 39; the Butte selling, $1,000, 49; the West Side Handicap, $1,000, 39; the Anaconda Handicap, $1,000, 42; the Smeltermen's Handicap, $1,000, 55; the Hot Times, $1,000, 51; the Inter Mountain, 39.—Anaconda (Mont.) Standard.

OAKLAND, April 30.—Thomas H. Williams, president of the California Jockey Club, has notified Secretary Webb N. Pierce of the Merchants' Exchange that Saturday, May 21st, will be reserved for Oakland Tunnel Day at the Emeryville track. On that day the entire gate receipts at the race track will be given to the promoters of the scheme for building the proposed tunnel through the hill connecting Alameda and Contra Costa counties. On Tunnel Day there will be a strong racing programme and to insure the financial success of the affair tickets will be placed on sale at once with all the merchants. Members of the exchange will act as a committee of the whole in the sale of the tickets and there will be considerable friendly rivalry as to which one will make the best showing. The exchange does not anticipate much difficulty in raising the necessary funds to complete the tunnel with the large sum that is bound to come from the benefit at the track. Many citizens have guaranteed substantial subscriptions. Contra Costa county promises to do her share when the Oakland cash is in sight.

GENE LEIGH, who is now training a stable of twenty-four horses, will split it in half at the close of the Newport meeting next Tuesday. Leigh will take one division and campaign it on the Chicago tracks, Charley Hughes, the well known trainer, will handle the second division, and will race it at St. Louis. This was decided on yesterday, and next Wednesday Leigh will ship to Chicago and Hughes to the Fair Grounds track in St. Louis. What horses each trainer will take has not been decided on as yet, but Leigh will split the string this week. Following are the horses composing two divisions: Domitor, Hanlon, Parson, Pop Dixon, Pacemaker, Duke of Haven, Barataria, Fixed Star, Black Fonso, Ten Pins, Kentucky Colonel, King Barleycorn, Ned Wickes, Garrabrant, Delaiee, Black Venus, Satin Slipper, Nancy Seitz, Protect, Flying Bird, Hebrides, Cavotte, Edith E. and Laura Ethel. The last fourteen are two-year-olds, and seven of them are winners. Leigh has been eminently successful since he started the season at Nashville, and is now far ahead of the game. Both divisions of his big string should, and undoubtedly will be good winners on the Chicago and St. Louis tracks.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

THE stewards at Aqueduct made a peculiar and unprecedented decision Tuesday in allowing a race over the wrong course to stand. Of this affair the Morning Telegraph says: "To cap all, at the end, through a blunder that might easily be avoided, the last race was not run over the course as scheduled on the program. It was at five furlongs, but was run over five and a half furlongs. The mistake was evidently due to the fact that the men in charge of the starting machine got the two starting points mixed and placed the apparatus at the five and a half furlongs instead of at the five furlongs. The race was won by Vigenta, an outsider in the betting, and immediately the blunder was known, pretty nearly every other owner represented threatened to enter a protest. The stewards decided that as the horses had actually run the five furlongs the race should stand. The matter did not seem to be definitely covered in the rules, unless it may come under Rule 142, which reads as follows: 'An objection to the distance of a course officially designated must be made before the race. An objection to a horse on the ground of his not having run the proper course, or of the race having been run on a wrong course * * * must be made before the numbers of the horses placed in the race are put up, unless, under special circumstances, the stewards are satisfied that it could not have been made within that time.' The mistake may have been a costly one to E. Beters, whose mare, Fair Rebel, led into the last furlong, and possibly might have stayed long enough to have won had the race been run over the proper course, five furlongs. Mr. Peters thought he had grounds to protest the purse, though no formal protests were made at the time."

Kentucky Derby Won by Plaudit.

LOUISVILLE, (Ky.), May 4.—Lieber Karl met his master to-day. He lowered his colors to a grander, a better horse, for Plaudit, like the aristocrat of the turf that he is, won the honors of the classic event but nobly responding to a call for speed in a way that will long be remembered by the 15,000 people who saw it.

Derby Day dawned dark and gloomy and by 10 o'clock the rain came and continued at intervals until 2 o'clock. The sandy soil of the track absorbed it, however, and the going was not over a second and a half slow when the bell sounded.

The field was sent away in the first break with Lieber Karl in front, Isabey second, Plaudit third and Han d'Or last. These positions were maintained as they went around the lower turn, and when they were straightened out in the backstretch Lieber Karl was a length and a half in front, while Sims had brought Plaudit up to second. Down the homestretch they went, and as the horses passed the stand for the time Sims went to work on Plaudit, and no thoroughbred ever responded better. Each stride enabled him to cut down the distance, and when they faced the fire in the stretch Lieber Karl had but a half length the advantage, with Plaudit still lessening the distance. They were on even terms at the eighth pole and then, amid the lusty shouts of those that packed the stands, the son of Himyar thundered down the track and to the wire, winner of the twenty-fourth Kentucky Derby. Lieber Karl was not neglected, and he finished second because he had met his superior, Isabey was third, a half length away, and Han d'Or last by two lengths. Results:

First race, five and one-half furlongs—J. H. C. won, Bangle second, Johnnie Williams third. Time, 1:09½.

Second race, one mile, selling—Kris Kringle won, Paul Kauvar second, Millstream third. Time, 1:45.

Third race, four furlongs—Glad Hand won, Preliminary second, Bridal Tour third. Time, 0:51½.

Fourth race, Kentucky Derby, one mile and a quarter, three year-olds, stake $6,000—Plaudit 117 (Sims), 3 to 1, won; Lieber Karl, 122 (F. Burns), 2 to 5, second; Isabey, 117 (Knapp), 20 to 1, third; Han d'Or, 117 (Couley), 15 to 1, fourth. Time, 2:09.

Fifth race, four and one half furlongs, selling—Parker Bruce won, Duke of Baden second, Laurentan third. Time 0:57½.

Sixth race, six furlongs, selling—Rey Salazar won, Lady Irene second, Saratoga third. Time, 1:18.

Names Claimed.

Mr. William H. Cornwell, of Honolulu, H. I., one of the largest breeders of live stock on the islands, who owns a farm about twenty miles out of Honolulu, claims the following names:

I Guess Yes, bay filly by Flambeau from Bereft.
Racified, bay colt, by Racine from Mayfield.
Gartaline, by imp. Golden Garter from Laline.

It Never Fails to Cure.

SINKIN, (Mo.) Nov. 10, 1897.

The Caustic Balm you sent me is the best liniment I ever saw. It is all that you claim for it. I have tried it on horses, and my family have used it and it never fails to cure. I do not intend to be without it. I am doing all I can for it, but people are afraid of it.

EUGENE STEERS.

No occasion to be afraid as it is a safe and reliable remedy for any one to use.—L. W. Co.

DOLLIE REGENT is once more a member of Dick Rome's stable. A few days ago the daughter of Montana Regent was boosted and taken from Rome by 'Gene Leigh for $900 after she beat Nancy Seitz. Monday she made her first and only start in Leigh's colors, and, carrying a swell commission of Leigh, was beaten and subsequently claimed by Jimmy Carter for $500. Yesterday he original owner, Mr. Rome, offered Carter $600 for her, but the offer was not accepted. Rome finally accepted Carter's proposition, and for $700 again became the owner of the filly. Dollie Regent, directly and indirectly has cost the ex-master of La Belle a lot of money at this meeting. The day she beat Nancy Seitz Mr. Leigh stood to win upward to $5,000 on the Pepper filly, and Monday he was reported to have bet $1,500 on the Montana Regent filly.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

JAY BEACH, one of the best-known trotting horse men on the coast, owner of the great Altamont, the leading sire in this section, left for the Klondike region yesterday on Sachs & Co.'s thirty-five ton vessel, the Helen Sachs. He goes with a party of seven, who intend to start a trading agency. For fifteen years Mr. Beach was an Indian trader at Fort Klamath, Wash. The Helen Sachs has a draft of but four and a half feet, and for sea-going uses a fourteen-foot centerboard.

QUINN'S OINTMENT FOR HORSES

stands at the head of all veterinary remedies. Such troubles as Spavins, Curbs, Windpuffs, Splints, Bunches have no terrors for a horse if the master keeps and applies Quinn's Ointment. All well-known horsemen speak of it in the highest terms:

Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., owners of St. Bel, brother of late Bell Boy, write, "We have used Quinn's Ointment with great success and believe it fulfills all claimed for it. We cheerfully recommend it to our friends." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins or Bunches, it has no equal.

PLEASANTON'S GALA DAY.

Over Three Thousand People Assemble to Enjoy the Races.

"A day of sport" was announced for Saturday, April 30th, by the enterprising citizens of Pleasanton, Alameda county, and as a consequence the train which met at Oakland mole the 8:30 boat from San Francisco that morning consisted of four more passenger coaches than usual. At every station along the 40 mile run men, women and children out for a holiday kept crowding into the train until standing room only was to be had long before Pleasanton was reached. There were prominent breeders and horse owners from all parts of the State on board and when the train stopped at Pleasanton the idea of an old time county fair was exemplified. The streets of the beautiful little town were crowded with visitors, the ladies dressed in summer holiday attire, and by their looks proving that the Livermore valley is indeed the blue grass spot of California, inasmuch as it is the home of fast horses and pretty women.

The hour before lunch was taken up in listening to patriotic music furnished by the Sunol band, and viewing the bicycle races which took place on the main street of the village. In the crowds which filled every available place on the sidewalk, many old acquaintances were renewed and there was talk of war and "hoss," the latter subject eventually monopolizing the conversation entirely. The celebration committee, composed of John Hortenstine, chairman, and L. C. Crellin, T. E. Keating, Andrew McDowell, Lee Wells, R. E. DeB. Lopez and Geo. W. Detjens, was indefatigable. They were here, there and everywhere looking for visiting strangers and making provision for their wants. There must have been four or five thousand people crowded into the thoroughfare of the little town, and no jollier or better looking or better dressed assemblage could be collected in any country. There was a fear that perhaps the dinner hour would tax the capacity of the hotels and restaurants beyond their limit, but it was groundless, as all were provided for. The Rose Hotel must have fed five or six hundred people, and each and every one was well served and none went away hungry. Mine host Tillman was entirely equal to the occasion.

Dinner over, there was a unanimous movement on the part of the crowd toward the race track—that historic oval upon which so many equine kings and queens have developed marvelous speed and gone forth to conquer the world, returning with the laurel wreath of championship. A short time was spent in visiting the stalls where past present and future champions are kept, and then the races were announced. In the stand were Mr. Chas. McIvor, Mr. H. W. Meek and Mr. J. B. Ferguson as judges, with Mr. R. E. deB. Lopez as starter and D. L. Hackett clerk of the course. The first race called was the Pleasanton Mercantile Stake, free for all trotters and pacers that had not beaten three minutes. In this race were four starters—Prince C., driven by Andy McDowell, Madaro driven by Harry Wise, Little Miss piloted by J. M. Alviso, and Stella Marvin driven by Richard Abele. Mr. Lopez got them away on very even terms after a few attempts. Little Miss and Stella Marvin immediately went to the front and cut out the work. Madaro seemed to have a world of speed, but broke on the first turn and was unsteady throughout. Prince C., did not have his speed with him that day, but the two little bays went right at it as though it was a race for their lives. They were neck and neck all the way around the track and in a furious drive to the wire Little Miss landed a winner by a length from Stella, with Madaro third and Prince C., a bad fourth. Time, 2:25½.

The second heat was a repetition of the first as far as the two leaders were concerned, and the proverbial blanket could have covered them the whole distance. Little Miss looked to be beaten half way down the stretch, but Alviso made a splendid drive and landed her a winner by a neck. Prince

C. managed to come in third this time, while Madaro was not in it after making a break on the first turn. The time was 2:26.

The second race had championship class in it. The starters were the great gray gelding Caryle Carne, 2:11½, Dione, 2:14, and Monterey, 2:13½. Here were three that will be capable of meeting the best in the country in the free for alls this year, and the fact that Dione in this race went a mile in 2:16½ easily is evidence that a very low mark is within her reach. It must not be supposed that these races at Pleasanton were hot fought contests for blood in every heat. The day was looked upon as a gala day, and the horses were sent in these races more for an exhibition than for the money that was hung up. The public were not deceived in the least; it was known that the first race would be a contest from start to finish, but when Dione, Caryle Carne and Monterey came out there was no notion among the people present that either horse would try to lower his record. The track was not fast, the time of the year too early, and the condition of the horses not far enough advanced to expect it. But they made a beautiful race as it was, and the heats were worth going a long ways to see. Mr. Williams' big chestnut stallion is still in the stud and has had but little work and was unsteady. But he went to the quarter in the first heat with Dione and Caryle Carne in 33 seconds, and then went to a break and was not driven hard. He did the same thing in the second heat. With a reasonable amount of work he is as fast as any horse in California to-day. Dione is one of the most perfect gaited trotters ever seen on a track. Her action has no waste motion and seems smooth and frictionless. In both heats of this race she and Caryle Carne made a close thing of it all through the mile, the mare beating the grey out in each heat by a neck. The time for the heats was 2:16½ and 2:20. The grey would fall back going around the far turn and then come like a demon down the homestretch. The last quarter of the first heat was trotted in 32 seconds.

The pace between Lena N. and Anaconda was the prettiest exhibition of the day. With McDowell driving Mr. Wise's mare and Keating up behind Anaconda, the two went round the course side by side, moving like a couple of pieces of machinery. It is a foregone conclusion that both will pace to records below 2:07 this year, and there are those who believe that 2:02 is not beyond the reach of either. Mr. Wise remarked Saturday that his mare was fit to match against Star Pointer. In Montana last year she went quarters in 0:29 and halves in 0:59, and McDowell thinks she is a better mare this year than last. It was the opinion of most horsemen present Saturday that Anaconda has a greater burst of speed than the daughter of Sidney. Their two heats were paced in 2:12½ and 2:15, with nose finishes, and for April this is nothing short of marvelous.

Between the heats the great champions Searchlight (3), 2:05½, Azote, 2:04½, and the reigning king of trotting stallions, Directum, 2:05½, were exhibited. Searchlight and Azote were moved, the pacer being driven a full mile in 2:12½. Azote speeded through the stretch like a whirlwind, looks as well as he ever did, and the fact that he went a quarter in 0:32, with a stride that was regularity itself, gave evidence that he still retained his old time speed. Andy McDowell brought out Directum, looking every inch a king. He is not in training, but is high in flesh and doing stud duty at his owner's home at Dublin, a few miles from Pleasanton. Mr. McDowell announced that he would not drive the black fellow fast on account of his condition, but showed an eighth with him in 0:16, which is fast enough for any horse not in training, and too fast for most of them that are.

The trotting and pacing events being over, the runners took possession of the track. Mr. Lopez had a field of five to handle in the first race, a dash of three quarters of a mile. The starters were Jim Bozeman, Jack Atkins, Charlotte M., Wild Robin and Mount Roy. The last named acted so badly at the post that he delayed the start, and the judges rang the bell for the starter to send them off without him. Mr. Lopez gave them one more trial, but Mt. Roy stopped after breaking and was pulled up. Charlotte M. and Jim Bozeman went to the front with Atkins and Wild Robin close up. Bozeman soon took the lead and maintained it to the wire, Charlotte M. and Atkins a good second and third respectively. Wild Robin, who was fat and in no condition to race, hung on well for a quarter of a mile and then was beaten off. The time, 1:14½, was excellent.

Devil's Dream, Lady Hurst and Apto were the only starters in the mile race, a handicap for all ages. Devil's Dream carried 115, Lady Hurst 112 and Apto 92. Devil's Dream won easily in 1:44, Lady Hurst second.

The sport at the track closed with a race for saddle horses, one-half mile, with five contestants. J. Abercrombie's Here's Luck was the winner of the $10 purse hung up for this event, and it was a case of Here's Luck first, the rest nowhere.

In the evening the day's festivities were closed with a grand ball at Rose Hall. It was one of the big successes of the occasion and was patronized by several hundred people who tripped the light fantastic to excellent music until gray dawn announced the arrival of Sunday morning.

Thus closed without one accident to mar the festal occasion, one of the most enjoyable and successful meetings ever given in the town of Pleasanton. The enterprising citizens of that locality are to be commended for their enterprise in arranging and their energy in carrying out all the details of the affair, and their example should be emulated by the citizens of other towns in California. There are many places where just such gala days can be held by the exercise of a little energy and work, to the benefit of the towns people, the horsemen and entire population of the locality, to say nothing of the pleasure afforded to those who attend. Long may the good citizens of Pleasanton live and long may they continue to give annual festivals.

Alameda Driving Club.

Monday, May 30th, will be a legal holiday, and on that day the Alameda Driving Club proposes to give a day of harness racing over its excellent track. There are to be four events, all mixed races for trotters and pacers. Three of these are open purses, and one for horses owned by members of the club.

The first is a free-for-all, the purse being $40.

The second is for horses that have no record better than 2:20. In this event $25 is the amount hung up.

The third race will be for 2:30 horses, and $25 will be the purse.

The fourth and last event will be for 2:40 horses owned by members of the Alameda Driving Club.

The entrance fee to all these races will be five per cent. and five per cent. additional from starters. National Trotting Association rules will govern all races.

The Alameda Club has one of the best tracks in California, and is composed of gentlemen who are lovers of the road horse and enthusiastic road drivers. Entries for the above races will close May 21st with A. O. Gott, Secretary, Alameda, Cal.

ED. GEERS moved his stable of horses from Selma, Ala. to Louisville, Ky., May 1st. The stable is being entered extensively in all the large stakes, such as the Detroit M. and M. and Chamber of Commerce; the Charter Oak, $10,000, at Hartford, Conn., and the Massachusetts, $5,000, at Readville. Owing to the previous engagements the stable was not entered at Buffalo last season, but this year it will be there in force. The route of the campaign has been completed, the first meeting for the Village Farm string being in Hartford, Conn., the week beginning July 4th. From there the stable goes to Detroit, Cleveland, Columbus, Fort Wayne, Buffalo, Glenn Falls, then to the Old Glory meeting at Hartford, thence to Readville and Portland, Me. From Bigby it will ship to Readville for the New England's Breeders meeting, thence to Louisville, closing the season at the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders meeting at Lexington.

Our New York Letter.

NEW YORK, April 30, 1898.

It affords his Eastern friends great pleasure in being able to congratulate Mr. Judson K. Moore, the enterprising proprietor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, on the announcement of the engagement of his only sister, Mrs. John A. Goldsmith, to Count Henri Conrad von Rhoden-Kohsel of Hanover, Germany. The many friends of Mrs. Goldsmith in California will be pleased to learn that after visiting the estates of the Count at Hanover, it is the intention of the happy couple to return to America and make a tour of the States, visiting the Western Coast.

Springfield, the noted English running sire, died recently at Newmarket. He was foaled in 1873 and was the sire of Sainfoin, a Derby winner.

The estate of the late Edmund Tattersall is valued at $500,000.

The old Guttenberg race track in New Jersey, in spite of its dilapidated condition, has assumed a busy aspect, so many trotting trainers having availed themselves of its accommodations and close proximity to this city. Seven strings are already there in training and "there are others" coming.

The Treasurer's report of the American Trotting Register Association shows an income above expenses.

It is said about 7,000 mares have been exported from this country since January.

Mr. Harriman has quoted to Europeans $15,000 for Onoqua, 2:08½.

The horsemen of Orange County are congratulating themselves that General Tracy has decided to occupy the Stony Ford Stock Farm, recently owned by Charles Backman, the birth place of Electioneer.

A continuous rain of five days has insured fine crops for the coming season. We regret that human agency is unable to transfer the large excess to the suffering farmers of the Golden State. Prime hay can now be purchased here for $7.00 per ton.

The bill recently introduced at Albany in relation to "ringing" has become a law. The penalty is not less than $500 fine nor more than one year imprisonment.

Very many of the managers of Eastern tracks this season will require all drivers to wear colors and all grooms to wear neat uniforms, or appropriately attired. It would be well for the Western tracks to follow this example.

Marcus Daly's Limerick, 2:19½, and E. Harriman's Elsie S. 2:24½ are matched for $2,500 a side at the Orange county meeting August 23th-26th at Gohen. They are three-year-olds.

Nothing new has been produced at any of the play houses during the week. Patriotic skits are introduced wherever there is a place for them and are applauded. In the second act of "La Poupee" at Daly's among the dolls introduced "an Uncle Sam doll, and the doll maker himself (James T. Powers) is costumed somewhat as Uncle Sam.

Mrs. McKinley witnessed "Way Down East" at the Manhattan on Tuesday evening. Her box was beautifully decorated with ferns. When she entered the lobby every head was uncovered, the entire audience rose to its feet, and the orchestra played "The Star Spangled Banner." In the second act representing a new Hampshire home, a portrait of President McKinley was hanging on the wall and the audience again delayed the performance by repeated cheers.

Two Good Green Ones.

On the Eastern circuit this year, in the string of Andy McDowell will be a four-year-old chestnut mare called Dolly Marshutz, that has never as yet faced the starter. She is by Charles Derby out of Lassie Jean, by Brigadier, second dam the thoroughbred mare, Lexington Belle, by Lexington, third dam the great mare Eagless, by Glencoe, the dam of the great race mare, Lizzie Lucas, and others. Dolly Marshutz was bred by Mr. A. G. Gurnett of this city, owner of the Sulphur Springs Stock Farm, who sold her to McDowell & Wise last Saturday at Pleasanton for $1,500, stipulating in the bill of sale that the mare shall bear the name he has bestowed upon her if she is raced. She has not been worked to any great extent, but on Saturday morning at Pleasanton went a mile handily in 2:15, and a quarter in 31 seconds. She is perfectly level-headed and is as game as anyone would expect her to be with the large amount of long-distance thoroughbred blood she carries in her veins.

Mr. Gurnett has a colt by Nutwood Wilkes out of the dam of this mare that is looked upon at Pleasanton as the probable champion three-year old of 1898. In the Special Department of this paper a few weeks ago Mr. Simpson published a picture of this colt coming down the stretch, over the caption, "The coming champion—"Who Is It?" So pleased was Mr. Gurnett with the name thus suggested that he has given the colt the title and has already entered him in the State Fair colt stakes as "Who Is It." He will enter him at the Breeders Meeting and also at Los Angeles and at other places on the California circuit where races may be given this year. Mr. Gurnett says he is as fast as his four-year-old half sister. Both are square trotters and very steady and reliable in their work.

As we go to press Messrs McDowell & Wise are negotiating with Mr. Gurnett for "Who Is It," and it may be that he will also be in their string this year. We had hoped that Mr. Gurnett would retain this fellow as we feel certain his performances will add lustre to the California records if he is raced here, but if he should go East he will be in good hands and will add still further to California's fame as a horse breeding State.

The Horse Owners' Opportunity.

The little meeting held in Pleasanton last Saturday (it was big in attendance) was the cause of several trotters and pacers being sold at good prices—some of them bringing four figures. The Breeders meeting which will open at Oakland, June 25th, is your opportunity to earn some money if you have a horse that can trot or pace, and wish to race him, and will also give you a splendid chance to find a buyer if you want to sell. Any horse owner who has a good horse cannot make a better investment than naming said horse in his class at the Breeders meeting.

That the attendance of the opening day will be beyond anything seen on trotting tracks in California in recent years we feel certain and good, square contests will increase the public patronage. By scanning the programme for the first two weeks as published in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN it will be seen that races are provided for all classes of trotters and pacers, and the dash system will permit horses to be started every other day without injury to them, thus increasing greatly the opportunity of earning money. There are buyers now for every horse in California that has size, style, soundness and speed, and they are willing to pay good prices. No better opportunity to show your horse can be found than that afforded by the Breeders meeting. Enter your horse and thus add to his value in more ways than one. The entries close June 1st, with F. W. Kelly, Secretary, 22½ Geary street, San Francisco.

The Denver Meeting.

Forty thousand dollars. Purses of $500 or $1,000 for trotters and pacers. Twenty-six classes provided for. Five per cent to enter and five per cent from money winners. This is the program arranged by the Overland Trotting and Running Association for its meeting which begins at Denver June 11th. There will be three running races each day. The entries to the trotting and pacing events close May 15th. Bear the date in mind, and get your entries mailed in time. The meeting will be a great success if all signs do not fail and California horses will carry away their share of the money.

THE French Government has put a duty of $40 per head upon all foreign horses imported to that country. This will make little difference with choice trotters and high class carriage horses, but it will stop the trade in general purpose stock. Fortunately there are other markets.

ALTHOUGH this is a dry year and some are complaining of business being dull, the well-known harness manufacturer, J. A. McKerron, of this city, has no idle time on his hands just now. At his factory, 203 Mason street, his employees are working over-time every evening to fill the many orders that he is receiving from the East and from various localities in this State. An order for a large number of track harness received a few days ago from Marcus Daly is not only evidence that Mr. Daly knows where to send when he wants the best, but it is also evidence that the light harness horse still receives a considerable share of that well-known breeder's attention. The Daly horses will campaign on the eastern circuit, but they will wear California harness and boots.

ALLEN LOWE, who is pretty fair at predicting, thinks that Nico, 2:16½, as a three-year-old will be the fastest trotter out this year. Nico was foaled in 1894, and is by Arion 2:07½, his dam being Maggie Sultan 2:30 by Sultan, second dam Maggie Prescott by Jim Monroe. Nico was bred by J. Malcolm Forbes. Nothing would please Californians more than to have the greatest trotter of 1898 a son of Arion, a California bred horse whose two-year-old record of 2:10½ has never been equaled by any horse of that age.

WHEN a young horse sells for $975 on account of style, and when a stag brings $3,000 on the same score, it is poor policy to longer ignore the demands of a critical but profitable market. The first animal was sired by Dr. Herr, a good son of Mambrino Patchen, and sold for what he could "show." The second horse, an eleven-year-old son of Alroy, by Almont, had done stud service, and could out-hackney any hackney ever shown on the Chicago market.

ONE year from now, says the Chino Champion, good horses will undoubtedly command higher prices than they have for many years. This season is going to compel people to dispose of every surplus horse they can in some way. Many will go to the fertilizer works and many others will doubtless go to ranges where they will die of want. Only the best horses will be fed $20-hay, and if next winter gives a normal rainfall it will mark an upward tendency in the horse market.

C. L. HELM, of Ellensburg, Washington, recently shipped a cargo of horses to Honolulu, Sandwich Islands. The horses were roadsters and Percherons. He had a contract for the Percherons at from $400 to $450 per span according to size, for those weighing 1,300 pounds he will get $225 a head.

KLAMATH is in the very pink of condition down at Santa Ana. His owner and driver, Mr. Judd, is getting him ready for the eastern circuit. Klamath has gone an eighth in 13½ seconds more than once during the last two weeks, if the Santa Ana papers have not got their figures mixed.

THE Burr bill, having for its object the punishment of ringers, passed the New York Senate, and was signed by the Governor last week.

ANTELOPE, Oregon, is to have a half-mile track, and a fair and race meeting will be held there this fall.

"Works Like Magic."

Mr. F. G. Bartlett, of Fort Plain, N. Y., manager of W. J. Arkell's stables, writes as follows: "Through the advice of W. B. Fasig, of Cleveland, I was induced to use Quinn's Ointment on a case of curbs on a two-year-old Nutwood colt, and am now pleased to say they have disappeared, and no indications of ever returning. I cheerfully recommend Quinn's Ointment to every one." For curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and all bunches it has no equal. Price, $1.50. If you cannot obtain it at your druggist, address W. B. ## Mr. Corbitt's Closing-Out Sale.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—It is a source of pleasure as well as sorrow to visit the world renowned San Mateo Stock Farm, the former home of the celebrated trotter and sire, Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, and the birthplace of such famous horses as Sable Wilkes, 2:18, Muta Wilkes, 2:11, Lesa Wilkes, 2:09, Mary Best, 2:12½, and Ora Wilkes, 2:11, as well as many others that have made fame for this celebrated farm. I say a pleasure because from the time you step off the train at Burlingame until you come to the time when duty calls you back, the eye is feasted with pleasant sights, and my verdict is that this is one of the most picturesque spots in the whole of California. On one side you see the hills separating this rich valley from the Pacific Ocean and on the other San Francisco bay. Nothing meets the gaze that is unpleasant for the surroundings of the farm are beautiful. There is no evidence of a dry season, for the grass is green and luxuriant and the growing crops show great promise. If this is not convincing, the condition of the stock that depend upon the grass, would be proof conclusive that this section can thrive even when other sections perish from lack of moisture. It is also a pleasure to take a trip around the farm and note the well-arranged paddocks, fields and buildings, all conveniently located for the successful carrying out of the purpose for which they were intended. The sorrowful part is the fact that this place, so celebrated as the home and birthplace of many successful campaigners, will soon bid farewell to the many famous brood mares it has housed and supported from its foundation up to the present time. Mr. Corbitt will on Thursday June 2d, sell at public auction, each and every horse now there, both old and young, whether famous or having fame to attain, and the good old farm will be very likely put to other uses. Although great and famous horses have already been disposed of, the lot here at the present time embraces many as good if not better than those sold at previous sales.

Prince Airlie 28045 is the young stallion that the farm used last year in company with Oro Wilkes, and this year depends entirely on his services; he will be sold together with the others, and whoever gets him will secure a very promising young sire, possessed with size, conformation and color, as well as sufficient speed to warrant his owner in giving him the opportunity to obtain a low record, and a reputation as a race horse, which he will surely get if put in training. After examining the horse, examine his pedigree, and you will find him bred about right. His sire, Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, is known to all, and his dam, Chantilly, the dam of Chanty, 2:24½ as a two-year-old, is by Nutwood 600, her dam being Crepon, dam of three in the list, by Princeps 536, third dam Crape Lisse, dam of King Rene Jr., 2:17, by Geo. Wilkes. The get of Prince Airlie give in their appearance convincing proof of his great possibilities as a sire.

A walk through the paddocks and fields green with grass to the horses' ankles, is as pleasant a trip as the lover of a horse would want, for without exception a finer lot of youngsters never was my good fortune to see before. So far there has been foaled eighteen youngsters, ten of which are by Oro Wilkes and eight by Prince Airlie. There will be barring accidents twenty-nine foals dropped, nineteen of which are by Oro Wilkes and nine by Prince Airlie. The foals by Oro Wilkes, 2:11, show in a marked degree the greatness of the horse as a sire, and I venture to make the prophecy that amongst this lot of nineteen will be found some who will be even greater than their sire. I would like to give you a list of each and every one, but I dare not take so much of your space. Amongst the most famous mares in foal to and having foals by their side by Oro Wilkes, are the following:

Atalanta, dam of Othello, 2:28, etc. Atalanta is a full sister to Beautiful Bells, 2:29½.

Deborah, 2:11½, by Sable Wilkes.

Eva, by Le Grande, the dam of Sabina and Ravenscroft Eva has by her side a black colt by Oro Wilkes that is the most perfect youngster I ever saw.

Huntress, by Arthurton, dam of Beverly, 2:24½ and Hidalgo, 2:27.

Hanna, by Le Grande, dam the famous mare Hannah Price, has a black foal by her side. Hanna is the dam of Olga, 2:29½, but this little filly by her side will make Olga's mark look very slow, if she fulfills the happy promise of her youth.

Laura Drew, by Arthurton, dam of Freedom, 2:29½ as a yearling, due soon to foal by Oro Wilkes.

Lindale, by Nutwood, she the dam of Linwood, 2:20½, as a two-year-old.

Roseate, by Guy Wilkes, has a black colt by Oro Wilkes that is a fine looker.

It is a hard thing to pick out the best ones of these foals so universally good are each and all, not only those named by Oro Wilkes but others by this great horse as well as those by Prince Airlie.

Amongst those that attract particular attention is a bay filly (yearling) by Prince Airlie dam Flora Grande, by La Grande; this filly is a trotter if there ever was one.

The trainer at the farm has up 16 that he is driving and letting them step along a little. This lot includes a full sister to Freedom, 2:29½, two full brothers to Muta Wilkes, 2:11, and Mary Best, 2:12½—one a two-year-old and one a three-year-old—a full brother to Linwood Wilkes, 2:20½, at two years and a full brother to Sabledale, 2:18, at 2 years, all of these and many others show great promise considering what has been done with them.

Every horse on the place including some not mentioned although equally as good will be sold and the people of the Pacific Coast never had nor never will have such opportunities to secure such valuable additions to either the training stable or stock farm.

Mr. Corbitt has spent the greater part of the last 30 years in breeding up his stock to its present state of high perfection and the purchasers at the June sale will have the advantage of all his experience as well as what it has cost him to secure the most valuable brood mares and sires.

The sale will take place at the farm which is 18 miles from San Francisco. The railroad station Burlingame is on the farm and is only a short walk to the track where the horses will be shown. The visitors will not regret having made the trip even though they find nothing to suit their fancy. I am advised that a complete catalogue will soon be published. This sale is to be an absolute sale, the horses to go to the highest bidder no matter how low that highest bid may be.

I cannot close without calling your readers attention to a fact which has occurred to me. The San Mateo Stock Farm has never sought to obtain records, its horses, although having secured many world's records, have most always taken same in hotly contested races, but it has gained a glory for itself in winning races and having sufficient reserve left to win again the coming season. Then most of these race records were obtained when the high wheel sulky was in vogue and such a thing as a "bike" sulky not thought of. Who knows but what those to be sold will consist of many who not only will obtain world's records but win rich stakes such as were won by Mary Best 2:12½, Oro Wilkes 2:11, Fred S. Moody 2:14 and others?

All told there will be about eighty head offered, including the yearlings, and all go to the highest bidder.

OGDEN.

Strathmont's Great Speed.

John Gentry is generally credited with having paced the fastest officially timed quarter ever paced in a race says Yarrum in the Horse Review, but I listened to a story a day or two ago that makes his quarter in 28½ seconds a second rate performance. The story reached me by way of L. J. McCarthy, and to quote him as near as I can he said: "Among the California horses that Tom Keating raced in Montana last year was a brown gelding called Strathmont that took a record of 2:12½ up at Butte. It was said of him that he paced a short string of heats better than 2:10 before leaving home, and he was looked upon by the wise ones as a pretty fair thing. He failed to race good however, but he could step around the first turn of a track at a clip that used to make Chehalis and Searchlight and the other good ones up there go and hide in the darkest corners of their stalls. I was watching a race in which he was started, one day from the pool box. He took the track at the word, sailed away in front, and although I knew he was going very fast, I smiled when the timers flashed out 29 seconds for the first quarter, thinking they had made a mistake and mixed their figures, but when they refused to change it and insisted that the quarter had been properly timed in 29 seconds, I decided to snap my own watch on him the next heat and see if he could do it again. He was off in front at the word, and as he passed the quarter pole my watch registered 28½ seconds, and the same figures were flashed out from the stand. Talk about your sprinters! Say this fellow can just give all the pacers I ever saw cards and spades and big and little casino, and beat them easy under a pull. Dick Benson took him down to Kansas City, where he has been used as a road horse during the past winter, and if anybody's horse has beat him down the pike you may bet that Strathmont did not get a fair deal."

Gentry, Patchen and Pointer.

It is a coincidence that Star Pointer, 1:59½, Joe Patchen 2:01½, and John R. Gentry, 2:00½, the only stallions that have beaten 2:02, were all foaled in 1889, the American Sportsman remarks. Robert J. was foaled a year earlier. Robert J. never won a fourth money, though he has finished in third place no less than five times. Star Pointer won first or second money in every race he ever started, save the three races in which he was distanced. John R. Gentry and Robert J. have been behind the money but once in all their races. Joe Patchen never won a third money. Robert J. has more heats in 2:10 than any other horse in the world. Star Pointer never won a heat slower than 2:15, with the exception of one heat in 1895, and all his five winning heats in 1894, his first year out. All his heats have been in 2:10 or better. He has won a total of sixty-two heats at an average time of 2:05 65 100. John R. Gentry's sixty-nine winning heats average 2:06 45, Robert J.'s 122 heats average 2:08 32-100, and Joe Patchen's eighty-eight heats average 2:08 85 100. The year W. J. Andrews had John R. Gentry, 1895, the average time of the stallion for the year was lower than any other horse ever trained. Andrews won twelve heats with Gentry, the fastest in 2:00½, the slowest in 2:05½, and the average time was 2:03½.

Not Now a Conservative.

The following is an extract from a letter recently received by Hon. James W. Rea, of San Jose, Cal., the well known all round politician, business man and horse breeder, from his son Ed who is now a student at Harvard University and in his senior year:

"How do you stand on this Spanish question? Three years ago I would have been a conservative, but time has changed me and I have taken unto myself a red flag. What would you say if I were to join the Naval Reserves or Battery A of Boston? Would it seem to you like sacrilege to sacrifice a $20,000 education to the profanity of a Spanish torpedo, or would you be satisfied to hand up my 'L.L. D.' side by side with my A. B."—put them both by the side of Goldsmith Maid in the dining room, where you could regard them every morning as the two great financial experiences of your life, and, as you gazed upon them, could be charitable and think that those three bits of paper, plus the experience thereto attached, were well worth the amount of expenditure, or would you consider them the monumental irony of your life.

"Hundreds of men here at Harvard are enlisting on the ground that a man with no family, no past, no future, incumbered with a college education, owes it as a duty to his country to get killed if possible; that the least a man in that position can do is to die a hero with his shoes on, and not exist as a business failure and disgrace his family by 'passing away' from the effects of Bright's disease or paresis. That seems a strong argument.

"You are one of the very few persons in the world for whom I feel any sentiment—I was born selfish—and you are the one and only person whom I shall always try to please (I think you deserve that by your treatment of me), so naturally I would like to learn the bent of your mind.

"I will not enlist at any rate until my degree is assured, but if there should really be an occasion after that, and it should look like the war was going to amount to anything, I might possibly send the degree home alone. At any rate you are surely entitled to the degree and I'll not deprive you of that. You have a lien on that degree which, in law and equity, is prior to all other claims. Think it over, anyway, and forward your judicial opinion."

News from the North.

Minnie, the dam of Trumont, 2:14½, has foaled a colt by Patchmont, 2:09½.

Twenty-two of the Witch Hazel mares were shipped to Spokane last week and placed on the Little Spokane Stock Farm, where a number of them will be bred to Delpho, by Patronage.

The case of the horsemen holding unpaid warrants against the State Board of Agriculture will come up before the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association May 10th and unless some steps are taken to pay these warrants, the Salem track will likely be expelled from further participating in legitimate racing.

The new rules of the National Trotting Association requires every driver of a race to have a license and wear colors. These two rules will be strictly enforced at the Irvington meetings and drivers should make their application for a license at once. The time has come when trotting horse men must pay some attention to discipline, if they expect the public to patronize the game. The expense of a neat suit is but little when compared with the amount of extra dollars they will bring in through the gate receipts. Large gate receipts means larger purses, so the few dollars spent in trying to attract the crowds is money well invested. Let us hope that the boys will all appear in a tidy suit at the coming meeting.

Richard Hughes, who has a stable on the Park Farm, is the most enthusiastic horseman on the grounds. He is training the running mare Broadrein, besides a stable of trotters and pacers, including King Patchen, 2:36; Kitty Stanford, a three-year-trotter by Senator Nye; Guy, a four-year-old green pacer by Bishop; Fordham, four-year-old pacer by Sam Ford; Proper, five-year-old green trotter.

Lee Galbraith is training Tanner, Endymion, Annie McDougal and R. E. B. Chas. Hawk has Kitty Kiebar, 2:28; Dick, a green trotter by Dictatus; Minnie Hall, four-year-old green trotter by Malheur; Lee Ham, four-year-old green trotter by Hambletonian Mambrino.

George Misner is working Bill Frazier, p. 2:14; Island Lass, p. 2:20; McBriar, green trotter by McKinney; Qallej-ene, 2:22½. He is also jogging Leland W., 2:28, and Hamrock, 2:17½.

Jim Misner has Sleepy Tom, 2:28; The Cougar, four-year-old green pacer by Altamont; Torpedo, two-year old pacer by Malheur, dam by Direct; Bully Rags, two-year-old trotter by McKinney, dam by Altamont.

John Sawyer is working Deceiver, p. 2:17½; Princess D, 2:18; Paymack, green trotter by Cour d'Alene; Walter A., green pacer by King Patchen, out of the dam of Ann Alene, 2:22½; a two-year-old pacer (of unknown origin); Spanish Girl, a green pacer by Altamont; Max O'Rell, a green trotter, full brother to Doc Sperry, 2:09.

Billy Henry has McMinnville Maid, 2:22; Goldust Wilkes 2:33, and a green pacer of phenomenal speed. Sam Cato is working Arline, green pacer by Malheur, out of the dam of Ella T., 2:08½; Claymont, three-year-old trotter by Altamont—Tecora; Altacora, two-year-old pacer by Altamont—Tecora; Billy Hume, two-year-old pacer by Prince Altamont, out of McMinnville Maid, 2:22.

Ellis McLean is having worked his game little pacer Atlas, 2:15. He is being kept at the Hansen place on the east side. He will be a hot favorite in his class this year.

At this particular time there seems to be a keener desire on the part of the owners, to have come together at the Portland meeting such fleet footed pacers as Bill Frazier, 2:14, Atlas, 2:15½, Deceiver, 2:17½, King Altamont, 2:22½, Umahallis, 2:17½, Royal Jib, 2:20½, in one race, which seems now would be a great contest.

Billy Henry is starting in early for speed, as is reported that he is riding eights in 17 seconds behind a green pacer. Jim Misner too is very sweet on a 2 year old pacer by Malheur out of a mare by Direct.

Sulky Notes.

F. W. COVEY went East with the Palo Alto string last Monday.

ABBEY WOODNUT, dam of Diawood, 2:22, has a filly foal by Stam B., 2:11½.

MONTREAL, Canada, has shipped fully 2,500 horses to England this winter.

REDDING, Shasta County, is talking of holding a three days race meeting soon.

C. W. MARKS, owner of Joe Patchen, thinks his horse will lower his record this year.

MCZEUS (2:13), by McKinney, will be placed in training after a short season in the stud.

It is a crime punishable by not less than $500 fine to "ring" a horse in New York State.

THE Hawaiian Jockey Club has applied for membership in the National Trotting Association.

MARY MAVS, dam of Ralph Wilkes, 2:06½, has a foal by Belsire, son of Electioneer and Beautiful Bells.

THE horses of the German cavalry regiments are shod with paper shoes, which are both light and durable.

THE Colusa meeting will begin next Tuesday. It promises to be well attended and there certainly will be good racing.

THE Alameda Driving Club will hold a meeting May 30th, Memorial Day. There will be four events for trotters and pacers.

DIABLO will certainly be one of the greatest sires of speed that California has ever produced. His produce are all afflicted with speed.

ADELAIDE, 2:18, dam of Adelaide Simmons, 2:14½, and Adelaide McGregor, 2:14½, has a bay colt, foaled February 4th, by Prodigal, 2:16.

CALIFORNIANS never had such an opportunity to purchase high-class broodmares, colts and fillies as will be offered at the Corbitt sale June 2d.

APRIL 6th Nancy Hanks, 2:04, foaled a bay colt by Bingen, 2:12½. April 16th the mare was bred to the thoroughbred stallion imp. Meddler.

THOMAS HENRY, Jr., of Philadelphia, Pa., says he paid $7,500 for the team Ottinger, 2:09½, and Lady Grace, 2:15½, and not $3,000, as was reported.

C. F. EMERY, of Cleveland, anticipates that Ananias, 2:06½, will beat the five year-old pacing record of 2:03½ made by John R. Gentry this season.

THERE will be more trotting and pacing meetings in the East than ever before. Why should California be the only State to drop out of the procession?

At the recent horse sale in Boston, Mass., the offerings were entirely high-acting coach and hackney horses. Four pairs were sold for $1,000 up to $1,475.

LOUPE, 2:09½; Our Dick, 2:10½, and W. Wood, 2:07, all being in Honolulu, the free for all pace ought to be a drawing card at the meeting to be held there June 11th.

A MODOC county farmer has contracted with parties in the Livermore and San Joaquin valleys to pasture 600 head of horses until December 1st, at the rate of $1.50 per head.

MARIN JR., 2:13, is in training at Guttenberg, New Jersey. He is working well, but hasn't been driven faster than a 2:20 clip. He will be entered at some of the Eastern meetings this year.

LAUREL, 2:13½, by Nephew, owned by James Carrol and Buckman & Carragher of Sacramento, has a colt by Stam B., 2:11½. The little fellow bears a very strong resemblance to his great sire.

JAMES MCCREA, a horseman of national reputation, died recently at his home in Cleveland, Ohio, aged 52 years. For many years he was the cashier of the pool sellers on the Grand Circuit.

THE prospects for the Redding meeting are excellent. It will be held some time in June, and there promises to be a large list of entries, mostly local horses. The meeting will last three days.

ONE of the fastest two-year-olds in the East is a filly by Director out of Annoreen, 2:26½, by Cyclone, a grandson of Mambrino Pilot. There is a preponderance of thoroughbred blood in this filly.

THE blood that brings the highest price in the European horse market is the Wilkes blood. Mr. Corbitt's sale next month will give breeders a chance to get some of this choice and popular strain.

HERE is a bit of advice well worth following: "Considering the demand for trotting-bred carriage horses, it will certainly pay any stock farm in the land to study the art of training and fitting such horses."

MR. CHAS. GRIFFITH will make a number of entries at the Breeders' meeting. He expects to campaign his horses through the Kentucky circuit, but will not leave California until after the Breeders' meeting.

EQUESTRIANISM is growing in the United States, and during the past year riding clubs have increased in number and size in all the large cities, and the demand for suitable saddle horses has raised the price.

TWENTY-SIX of the twenty-eight nominations to the $10,000 stake at Charter Oak Park have made the second payment. The winner of this race not only gets a lion's share of the stake, but a silver trophy worth $500.

At the Kansas City horse show, which will be held next September, a prize of $1,000 will be offered for the best pair of Coach horses, any breed, not under 15.2 hands and not over 16.2 hands. This class will be open to all.

THERE has been no opportunity offered in California for years like that of the Corbitt sale, which will take place June 2d. Some of the grandest broodmares, colts and fillies ever put up at auction in California will be offered.

TRINKET, 2:14, is the unspared victim of fate as a brood mare. Only a few weeks ago she dropped her third living foal, by Bingen, 2:12½, but it only lived a fortnight. She is twenty-three and will probably never produce again.

GOVERNOR BLACK, New York, has signed a bill empowering the governor to appoint an inspector of the books of trotting race meetings at a salary of $1,500 and $500 for expenses. The appointment is for a term of five years.

MR. LOPEZ, of the Merriwa Stock Farm, near Pleasanton, has a four-year-old bay filly by Diablo, that has been driven very little but is the boss of the road in that locality. She is large and rangy and would be a winner if trained and raced.

THE Glenwood Springs (Colo.) association will try once more to hold a race meeting that will prove a success financially, and has decided to offer $3,000 for a meeting in August. It is to be hoped that its pluck will be recognized and success be the reward.

BODEGA, a little town on the bay of that name in Marin county, gave a race meeting last Friday. There were trotting and running races for local horses. The track is along the Ocean Beach, and is excellent for the sport. It would be a fine place to train horses.

QUITE a number of horses have been taken up and put in training during the past week with the idea on the part of owners of entering them at the Breeders' meeting, to be held at Oakland. The probabilities are that there will be at least 300 horses at the track when the meeting opens.

DIABLO, 2:09½, was looked over by many of the admirers of horse flesh who visited Pleasanton last Saturday. The great stallion is looking his best and is making quite a season. He has been bred to some excellent mares, and his progeny will surely add still further to his reputation as a sire.

ONE turf writer claims that Europeans are driving more good American horses than Americans themselves. This is probably a little exaggerated, but the fact remains that America supplies Europe with the majority of its very fast ones, and our breeders are perfectly willing to keep on doing so.

A RACE meeting of two or three days duration will be held at Bodie, Cal., during the month of July. Purses will be hung up for trotters, pacers and runners. There is a good track at Bodie and the miners of that town are great patrons of sport. The Track Association there is composed of the best citizens of the place.

HENRY FLEISCHMAN, the gentleman who has purchased so many good ones for export to Europe, says he got about the best bargain in America when he bought Derby Princess, 2:08½. If Mr. Fleischman will come to California we will show him several just as good as Derby Princess, that he can get at a reasonable figure.

MR. J. E. MCCOY, of Hueneme, was in the city this week. He states that quite a number of horsemen are engaged in training on the tracks in Southern California, but that Los Angeles will probably be the only place where a meeting will be held this year. James Mack has a good string of horses in training at Hueneme, headed by Waldo J., 2:09. The gray ghost is working nicely this year and may reduce his record before the summer is over.

DOES anyone know the pedigree of Colonel, the horse that sired Katy Tricks? This mare is the dam of Conde, 2:19½, and Empress, 2:24, and is also the granddam of the pacer Brino Tricks, 2:13½. The Year Book gives Katy Tricks as by Colonel, dam untraced, but does not give the pedigree of Colonel. There was a road horse called Colonel owned by J. D. Young of Sacramento in 1882. His pedigree was given as by Belfounder, out of a mare by St. Clair, but we have no means at hand to ascertain whether this Colonel was a stallion or a gelding.

J. R. RAPP, Tremont, Ill., is breeding nice, smooth, big standard mares to his trotting bred coach horse Gerdes and is producing horses that are ready sale at good prices. There are many breeders out here in California who could do the same thing were they careful about selecting the mares and stallions to mate each year. How often do we see on a breeding farm mares of all shapes, colors, sizes and breeding stunted to a good looking stallion by an owner who expects every foal resulting from the union to be a carriage horse. To produce an ideal horse the breeder must mate sire and dam that are both as near that ideal as possible.

W. T. RADER, of Portland, Oregon, has recently purchased in Massachusetts the inbred Morgan stallion, Royal Ben, which he intends to breed to a selected lot of mares with the idea of producing road horses. The mares are fifty in number, all bays or blacks, none of them being under 15½ hands high. Mr. Rader has patronized some of the best sires on the coast this year, having bred four mares to Altamont, one to McKinney, 2:11½, and recently sent a two-year-old filly by Sable Wilkes out of Annie G., by Le Grand, which he purchased at the Corbitt sale, to the great horse Potential. He has also bred a mare to Chehalis, 2:07½.

THE American Stock Farm publishes a very interesting table showing every heat that has been trotted in 2:10 or better since 1884, when Jay Eye See first placed the record at that figure. There have been 303 such heats, beginning in 1884, to the close of 1897. No heat of this speed was made by any trotter between the years of 1885 and 1891, at which period the bike sulky got in its work. According to the table, the horses which have won three heats in 2:10 or better in one race are: Directum once, Alix twice, Azote four times, Ryland T. twice, Phoebe Wilkes once, Nightingale once, Lockheart once, Kentucky Union twice, Fantasy four times and William Penn once.

ROSITA A., 2:14½, Mr. J. M. Alvise's chestnut mare by Adrian, will be shipped East next week to be sold at Fasig's Blue Ribbon sale, which takes place in Cincinnati this month. Rosita A. is one of the handsomest, as well as one of the speediest animals in California, and is proving herself a great broodmare. Mr. Alvise has a two-year-old from her by Direct that has already gone quarters in 35 seconds with very little handling. A yearling by Diablo from this mare is one of the best yearlings in California. After being in harness five times he stepped an eighth in 20 seconds. On the 8th of April Rosita A. slipped twins by Diablo. This mare should bring a good price at the sale.

MANAGER W. B. FASIG has announced the conditions of the two trotting handicaps on the European plan, which will be decided at the July meeting at Charter Oak Park, Hartford. The purses are $1,000 each; with an initial entrance fee of $20, with $30 additional from acceptors, with 2½ per cent from money winners. Each race is finished at the conclusion of two heats. The horse or horses receiving the lightest handicap start from the wire, while the handicapped horses are placed back at various distances, as per their handicaps. The start is necessarily a standing one. The winner of each heat will receive $300, the second $100 and the third $75, and the winner of the race an additional $50. Each purse is $1,000.

MILLARD SANDERS has located in Cleveland again and will train a public stable this year, devoting a good share of his time to youngsters. W. J. White will send him a number of choice young colts and fillies from Two-Minute Farm and in them Mr. Sanders should find a few as good as any of the great colt performers he ever developed. Mr. Sanders visited the farm last week and was much surprised at the condition of Guy Wilkes. He trained for Mr. Corbitt at San Mateo several years ago, and saw much of the stallion at that time, and notwithstanding the severe sickness of the stallion a year ago, he says Guy Wilkes looks younger today than four years ago. Any man standing ten feet away from Guy Wilkes would believe him to be under twelve years of age.

MR. F. M. WARE, the manager of the American Horse Exchange in New York, suggests that association giving harness races offer an extra prize of $50 in each race for the horse that goes with the least amount of appliances, that is, hitched as nearly as possible as a gentleman's roadster should be. It might be understood as follows: an ordinary set of road harness, which, of course, would mean no hoppers, an ordinary jointed snaffle or straight bar bit, a light side check or ordinary overcheck, no hand holders, no knee boots, elbow boots, shin boots, scalpers, shin, ankle and speedy cuts, or, in fact, any boots excepting light quarter boots, no toe weights, and possibly ordinary shoes of reasonable weight. A horse hitched this way would be just the kind of one a wealthy man would like to drive on the road, and the owner of such a horse that could show that he had not only won races with him, but won two, three or more special prizes for winning those races hitched as described, could certainly get a large price for his horse when offered at auction.

It may surprise some who have been taught to believe that no prominent trotting horse breeders are now experimenting with the thoroughbred cross to learn that Mr. J. Malcom Forbes has bred the famous ex-queen of trotters, Nancy Hanks (2:04), to the thoroughbred imported racing stallion Meddler, yet such is a fact. Few men have the courage to breed so valuable a trotter to a race horse, but Mr. Forbes believes that the surest way to increase the speed capacity of trotters is to incorporate the best of running with the best of trotting blood, and that is just what he attempted to do in this case. Of course, he is hoping that the result will be a filly, in which case she will undoubtedly be reserved for blood purposes. Mr. Forbes has a two-year-old filly by Meddler, out of Starlight (2:16½), and horsemen all agree that she is one of the best trotting prospects at the Forbes Farm. It is Mr. Forbes' intention to have her bred instead of developing and racing her. The experiments on this farm will be watched with interest by all progressive breeders.

C. W. MARKS, of Chicago, owner of Joe Patchen, has a strong faith in the ability of his great sidewheeler, to beat his record, and proposes to do so this year. In a recent interview he said: "That he can lower his record this season I have no doubt. He was timed separately in a race at Springfield, Ill., last October with Star Pointer, in 2:00½, and at that want the mile on the outside of the track. Pointer barely beat him out for the heat, which was paced in 2:00½. I think that if Patchen had been at the pole that day he would have won the heat, as he practically went a faster mile than Pointer. Then, again, I think that Patchen is in better condition this spring than he was last year. I have been very careful in wintering him and he looks fit right now for a race. His road work has been from ten to twelve miles every day and he is as strong as a lion. I will have him trained at Washington Park, and likely start him first at the Detroit meeting, which will take place July 18th. That association will arrange a race as a special for him. I will prepare Patchen for trials against all records this season, and especially will make an attempt to lower his own record of 2:04½ to wagon."

FOREIGNERS have bought so many of the best performers since the close of the last racing season that it is becoming apparent that the classes of 2:10 and faster trotters will have to be largely recruited from the ranks of slower eligibles, if they are to fill. With Derby Princess, 2:08½; Countess Eve, 2:09½; Que Allen, 2:09½; Baron Rogers, 2:09½; Athanasio, 2:10, and Senator A., 2:10, gone across the pond, Fantasy, 2:06, and Beuzetta, 2:06½, retired and bred; William Penn, 2:07½; Oakland Baron, 2:09½, and Dare Devil, 2:09½, relegated to stud service, and Praytell, 2:09½, to be raced at matinees only, the depletion in the ranks of the cracks has been something woeful, and where the recruits are to come from is not fully apparent just at present. The list of available Eastern 2:10 trotters for the now rapidly approaching season is smaller than it has been for years. Classified on their records it is composed of Kentucky Union, 2:07½; Grace Hastings, 2:08; Onoqua, 2:08½; The Monk, 2:08½; Klamath, 2:08½; Bessie Wilton, 2:09½; Dan Cupid, 2:09½; Elloree, 2:09½; Mosul, 2:09½; Pat L., 2:09½; Pilot Boy, 2:09½; Bush, 2:09½; B. B. P., 2:09½; Dandy Jim, 2:09½; Ottinger, 2:09½; Page, 2:09½, and Rulma, 2:10—in all but a meager seventeen, of whom several are decidedly doubtful.

Why Incorporate?

The question of incorporating the Pacific Coast Trotting Breeders Association appears to be of more importance than was first thought, and now it demands more attention than it seems to deserve.

A simple proposition, apparently, that incorporation, under the laws of the State, would add to the influence of the association; a legal body in place of an assemblage of individuals, a corporation carrying powers that could not be obtained without a legal existence. It certainly did not seem that incorporation would entail any disadvantages, and hence when the question was first agitated there was little if any opposition to the scheme.

Under the provision of the constitution of the P. C. T. H. B. A., the annual meeting could be held "on or before the first Monday in December, at such time and place as the Board of Directors or its presiding officer may designate."

In accordance with Section 1, Article 3 of the constitution, a meeting was held April 26th, that meeting having been called and notices sent as required by the constitution of the Association. The question of incorporating brought up matters which could not be considered at the time, as it was necessary to go through certain forms before the question could be acted upon.

An adjournment to May 26th was decided upon when the necessary papers could be prepared, and in the meantime the Secretary could notify nominators in stakes and secure their acquiescence to transfer them to a new association.

As stated in the "Special Department" last week, after the meeting was adjourned there came up another discussion. A prominent driver, member of the association, claimed that, under incorporation, any one who was delinquent in entrance fees, or had been subjected to fines, his horses, or equipments, would be subject to attachments. A thoroughly educated lawyer coincided with him in his opinion, and then came the question would not that interfere with entries?

Idle to say, that if this discussion was left out in this paper it would not be thought of, and the trend was injurious. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has no other aim but to foster all the interests connected with the breeding of all kinds of horses, and when asked to subscribe to anything which might be advantageous to an association, and detrimental to those who are, unfortunately, unable to pay entrance money, or liquidate fines, the answer will be NO.

Easy for associations to protect themselves against loss from unpaid entrance fees. Publish that an entry will not be received, when that is not accompanied by the first payment, and that is sufficient protection.

But let the idea prevail that incorporation is alone intended to summarily collect debts, and entries will be so far curtailed that there will be loss in place of gain.

Apart from that consideration, members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. will ask why Incorporate? There must be some hidden scheme, some desire to secure advantages which cannot be obtained under the present organization.

That a prosperous association, one that has only made one losing season, the last, should surrender on the first defeat will be somewhat inexplicable.

The plea that it is necessary to make the members assume the liabilities which the directors are now only responsible for, if accepted, will not be likely to encourage people to become members. Those who are now members will not be likely to accept conditions, new, and at variance with those under which membership was obtained.

No necessity for the incorporation to secure changes in the constitution. Quite a number of men are in favor of incorporating "running races" in the programme, still a larger number would like to see the restrictions to book making removed. Not the least necessity for incorporating to secure these changes. "Let well enough alone," or at best make such changes as can be made without striking out an entirely new course.

The P. C. T. H. B. A. will surely flourish under the present organization when the public realize that every effort will be made by the managers to ensure honest racing.

New Racing Blood and the Female Descent of Leading Stallions.

Turfmen are generally chary about buying the get of untried stallions and mares, but with a better knowledge of the merits of the different lines of blood this feeling will pass away. When lovers of thoroughbreds learn that a certain stallion had racing ability of no mean order and superb individuality and that he is bred on lines much like successful sires of the past, they will say to themselves, "I'm not taking many chances buying his sons and daughters in these days of scientific breeding." Then, if the mother of the youngster was a good race mare that was not "raced to death" and came from one of the tried-and-not-found-wanting racing families, she would be pretty sure to produce something that could race well.

There was a notable lack of excitement last winter when a youngster by an untried stallion or a first foal of a young mare was led into the sales ring, yet those cheap baby racers have proven in many instances of the very highest class. Noteworthy instances of short-priced youngsters proving splendid investments are Canace, Formero, Magdalenas, Amoltepec, San Augustine, Rainier, Toluca, Primavera, Ach, Sevens, La Parasause and Native Son.

The new sires of winners in California this season are imp. Crighton (sire of Canace, etc.), imp. Conveth (sire of Formero), Orizaba (sire of Rainier and Oraibee), Nomad (sire of Toluca, etc.), imp. Golden Garter (sire of Lobos), Rio Bravo (sire of Octuruck and Rio Frio) and imp. Watercress (sire of Sevens, Mossbrae, etc.). Imp. Duncombe, imp. Midlothian, Torso, St. Carlo, Verano and Emperor of Norfolk have greatly enhanced their reputations as sires of speedy performers, and altogether California breeders should congratulate themselves upon the showing of the racers by their stallions, nearly all young and most of them untried at the stud. Recent additions to the list of stallions in California that are likely to make great names for themselves at the stud are Magnet by imp. St. Blaise, Eolo by Eolus, Wernberg by imp. Muscovy, Lew Weir by Longfellow, Ruinart by St. Carlo, imp. Green by Childeric, Jack Richelieu by imp. Great Tom, Herald by imp. Kyrle Daly, imp. Trentola by Trenton and imp. Star Ruby by Hampton. The last-named is said to be the handsomest horse at Rancho del Paso, which is saying a good deal. Nomad and Flambeau are the only sons of the great Wildidle at the stud that we can now call to mind, and as there are no entire sons of Rutherford, Fellowcraft, Spendthrift or Miser out this way, the blood of Matchem in the male line is pretty scarce on this Coast. Imp. Darebin, Nomad and Flambeau will have to be looked to to see that the line does not die out. There is little of this blood in England to-day and the same can possibly be said of Australia, though there are, perhaps, some sons and grandsons of The Peer in that land. But there is no scarcity of Eclipse male line stallions in either country—in fact, England is going to the extreme in breeding only to stallions tracing direct to O'Kelly's horse in the male line. The breeders of America used to be just as bad the other way—breeding to the Herod male line stallions—but for the past twenty-five years have had a leaning toward the Eclipse blood.

The leading stallion of America, Hanover (he has headed the list in this country for the past three years) traces straightaway to Herod in the male line and to a Royal mare on the mother's side (No. 15 under the Bruce Lowe plan). He is pretty well balanced in Herod and Eclipse blood, the preponderance of the Eclipse blood being on the sire's side of the house, the Herod on the dam's—where we have long contended it should be in a successful race horse or sire. Kendal, who headed the list in England in 1897, is an Eclipse male line stallion and traces on the dam's side of the house to a mare by Bustler (No. 8 under the Bruce Lowe plan). St. Leger, New Zealand's leading sire, half-brother to King Ban, is by Doncaster (grandsire of Kendal) and on the mother's side goes to the dam of the two True Blues (No. 3, Lowe plan). Newminster (now dead, who headed the list last season in Australia) is by The Marquis (winner of the 2,000 Guineas and St. Leger) out of Spa, by Leamington. The great sire's lines, according to the late Mr. Lowe, were Nos. 3, 8, 11, 12 and 14. The English and New Zealand champion sires are from the great "sire families," while the American is not. As to Newminster, we have not at present the facilities for running him down to the fountain head, but will endeavor to do so at an early day, so that we can see the merit or demerit of Mr. Lowe's system of breeding as exemplified in the four great horse-breeding countries of the world.

THE undefeated Blue Eyes colt Greatland was driving under punishment when he defeated Ed Tipton in his last race at Newport, but it was under circumstances which raise him in racing estimation. Of his race the Commercial Tribune says: "Starter Brown dropped the flag to an excellent start. Greatland was slow to get in his stride, and before he was well in motion Ed Tipton and Ned Wickes were a half-dozen lengths to the good. Perkins at once went after the flying leaders, and at the quarter he caught Wickes. Swing-jog into the stretch Tipton was two lengths in front and traveling fast. Perkins went to the whip, and, under its stinging influence, Greatland overhauled Tipton, and at the last eighth was on even terms with him. Both jockeys were whipping hard, but Tipton was not equal to the occasion, and eased up at the last two jumps, Greatland won by a head. The colt's efforts under his crushing impost evoked the admiration of all, and he was declared to be the first Blue Eyes that showed an inclination to respond to the lash. Ed Tipton's race was a vast improvement over his last out, and he will be a hard one to beat from now on."

THE Nevada man that bought Palmerston and Potentate also secured Mrs. Shade, by Longfellow; La Juanita, by Emperor of Norfolk—Ruby Payne; Lady Arthur, by Verano—Aretta; Kummel and Ulloa, sisters, by imp. Chesterfield—imp. Zara, and Acroma, by Nomad—Celia. This is the nucleus of a good breeding establishment.

SAM HILDRETH on May 4th secured first call on the services of Jockey Dick Clawson for the season of 1898, Atkin & Lottridge relinquishing their contract on the now celebrated lightweight. The terms we did not learn, but the firm that gave the lad a chance to get to the front would not be likely to let their prize go without being rewarded substantially.

A PECULIAR thing about the racing at Memphis April 30th was that the first race was won by a daughter of Tenn and the second race by a son of Salvator. What memories those names (Tenny and Salvator) bring up! The winners were respectively Empress Josephine and Laurentian. The latter is out of imp. Lady Cardigan, by Lancastrian.

BARNEY SCHREIBER will leave San Francisco next Wednesday and book at St. Louis for a term. All his horses are resting at Woodlands. He declares to stop owning a stable of race horses, but will keep up his work as a bookmaker and a breeder.—Daily Racing Form.

JOHN COLEMAN, the well-known bookmaker, left May 4th for New York. Coleman was a big winner early in the season, but was about $5,000 out at closing time.

SATIN SLIPPER, a good winner amongst the two-year-olds this season, is by the great Kingston, out of Lady Slylites. April 30th she ran four and a half furlongs at Newport, Ky., in 0:54½, 105 lbs. up. Two Deceiver horses won that day.

TULLY COULTER is back from Louisville. He had the bad luck to lose Princess Flo, the best of his band of two-year-olds. The filly was of stake class, by Prince Royal—Florence M., and was named by Mr. Coulter's lovely sister.

"INCONSISTENT RACING"—Heretofore, for obvious reasons, I have refrained from writing anything which would have a bearing on the questions pending before the two Jockey Clubs. Now that these objections have been removed, that embargo does not exist, and I feel free to express opinions in this department of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

I have taken the text expressed in the two words of the "side head" for this article.

"Inconsistent running," "in-and out racing" are both the charm and the bane of racing. The "glorious uncertainty" is the great promotor of the sport, and if the capacity of race horses could be absolutely gauged there would be little interest after the first meeting of the horses.

As it is the victor of one, many other races, may take an inferior position, and then the question, why does he not come up to his previous form? is one of the many questions propounded.

Racing capacity is a complication of qualities. Physical energy is one thing, mental requirements another. The first means that muscles are toned to the time, mental qualifications have still more bearing, that while the physical part of the machinery is all that could be required, should the mental not correspond to the physical there will be failure.

Nerve power, "odic" force, will, determination, resolution to overcome relaxing muscles and reeling brain, by far the most potent in the composition of a race horse. However well endowed a horse may be in the qualities which are usually termed "game" there are times when there will be failure. The bravest men have exhibited cowardice occasionally and anyone who has paid attention to his change of feelings will recognize that there are times when he could not exert the force he had heretofore possessed.

A horse which has "romped" away in front won "hands down," with so much ease that it would seem that many seconds could have been taken off the recorded time, is beaten in slower time and by inferior animals.

La Fleche, one of the great race horses of her day, won the One Thousand Guineas, and that so easily that she was favorite for "The Derby" at the short odds of 11 to 10. Sir Hugo, at 40 to 1, beat her, and the loss of the race was ascribed to her jockey waiting too long. In the St. Leger, she beat Sir Hugo a couple of lengths in a canter, and as she won The Oaks as well as The One Thousand Guineas, her defeat was, to say the least, unexpected. No one thought of charging fraud. A fortunate turn of luck for Sir Hugo which entitled him to wear the "blue ribbon of the turf," for 1892, and another one of the many instances of the "Glorious Uncertainty" lent a glamour to racing.

In these betting days, whatever has a tendency to winning money, that is odds, whether long or short, seems to be the standpoint from which the judges take their cue. A good clue when other circumstances support the evidence which the betting discloses. Speculation on anything which brings up diversions of opinion is the poorest kind of a barometer. The mercury will rise and fall with the changes of atmospherical pressure. Absolute, whatever the gusge shows that must be accepted as the prevailing weight of the density of the atmosphere must be accepted. The fiat must be received as uncontroversial. Mercury, so high and so low, is followed, once, many times, by the prognostications being correct, and, when they differ, it must be ascribed to something in the atmosphere, some things, contradistinct, to the usual state of racing affairs.

In our racing here the most trouble has come from the two-year-old performers. A few people claim that two-year-olds are the most consistent of all racehorses. Never so futile an argument. Just as well to expect that a pupil of kindergartens, or primary schools would stand an equal chance with college graduates when the test was scholarship, as to think that the babies in racing are the compeers of those which had participated in many campaigns.

As stated before, the youngsters have occasioned more than their share of trouble. One wins to-day and another to-morrow.

Looking over the history of these youngsters, from the opening of the season, January 1st, to the time when thirty-five races had been run, never a winner that had not been defeated. Buena Ventura won three races, Formero four, and each of them were so far back in the races they were defeated that it would seem that something more than a loss of nerve or muscular force, was required to account for their defeat.

An intricate question. In all the reflections on the Derby of 1892 not one hinted that La Fleche was purposely beaten. Scarcely necessary to state that, notwithstanding the short odds, more was to be gained by winning than losing. Quite safe to say that more would be made by winning than losing. Not one of the youngsters that had not been beaten or was afterwards beaten. Buena Ventura won her first two races, and then when she had been beaten came again and won. Three races from January 1st to March 17th, and Formero captured four. When these cracks were beaten it would hardly be just to ascribe their defeat to premeditation. Simply this, that colts and fillies which had got off or had lost some of their winning form, while others had gained under the discipline of their trainers.

Inconsistent running. The charm and the bane of racing! People who are fully conversant with racing, trainers especially, will recognize that until a race has been run nothing can be told of the condition of the horses. Racegoers are prone to build their calculations on what they have seen, never thinking of the changes in form which are sure to come.

BETONICA, PASONTE. Among the twelve horses from Palo Alto which started on the eastern trip, Monday last, I have selected two as candidates for championship renown with a fair chance of securing that highly desired honor. Others there are in the consignment that encourage the highest expectations, a two-year-old that has made a better showing on the Palo Alto track, than the greatest of the juveniles, Arion, ever displayed.

Therefore in selecting Betonica and Pasonte as the most probable winners the future may prove that some of the youngsters will secure the coveted position, while my favorites fail to be placed in the highest niche of the equine Temple of Fame.

Quite safe to state, however, that never before in the history of the famous breeding farm such a collection of promising horses as now congregated in the air, and whatever the result may be, everything to warrant the prophecy that a goodly proportion of them will add to the renown of the California rancho.

Betonica, should he fail to come up to expectations, will surprise those who have watched his career, and any other place than the "very top" will not fulfill the hopes of his admirers.

Pasonte has been somewhat erratic. Prone to act badly and show a superabundance of temper, but there has been a decided change for the better, and there are good reasons for the belief that hereafter she will be as docile and reliable as her sire, Palo Alto, in my opinion the greatest trotter and sire of the Pacific Coast, and that means a "heap" of good qualities. Pasonte will have to do well to keep in the lead of Nordeau, as the last named has a world of speed, and Peko, too, is likely to be troublesome.

The appended cut is a representation of a part of the "Stallion Stables," built after the fire. Fire proof and with "roomy boxes" and all the conveniences, on the sunny side of the yard. The sire of Betonica, Azmoor, is in the background, under the live oaks, and while the cut is too diminutive to give a proper idea of his form, he is nearer the conformation of his sire, Electioneer, than any other of his sons. "Half-and-half," and the dam of Betonica also in that class, is evidence that in place of the mixture being so bad as the originator of the phrase meant to imply, it adds another to the long list of celebrities bred and reared at Palo Alto which were bred in that way.

PLEASANTON—Last Saturday morning I went to the mole to apologize for not being able to accompany a whole lot of my friends to Pleasanton. One of them was so persuasive that I made the trip, though owing to other engagements I was forced to come back on the train which left there at 2:15

P. M., well pleased, however, with the short stay. Lunched with "Andy" McDowell, a "feed" that even a gourmet would be pleased with, and the town reminded me of the long, long ago when a Fourth of July festival brought out all the inhabitants within a circuit which could be reached by the only conveyances at that time, saddle and driving horses. Happy, joyous crowds, all bent on making the most of the outing.

HOOF-BEATS.

J. L. DWYER, son of M. F. Dwyer, made his debut as an owner at Aqueduct Monday, P. J. Dwyer having presented him with Hairpin.

ROY CARRUTHERS has sold to Messrs. Taylor and Bradley the two-year-old colt Mount Clemmens, by Knight of Ellerslie—Miss Primrose. Consideration not stated. The buyers are wealthy young men who are likely later to race on an expensive scale.

E. B. CLANCEY, Toronto, has purchased of W. H. Milman of Guelph, Ont., the following thoroughbreds: Nick White, 2, by imp. Dandie Dinmont—Lucy Dortch, and the yearlings br c by Springfield—Miss Saxon; b f by Springfield—Butter Girl, and ch c by imp. Pillarist—Miss Vanderbilt. Terms private.

THE last issue of The Thoroughbred Record contains a fine picture of Plaudit, winner of the Kentucky Derby yesterday. Plaudit is by Himyar (sire of Domino), out of Cinderella (dam of Ferrier, Foreigner, Hansom and Hastings), by Tomahawk or Blue Ruin; second dam Manna, by Brown Bread; third dam Tartlet, by Irish Birdcatcher, &c.

ADOLPH B. SPRECKELS was Thursday appointed one of the Park Commissioners of Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, vice John Rosenfeld, term expired. The selection is one certain to please the vast majority of San Francisco people, for Mr. Spreckels is progressive and public-spirited and will take pleasure in his work as Commissioner, to which position no salary is attached.

LILLY WRIGHT, I. P. Diggs' famous broodmare, who is the mother of Diggs, Sutton, Arbaces, Olinthus and a yearling unnamed, has another colt, by Red Iron, a filly. This colt is a full sister to the famous string just mentioned, most of whom have won distinction on the turf. It is her first colt of that sex. The youngster is a beauty, somewhat larger than her brothers were. She is a bay and resembles Arbaces more than any of the rest. Mr. Diggs thinks she is the handsomest of the family and he expects great things of her in the future.—Woodland Mail, May 5th.

FOURTEEN horses made up the field in the Two Thousand Guineas, which was run Wednesday, April 27th, over the Rowley mile at the Newmarket First Spring meeting. The race was won by Mr. Johnstone's bay colt Disraeli, by Galopin—Lady Yardley, who is one of the most prominent Derby candidates. The Duke of Portland's bay colt Wantage, by Sheen—Satchel, was second and Prince Solykoff's bay colt Ninus, by Sheen—Nina, was third. The conditions of the event are as follows: The Two Thousand Guineas Stakes of 100 sovereigns each, for three-year-olds; the owner of the second horse to receive 300 sovereigns out of the stakes and the third to save his stakes; Rowley mile. In 1897 the event was won by Mr. Gubbin's b c Galtee More, by Kendal—Morganette, with Velasquez second and Minstrel third.

LATEST advices from England state that Valasquez, by Donovan—Vista, appears to be in remarkably good condition, and if he ends the spring as well as he has begun it he will grow into a splendid four-year-old, and should win at least one of next season's $50,000 stakes for Lord Rosebery. It is reported that he will be reserved for the Princess of Wales Stakes at the first July meeting. Valasquez is entered for the Rous Memorial Stakes at Ascot. Another prominent candidate for the $50,000 stakes is Chelandry, by Goldfinch—Illuminata, also the property of Lord Rosebery, and her 6-lb. breeding allowance gives her a grand "look in." This pair should hold the other four-year-olds safe enough in the Princess of Wales Stakes. The best known three-year-olds in the race are Ninus, bay colt by Sheen—Nina, and Dieudonne, by Amphion—Mon Droit, while the dark lot includes Gerolstein, Isabinda, Brio and Ormathwaite.

SIX subscriptions are advertised to Isinglass, the fee being 300 guineas, which, to an American, seems certainly a most exorbitant demand for an untried horse. Considering that St. Frusquin's fee is only 250 guineas, it seems preposterous that 300 guineas should be demanded for Isinglass, who is not so highly bred; nor was he a better horse on the turf, if indeed, as good. It seems that seven of the mares sent to Isinglass last season proved to be barren, which was a grievous consummation after so heavy an outlay, the service fee seldom, if ever, being returned in England, nor is another service given the following year in such cases. This horse, however, had nineteen foals, including colts out of Jenny Howlett, St. Marguerite (dam of Seabreeze), and Novitiate (dam of Marco), and fillies out of Reprieve, Satchel and Sweet Sauce (dam of Kirkconnel). There were also three foals which died.

Fly-Casting Contests at Stow Lake.

Saturday last was a red letter day in the annals of fly-casting at Stow Lake—another world's record in long-distance casting being inscribed on the tablet of Champion Walter D. Mansfield's series of unequalled long distance scores. In Chicago, August last, at the world's fly-casting tournament, Mansfield made the best record cast to date, 111½ feet, leading the record of 102½ feet held by R. C. Leonard of New York. At Stow Lake a month later, Mansfield established a record of 113 feet. In one of the club contests succeeding he increased the record to 117 feet. Last January, in New York, at Madison Square Garden, during an indoor contest, Leonard made a cast of 120 feet. At the club competition on Stow Lake, April 16th, Mansfield beat all previous records with a cast of 120½ feet. The new record was made on a long distance cast of 125½ feet, which feat exceeds Leonard's indoor cast by 5½ feet.

W. E. Bacheller and Dr. E. N. Lowry, with a score of 115 and 114 feet respectively, were near the top on the list of high class casters, both casts exceeding all previous out-door records, excepting those of Mansfield's. First honors in the distance and accuracy event were won by W. E. Bacheller on a record of 90.2-3 per cent. Lowry was second with 90.1-3 per cent. and Young third with 87.2-3 per cent. In the accuracy and delicacy event Smyth took first place with 86½ per cent. Lowry was second with 83½ per cent, and Skinner third, with 82.7-12 per cent. The lure casting was participated in by seven contestants.

On Sunday Mansfield was the high man in the long distance casting, his best cast being 116 feet. Dr. Lowry stood second with 106 feet, and F. E. Daverkosen came in for third honors with 105 feet. Smyth was first in distance and accuracy with 95.1-3 per cent., a very high score; Battu was second with 93.2-3 per cent, and Young third with 92.2-3 per cent. In the accuracy and delicacy event Lowry was first with 89.1-6 per cent.; Smyth came next with 86½ per cent. and Mansfield came third with 83½ per cent. No entries were made in the lure casting event. The scores in detail were as follows:

The sixth of the series of this season's contests will commence to-day at 2 P. M. and continue to-morrow at 10 A. M. at Stow Lake.

A regular business meeting of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club will be held Tuesday evening, May 10th, in the assembly room of the Mills Building.

Reels.

Speaking as a zoologist, I would say that there were: Genera, II; species, innumerable. The two genera differ radically, while the species vary only in detail.

Here is an artificial key to the genus Reel:

(a) Winch of wood or metal with crank.

(aa) Automatic machine which pulls in a fish when the "little finger" presses the button.

Then there are multiplying reels with a combination of click and drag, to be used as desired. A click is a check, or drag, and is not to be used where baits are to be cast with a free-running reel. I dearly love a click reel for trout; its cheery song when a trout is taking line is one of the charms of fishing; and I love to reel in a fish with my hand on the crank. Some good anglers prefer an automatic where you "press the button" and the reel does the rest; but I am willing to do the rest. My favorite reel is a click with raised pillars. The two plates of a reel are kept apart by small posts, if that is the right name, and are held together by screws which go through the plates into these posts; and when your reel is filled to the posts it will take no more line. The "raised pillars" are merely raised projections on the plates which enable the reel to be filled with more line.

My reason for preferring such a reel is because I use a very heavy line, and need either raised pillars or a wider reel to hold its fifty yards. Few anglers carry as much line, and it is not necessary for ordinary trout fishing; one-third of it may be enough, but every angler gets notions of his own.

Trout reels are not as expensive as those free-running ones for striped bass and other fishes. The latter often cost $30 and $50, while a trout reel may be had from $3 to $8, not counting the things stamped out of tin, which cost a trifle and are worth less—or worthless, as you please.

Here is a point: Put 25 yards of line on my favorite reel, and a turn of the crank takes up slowly, for the spool is too wide for that length of line to make much at a revolution; there is nothing left on the spindle. Therefore a short line should have a narrow reel. Over thirty years ago Billingshurst, of Rochester, N. Y., a celebrated rifle maker, made a reel entirely of wire, on a central plate which may have been 1½ inches in diameter; he soldered rings of wire of about 1 inch, and the line ran in these. The object was to have the reel dry the line. I bought one, but as it had no click I dropped its use, and I have not seen one in years. Then came perforated plates, and no end of inventions.

Perforated plates should not be depended upon to dry a line, for after a day's fishing it is seldom that there is not a chance to unroll it on the floor and dry it, while at home you should have one of the many appliances for reeling off the line and drying it. It does a line good to be reeled off, changed end for end and handled, especially if it is an enameled waterproof silk line. Such a line, if left long on a reel, has a way of sticking to itself, not that it requires force to separate it, but enough to roughen the surface.

If there is one thing which the careless angler is apt to overlook in his care for his outfit, it is the reel. It worked all right last week, or last season—why not now? My friend, as gross a piece of machinery as a wheelbarrow needs oiling at times, and your reel may have had its oil washed out in the rain, or some sand may have gotten into its mechanism. I pray you to have a little screw-driver, of which the blade is not over ½ inch, and treat your reel as if you loved it; take it apart and oil it, and trust it to be true to you. I have such an implement, made of nicked steel, and perfectly flat, which is carried on my key ring. It is 1½ inches long and less than that at the rounded end. A good reel is like a good gun; it is all right when you buy it, but its usefulness thereafter depends upon the owner and the care which he takes of it.

Fish Commission Notes.

The Lake Tahoe hatchery has furnished 3,500,000 eggs to date, this being 40 per cent. more than was taken up to the same time last year. The increase is attributed to the closed season on the lake, which by ordinance of the Boards of Supervisors of El Dorado and Placer counties prevails until June 1st. The Fish Commission have a patrol on the lake in addition to the work of the Placer county Game Warden.

By this means the Indians, who every year make a practice of spearing the spawning fish, have been kept away from the lake. The work at the Lake Tahoe hatchery will cease when the 4,000,000 mark is reached; owing to the diminished water supply.

Three thousand German brown trout (Salmo Fario) have been placed in the Sacramento river and 1,500 put in the McCloud. This is the first transplanting of yearling brown trout that the Commission has made.

The Shovel creek hatchery will be operated until after the June run of fish. 800,000 eggs have been taken so far this season.

Al. Wilson is at Russian river and will stay until the end of the bass breeding season. The bass fry taken by him for transplanting will be distributed in the most favorable localities for the propagation of this desirable and game fish. There has been an impression in the minds of some anglers that Russian river was being depleted of its available supply of bass by this method; but the Commissioners claim that such is not the case, out of 100,000 black bass fry taken last year but 30,000 were used for transplanting in other waters, the balance being carefully looked after and placed back in the river again at the proper time. Furthermore, numbers of bass, which were late in breeding, were taken and stripped, the fry being turned loose in the river at the proper time. If such action had not been taken, doubtless the fry of these fish would have been caught in the shallow water, land-locked, and a large percentage of them destroyed by their natural enemies.

In Yuba County.

Trout fishing in the vicinity of Strawberry Valley, Yuba county, is described by a writer in the Marysville Democrat as follows:

"Two and one-half miles up the road takes one to Sly creek, a beautiful stream that is well stocked with brook trout of the rainbow species.

Three miles to the west, over a fairly good road, is the dam of Lost Creek, at which point the water of the Forbestown Ditch Company is taken out. Here are trout in quantities, both above and below the dam, which at this point is more than 200 feet in width. Passing this dam on the same road and continuing three miles further west over Moorville Ridge is a branch of Feather river. Going up or down stream there are plenty of trout, and they are easily taken by wading, fishing with artificial flies, gum boots being quite necessary. Although early for fishing in mountain streams and this being the spawning season for brook trout, our party caught a sufficient number to have trout served for our breakfast each morning during the four days we were in Strawberry valley. About the first to the middle of June will be a better time to enjoy fishing there, even as late as October, when as good sport will be had and as fine climate and water as can be found in California."

Strawberry Valley is reached by stage from Marysville, leaving at 6 A. M. and arriving at 5:30 P. M. The traveling is over good mountain roads.

Trout in Yosemite Valley.

Deputy Fish Commissioner M. Cross recently conveyed from the Sissons hatchery 1,000 German brown trout (Salmo Fario), from six to eight inches long, to the Yosemite Valley for transplanting in the streams and lakes of the National Reservation. The Wawona hatchery will be operated this year on an allotment of 300,000 trout eggs from the Tahoe hatchery and 200,000 rainbow trout eggs from Beswick hatchery, the fry will eventually be for final distribution in the waters first mentioned above.

Last year the Fish Commissioners stocked twenty-seven lakes and streams in the Valley, some by the transplanting of trout taken in the valley streams to heretofore barren waters and others by transplanting fry from the hatcheries under their control. Streams where the fish could not ascend above the falls were stocked above the obstructions, and in places where the obstruction was not of too great magnitude, permission was obtained from the authorities to do a little necessary blasting, thus making it easy for fish to ascend the stream and seek new spawning grounds.

It is claimed that within the boundaries of this grand national reservation, covering an extent of eighty miles square, there is a comparatively unknown country, abounding in lakes and streams, that will in the course of time develop ideal spots for the angler which will give the fishing grounds in the Valley unending fame and furnish unlimited sport for those who love and practice the gentle art.

Sea lions are quite numerous in the waters of the bay about Vallejo just now. At this period of the year the salmon are running up the rivers to their spawning grounds. They are followed by the seals and from the many carcasses of salmon washed up on the beach with just a bite taken out of them these amphibious animals must be making a fearful slaughter among the salmon family.—Vallejo Chronicle.

The practice of the Portuguese fishermen, at Lime Point and other places on the Sausalito shore, in putting out set lines for rock-fish is a reprehensible one and if persisted in will be the means of decimating the supply of these toothsome bay fish. This is only one of the many means by which the market fishers are rapidly and surely reducing the supply of food fish in the bay.

E. W. S. Van Slyke, Lloyd Eaton, Fred Johnson and John Butler fished in the San Gregorio lagoon on Saturday and Sunday last. A small catch was taken, the water is very low in the lagoon. Johnson on Saturday afternoon caught 33 nice fish, however.

Al Cumming is due in this city on Monday. He has been having great sport fishing in the vicinity of Klamath Hot Springs for about ten days.

Sturgeon are now running in the Stanislaus seeking a place to spawn and the natives are consequently on the qui vive with their spears.

Paper Mill, Sonoma and Calaveras are to be stocked with a large number of rainbow and cutthroat fry as soon as possible this season.

The upper San Antonio has enabled Salinas anglers to have a plenty of good trout fishing recently.

Trout fishing on Shovel creek, in the vicinity of the fish traps, has been unusually good up to date.

From April 1st to September 1st is close season for sturgeon.

shooters not being informed of the extent of the handicap until after shooting. Charles Merrill took the first prize with 50 blue rocks. W. E. "Rex" was second with 49 and Jones was third with 47. For the fourth place there were five ties.

Elliott Wins the Pigeon Shoot.

J. A. R. Elliott will carry the Kansas City Star cup back to his home in Kansas City, Mo., by virtue of his good shooting Tuesday, April 26, in the live-pigeon race at Watson's Park with Fred Gilbert. The match was at 100 birds for each man, and in addition to the trophy the men shot for $100 a side.

It was an ideal day for the match, there being but a light wind to interfere with the flight of the birds. A fine lot of pigeons had been secured, the birds rising quickly and flying strong.

The match commenced at 10 o'clock, Elliott winning the toss. It is said that Gilbert's birds were stronger than Elliott's, the Spirit Lake man's pigeons getting up rapidly and quartering strongly. Out of the first twenty birds Elliott lost three and Gilbert one less. At the end of the second twenty Elliott had killed every bird, while his opponent added but fifteen to his string. On the third twenty the shooters dropped an equal number, sixteen each. From the fourth twenty Elliott missed three, but Gilbert allowed but one to escape. At the ending of the fifth twenty Gilbert had missed two, but his companion finished without a miss. John Watson refereed the match. The score in detail was

The wild pigeons, recently so plentiful in certain sections of San Mateo and Santa Clara counties are getting scarcer, having evidently left for other feeding grounds.

Edg. Forster made a straight score of twenty blue-rocks in the "merchandise" shoot at the Empire grounds on Sunday last thereby winning the principal prize. He shot with an L. C. Smith gun, his load was 3½ grains "E. C." powder and 1½ oz. No. 7 shot.

Standards.

THE COCKER SPANIEL—Head: Not so heavy in proportion, and not so high in occiput as in the modern field spaniel, with a nicely developed muzzle or jaw; lean, and yet not so square as in the Sussex or Clumber varieties; always exhibiting a wide and well-developed nose, not snipy. Rounded and well-developed skull with room for brain power, i. e.: skull rising in graceful curve from stop, and with same outline at occiput, the curve line being flatter, but still curving at middle of skull. Head narrowest at eyes, broadest at set on of ears. Stop is marked and a groove runs up skull, gradually becoming less apparent, till lost half way to occiput, thus preventing King Charles domed skull. Jaws: level; teeth, strong and regular. Eyes: round and full, not prominent, hazel or brown, with expression of intelligence and gentleness, wideawake, bright and merry. Ears: lobular, set on low, leather fine and not extending beyond the nose, with long silky hair, which must be straight or wavy, no positive curls or ringlets. Nose: sufficiently wide and well developed to insure the exquisite scenting powers of this breed.

Neck: sufficiently long to allow the nose to reach the ground easily, muscular, with shoulders sloping and fine.

Body: not quite so long and low as in other breeds of spaniels. More compact and firmly knit together. Chest deep and well developed. Back and loin: Strong and compact in proportion to size and weight of dog, slightly dropping toward stern. Hind-quarters: wide, well rounded and muscular. Forelegs: short, strong and muscular, straight; pasterns, straight and strong. Hindlegs: strong with well bent stifles, hocks, straight and near the ground. Feet: firm, round and catlike—not too large spreading and loose jointed, turning neither in nor out; soles with hard, horny pads, with plenty of hair between the toes. Sterns: That most characteristic of blue blood in all of the spaniel family may, in the lighter and more active Cocker, although set low down, be allowed a slightly higher carriage than in the other breeds, never cocked up over, but, rather in line with the back, usually docked.

Coat: abundant, soft and silky, flat or waved, never wiry woolly or curly, no topknot nor curly hair on top of head. Chest, legs and stern well feathered.

Color: jet black, white shirt frill, should never disqualify; white feet should not be allowed in any specimen of self-color. Any variety of cocker agrees in all respects with the black variety the only difference being in the color.

Weight not over 28 nor less than 18 pounds.

General appearance is that of a well built, graceful and active dog, showing strength without heaviness. Characteristics: sagacity, docility, good temper, affection and activity.

THE CLUMBER SPANIEL—Head should be large, square and massive, of medium length, broad on top and with a decided occiput. Heavy brows with a deep stop; heavy, freckled muzzle, with a well developed jaw. Eyes: dark amber in color, slightly sunken and showing the haw. Ears: large, shaped like a vine-leaf, well covered with straight hair, hanging slightly forward, the feather not extending below the leather. Nose: square and flesh colored.

Neck: very thick and powerful and well feathered underneath.

Body: long and heavy near the ground. Chest: wide and deep. Shoulders: strong and muscular. Back: straight, broad and long. Loin: powerful, well let down in flank. Hindquarters: very powerful and well developed. Legs: short, thick and strong; hocks low. Feet: large and round, well covered with hair. Stern: set low, well feathered and carried about level with the back.

Coat: long, abundant, soft and straight. Under part of body, the chest, legs and stern should be well feathered.

Color: plain white with lemon markings; orange color is permissible but not desirable; slight head markings, with white body preferred.

Weight: dogs, 55 to 65 pounds; bitches, 50 to 55 pounds.

General appearance should be that of a long, low, heavy, very massive dog, with a thoughtful expression.

The Bench Show.

Entries have been coming in during the latter end of this week in a very encouraging manner. It is anticipated that to-day and to-morrow will bring in enough to swell the list up to that of last year. To-morrow night at 12 P. M. the entries close, and it behooves those who have waited until the last moment to get a move on. Some genuine surprises are promised in several of the prominent classes in the high quality of dogs that will be seen on the bench.

The auction sale feature of the show seems to have been accepted with a great deal of favor by a many fanciers.

An innovation in the way of prizes on this Coast is the one offered by Superintendent E. M. Oldham. His generous offer is $25 in cash for the exhibitor scoring the highest number of points, to be decided as follows: Kennel prize, 15 points; winners' prize, 15 points; first prize, 10 points; second prize, 5 points; third prize, 3 points; reserve prize, 3 points. This will afford a splendid opportunity for a kennel entry of four good dogs, enabling the owner to make at least eight different entries, thus having a strong show for cash prizes in the various classes and also the possibility of winning the Oldham cash prize.

Prizes and medals ad lib still continue to be offered by the fancy. The San Francisco Kennel Club offers the following additional prizes, a gold medal for the best deerhound, also one for the best Dalmatian; a silver cup for the best bulldog; the gold medal already offered will go to the best of opposite sex to winner of the cup in the bulldog class.

The Baltimore Kennel Association offers a club medal for the best of each of the following breeds: Newfoundlands, deerhounds, field spaniels, Dalmatians, pugs, skye terriers, fox terriers, Pomeranians and miscellaneous, and also for the best bulldog of the opposite sex to the winner of the San Francisco Kennel Club silver cup.

Superintendent Oldham arrived last Tuesday evening on the Overland, he was pleasantly surprised by a number of gentlemen who journeyed across the bay for the purpose of giving him a cordial welcome back to San Francisco.

Coursing at Union Park.

The great May-day coursing program at Union Park last Sunday gathered together, to witness the sport, the largest crowd that has ever been seen at a coursing event in the United States. Ordinarily the crowd does not arrive until the third round, but early Sunday morning it began to pack the park for the first races. This was unprecedented and speaks volumes in praise, not only of the intelligent and perfect management conducting the park, but also emphatically shows the choice of the public, as well as strongly indicating the increasing interest taken by the public in a clean and vigorous sport. The betting was brisk, the ring being packed with a crush of betting enthusiasts during the entire day, so much so that the "bookies" were hardly able to keep up with the demand for tickets. Money enough to load a freight car was in sight for the pickers of winning dogs.

The coursing was of the best. The hares full of life and vim cut out the pace for the hounds, some of the most exciting courses of the season were run off both in the preliminary and last rounds. The champion stake was won by that grand hound, For Freedom, who took every race easily. All of For Freedom's successes were well earned, and the running showed the hound a veritable champion. The maiden stake was captured by False Flatterer. In the second round some surprises jarred the wise people, a few of the long shots winning with apparent ease from the favorites. Van Needs, Myrtle, Royal Oak, White Chief and False Flatterer, at 5 to 1 over Meta, proved the winners.

A grand program is offered for to-day and to-morrow. Seventy-two entries were received for this great open stake meeting. The running promises to be of the best. The prizes are $200, $100, $75, $50, $50, next four $25 each, next nine $12.50 each, next eighteen $5 each. The specials are: Dogs beaten by ultimate winner in first round, $12.50 and in second round $10 extra; dogs beaten by runner-up in first round, $7.50, and in second round $7.50 extra; dogs beaten by winner of third prize in the first round $5, and in the second round $5 extra; total amount of prizes, $825. The entries are:

P Gorman's Kingston vs Pierce & Sullivan's Little Weasel; R C Scott's Mystery vs Simmons & Donohoe's Moore's Prescription; Curtis & Son's McKinley vs Derby Kennels' Master McGregor; M Nealon's Van Knapp vs E Scott's Lord Byron; W C Glasson's Terrona vs E V Sullivan's Mira Monte; P J Healey's Rusty Gold vs D L Desimone's Buck-wa; E V Sullivan's Jester vs W H Hinchman's Chiquits; N Hottaus' Correct vs Saller & Weill's Sharkey; G Whitney's Theron vs J J Edmond's Forget; W J Jones' Queen Ann vs E V Sullivan's Blackstone; Pasha Kennels' Arapahoe vs J A Watson's Sky Queen; E Molloney's Precita Girl vs S E Portal's Laurelwood II; S E Portal's At Last vs W J Jones Call Boy; Pasha Kennels' Rich & Artless vs M Lettich's Glenwood; F P Courtney's The Turk vs J A Watson's Skyrocket; Ryan & Lyons' Lanky Bob vs Curtis & Son's Cavalier; E V Sullivan's Royal Buck vs F C Mack's Black Patti; A Johnson's Lissak vs Curtis & Son's Chartist; Phil Fahney's Barney P vs J J Warren's Sweet Lips; T J Burk's Little Pete vs Pasha Kennels' Robert Adair; S Hanson's L S Connelly vs Pasha Kennels' Alameda; Shylor & Connelly's Decorator vs E V Sullivan's Fear Not; Saller & Weill's Port Costa Lass vs H McNeil's Sportsman; Simmons & Donohoe's Amorita vs Pierce & Sullivan's Jersey Maid; Healey & Callaghan's Sky-light vs E V Sullivan's Rocklin Belle; J Mulhouse's Black Patti vs A Johnson's Tod Sloan; E Mikilak's Fireball vs Larkey & Rock's Hercules; Healey & Callaghan's E V D vs Ryan & Ryan's Montana; Pierce & Sullivan's Santa Bella vs W H Hinchman's Clipper; J J Edmonds' Move On vs R B Briggs' San Pedro; D J Herley's Silva Nita vs W C Glasson's Sylvanious; T Butler's Susie vs E V Sullivan's Mercy May; J Seggerson's White Chief vs A Johnson's Mountain Beauty; C S Young's Tip vs S Hanson's Jimmy Deane; E V Sullivan's O'Grady vs R S Kennels' Bad Shot; T A William's Minnie E vs D J Healey's Pastime.

Sacramento Kennel Notes.

The California State Poultry and Kennel Club held their annual meeting and election of officers for the ensuing year in Sacramento on Wednesday, April 27th. The following officers were elected: President, Thomas Fox of Sacramento; vice-president, B. M. Woodhull of Stockton; M. Coffey, secretary, Sacramento; L. W. Matthias, treasurer, Sacramento; Board of Directors—E. Richards, W. E. Ladd, Stockton; J. A. Scholefield, Hollister; C. W. Hansen, San Mateo; C. Morshead, San Jose; E. A. Noyes, West Butte; J. M. Wakefield, Lockeford; Geo. Neale, Sacramento; Wm. Mullener, Sacramento; H. Anderson, Suisun. The Association will hold its annual show in Sacramento next December in the Old Pavilion, and will endeavor to eclipse all former shows held in that city. The selection of judges and officers of the show was left in the hands of the Board of Directors.

COURSING.

May 7-8—Union Coursing Park. Regular meetings every Saturday, Sunday and holidays. Drawings every Wednesday evening 909 Market street.

Alta Millo, the fine St. Bernard recently purchased from Mrs. Lee of Toledo, arrived in this city on Sunday evening. Previous accounts in favor of this dog have not been exaggerated.

A. C. Bradberry has been selected as the judge of coursing to succeed D. R. Ladd at Los Angeles. "Brad" seems to have given satisfaction to all concerned on the occasion of his initial appearance upon the coursing ward at the Southern park.

The coursing at Agricultural Park, Los Angeles, is under a new management. A syndicate headed by Louis Thorne and C. De Camp being the controlling influence. The pool privileges are still retained by Mr. Black.

R. E. de B. Lopez, of the Merriwa Stock Farm, Pleasanton has purchased from E. P. Whiting, Minneapolis, two fine greyhound bitches, Warrana (Master Herschel—Innocence) and Minneapolis (Glenkirk—Innocence).

Elmo and the Clays.

The frontispiece is characterized as a double type, viz., fast trotter and "coacher." Well worthy of carrying the colors of both. One of the great trotters of his day if his record is only 2:27. His owners offered to match him against any horse, a race, heats of three miles, and the amount could be named by the parties accepting. The larger the better, and one of his then owners, Colonel Abner Taylor, wealthy, and one of the largest operators on "the Board" in Chicago, a sum, however large in a match, would not be big for him. Col. Taylor assured the writer that from trials shown he was ready to post any sum, and those who knew him were well aware that whatever statement he made he would "back" to a larger amount than any match of the past showed.

He got fast trotters and fast pacers and dams of fast trotters and fast pacers. It may be well to quote description, written years ago, when the horse was alive, and with every opportunity to write intelligently on the subject, and these will prove that one part of the dual title is deserved.

We have waited, not too patiently, perhaps, for Overman (a son of Elmo) to verify the predictions we so confidently published from the time he was first broken. The belief was never shaken, however, and from the time he trotted his first race until the present day, the favorable impression never grew faint. Elmo was already notable, and his capacity, breeding and form were sufficient to award him a place in our gallery. But from the time the entries in the Grand Circuit were announced, we felt positively certain that before the end came he would "show a trotter" of his get which would entitle him to a more prominent place. Overman is in reality the only colt which had any chance granted him to make a trotter, and he has been unfortunate ever since. He was a three-year-old. Mr. Seale has bred many which gave just as good promise as Overman did at the same age, but owing to other pressing business and the difficulty of obtaining men whom he could entrust with the entire management, the education was neglected. Again, when a colt showed speed it would be sold for road uses, and thus Overman is the only Elmo colt that we know of being worked on a track, excepting one or two youngsters at Mr. Seale's place. The size, style and fine appearance, which is nearly a universal characteristic of the stock, give a value for the road and carriage which ensures a ready sale. This, manifestly, interferes with the proper development of track speed; and then Mr. Seale holds that road horses should not be subjected to track usages when their destiny is so different. There is a great deal of sound logic in the arguments he advances to support this view of the question. There is the danger of causing them to "pull," and other bad habits arising from the main desire of the trainer being to increase the speed irrespective of consequences. The curves of the track necessitate boots; their heads at times are thrown into an unnatural position, and the smooth surface tends to careless habits which are found inimical. His plan is to take the colts on the road, and in lieu of every effort to increase the speed, let the teachings be to make them pleasant drivers, square-gaited, of proper style, and above all, of good behavior. As has been previously stated, the Elmos are natural roadsters. The gait is a pure, square trot, generally long striders, and moving with little "friction." Elmo himself was nearly perfect in his action, and at one time so fast that a former owner, Mr. Van Giesen, informed us that he had timed him quarters in thirty seconds. He belongs to a trotting family. His sire, Mohawk, was by Long Island Black Hawk, one of the famous old-timer trotters, and he was by Andrew Jackson, the founder of the great tribe of the Clays. Andrew Jackson was by Young Bashaw, a son of the imported Barb Grand Bashaw, and the dam of Young Bashaw was a very highly bred mare, Pearl, by First Consul (Bond's), grandam Fancy, by imported Messenger, and his third dam by imported Rockingham. From this horse came the Bashaws, so that two of the prominent trotting families spring from the union of Barb and thoroughbred. The dam of Elmo was by Sir Richard, a son of the thoroughbred of that name. The sire of Elmo has proved his capacity as the progenitor of trotters, as Clark's Mohawk Jr. had a record of 2:25, made in Cleveland, Ohio, ten years ago; Hall's Mohawk Jr., record of 2:25, and Elmo, 2:27. Fast trotting was not the only valuable characteristic, as both of the Mohawk Jr.'s were large, fine looking horses, of about the same size as Elmo, and with the same kind of action. Clark's Mohawk was thought to be the most promising stallion of the day. He was only six years old when he trotted in 2:25, and died when ten years old. The Mohawks—as is shown by the duplication of names—are very popular in Ohio, their size and symmetry giving them value outside of the possession of trotting speed. Elmo's trotting in California was limited to three matches—one against Ajax for $5,000; one against Jerome for $2,000, and one with May Howard for $2,000. All of these he won with the greatest ease, as he never lost a heat in the series. That with Ajax was heats of a mile, best 3 in 5, and he won in 2:30½, 2:31½, 2:31½. With Jerome the distance was heats of two miles, the time 4:58¼, 4:59, and the match against May Howard was won in 2:27, 2:27, 2:29. In the race with Jerome he showed his old-time flight of speed, making a half-mile in one of the heats in 1:08. Elmo is one of the most commanding horses in appearance which we ever saw. The engraving gives a capital idea of his form, and the likeness is as nearly perfect as can be conceived. It is not only a faithful transcript of his configuration, but the artist has caught the spirit of the scene and transferred the horse exactly as he stood on the bright morning we accompanied Mr. Wytenbach to the Rancho San Francisquito. The color cannot be represented in an engraving, and the size requires words to express, but in every other respect the picture is a model of the horse. Elmo is sixteen and a quarter hands in height, and is a "long horse" as well as a high one. He is as sound as it is possible for a horse to be, not a swelling on any joint, not a tendon puffed or a blemish as large as a pea on any part. His color is a deep chestnut, nearly the shade that bronze assumes when long exposed to the atmosphere. It is one of the very handsomest shades of chestnut, and the light mane and tail, the white strip in the face, the white markings on the near legs, and the brilliant light hazel eyes, are in fine contrast to the darker hue. The coat is as smooth and glossy as that of a thoroughbred, and the hairs in the mane and tail are soft and fine. Altogether he is a horse which will attract attention in any circumstance. A pair of the same appearance would command a large price for the carriage—a team of the same proportion bring the "top of the market" for general purposes. As a further proof of the high estimate we have always placed on Elmo the following account, written in March, 1877, is given:

A deep bronze chestnut, with silver mane and tail, and of such size and symmetry of proportion, that a person is forced to exclaim, "A grand horse, truly." His color is rare, and when relieved by the light-colored mane and tail has some in the extreme. He is remarkably well formed for so large a horse, and moves with the agility and sprightliness of an Arab. He was running in a loose box, of ample size, but in addition to this he had the freedom of a paddock adjoining, where he could inhale the perfume of the lilac, and hear the merry songs of the linnets and thrushes in the trees which shaded it. Although considerably over sixteen hands in height, there is nothing clumsy in his appearance, and he strikes out with a bold, free gait, although the limits of his paddock are somewhat circumscribed. Having a large share of the best blood, it would be singular if his looks did not comport with his pedigree. The change we noted since we first saw him was in the increased size of his body, being very much deeper through the chest, and longer from the point of the hip to the quarters.

He was only a colt when brought from Ohio to Chicago, and was somewhat leggy and light in the carcass then. A very handsome, striking looking colt withal, but as his owner did not claim much speed for him, he failed to find a purchaser in the "city on the lake," and took him to Wisconsin. He was owned there by a gentleman, Mr. Van Giesen, who still tells marvelous stories of the great speed he displayed in his exercise, and the writer has at several times awakened his ire by looking incredulous when he told of his beating a fair race mare through the stretch, she running and he trotting. That he exhibited wonderful speed is beyond question, and Messrs. Bently, Taylor and Hickok purchased him and "carried" him East. His overgrown, and at the same time rather large, frame was inimical to his showing his full capacity in races. Yet his performances were very creditable; we saw him in a race at Buffalo shut up a wonderful gap, contesting with very fast horses, and had the stretch been a little longer he would have won. He was brought to California with Goldsmith Maid and Lucy, and his races here with Ajax and Jerome stamped him as an animal of great merit. He belongs to a family which is greatly distinguished in equine history, on the sire's side tracing his genealogy to the imported Barb, from which has descended the family of Clays, the Long Island Black Hawks, the Jacksons, etc.

In adding the word "coacher," those who recall Elmo as he was, will cheerfully admit that he was fully entitled to the name. Now that coach and carriage horses are commanding so much attention, the study of the picture of Elmo and his blood lines will not be time thrown away. The Trotting Register gives the dams of Mohawk and Elmo as untraced. "Mohawk, by Long Island Black, dam a superior road mare, owned and driven by James Alley, Westchester, N. Y.," and "Elmo, by Mohawk, dam not traced," are the entries.

Mr. Henry W. Seale had papers which seemed to establish that the dam of Elmo was as given above, but leaving that out of the consideration, being one of the Clay family brings in the most essential qualities of coachers, size and style. Big horses the rule, Geo. M. Patchen, his son, California Patchen, Long Island Blackhawk, both of the Mohawks, big fellows, rare indeed, when a member of the clan was deficient in size. Two of the pictures presented before, Admirable and Phaeton, are very much of the stamp of Elmo. Neither of them quite so rangy, not so high on the leg. Were the conventional coacher tail put in the picture no one would question his right to be represented as one of the family.

Quite a number of the get of Elmo were of his peculiar color, and while some people fancy the combination of dark chestnut and silver manes and tail, and would be willing to pay a higher price for horses of that striking kind of coloring than those of solid colors, the safer plan will be to adhere to the sort that finds the most admirers. As stated before a majority of the stallions of Clay blood were large horses, and in the endeavor to breed carriage and coach horses size must never be lost sight of. Plenty of the blood in California and that derived from good specimens of the race. A much argued question whether the French coacher can be coupled with the American families of trotting-bred horses to advantage. The cross has certainly proved to be a good one in many instances, and though horses of purely trotting breeding have been so successful in the show rings it will be good policy to take into consideration horses of the desired type and if a French stallion is the best adapted for the form of the mares, by all means use him.

One thing is certain that when California breeders pay attention to producing coach and carriage horses, studying the various types, giving intelligent consideration to requirements, this country will stand very high as the producer of this rare type—at the present day—of that class of horses.

Many years ago a dealer in Chicago was engaged in furnishing horses for the Cuban market. His aim was to furnish saddle horses, and those of the color of Elmo were greatly admired in Havana. Not the least doubt that if a pair of coach horses were offered that looked like the frontispiece there would be buyers, at big prices, but that a majority of purchasers will prefer less striking colors is reasonably assured.

Another thing in breeding coach and carriage horses here must be duly considered, viz. That only the very best will pay. Idle to contend that only the best will be the outcome of efforts in that line, but it is a reasonable anticipation that size will have value, and when breeders make ponderosity, or better yet height, length and weight, the main point, those which will no rank in the top division will pay a good return on the investment.

CATTLE.

Cattle Breeding in California.

FIFTH PAPER.

It may seem, outside of all human possibilities to predict that in time cattle will do all of the slow work of the farm. And yet it must necessarily come. The cheapest labor will be sought, and economical conditions have more weight than any others.

Horses at the present time are produced far above the demand, and in this State, at least, sellers are so far in excess of purchasers, that one of the former class who sells a horse may be deemed fortunate.

In relative to the articles which have appeared in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, especially those which have called attention to the working capacity, have awakened a good deal of discussion. Altogether too slow is the verdict of a majority of critics, but when the work allotted them does not require speed that should not have much weight in the controversy. If cattle can be made more profitable by doing the biggest share of the work on the farm then cattle will surely take the place of horses in that department. This will necessitate curtailing the breeding of horses, and thus make a greater demand for the diminished number—a boon to the breeders of horses. If ten are bred and reared, and only a demand for five of the crop all are reduced in value. When four are bred, and there is a demand for five, then top-prices will prevail.

The breed of cattle best adapted for the slow work of the farm has not yet been determined. No one looks outside of the established breeds, and yet it may be that importations of cattle, hitherto unknown in the United States, may add to the working capacity of those already here.

It may be that a mixture of the blood of the cattle of East Indies might improve the working capacity. Probably of the smaller breeds the Singhalese is the best adapted for work. The largest rarely exceed four feet in height, and their weight under 400 pounds, and yet a pair of these dwarfs will haul 3,300 pounds, and hitched to a lighter vehicle, "the bandy," single, the sturdy little bull will make six or seven miles an hour. Large cattle, too, among the breeds of the Orient, and it may be when working cattle are in demand there will be importations from the country where so much of the labor has been done for thousands of years with cattle.

Premature, beyond any question, to claim that a large proportion of farm work will be done by oxen, though that era is nearly certain to come, as the necessities of obtaining cheaper power is made manifest.

A pair of horses, or more, to do the rapid work, as it may be termed, and the rest of it either by engines or cattle.

When large farms can use traction engines to plow and harvest the crop more cheaply than that can be done with the labor of animals, that will be employed, but the trend of the times is to cut up the big places and, the ultimate result, division of land into moderate or small-sized farms. Increase of population will compel division, and on this coast the time is not far off when the big ranches will be replaced by small establishments, hundreds of residents where now are scores. Grain growing cannot be abandoned, though in place of square leagues in control of one person, smaller fields and a different system of cultivation. Even when the change comes horses will do the greater portion of the labor until it is demonstrated that cattle will do it cheaper, do away with the greater part of the risks of breeding.

With the present breeds of cattle in California working-oxen can easily be obtained. Devons have characteristic which fit them peculiarly for the yoke, and yet a combination of Devons and the heavier breeds is likely to result in better.

The nondescript cattle of the east converted a land, covered with forests, into homes, and it is more than safe to say that had not the labor of cattle been available a much longer time would have been required to make the change. Anyone who has witnessed the conversion of these "big woods" into farms will not dispute the statement that horses could not have done the part of the work that oxen performed, and now where land has been "cleared," or in countries where trees did not encumber the land—prairie countries—their labor is not so imperative, the question of relative cost is highly important.

In previous articles the advantage of having a power which could be utilized in another direction, has been touched upon, and it is scarcely necessary to repeat that there are great benefits attending when muscular force can be turned into something which is always marketable.

Working capacity the horse has: work and food for people combined in the ox.

Hornless Cattle—Simple Method of Dehorning.

During recent years the practice of dehorning cattle has gained in favor among farmers and cattle raisers throughout the country and some attention will be given from time to time in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN treating upon this subject. An authority writes: "Many of the disagreeable features of dehorning may be avoided by preventing the horns of calves from developing."

The horns of cattle consist of two parts of different origin, the outer horny shell is a growth derived from the skin; the inner part or pith consists of bone and is an outgrowth of the skull. At the birth of the calf each one of these parts is undeveloped and only exists as a possibility, but they at once begin to grow, and in a short time the young horn can be felt as a slight elevation or button.

The horn tissue develops from the skin, just as do hoofs, claws in the lower animals and nails in the human beings. There is a zone in the skin about the base of the horn known as the matrix, from which new horn cells are constantly formed, the older parts being pushed on. If we destroy the (periosteum), from which the bony part of the horn is formed, we prevent the further development of the horn. In removing horns, which are all more or less developed, as in dehorning mature animals, the cut must be made deep enough to include the matrix or the stump of the horn will continue to grow. It may not be out of place here to remark that there is no danger of cutting into the brain cavity, as at this point it lies very deep.

The holes frequently seen, on removing the horns, are only empty spaces with which the frontal bone is honey-combed. In calves the growing points of the horns are small in extent and can be destroyed with but little trouble. With experiments which have resulted highly satisfactory caustic potash has been used. Caustic potash, so called, is a pure form of the same substance which constitutes the potash sold in cans for soap making and cleansing purposes. It comes in the form of white sticks, in diameter about the size of an ordinary lead pencil. As its name indicates, it is a powerful caustic, rapidly destroying the skin and other tissues if kept in contact with them. In this property lies its value as a preventive of the growth of horns.

When properly applied it destroys the matrix, or growing point of the horny tissue, and the underlying periosteum from which the bony pith forms. In applying the potash care should be observed in cutting away the hair from the young horn, in order that the potash may come in immediate contact with the parts to be treated. The oily secretions should be removed from the parts to be touched with the potash, by wiping carefully with a rag or sponge moistened with soap suds or water containing a little ammonia; parts not to be touched should not be moistened. The stick of potash should be rolled up in paper so as to leave only one end exposed. The exposed end is dipped in water to moisten it, and then rubbed well in on the bottom or embryo horn until the skin begins to start, care being taken that the whole of the button and the border of the matrix is included in the treatment. In young calves a few days old, a surface of half an inch or a little more in diameter will cover these parts. Caustic potash or caustic soda, which answers as well, can be obtained at almost any drug store. When not in use it should be kept in a closely-stoppered vial, one with a rubber stopper preferred, or it will quickly liquify. After the calf is two or three days old, the sooner the potash is applied the better and quicker the results. There is positively nothing objectionable in the method of dehorning. The animal is exposed to no suffering; it is simple, effective, and if properly followed no bad results can or will ensue.

Shortage in Range Cattle.

Conditions are generally favorable to a full maintenance of the present level of prices for beef cattle. Indeed the shortage in the supply in some parts of the West is such that it does not appear unreasonable to anticipate a further hardening.

The vast range country of the trans-Missouri evidently has a much smaller number of cattle than ranchmen and stockgrowers would like, judging from the testimony of our correspondents. On the other hand, enormous numbers of Western steers have been in the feed lots for several months and are now coming forward at a moderate pace.

To determine fully the situation, we have just completed an investigation throughout the Western States which make a specialty of growing cattle on the ranges, and our returns fully verify all earlier reports of a general shortage compared with last year. This fact is common to almost every State and Territory west and southwest of the Missouri, the southwestern part of the State, while cattle are unequally distributed in New Mexico, and there is a general indication of shortage in Texas. The Dakotas, Nebraska and parts of Kansas evidently have a full quota of cattle on the range and in feed lots, many of these brought in from territory west and southwest.

Compared with the early months of '97, the cost of range cattle is very much higher. Ranchmen on the Pacific Coast, early paid an advance of $5 to $10 per head for two-year-olds and long yearlings, and this is also generally true of Arizona and Nevada. The advance in Montana, Idaho and Wyoming is 20 to 50 per cent. compared with 12 months ago or more. The two States first named depend largely upon home increase for stock, while Wyoming gets a great many cattle from other sections. Cattle in New Mexico and Texas are 10 to 30 per cent. higher than a year earlier, while the general advance in the Missouri valley is pronounced, ranchmen and farmers having in many instances brought in stockers from Iowa, Missouri and various centers of accumulation.

From no part of the country comes news of really serious condition of the ranges unless parts of Central and Southern California be excepted. The winter was very free from terrible storms and extended low temperatures which often prevail, and cattle and sheep have generally come into the spring in good shape. Considering the vast area of our range country, it is not strange that sections here and there have not been exempt from unfavorable weather conditions, but as a whole April finds range cattle, excepting California, in good shape. Some complaints have been received from Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Texas, but an early spring with a fair amount of rainfall have done much to revive grass. Range sheep have everywhere cost stockmasters more than last year.

Transferring Cattle and Sheep to the Low Lands

Our Stockton correspondent under date May 4th, says the big cattlemen of the San Joaquin valley are transferring their cattle to the lowlands along the rivers as fast as they can as all feed has been used up. Miller & Lux, the cattle kings, have shipped about 150 carloads thus far. They are bringing in from twenty-five to forty carloads a day from about Willow, Gilroy and other points along the Southern Pacific line, while the valley road is handling all of the stock along its line.

Twenty-five carloads of cattle and twenty-two cars of sheep were landed on the water front yesterday from F. Zeba's ranch and driven to the foot hills back of Milton. Thirty-six cars of sheep came in last evening from Kernell, the most distant point at which the Valley road accepts freight. They will be sent to Cache Slough by barges today.

The cattle owners say they will have no difficulty in securing all the feed they will need through the summer by moving their stock to various points on the river. While there is considerable cost in shipping stock to pasture the advance in the price of beef will make up for the additional expenses of fattening the stock.

Notes.

A train of thirty cars, loaded with cattle, was shipped north from Guadalupe, Cal., on the 30th ult. More than twenty train loads of cattle have been shipped from that point during the past month.

Mike Hartery, of Tulare Lake, Oregon, has purchased 500 head of cattle in Southern California, and will take them to Jacksonville at once. Drouth has made them comparatively cheap.

The Bieber, Cal., Gazette says: We are informed that Stiles, of Susanville, offered Andy Gregg $20 per head for his cattle, everything from one year old up.

The East Oregon Observer says: Mr. N. C. Thompson, a Chicago cattle dealer who has been in Oregon and Washington gathering cattle since last November, has succeeded in purchasing 6,000 head, the most of which were bought in Oregon at the following points: Baker City, 500; Ontario, 2,500; Oakland, 500; Eugene, 500; Salem, 500; La Grande, 500. The prices paid were $18 for yearlings, $25 for two-year-olds, and three-year-olds as high as $30. Mr. Thompson is now in the Willamette valley.

J. C. Mitchell, of Guyelle, Ore., has taken 100 head of Reames & Martin's two and three-year-old cattle, paying for them 7½ cents net.

SWINE.

Feeding Milk to Pigs.

Pig rearing is so natural an adjunct to the dairy, that the latter can be made much more profitable when the former is associated with it. The degree of profit, however, will be in a great measure dependent on the way milk is fed. When this is properly done both skim and buttermilk can be turned to excellent account.

SKIM MILK.

It should always be borne in mind that when skim milk is being fed, a larger proportion of carbonaceous foods will be in order than if milk was not fed, as the latter is one of the most nitrogenous food factors that can be used. The faithful recognition and practice of all these inter-dependent relations in the selection and use of foods will soon place the man who gives attention to them on a high vantage ground over he who does not.

Skim milk should be fed fresh and sweet as far as possible. In fact, it is indispensable that it be fed to young pigs in this condition, and it should be fed to them, if possible, as warm as the milk of the dam—that is to say, as warm as 80 to 90 degrees. After they have reached the age of two or three months it is not so important and more especially in the summer season. In feeding skim milk to young pigs after they are weaned, care should be taken not to overfeed with milk, and it may be added that care should be taken at all times not to feed relatively too much milk. From the weaning period onward not more than two-thirds of the feed should be milk. It may not be easy to feed milk in a sweet condition when it is obtained from factories in hot weather. If the proportion of milk fed however at this time is small relatively compared with the other food, no serious derangement in digestion may follow, or if the pig be fairly well advanced in growth—the danger will be still less; but if milk is fed in very large quantities under the conditions named, then the gain from feeding will be much narrowed.

BUTTERMILK.

Buttermilk should not be fed in large quantities to a sow that is nursing her young. It may so affect her milk, by causing it to curdle prematurely in the stomachs of the young pigs, as to cause the death of the latter. If fed at all the quantity should not exceed 40 pounds to a barrel of swill. If the buttermilk has been obtained from a creamery and has become highly acid before it can be fed, it would be better not to feed it at all. Evil results will follow from feeding buttermilk in excess, even though it should be no more acid than when first obtained from the churn. It will produce diarrhoea often in a violent form and the reaction which follows is likely to produce constipation often in a very aggravated form. When such a condition prevails in a herd, there will probably be more or less of mortality and with those who survive impaired digestion is almost sure to follow. If the pigs are running on green grass the derangement in digestion will be still further aggravated. It is then likely to produce violent vomiting. If the tongue of the pig thus affected were to be examined, it would be found pale in color and flabby in condition—thus evidencing the violence of the derangement of the whole system.

Care should be exercised when feeding buttermilk in any form, to exclude from it the water used in washing the butter after salt has been added, as such water contains too large a proportion of salt.

VALUE OF MILK DEPENDS UPON METHODS OF FEEDING.

It is then apparent that the value of skim milk and buttermilk as food for swine, is almost entirely dependent on the way in which they are fed. Either may be used so as to produce a handsome profit, or they may be so fed so as to result in serious loss. When therefore the feeder is reckoning as to the price which he can afford to pay for these food adjuncts from the factory, he should calculate to a nicety the opportunities which he has for feeding the milk in suitable combinations and also in quantities which are not likely to prove excessive.

MILK MAKES GOOD PORK.

Nothing yet has been said about the excellence of pork made by feeding a skim milk diet during the growing period. It is a fact however that in no other way can pork be produced so well flavored and containing so large a proportion of lean—as by making skim milk a main factor of the diet up to the fattening period, after which it would not be so profitable relatively, to continue to feed it. Denmark gets the highest price for her pork in the British market, and the farmers of Denmark are almost exclusively engaged in dairying. The farmer who feeds milk freely to pigs will have a grand quality of pork.

Notes.

Fish-fed pork is the latest. Cheap horses are becoming scarce, so the profitable hog-raisers along the coast will feed fish as a substitute. Why not clams? One could turn his swine upon the beach and truthfully say "Root, hog, or die."—Santa Maria Graphic.

A hog house 15 by 38 feet for a boar, four sows and their offspring may be arranged as follows: The house must be adjacent to lots on either side so as to give the animals exercise and sunshine. It should be floored with hard wood and must be kept clean. Provide plenty of bedding. The passageway between the pen for the pigs and those for the older animals is two feet wide. The house should be high enough to furnish room above the hogs for storing corn and other grain feeds. This can be spouted down into the passageway convenient for feeding.

The Jacksonville, Ore., Democrat says. A large number of hogs are being shipped out of the valley. Taylor Payne and J. W. Wiley each sent a double-deck car-load to Portland last week. Three and a half cents a pound is being paid for good pork.

As in the case of a new milch cow, the mother sow should be fed sparingly of grain at first, especially corn meal. Bran is much safer food for the first week. As for the young pigs the main essentials are cleanliness and exercise. They ought not to sleep in dust nor in a moist place. If shut up so close that they get no exercise they become over-fat and die. At four weeks of age the pigs can be taught to eat and by six to eight weeks old they can be weaned altogether. If some of the pigs are runts they can be allowed to run with the sow a little longer. After weaning feed liberally with bran, clover and other bone and muscle-making foods, feeding more and more corn as fattening time approaches.

POULTRY.

How Eggs May be Preserved.

A subscriber writes us his experience in preserving eggs by a process that has proved altogether successful. He says: Last summer I preserved ten whiskey barrels full of eggs and they held $1,200 dozen, and cost 6½ cents a dozen, or $67.50 for the lot. The preservatives cost $13.50; total $111. I sold them in December at our home stores for 18 cents a dozen; total $270—made with the $4 I started with in 1894. This is my receipt:

Take 36 gallons of water, add 6 pounds of salt, 4 ounces per-algretta; dissolve the per-algretta in 2 gallons of boiling water, and pour into the cold water, making 38 gallons in all. This will preserve two barrels (300 dozen) eggs. Put 19 gallons in each barrel, and add the eggs as you get them in, and let them stay covered with the solution till you are ready to sell them. Tell your druggist you want powdered per-algretta, it dissolves best.

Notes.

Never feed a hen that is not anxious to scratch and work. This is a safe rule to follow. If food is thrown to them and they pick it up and then do not scratch or search for more let them have no other food until they begin to work.

Those who are making a living out of fowls almost always combine eggs and poultry. It is generally agreed that eggs pay the best of the two branches. But to raise some poultry also evens up the work and the income in a more satisfactory manner.

No one can distinguish a fertile from an infertile egg until the eggs have been incubated for a few days. They cannot be detected by holding the eggs to the light if they are strictly fresh. If a lot of eggs show a dark spot before placing them under a hen or in an incubator we would reject them. All eggs are perfectly clear at first.

If the hens have range and are not allowed anything except that which they pick up, they suffer but little from bowel disease; but when fed so as to become somewhat fat they are subject to bowel disorders. The best remedies are plenty of sharp grit and to keep a lump of lime in the drinking water, with a box of charcoal where they can at all times have access to it.

This is an appropriate time for feeding meat to laying hens, as the hens will lay in summer when they will lay at no other time. They cannot always secure a full supply of insect food at this time of year and nothing will stimulate them to renewed effort sooner than a mess of lean meat three times a week. The increased number of eggs will more than pay for the meat.

Where a number of fowls have been running together and it is desired to separate them so as to have each breed away from the others, in order to save eggs from them for hatching, it is well to separate them a month before using the eggs for incubation. We have known eggs to hatch pure-bred chicks when separation occurred only a week before beginning to save the eggs, but we believe the safer plan is to allow a month to intervene.

To keep hawks from catching the chicks it is well to have them kept close about the buildings when young. If the hen has her liberty she will often lead them far afield. Make a coop with slatted run, with a board cover for the top of the slatted part. In sunny weather it can be used as shade for the chicks or placed on top of the slats to shelter both hen and chicks from the heat. It is also kept on top of the slats during rainy weather, giving the chicks a chance to scratch in the soil and yet keep dry. The top of the slatted portion slopes a little so as to shed water. Put the slats far enough apart so the chicks can go freely in and out, as crowding through narrow spaces often results in deformity.

Guinea hens are looked upon by many as being as good as a watch dog. If they are taught to roost in the henery they will give the loudest alarms as soon as an enemy approaches. Dogs, coyotes and human beings alike attract their attention and they keep up their shrill cries until the enemy has left the place. Some poultrymen try to keep a few guineas simply for the purpose of giving the alarm when chicken thieves come around. The hens always hide their nests and often in very obscure places, but if they are watched closely in the breeding season their location is easily ascertained. They invariably make a shrill noise when they come off the nest which always betrays them to those who are on the watch. All the hens on the place may lay in the same nest, and it is not uncommon to find dozens of eggs in one place.

We have been asked if hens in the yard with others of a different breed will produce chicks of the same breed as the hens that laid the eggs. This depends on the male. If a flock of Leghorns with a Leghorn male at the head is yarded with Light Brahmas the chicks from the Leghorn hens will be pure Leghorns, while those from eggs laid from the Brahma hens will be a cross of Leghorn and Brahma. The presence of the Brahma hens will in no manner affect the purity of the chicks from eggs produced by the Leghorn hens. This is a very simple matter to discuss apparently, yet a number have written us asking for information in regard to it.

The time to train turkeys is when they are young. If the wings of the adult turkeys are cut they will not fly over a ten-foot fence. They can easily be made to thrive in a large lot. It is an excellent plan to feed them three times a day, at one place, so as to have them expect the meals and come up for the food, but the morning and noon meals should consist of only about a gill of wheat. At night give a full meal, one night wheat and the next night chopped meat. Where there are many trees they cannot easily be induced to go under shelter, but if the young turkeys are taught to come in at night and not be allowed with those that roost outside they will always prefer the coop, but this necessitates the removal of the old ones after the young turkeys are three months old.

SHEEP.

The Handling of Sheep.

Successful sheep farming depends in the main, on close and careful attention to three essential points, viz: Breeding, feeding and the handling, or general management of the flock aside either from breeding or feeding. A farmer may be a good breeder as well as a good feeder, but yet fall short of success for want of good management. By management is meant, the selection of the flock to start with, the culling out of inferior and unprofitable individuals, dividing for wintering, marketing the wool, mutton, etc.—these are requirements essential to success.

THE SELECTION OF BREED.

Nearness to market, number to be kept in one flock, and skill of the shepherd must be taken into consideration in guiding one in determining which of the breeds will be selected. There are three lines of sheep farming.

First—Where wool is the main object and mutton the secondary consideration.

Second—When mutton is the first consideration and wool secondary.

Third—Where early lambs are the desired crop and wool and the mature mutton sheep second.

Wool production can be carried on with the least expense for buildings and attendance, while in addition the product being of easier transportation, it can be run with profit far from a central market. Again large flocks of this type of sheep can be kept in one flock and they will thrive on poorer pasture. The farmer can select no breed that excels the American Merino for this purpose. They are hardy, long-lived and no breed has ever equalled them in per cent. of wool to carcass.

FOR MUTTON PRODUCTION.

Nearness to railroad transportation is essential, for a fat sheep is a poor traveller and where they are to be driven far, the loss of flesh and exhaustion in individuals might consume all profit. There are two classes of sheep husbandry, namely the long wools (Cotswolds and Leicestershire), and the short wools, or Downs breeds. The first named attain the higher weights perhaps, but require abundant pasture and small flocks. The Downs breeds while not attaining as great weights, mature earlier and will stand crowding better. If mutton, in the shape of lambs is to be sold, early maturity is the prime consideration and perhaps for this need alone, no breed excels the Southdowns; others may be equally good, but none are better.

SLOWNESS OF MATURITY.

In a wool breed, slowness of maturity (which always goes with long life) is desirable, so that one and the same animal may furnish a large number of shearings. On the other hand early maturity is sought for in a mutton sheep, as such flocks are quickly disposed of by sale and replaced with other immature stock, to in turn be made ready for market as quickly as possible. There is really, therefore, no war of the breeds, for each has its merits and demerits, and adaptability to special purpose. In making a selection, he will be most successful, who first determines which branch of the business he will engage in and then, selects that breed which is best adapted to his particular need, rather than to attempt to combine all the good points of each branch in one animal. To be continually changing breeds is not profitable. Choose the breed best adapted to your purpose and then stick to it. In order to better understand the position of each breed let us make out a sort of debit and credit account as it were, of the advantages and disadvantages.

THE MUTTON BREEDS.

First, they are more prolific, twin lambs being the rule rather than the exception.

Second, early maturity, which gives opportunity of making the greatest possible growth of carcass in the least possible time.

Third, they are good milkers and attentive mothers, which gives the lambs the best possible chance.

Fourth, their size gives them advantage over the small breeds, as the loss in waste when converting from live to dressed meat, is small comparatively, between the two.

Fifth, the quality of their flesh is best.

Against these advantages, we have the disadvantages of thin fleeces, making them poor shearers and less able to resist cold, than the thick close wool of the Merinos. Again from the very fact of their early maturing qualities, they require better pasture and better feed per given number, for nature in all her prodigality ever refuses to make something out of nothing, and good fast growth of necessity, means good feed and plenty of it.

THE WOOL BREEDS.

First, are hardy and can stand inclement weather better on account of the fleece being close and compact, which fact also makes them heavier shearers as compared with their live weight.

Second, they can be kept in large flocks with little or no inconvenience.

Third, they can live and thrive on poorer pasture, being more inclined to travel over a wide range than the larger breeds.

Fourth, they are longer lived, their life of usefulness frequently extending over a period of eight or nine years.

On the other side, or debit column, we have lack of size, unprofitableness and slowness of growth, the ewes, as a rule, not being as good milkers as those of the mutton breeds.

After having settled upon which line of sheep farming you will adopt, the next consideration is selection.

SELECTION OF THE FLOCK.

There are certain characteristics and peculiarities which belong to each breed of sheep and which will be well to bear in mind; as, for instance, the mutton breeds require that the hams should be large and heavy, and the general shape of the body be blocky and square built, with a clean neck and jaw, that is, free from any looseness of skin or dewlap. On the other hand, a merino must have a certain looseness of skin (not necessarily wrinkles) and a dewlap that extends almost to the point of the chin. While a broad ham and low flank is desirable with them, a thick ham is not really so. Vigor and strength of vitality are of prime importance in any breed; they give power to transmit qualities to offspring, overcome disease, exposure and the many hardships which all flocks are more or less exposed to. This is indicated by strong, deep shoulders, short, thick neck and a general roundness of the whole body. The neck of the ram should be straight from head to joint of shoulder, or slightly arched; that of the ewe should have a straight or a slight downward curve. Back should be straight, neither arched or sagged, tail high set, ham straight or rounded, and broad with no flank, underline of body straight or slightly curved downward, but never a pinched or greyhound look; legs short, broad and large jointed.

THE FLEECE.

Should be as uniform as possible, free from coarse hairs on flank and neck and covering the body well, especially on the belly, no short stiff hairs and as free from yolk or gum as is consistent with elasticity, strength and lustre. The Merino should have wool nearly covering the face, and the legs entirely, while the mutton breeds, on the other hand, should have a clean jaw and clean legs from the knee down. Uniformity of flock is desirable, so as to get uniform product, either of wool or mutton, for a wide range of quality in either will not command the highest price in market. Other things being equal, the length of wool should be looked to. Length gives value, but always remember that thickness gives weight rather than length of staple.

CULLING

Should be frequently and continuously done in order to keep up a good and profitable flock. If a flock be ever so carefully bred and handled, inferior animals will occasionally be found amongst them, and these must be promptly weeded out, in order to keep up the standard of the whole. The best time to cull is at shearing time, then deficiency of carcass, form, or fleece are most apparent, and individuals wanting in these points should be marked for the butcher and sent to market whenever the condition of the flock or price will warrant.

MARKETING

As a rule the best time to sell wool is as soon as it is ready for market, and buyers are in the field competing for it. Competition is sharper than at any future time, and the farmer stands a better chance to advantageously sell a small lot at such time than await higher prices out of season. Fleeces should be put up in good marketable shape, nicely tied and showing the bright side—that is the side that came off next the sheep. Reject all tags, dirt or anything that tends to load the fleece.

Notes.

It is now said by the Eastern houses that the wool buyers have been called in from the Western States. The market has been in an unsettled condition for a long time and the war scare has caused further disturbance, the result being that there is no demand for the staple.

Flockmasters must give more thought and expend more money to provide winter sustenance for their sheep. It does not require a great acreage of alfalfa to provide a supply of hay sufficient to carry an ordinary band through the average California winter. The time is fast approaching when many of the heavy sheep ranchers far out in the arid region will build storm dams at convenient places on their ranges to conserve the rains and irrigate small tracks of alfalfa land. The three cuttings a season will furnish a very satisfactory lot of prime hay, which may be fed out in severe winter weather as the emergency of the flock may demand. Other ranchmen who make a specialty of mutton will utilize great quantities of alfalfa in preparing lambs for the winter and spring markets.

It has been demonstrated that sheep can pasture on alfalfa without danger from bloating if a little care is taken when they are first turned on the meadow. In the early spring when it is desired to turn the sheep on green alfalfa if they are first fed with hay they will not eat enough to hurt themselves and after two or three days of this way of feeding the sheep may be turned at liberty in the field. They will eat from one side of a field altogether and greatly prefer feeding on the tender shoots. If water and shade are convenient they will graze but a few moments at a time and will go no further into the alfalfa than is necessary to get what they want to eat.

Any new invention has to fight its way through a strong barricade of public prejudice and it is so with the shearing machines. As yet machine shearing is a new thing and like most new inventions, has not met with popular favor. It is generally conceded, though, that the objections are more on account of the inexperienced workmen than the fault of the machines. It is claimed by some that the shearing is too close and leaves the sheep in poor condition to be turned out on the ranges. Their hides left unprotected against the sun and the result is that the sheep have become blistered, to the damage of the next season's clip. It is furthermore claimed that the cost of installing a plant is too great to make the introduction of machines profitable and yet notwithstanding all this we believe that these objections will be overcome in time and that machine shearing is bound to intervene.

A. Dent, the Drews valley Oregon wool grower, has sold his band of 1,100 sheep to Tom Sherlock. The price paid was $3.75 per head, bunched. Immense sales of yearling sheep have taken place in Crook county, Ore., during the last week or ten days. As many as 25,000 head are said to have changed hands. The purchaser was J. W. Blake, representing Dr. Wilson, of Wyoming. The prices have not been given out, but the Prineville Journal is assured that they were in the neighborhood of $2.50 a head, after shearing. Of the gross number sold, R. E. Fortner sold 7,000; Williamson & Sichel, 6,500; Meyer & Brown, 2,500; William Brown, 2,000; Joe Myer, 500 and C. Cyne 500. Two years ago the highest price paid for such sheep after shearing was $1.15, and very few brought that price.

DAIRYING.

Churning.

Cream is composed of butter and fat, disseminated through freshly drawn milk in minute globules, each of which is inclosed in a thin, membranous sac or bag, and specifically being lighter, gradually rises to the surface or is forced by centrifugal action. Churning is the violent agitation of cream until it is converted into the commodity known as butter.

In preparing the cream for the churn, there is some difference of opinion among butter-makers, but all agree that a certain stage of acidity must be had before the best results can be obtained. This acidity may be secured either by temperature and age or by adding to the cream "a starter," especially adapted to the rapid development of the bacteria, necessary to produce the nutty flavor so sought after by lovers of good butter.

As to which is the best form of churn, there is also some difference of opinion, but like in many other dairy matters, is fast drawing to a focus; and the box or barrel shaped churn is almost universally conceded to be the ideal kind.

In churning the revolution and amount of cream in the churn, are matters not to be overlooked. A churn one-third or at least one-half filled with cream, should not at starting exceed twenty-eight to thirty-two revolutions per minute. The reasons for this are first,—that the violent agitation of cream, if the churn is rapidly revolved on starting, causes a two sudden breaking of the sacks containing the globule of butter fat; and there not being enough to "gather" as the butter maker expresses it—are lost in the butter milk. Secondly, if cream is a little too cold, it causes a foam which being somewhat of the nature of a spring cushion, prevents a certain number of globule sacks breaking at the proper time—and hence a loss. The revolutions of the churn therefore should be started at the speed indicated above and after a few minutes, they should be increased to from forty-eight to fifty revolutions per second, which will hasten the churning and do no injury. When what the butter-makers call "breaking" of the butter is seen or heard to have formed in small particles, then the speed should be lessened again to about the same as when starting and this continued on to the end.

In the matter of proper temperature, there is again contention among butter-makers. Many good butter-makers advocate a very low temperature, while others think a rather high temperature the proper thing. It seems to us useless to churn at a very low temperature and folly at a high temperature. Not only the surrounding atmospheric temperature, but the period of lactation, breed of cows from which the cream is obtained, the kinds of food on which they have fed, are all matters that should be considered in arriving at what would be a true churning temperature. If the churning temperature is very low, it may be necessary to pound it around for a half day or so and then have to warm it up before it can be brought together. The opposite will be the result if churned at a too high temperature, the butter being then oily and going to market with a greasy look, having neither grain or flavor. In addition to this, there will be too much loss of fat in the butter-milk. It is preferable, therefore, that churning should be done at as low a temperature as possible, provided the butter comes within a reasonable time—say 40 to 50 minutes.

The cream obtained from Jersey and Guernsey cows can be churned at a much lower temperature than that of any other breeds. If cream is obtained from cows of long lactation, a higher temperature should be adopted than with cream from cows that are fresh in milk, as the latter contains larger fat globules than the former. In the Southern States, where atmospheric temperature is much higher than in the northern, cream is churned at a temperature as high as 70 degrees and the butter obtained acquires a body and solidity equal to the best Northern, while in addition it will when made, stand a much higher temperature than the latter. The Southern dairymen attribute this to the cotton seed meal fed to their cows. The food of cows has some effect upon the churning qualities of cream, and this phase of the subject will be more fully disposed of in next week's issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

WHEN TO STOP THE CHURN.

Butter should be churned until it will drain well, and the grain is so large that no small particles will go out with the butter milk. After the butter milk is drawn off, there remains little to do but wash the butter. This should be done by letting water run on the butter, until there is about the same amount of water in the churn as there had been butter milk, then give the churn a few turns and let the water run off, sprinkle a little salt over the butter and again let on the water this time if it can be had, if would be well to let the water run over ice chopped fine and placed in a strainer, this of course cools the water and hardens the butter. Excepting in very hot weather this renders unnecessary a common custom of placing ice in the churn. As little water as possible should be used in washing butter, as too much of it hurts the flavor.

Yield of Different Breeds.

It may be interesting to know that in a recent experiment with various breeds of cows the largest yield was given in the second or third month after calving with a gradual but not uniform diminution thereafter. With the Ayrshires the highest yield was in the fourth month with the Guernseys in the seventh. In regard to the yield of fat in milk, most of the breeds gave the largest yield in the second and third months, with gradual diminution afterwards. In regard to the daily yield of butter, it was highest in the second month of lactation with the Ayrshires, Holsteins and Jerseys, after which there was a gradual diminution. The daily yield of the Devons increased during the first four months and then diminished. The butter yield of the Guernseys was uniformly the same during the first four months, and reached its highest in the fifth month of lactation and then remained about the same as during the first four months up to the tenth month of lactation. The general tendency noticed was toward an increase in both the temperature and the length of time required for churning as the period of lactation advanced.

A writer in the Practical Farmer gives the following remedy for caked bags: "I have tried many remedies for this complaint, all of which failed to give satisfaction until I got a liniment, of which the following is a recipe, and any person can make it: One ounce spirits turpentine, one teacup two-thirds full of cider vinegar, white of one egg. Put all into a bottle, shake thoroughly and it is fit for use. Always shake before using. I had a heifer with udder as hard as a stone. Three teaspoonful applied in three applications removed all the cake and inflammation, and I had no more trouble with it."

An old farmer said the other day that every cow should be fed and cared for according to what she earns. An old German who heard him said: "Vell, der cow she understand dot game yooost so vell as you. She gif yooost 'cordin' to what she git."

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climatic and crop conditions upto Tuesday last is based upon reports received from nine weather Bureau stations, fifty-two telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company, and many reports scattered throughout the State.

Shasta County.—Heavy north winds; very dry. Moving stock to mountain districts for feed.

Glenn County.—Favorable weather for growing grain. Begin haying latter part of week; prospects of hay enough for home consumption.

Butte County.—Olive trees nearly in bloom; will be heavy. Favorable for citrus trees. Feather river not rising from melting snow.

Yolo County.—Pears dropping; peaches being thinned. Despite the drouth fruit and trees making usual growth; prospects still favorable for fair crop.

Sacramento County.—Cool and showery. Barley on river lands will give good yield. Hop vines show want of moisture.

Solano County.—Cutting hay; very short crop. Cool south winds beneficial to grain. Except almonds and apricots, fruit looking well and growing nicely. First car load of cherries shipped on 26th, nine days earlier than last year; heavy crop expected.

El Dorado County.—All crops looking better.

San Joaquin County.—Light rain. Weather cool and favorable for grain.

Stanislaus County.—Dry and north winds. Crops inside canal limits look well.

Merced County.—North winds beginning of week. Some grain heading out and looks well. Prospect of harvesting some grain; farmers more hopeful.

Fresno County.—Hay coming on; alfalfa making a good crop; grain nearly a complete failure; vineyards looking well; irrigating ditches full. Trace of rain Saturday night.

Kings County.—Cool and cloudy. No grain. Prunes falling. Some pears promise well. Vineyards looking well.

Tulare County.—High southeasterly winds and sandstorms. Showers Saturday night. Ditches running full. Fair prospects for grapes.

Kern County.—Trace of rain Sunday; favorable weather for growing grain, nearly all of which will mature or at least make hay or feed; now cutting light crops of alfalfa. Crops of fruit will be light, except grapes.

Lake County.—Three degrees warmer on 24th than on any April day since 1885. In spite of absence of rain, crops are better than expected; yield will not be up to the average. Pasture except around the lakes, very poor. Grapes thrifty with much fruit. Apples heavy and good. Prunes good. Haying soon.

Sonoma County.—Hay and grain progressing finely. Feed in the hills as good as usual. Peach crop light but doing well. Prunes extra good and advancing rapidly; apple crop small but doing well; berries late and small.

Napa County.—Fair crop of grain and hay; fruit yield about three-quarters of a crop.

Alameda County.—Vegetables not doing so well as expected. Fruit doing well. Hay and grain not enough for home consumption. Some vineyardists pruning vines.

San Mateo County.—Hay crop better in the foot-hills than in the valley; fruit doing well.

Santa Clara County.—Continued dry weather. Sinking wells and pumping water day and night. No hope of hay or grain on land not irrigated. Cherry crop will be large, notwithstanding earlier discouraging reports. Beets growing nicely.

Santa Cruz County.—Crops and feed fair considering dry weather. Rain would do great good.

Monterey County.—Cool and cloudy. No prospect of a crop except on foot-hills.

San Benito County.—No grain and little hay; feed dried up. Too late for rain to do good.

San Luis Obispo County.—Peaches and apples doing well. Twenty thousand head of stock shipped out of county for lack of feed. Rain will help fruit considerably.

Santa Barbara County.—Dry weather has injured all crops. Only a light crop of hay looked for. Beans and summer crops will not be planted unless one inch of rain should fall. Apricots light crop. Showers on 29th.

Ventura County.—Boring twelve and fourteen inch wells. Poor outlook for barley, beans and corn. Thousands of sheep and many horses shipped away for better pasture. Trace of rain.

Los Angeles County.—Bassett. Good rain but will do little good to grain some hay will be made. Duarte. About two inches of rain which has benefited all crops. Palmdale. Continued drouth; little feed for stock. Pomona. Half inch of rain, which has greatly benefited late barley and hay. San Fernando. Light rain at end of week; a great help to fruit but too late for grain.

San Bernardino County.—One inch of rain during week very beneficial.

Orange County.—Light showers. Trees looking well. Hay crop short.

Riverside County.—Extremely hot beginning of week followed by copious showers. Rain too late to benefit grain or hay; orange crop for coming year very promising.

San Diego County.—Rains have done much good, rendering irrigation of fruit unnecessary, improving hay and grain somewhat and greatly benefiting pasture.

Eureka Summary.—High northwest wind unfavorable for tender vegetation; prospects good, however, for an abundance of small fruit. Grain and grass looking well.

Los Angeles Summary.—Rain too late for hay; will help corn, beans and alfalfa. Orange trees in good condition and full of bloom.

Seventy-five carloads of cattle passed through Sacramento on Friday morning on their road from the southern part of the State to the north, where they were forced to be moved to keep them from starvation.

BUTCHERTOWN.

There is no notable change to report in the local meat market at butchertown during the last week, prices have ruled steady at quotations with some few concessions for jobbing lots. Arrivals of all grades of stock are coming in very freely and in some cases wholesalers express themselves that the supply is exceeding the demand. Calves are a point weaker both for large and dry.
MUTTON—There is no variance between our figures this week and the market as reported in our last issue. Good wethers and ewes readily command figure, whilst some poor scrubby sheep are being sold at a point or more below our quotations. As the latter are not in much demand they do no figure in our prices. Slaughterers are all of the opinion that sheep will be good property in the near future and look for a substantial advance in prices this fall.
HOGS—The market is still over supplied with undesirable, soft, mushy hogs that neither packers or slaughterers have any use for, this continuous shipping in of inferior stock is demoralizing prices and raisers cannot expect the market to rally under just such conditions. Good hard grained stock is readily bringing our prices and there is no over supply of this grade or swine, these and these only are bringing our full outside quotations. We quote as follows:
Steers—First quality, very choice, 6½¢; Steers, No. 1, 6½¢@6.38¢; Steers, No. 2, 5½¢@6¢; Steers, No. 3, 5½¢@5¢. Extra Choice Cows and Heifers 5½¢; Good to Fair, 5½¢@5¢. Bulls, stags and old Cows, 4½¢@5¢; Calves, choice range, large, 4½¢@5¢; Dairy, 5½¢@6¢; Wethers, first quality, 8¢; Wethers, second quality, 7½¢@7¢; Ewes, first quality, 7½¢; Ewes, second quality, 7¢; Lamb, yearlings, —; Lamb (this Spring), 8½¢@8½¢; Hog, dressed hard, 6½¢@6¢; Hogs, live, hard, medium, 3½¢@4; Hogs, live, hard, heavy, 3½¢@3¢.

REFRIGERATED DRESSED MEATS.

Whilst the volume of business transacted this week is heavier than during the past, prices are weaker and lower all around. This fact is due to the poor quality of cattle, sheep and hogs coming to market in over supply, and until this surplus of undesirable stock is disposed of there is no assurance of any improvement in prices. The outlook, however, is quite serious and justifies us in saying that by next fall California will see prices for dressed meats higher than anything within the last five years. The above report is equally applicable to calves, sheep and hogs, all of which have ruled easier during the past week.
Wholesale Market, Sixth and Townsend, San Francisco.
Beef carcasses, prime, 6½¢@6¢; beef carcasses, second quality, 5½¢@5¢; No. 1, Cows and Heifers, 6½¢@6¢; No. 2 Cows and Heifers, 4½¢@5¢; Mutton, Wethers, carcasses, 7½¢@8¢; Mutton, Wethers, carcasses, No. 2, 6½¢@7¢; Mutton Ewes, carcasses, No. 1, 6½¢@7¢; Mutton, Ewes, carcasses, No. 2, 5½¢@6¢; Lamb (this year's Spring) 8½¢@8½¢; Veal, light, 5½¢@5½¢; Veal, heavy, 4½¢@5¢; Pork, carcasses, 5½¢@6¢.

HIDES AND SKINS.

The hide market, though local dealers are extremely reticent in admitting that the situation has improved, is decidedly in a better condition than last reported. As our market is largely governed by existing conditions East, we give for the benefit of those of our subscribers interested the following information just at hand from our Chicago correspondent under date of May 2:
"Enormous sales of hides were made at leading Eastern markets this week, and an advance of one-quarter cent per pound followed. The packers appear to be reaping a rich profit and 'war prices' for leather and leather goods and predicted by those in touch with the industry. Meantime the fact that no part of the increased price on hides has found its way into the pockets of the cattle owners will induce some hard thinking on this subject on the part of farmer."

We do not make any change in prices this week, but it is safe to say that before our next issue in sympathy with other markets, prices will have advanced proportionately. The local condition of affairs is firm and prices advancing. We quote as follows:
WET SALTED HIDES.—Heavy Steers, over 48 lbs, 10¢, culls, 9¢; Medium, 48 to 55 lbs, 9¢, culls 8¢; Light Steer, under 48 lbs, 9¢, culls, 8¢; Heavy Cows, 48 to 55 lbs, 9¢, culls 8¢; Light Cows, 30 to 50 lbs, 9¢, culls 8¢; Sags, 60 lbs, 5¢; Kips, 9¢, culls 8¢; Veal, 9¢, culls 8¢; Calf, 10¢, culls 9¢; Dry Hides, 16¢, culls, 13¢; Dry Kip and Veal, 14¢@15¢, culls, 11¢; Dry Calf, 18¢@20¢, culls, 15¢@16¢. Horses, Hides, large prime, $2.25 each; medium, $1.75; small 75 cents.
TAILS.—Large size 35 cents per dozen.
PEITS AND SHEARLINGS.—20¢@30¢ each; do, short, 4¢@7¢ each; do, medium, 7¢@9¢ each; do, long wool, 9¢@11.30 each; Deer Skins, summer, 2¢@3¢; do, good medium, 20¢; do, winter, 10¢ per lb; Goat Skins, 20¢@37½¢ a piece for prime to perfect; 1¢@2¢ for damaged and 1¢@2¢ each for Kids.
TALLOW.—We quote: No. 1, Rendered, 3¢@3½¢ per lb; No. 2, 2¢@2½¢; Grease, 1½¢@2¢ per lb.

WOOL REPORT.

The local wool market remains absolutely inactive, so much so, that it is impossible to name quotations for new spring wools and dealers decline to make offers or put a price upon anything but a nominal value upon anything for the moment. We do not look to a lower market, but with the extreme caution exercised by Eastern manufacturers there is no prospect for an immediate betterment of the situation. Our figures must be taken not as an indication of market values but nominally only.
CALIFORNIA FALL CLIP.—Plains, 6¢@6¢; Mountains, 9¢@11¢; Northern, 10¢@10¢; and Northern defective 8¢@10¢; Mendocino and Humboldt, 15¢@16¢.
NEVADA SPRING.—Light and choice, 10¢@11¢.
OREGON SPRING.—Eastern choice, 10¢@14¢; Eastern poor, 9¢@11¢; Valley choice, 14¢@16¢; Valley low grade, 12¢@13¢.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

Since our last report the market has ruled a shade easier for creameries and prices in accordance show a slight decline. Some little packing has been done as the supply has been somewhat in excess of the demand. Dairy butter has been in good demand owing to short arrivals of this grade and prices have ruled up on a par with last week's quotations. There is considerable of the Eastern product on the market which measurably is holding the California article down. We quote: Creamery extras per lb, 19¢@20¢; firsts, 19¢@19½¢; seconds, 18½¢@19¢; Dairy select, 18½¢@19¢; seconds, 18¢@19¢; Dairy soft and weedy, —; Mixed store, 18¢@17¢; Creamery in tubs, 19¢@22¢; Pickled-rol, —; Dairy in tubs, —; Firkin, Cal, choice to select, 12¢@12½¢; Firkin, common to fair, 10¢@10¢.
CHEESE.—Arrivals of all grades of cheese throughout the week have been quite heavy and in excess of local requirements, notwithstanding the fact that we do not make much change in prices the market is easy. We quote: California per lb, Cheddars, 10¢@11¢; Flats, mild, new, 9¢@9½¢; fair to good, 8¢@8½¢; Young America, 10¢@11¢; Eastern, New York Cream, Cheddars and Flats 11¢@13¢; Western, 11½¢@12½¢.

EGGS.—The demand during the week under review has been good and well sustained, particularly for choice grades, which, at the close of the week, have an upward tendency. Defective are not in particular request and can not be quoted as firm. We quote: California Ranch, 12½¢@13½¢; California Store, 11½¢@12¢; Eastern, 12½¢; Duck eggs, 16¢.

POULTRY—Young poultry has been in good request at slightly advanced prices, whereas old stock of all descriptions have moved very slowly with little demand at reduced figures. The market for turkeys, ducks and geese has also been of a dragging nature. Supplies are ample for present requirements.
We quote: Old Roosters, per doz, $3.50@4; young, $7.50@8.50; Fryers, $5.50@6.50; Broilers, large, $4@5; small, $2.50@3.50; Hens, $3.50@4; Ducks, old, doz, $7@7.50; young, $4@5.50; Turkeys, five, Hens, per lb, 11¢@12¢; cockbirds, 11¢@12¢; dressed, per lb, 15¢; Geese, pair, $1.25; Goslings, pair, $1.75@2; Pigeons, young, $1.50@1.75; do, old, $1.25.
Eastern Poultry—Old Roosters, per doz, $4.75; Hens, $5.50@6; Fryers, $6.50; Broilers, —; Young Roosters, $7; Ducks, $5; Turkeys, per lb, 11¢@13¢; Geese, pair, $2.

WHEAT—Another scramble for Wheat at Chicago, during which Ma advanced to $1.53 and July from 98.5¢ to $1.02 5-8, sent prices here up again under excited trading and heavy transactions. Dealers are all at sea, and some of them do not even attempt to quote prices. Hot north winds are reported as causing considerable damage in Washington where the California drought is said to have made its appearance, as the usual spring rains are wholly lacking. All conditions seem against Wheat this year. Tidewater quotations are as follows: $1.75@1.77½ for shipping and $1.82½@1.87½ per cbl. for milling.

HAY—A car of new Oat, the first of the season, came in from Mayfield. It was very poor, being foul, and not over six inches long. Nobody wanted it, and $12.50 was the best bid for it. The market is lower, owing to heavy receipts from outside sources. Of yesterday's receipts 120 tons came from Oregon and three cars from Utah. This foreign Hay is Alfalfa and Timothy. It is not strictly No. 1, but it serves to weaken the market if it arrives too freely.
(Ex-car in round lots)—Wheat, $2.20@2.5 per ton; Wheat and Oat, $2.00@2.40; Oat, $1.10@1.1; Barley, none; compressed Wheat, $2.20@2.5; compressed Oat, $1.80@2; Alfalfa, $12.50@14.50; Clover, nominal; Oregon Timothy, $15@18.

FEEDSTUFFS show no change. Rolled Barley, $29 per ton; Ollcake Meal at the mill, $31@31.50; Jobbing, $32@32.50; Coconut Cake, $24@25; Cottonseed Meal, $22@30 per ton; Cornmeal, $24.50; Cracked Corn, $5.

STRAW—90¢@1 per bale. It is scarce and firm.
BRAN—$21@21.50 per ton.
MIDDINGS—$23@25.50 per ton.

FLOUR—Net cash prices are: Family extras, $5.75@5.85; Bakers' extras, 5.50@5.6 per barrel.
MILSTUFFS—Price in sack are follows, usual discount to the trade: Graham Flour, $3 per 100 lbs.; Rye Flour, $2.75 per 100; Rice Flour, $6; Cornmeal, $2.50 extra cream Cornmeal, $3.25 Oatmeal, $4; Oat Groats, $4.25; Hominy, $3.25@3.50; Buckwheat Flour, $4@4.25; Cracked Wheat, $3.75; Farina, $4.75; Whole Wheat Flour, $3.25; Rolled Oats (barrels), $5.80@6.20; In sacks, $5.60@6; Pearl Barley, $4.75; Split Peas, $1.25; Green Peas, $4.50 per 100 lbs.

BEANS show another general advance. Bayos, $2.95@3; Small Whites $2.10@2.2; Pinks, $2.45@2.75; Reds, $2.75@3; Blackeye, $3.50@3.75; Butters, $1.60@1.75; Limas, $3@3.25; Pea, $2@2.10; Red Kidneys, $2.50@2.75. Large Whites, $2@2.12½ per cbl.

NORTHERN WHEAT MARKET.
PORTLAND, May 5.—The local wheat market is firm, with little change in prices. There is nothing in the European and Eastern flurry that can benefit this market. Walla Walla was moving at 94¢@96¢ Tuesday and round lots of bluestem would command 1½¢. Valley, on account of the difficulty of getting a cargo together so late in the season, will not bring more than 97 to 98¢.

WASHINGTON.
TACOMA, May 5.—Wheat market strong, with an advance of 2 cents and indications of a further upward tendency to-morrow. Closing: No. 1 club, 98¢; No. 1 bluestem, $1.02.

BECOME A MAN

This will interest those who have doctored with "medical companies" and "free prescriptions" fakes and electric belts, until they are thoroughly disgusted. I am a well known physician of Chicago and have made nervous disorders and all diseases peculiar to men a special study for 20 years. I have a remedy that will do wonders in a few days, but with patience and the correct use of my treatment I will guarantee to MAKE A MAN OF YOU IN TIME. For a short time I will send a full month's treatment of my "NERVE-SEEDS" with some valuable instructions, for $1.00, or 6 boxes of food for $5.00. I HAVE CURED THOUSANDS AND CAN CURE YOU. If suffering from a chronic disease of any nature write me in confidence at once. All medicines sent in plain wrapper.

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm. Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

Believed in the Buckeye; Have Prized the Buckeye

BECAUSE the Mowers and Binders made by Aultman, Miller & Co. surpass all the Harvesting Machines in Simplicity, Convenience, Lightness of Draft and Durability; in short, because, whether Binder or Mower, IT IS AN ALL-AROUND MACHINE OF UNPARALLELED EXCELLENCE.

Proof? Here's one pointer: "Railroad direct to us at Bakersfield, Cal., 60 five-foot Buckeye Mowers for the Kern County Land Company." Thus reads an order received by Aultman, Miller & Co., Nov. 6, 1897, and thereby hangs this tale: In 1891 the Kern County Land Company, proprietors of the largest hay ranch in the world, took samples of Adirance, Deering, McCormick and 20 Buckeye mowers on trial. After a three years' trial the company decided: "Hereafter we will have and use the Buckeye and not a mower of any other kind." The company did not need to keep any of the others, for all except the 20 Buckeye mowers had gone to pieces.

The Buckeye is not run on wind, or on the fitful and gusty puffery of transient devices that are not heard of after a year or two's use. It is built on solid, enduring merit and furnishes the proof that it can and will do all that its makers and agents claim for it. There are more sales of the Buckeye outright to dealers than of all the harvesting machines combined, and the fact of itself is not such a very bad pointer.

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities. In having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a pair-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electoneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Prince. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONT NTS.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

SEYMOUR WILKES, 2:08 1/2

(REGISTERED 0232)

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

J. H. White's Stock Farm, Lakeville, Cal.

TERMS—$25 FOR THE SEASON

SEYMOUR WILKES was sired by the King of the Wilkes family, Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, dam Early Bird, by Playmail (brother to Barney, 2:25 1/4); second dam Lucy, by Odd Fellow (son of Chloroform); third dam by a son of Williamson's Belmont; fourth dam by Blackhawk 767. Playmail was by Mike 3403 (he by Vermont 322, out of the Peniger mare), out of Kate McDonough (dam of Ella Lewis 2:27, and grandam of Saladin, 2:05 1/4).

SEYMOUR WILKES stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a seal brown in color, and in conformation is one of the most symmetrical of any in California. His qualities as a level-headed, game and speedy race horse are known to all horsemen. He is the fastest son of the mighty Guy Wilkes, and on his maternal side traces to the very best of sires and dams. He has an iron constitution, and all owners of good mares that want horses that will have breeding, size, bone, quality, good disposition and extreme speed should not overlook this horse. His service fee is placed at a very low figure considering his merits. He never was bred but to a few mares, and his progeny are models of perfection. Mares can be shipped direct to the ranch via steamer "Gold." The best of care taken of them on the farm, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Pasturage $3 per month. For further particulars apply to

ZOMBRO. 2:11

The Greatest Trotter in America,

Has trotted 40 heats as a three-year old better than 2:27 1-2, 31 in 2:20 or better and 12 in 2:15 or better. Won 13 races out of 17 starts as a three-year-old, and a total of $5,400 in his three-year-old form.'

ZOMBRO, 2:11 (Registered No. 28,029), brown stallion, foaled in 1892, stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,200 pounds, and is one of the most perfect formed horses in America. His career on the turf in 1895 stamps him as one of the greatest three-year-olds the world has ever seen.

ZOMBRO, 2:11, sired by McKinney, 2:11 1/4, son of Alecyone, by George Wilkes. ZOMBRO, 2:11, first dam Whisper, by Almont Lightning, son of Almont 83, dam by Mambrino Pilot 29. ZOMBRO, 2:11, second dam May Berry, by Kentucky Clay 194, whose dam is also the dam of Mambrino Patchen and Lady Thorne, 2:18 1/4.

ZOMBRO, 2:11, third dam by Edwin Forest 49. Whisper, the dam of Zombro, was bred and raised by Gen. W. T. Withers, of Lexington, Ky., and is a handsome brown mare, 16 hands high, weighing 1,150 pounds. She has never been beaten in the show ring, always carrying off first prize.

ZOMBRO, 2:11, won the first prize over all three-year-old stallions at the Horse Show in San Francisco in 1895. This grand stallion will make the SEASON of 1898 at SACRAMENTO RACE TRACK, from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st, 1898. Terms, $30 cash at the time of service.

THE GREAT SIRE OF AMERICA.

From Lexington's Time to the Present—Their Descent Traced to the "Tap-Root."

Lexington was to America what Sir Peter was to England—the best race horse of his day and the most successful sire, bar perhaps one, that has ever been known in this country. Lexington got two unbeaten racers (Norfolk and Asteroid) and another that met defeat on but one occasion—Kentucky. Besides he sired Harry Bassett, winner of all his three-year-old races; Prekness, holder to this day of the 2½-mile record; Salina and Nevada, the great racing sisters that threw champions Salvator and Luke Blackburn; Kathleen, the mother of George Kinney; War Dance, the sire of Modesty, L'Argentine, &c; the famous Wanderer and Monarchist, racing kings of their time, etc.

Foaled in 1850, Lexington took part in 7 races, winning all but one, and that was by some attributed to his jockey pulling up at the end of three miles, thinking he had gone four. However, the one that defeated Lexington was the mighty Lecompte, also a son of Boston, and for a Lecompte to defeat any man's horse was no disgrace. Lexington scratched this blot off his racing page, though, when he downed Lecompte and made a new record at four miles. Retired to the stud, R. A. Alexander gave $15,000 for the great son of Boston and Alice Carneal, an unparalleled price in those days for a horse. It's a strange fact that the man who owned and raced Lexington should die in California, yet that was where Richard Ten Broeck closed his eyes upon this life. Two sons of Lexington were brought to this State in the early '60 (Woodburn and Norfolk), and they greatly helped to make the fame of California as a breeding ground par excellence. Grinstead and Monday, grandsons of Lexington, still further enhanced that reputation, and a great grandson, Joe Hooker, kept the family's name well before the public out this way.

As the late C. Bruce Lowe remarked, most of the great sons and daughters of Lexington were from Glencoe or Yorkshire mares, but the chances are that Lexington blood would have asserted itself anyhow, had there never been a Glencoe or Yorkshire mare in the country. It was a happy "nick" nevertheless, for Norfolk, Asteroid, Kentucky, Daniel Boone, Gilroy, Jonesboro, Wanderer, War Dance, Monarchist, Salina and Nevada were all from daughters of imp. Glencoe, Florence, the dam of Hindoo, Fannie Holton, the mother of Ten Broeck, and Lida, the mother of Enquirer, were by Lexington, but without any Glencoe in their make-up, yet all threw the champion racers of their time. These and other examples would go far to show that it was the "individuality" of Lexington stamped upon his progeny, an individuality like that possessed by a great general, and as is well known, wonderful warriors or scientists do come into the world very often. If blood was all that was needed in a successful sire, why were not the brothers to Sir Peter, Stockwell, Leamington, Musket, Hanover and other stud celebrities equally good at begetting great winners? It's the individuality—the character and conformation—that made it possible for Novice, Miss Woodford, Belle Knight, Thora and Marion to produce such grand racers by any horse you were of a mind to mate them with. Not one was blessed with a long pedigree—in fact, the breeding on the mother's side of each did not extend far enough to suit the later-day student of scientific breeding.

Imp. Yorkshire (imported in utero), son of St. Nicholas (by Emilus) and Miss Rose, by Tramp, was very successful at the stud before Lexington's time, begetting Balloon, Magenta, Lodi, Bay Leaf and many other good ones. Imp. Glencoe got Reel, Charmer, Little Arthur, Nebula, Vandel, Peytona, Lightsome and a host of others of note. Imp. Albion got the dams of Harry Bassett and Tom Bowling besides the good race horse Socks.

From 1861 to 1873, a period of twelve years, the get of no stallion in America closely approached that of Lexington in ability to go long routes at a high rate of speed, and there were not half a dozen of our truly great races from 1861 to the present that did not have the blood of this Milton of the American Turf coursing in his veins. But not a son of Lexington possessed anything like the merit of his superb sire in anything except racing. They do not "breed on" like those tracing to Stockwell or O'Kelly's Eclipse in the male line. The best of the sons of Lexington as sires were Norfolk, War Dance, Pat Malloy and Gilroy, and but for the latter the Lexington blood in the male line would not be thought of much. Grinstead's son, Gano, has been a pretty fair sire, and his daughter, Wheel of Fortune, only the other day won the Ingleside Stakes, distance run four miles. Where are the sons or grandsons of Lexington that were regarded as sires of the first class? Echo answers "where?" Grinstead the lone exception, though Monday, opportunities considered, was a success. It looks as if no son or grandson of Monday were going to keep green the memory of that excellent horse. Joe Hooker was good at siring winners himself, but no son of the queerly-marked chestnut has made his mark in that direction unless Surinam be accounted a success. The best sons of Norfolk as sires were Conner, El Rio Rey, Emperor of Norfolk and Alta. The former was unfortunately buried in Lake County, Oregon, while the latter died when comparatively young. The remaining pair are fair sires.

The closest approach to Lexington as a sire from 1861 to 1873 was Vandal, son of Glencoe and the Trauby mare that threw the immortal Levity. Vandal got Mollie Jackson, Vandalite, Ella D., Jack the Barber, Seven Oaks, Virgil, Vanderbilt, Valerian, Sallie Gardner, Grey Steel, Vocalist, Versailles, Capitola (dam of King Alfonso), Coral (dam of Uncas). Then, not far away, was imp. Eclipse, son of Orlando and Gaze, by Bay Middleton. He sired Ruthless, Relentless, Remorseless, Nemesis, Electra, Mimi, Alarm and many other celebrities of the turf. Neither Vandal nor imp. Eclipse had such opportunities at the stud as did Lexington, either, the latter standing for the most part in New Jersey, where good mares were not nearly so numerous as in Kentucky. In the neighborhood where Vandal stood there were not so many great broodmares to be had as in the bluegrass region, either, though his chances at Belle Meade were very good.

The blood of Vandal and Glencoe is on top in America to-day, and a scion of this male line, Hanover, has headed the list of winning stallions for the past three seasons. As Hanover is but fourteen years of age, it speaks well for the blood. He has a double cross of Vandal, his sire being Hindoo, by Virgil, son of Vandal, his grandam Ella D., daughter of Vandal. Virgil has had the distinction of heading the list, too, and has sired more Kentucky Derby winners than any other horse. That is especially good considering Virgil was once given away by M. H. Sanford of Kentucky. The superiority of Vagrant, Vera Cruz, Virgillian, Hindoo, Vigil, Tremont, Ben Ali and other cracks by Virgil made that case off much sought after until the day of his death, and Virgil lived to be an old horse. The imp. Eclipse line was best kept before the public by Alarm, the first horse to beat 1:43 for a mile in America. Alarm got Himyar, a superior yet erratic race horse, and Himyar in turn became the sire of Domino and Correction, among others. The Kentucky Derby, run last Wednesday week, was won by Plaudit, a son of Himyar, so that the blood of imp. Eclipse is still pretty good to have in a horse's veins. We have long known that it was an awful speedy cross, but had some doubts about the ability of the tribe to "stay the route." Domino wouldn't do it, neither would Correction or any other Himyar that we can call to mind until Plaudit came along. That horse is an undoubted stayer, and showed that at the early age of two years.

Early in the '90's the get of imp. Australian began to loom up as "good 'uns." The turf showing of Joe Daniels, Springbok, Lizzie Lucas, Abd-el-Kader, Fellowcraft (4 miles in 7:19½), Wildidle, Rutherford, Baden Baden, Maggie B'B., Helmbold, Silent Friend, et al. set the lovers of the fleet-footed gallopers to thinking that a formidable rival of Lexington had at last made his appearance. Imp. Australian was by the great triple crown winner, West Australian, out of Emilia, by Young Emilus. Run under the name of Millington, imp. Australian proved a racer of more than average ability. When his sons and daughters made their initial bows Lexington was about twenty years of age, and it was to be expected that the new Richmonds would make their presence known upon the breeding field. Three good sons of imp. Australian (Joe Daniels, Rutherford and Wildidle) found their way to California, as well as Lizzie Lucas, his best racing daughter. The last named threw many good performers and was the grandam of the peerless Morello. Joe Daniels got Hotspur, Hidalgo and others of note. Rutherford, among others, begot Lucky B., who won the Louisville Cup three times. Wildidle was better than all as a sire, Flambeau, Nomad, Wildwood, Jim Douglas and many other clinking good race horses being by him. The best scion of the race of imp. Australian in America was perhaps Spendthrift, who sired Lamplighter and Kingston, and the latter, the best race horse ever known in this country, take him all in all, bids fair to become a magnificent sire of fleet-footed gallopers. Miser, who stood down in Tennessee, was fairly successful, too, Yorkville Belle, Marquise and others being by this horse, own brother to Rutherford, Fellowcraft and Spendthrift and brother in blood to Wildidle.

The sons and daughters of imp. Leamington (by Faugh-a-Ballagh, brother to Irish Birdcatcher, from a daughter of Pantaloon) made their first appearance as racers in America in 1869. They were instantaneous successes, and when Enquirer and Longfellow swept everything before them as three-year-olds (in 1870) the brown English horse was hailed as a rival of Lexington, and indeed he was, for he got the unbeaten Sensation, the champions Longfellow and Enquirer, Olitipa, Susquehanna, Spinaway, Eolus, Oronodaga, Blazes, Saunterer and the great Iroquois, winner of the Derby and St. Leger in England. The blood is considered of the best, and it is blood that "breeds on." Look at the stud achievements of Longfellow and Enquirer alone. The sons and daughters of the first named won about $1,400,000 upon the American turf, those of the latter about $600,000, an average of a million dollars for each sire. No other stallion in the world's history had two such sons unless Stockwell is the exception, with Blair Athol and Doncaster. And the sons of Longfellow and Enquirer are proving good sires, those on that list being The Bard, Longstreet, Logic and Leonatus, besides Inspector B., Getaway and Falsetto. A son of Falsetto, Fresno, has done well at Rancho del Paso. Were the winnings of the sons and daughters of Eolus, Oronodaga, Sensation, Blazes, Hyder Ala, Reform and Iroquois to be added to the $2,000,000 spoken of above, the aggregate amount would not fall far short of $4,000,000, and we doubt if any sire has a record eclipsing this. Yet Leamington was nothing like as successful in England. A daughter of imp. Leamington (Spa), the only Leamington mare imported to Australia, produced Newminister, the horse that for several years headed the "winning stallions" list in the Colonies. Surely Leamington is wonderful "sire blood" and it was a happy day when Sir Roderick Cameron brought Leamington to America.

Imp. Bonnie Scotland was of the same age as imp. Leamington. He was by Iago out of Queen Mary (by Gladiator). Queen Mary was the mother of Blink Bonny, winner of the Derby and Oaks in England, and Blink Bonny was the dam of Blair Athol, winner of the Derby and St. Leger. Bonnie Scotland himself won the Liverpool St. Leger and Doncaster Stakes and ran second to Warlock for the Doncaster St. Leger, twenty-five starters. Imported by Capt. Cornish, for some years he was the property of Reber & Kutz, of Lancaster, Ohio, and with rather limited opportunities there got Surprize (who is credited with winning over 100 races), Ontario (one of the best race mares in America and mother of McWhirter, who, as a three-year-old, ran two miles in 3:30½), Scotland, Dangerous, Malcolm, Regent and others that won good races. He made two seasons in Kentucky. Later the horse was purchased and taken to Illinois. Joseph Cairn Simpson, the first editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, owned the horse in Waukegan, Ill., and later sold him to the Messrs. Park, of the same State, and when Gen. W. G. Harding, of Belle Meade stud, Tennessee, in 1872, sent his son-in-law, Gen. W. H. Jackson, to purchase Malcolm, Mr. Simpson advised him to buy "the old horse." This advice was followed, and Bonnie Scotland's wonderful success at the stud is a part of the pleasant history of Tennessee. If he had never sired anything but Luke Blackburn, that would have been honor enough, but when was added a Bramble, Brambletta, Bootjack, Bancroft, Beatitude, Boulevard, Boatman, John Happy, George Kinney, Bondholder and Barnum, the fame of Bonnie Scotland is of the undying description. Bramble and Luke Blackburn, of his sons, have done well at the stud, the former especially, and now Clifford, Bramble's son, is expected to keep up the family name.

Imp. Phaeton, foaled 1865, imported to America in 1866, was a successful sire in the '70's, Ten Broeck, Lisbon, King Alfonso, Aramis and other real good ones being by this horse, who was by King Tom out of Merry Sunshine, by Storm. The best sons of imp. Phaeton, as sires, were Ten Broeck, Lisbon and King Alfonso. Ten Broeck begot many good ones, the best being Drake Carter, Test, Ten Booker, Freeman, Free Knight and De Muth. Lisbon sired Troubadour, Lisimony and Ripple. King Alfonso was responsible for the mighty Foxhall, Fonso and Joe Cotton, among others of note. Fonso ranked high among the stallions of the United States last season.

Imp. Billet, foaled 1865, stood in Illinois, on S. Powers' place, for several years, while there getting Volturino, Elias Lawrence, Ballard and other good ones. Eventually he was sold to the owner of the Runnymede Stud, George W. Bowen, Paris, Ky., and there sired Miss Woodford, Barnes, Meriden, Patti, Bedouin, Runnymede, Sir Dixon, Raceland, etc. Billet was by Voltigeur out of Calcutta, by Flatcatcher, and deserves a place alongside Bonnie Scotland, Phaeton and Leamington.

Below we print a table of the leading sires of winners from 1870 to 1897 inclusive, and it will be observed that Lexington and imp. Leamington were as great rivals in the '70's as were Boston and Glencoe in the '40's. After that Bonnie Scotland twice headed the list, and imp. Glenelg three times held the post of honor. At this time, however, there were other high-class sires that kept knocking at the championship door all the time, yet were never admitted. In this category were Alarm (by imp. Eclipse—imp. Maud by Stockwell). The Ill-Used (by Breadalbane—Ellermire by Chanticleer), King Alfonso (by the Phaeton—Capitola, by Vandal), imp. Great Tom, (by King Tom—Atlantis by Thormanby) Grinstead (by Gilroy—Sister to Ruric by imp. Sovereign), Eolus (by imp. Leamington—Fanny Washington by Revenue), Spendthrift (by imp. Australian—Aerolite by Lexington), Reform (by imp. Leamington—imp. Stolen Kisses), Falsetto (by Enquirer—Farfaletta by imp. Australian), imp. Glengarry (by Thormanby—Carbine by Riseman), Harry O'Fallon (by imp. Australian—Sunny South), imp. King Ernest (by King Tom—Ernestine), Enquirer (by imp. Leamington—Lida by Lexington), imp. Mortemer (by Compeigne—Comtesse by The Baron or Nuncio), imp. Prince Charlie (by Blair Athol—Eastern Princess by Surplice), Onondaga (by imp. Leamington—Susan Beane by Lexington) and his brother (Sensation), Strathmore (by Waverly—Brenna by imp. Knight of St. George), Fonso (by King Alfonso—imp. Weatherwitch by Weatherbit, and Bramble (by imp. Bonnie Scotland—Ivy Leaf by imp. Australian). All of the above stallions sired stake horses of the highest class, and while they did not head the "winning stallions" list, were nevertheless worthy of a niche in the temple of Fame. It is a peculiar fact that of the fourteen different stallions that have headed the list since 1870, only Lexington, Virgil, Sir Modred and Hanover trace their descent in the male line to Herod, all the others being "Eclipse horses."

The above table goes far to show that a stallion is at his best when he is past fifteen years of age, yet St. Blaise, Rayon d'Or, Iroquois and Hanover were exceptions, all being under fifteen when they headed the list. Himyar's get won by far the most money in a single season, Domino alone contributing over $175,000.

Following is a table giving the names of the principal sires of winners from Lexington's time as a sire (1860) up to the present:

Name and Year Foaled	Traced on the Dam's Side to

Imp. Order, 1884.....	Sedbury Royal Mare

It is a curious fact that more of the truly great stallions that found a home in America traced to the dam of the two True Blues than to any other "tap-root" matron, five in all. It is No. 3 in the Bruce Lowe system, and the leading "sire family" known in the mother country—the one from which came the mighty Stockwell and the wonderful Sir Peter the greatest sires in the history of the world. The figures of our departed and much esteemed friend thus hold good in America as well as in Great Britain as far as "sire blood" is concerned, and in "running bloods" the ones tracing to the Old Montague mare have the call, with 13 champions of America out of 91 altogether, the Layton Bart mares descendants second with 10, the Old Vintner mare third with 5. The figures of the five best sire lines are put in black type, and their rank as sires is given according to our plan.

From the above it will be seen that what is No. 19 in the line of running in America stands No. 1 when "sire blood" is being considered. Under the Bruce Lowe plan it is No. 3 in running in England and No. 1 in the "sire line" just as it is here. The descendants, five in number, were imp. Medley, American Eclipse, imp. King Ernest, Reform and imp. Rayon d'Or. No. 8 of the Bruce Lowe plan (the Bustler mare) has just one great descendant in the female line in this country—Fonso. No. 11 under the Lowe plan, the Sedbury Royal mare, stands third as a sire line in England and No. 5 in this country, imp. Australian, imp. Great Tom and imp. Order tracing to her. The Royal (or Old Montague) mare's descendants that were great sires are four in number and make her stand second. She is first in the "running blood" computation, No. 12 under the Lowe plan and No. 4 in the line of producing sires. Those tracing to the Old Montague mare that were classed as great sires were Lexington, Vandal, Grinstead and Onondaga.

Since our article appeared last week we have discovered that Newminster, who headed the list of Australian sires for several seasons, is under the Lowe plan from the champion sire line, No. 3, dam of the two True Blues, thus proving that it is the best for the production of great sires on three continents. Newminster was certainly bred for a sire, being by The Marquis (2, Lowe plan), he by Stockwell (3). Spa, dam of Newminster, was of the 3 family, her sire, Leamington, of the 14, her dam, Satanella, by English Newminster (8), so that in the top crosses of the great Australian sire is found the blood of members the 3, 8 and 14 families, respectively ranking 1, 2 and 4 in the line of siring great winners in England. No wonder, then, that Australian Newminster was a wonderful sire.

THE KENTUCKY DERBY.

Recollections of the Winners of America's Three-Year-Old Classic—Their Breeding and Lives.

The oldest three-year-old stake race of importance in America is the Travers, run at Saratoga, N. Y. That was instituted in 1864, and was won by Kentucky (son of Lexington); in 1865 by Maiden (daughter of Lexington), and in 1866 by Merrill (son of Lexington). The Bansee, by Lexington, won it in 1868, and in the years 1870, 1871 and 1873 it was won by Kingfisher, Harry Bassett and Tom Bowling, all sons of Lexington. The Travers is still one of the fixtures at America's great interior summer resort.

The Kentucky Derby was won first in 1875, and by Aristides, "the little red horse," pride of Price McGrath's great heart. Aristides was by imp. Leamington, out of Sarong, by Lexington. This great American three-year-old stake has been run for twenty-four times, and of the twenty-four winners there have been twenty with the blood of Lexington in their veins. The four without it were Baden Baden, Fonso, Buchanan and Joe Cotton. As Biden Biden's grandam was Alice Carneal, the mother of Lexington, it is hardly right to say that he has no Lexington blood. Vagrant, the second winner of the Kentucky Derby, did much to establish the reputation of Virgil as a sire, after the horse had been given away by M. H. Sanford. Biden Baden was a good race horse, but, like Aristides, a rank failure as a sire. The latter died the property of Al Hankins at Hebron, Ind. Day Star who beat the red-hot favorite Himyar (sire of Domino, &c.), turned out a sulker, was made a timber-topper and finally taken to Canada, where he proved a very good sire. Burns & Waterhouse's Mt. McGregor was sired by him. Day Star, was by Star Davis (son of imp. Glencoe) out of Squeez'em, by Lexington; second dam the great race mare Skeddadle, by imp. Yorkshire; third dam Magnolia (dam of Kentucky, Daniel Boone and Gilroy), by imp. Glencoe, &c. Lord Murphy (son of Pat Malloy and Wenonah), by Capt. Elgee, was a great race horse, the only one that ever had the honor of defeating Falsetto, and died in England, where, becoming of no account for racing purposes in that climate, he was sold for something like $100 for a saddle horse. Fonso, the winner of 1880, was sired by King Alfonso, and his mother was the imported mare Weatherwitch, by Weatherbit. He was not the favorite in the betting that year, but he was a good race horse and has proven one of the very best sires, his get all showing a liking for a long route. Judge Denny is a son, also First Mate and Morte Fonso.

Hindoo, the 1881 winner, son of Virgil and Florence by Lexington, captured the blue ribbon event of the American turf, but some may claim that honor for Leonatus, Spokane or Halma. As these horses did not win the cup races that Hindoo did as four-year-olds or upwards (Leonatus broke down in the early fall of his three-year-old form), we must contend that Hindoo was the best race horse that ever won the Kentucky Derby, which is saying a great deal. Hindoo is still at the stud, has sired the champion Hanover and many other good ones, and while he is nothing like as good a sire as he was a race horse, is still anything but a failure. He makes his home at the Runnymede Stud of Clay & Woodford, Paris, Ky.

Apollo the winner of 1882, son of Lever (by Lexington—Levity) and Rebecca T. Price by The Colonel, was an own brother to Mahstick, a very good race horse. Apollo, owned by our old friend Green Morris, was the greatest surprise horse, the longest shot that ever won the big race. He was a gelding, and his subsequent races showed that his win over Runnymede et al was a "fluke" of the purest ray serene. Leonatus, the winner of 1883, owned by Chinn & Morgan, of Harrodsburg, Ky., was a grand race horse and beat a splen. did field which included Ascender, Drake Carter and Lord Raglan. To show how Leonatus, Ascender and Drake Carter were regarded it is only necessary to state that pool after pool was sold with the trio going at $400 apiece, Lord Raglan at $180. Ben Ali won it in 1896 for J. B. Haggin. The son of Virgil and Ulrica was ridden by Patsy Duffy of California, and though pressed hard by Blue Wing, was the best horse. "Snapper" Garrison had the mount that year on Blue Wing. Ben Ali ran as a four-year-old, got to be quite a somersault-turner and all-around bad actor, and was retired to the Rancho del Paso stud, where he has sired Geyser, Benamela and others that won good races. Montrose, owned by the Labold Bros., of Cincinnati, won the Kentucky Derby of 1887, but it was rather a lucky win, for Jim Gore, Jacobin and others in the field showed to better advantage afterward. Montrose got a few winners, but was not a success at the stud.

Macbeth, winner of 1888, a gelding by Macduff, proved a useful sort of selling plater, after he won the Derby, and was raced in California by Hawkins & Johnson a few years ago. Spokane, winner of 1889, who just beat Proctor Knott, the pride of Tennessee, afterwards captured the American Derby and other good races and was retired to the stud in Montana where he sired a few winners, none, however, of very high class. Tom Kiley, well known there, rode him most of his races. The horse is now in Kentucky, near Lexington. Riley, owned by Ed Corrigan, captured the Derby of 1890, and was quite a high-class. Bingman, the Glengarry colt that won in 1891, was of very high-class. Azra's win the next year was by some considered of the fluky description for he did not do much after that. Lookout, by Troubadour, was not a very great horse, and did not do much thereafter, and the same may be said of Chant, winner of 1894.

Halma, the black son of Hanover that won the Kentucky Derby of 1895, was a top notcher as a race horse, so good that the Fleischmanns of Cincinnati gave $20,000 for him. He won the Latonia Derby in cracking time and with a house on his back, but went amiss shortly thereafter, and if memory serves us Halma won but one race for the millionaires of the Queen City. Ben Brush's win in 1896 was the closest ever seen in the Kentucky classic, and many thought Ben Eder had won it. Ben Brush was a good race horse last year and was worth the $12,000 that M. F. Dwyer gave for him. Typhoon II., who won last year over the great Ornament did not accomplish much afterward, but is expected to do well this season. Of Plaudit it can be said that he was, next to Hamburg, the best two year old of 1897, and he threatens to be absolutely the best three-year-old of 1898.

Saddle Notes.

BEN HOLLIDAY is being prepared at Louisville for the Brooklyn Handicap.

CHARLEY SANDERS has gone to St. Louis with a small string of two-year-olds.

W. L. STANFIELD will take Valenciennes, George Miller and three or four others to Montana.

DAN DENNISON is to take Lord Chesterfield to Montana, where he should more than pay his way over the jumps.

WHALEBACK, winner of the second race Tuesday, is a half brother to Fig Leaf, who was a very good two-year-old.

NINETY CENTS, a recent winner at Aqueduct, is by Sir Modred out of Trade Dollar, hence the name—Ninety Cents.

JUNO, a chestnut mare by Salvator out of the grand racer Bessie June, won at Aqueduct May 5th—six furlongs in 1:15 4-5, with 115 pounds up.

PRESIDING Judge Joe Murphy left Saturday night for St. Louis. Judges Carter and Brooks will officiate in the stand for the rest of the Oakland meeting.

E. F. ("DAGGIE") SMITH has definitely decided that he will make a Montana campaign this year. He will take along Torsida, Paul Fry, Don Luis and five or six others.

COLONEL JACK CHINN will be the starter at Louisville and Latonia, while Caldwell will handle the flag at Oakley. "Kit" Chinn has been engaged to start at the St. Louis meeting.

FRANK McMAHON (McCarthy & Co.) has shipped his string of half dozen horses, with Pat Morrissey at the head, to Denver. After the meeting there he will take in the Montana circuit.

CAMOTOP, a recent winner at Aqueduct, is a black colt by the champion Potomac out of the splendid race mare Lavinia Belle, sister to Freeland, Long Knight, Unite and Cicero. No wonder he's a good one.

THERE was another rumor circulated yesterday that Hamburg had broken down. A visit to Lakeland's stable found the great horse in perfect health after doing the hardest work of the season.—New York Herald.

BARNEY SCHREIBER's crew of employees left last Saturday night for St. Louis, where the genial German will operate for a while. Harry Lewis, his cashier, has made a host of friends here, and his pleasant face will be missed by racegoers.

THE good race mare, imp. Trance, is now at Ruinat Stock Farm, and has been mated with the horse after which the place was named, the winner of the Burns Handicap. The result of this union should be a "clinker" of a race horse.

AT the first day's racing of the Newmarket second spring meeting Tuesday Richard Croker's two-year-old brown colt Knickerbocker won the Exning plate of 500 sovereigns. The Lorillard-Beresford stable's three-year-old bay colt Elfin won the Burwell stakes.

JOCKEY MIKE HENNESSY leaves next Monday for Hamilton, Mont. He will ride for Marcus Daly, the copper king, for the remainder of the season, and should do well, for he rides a nice weight, is a good judge of pace, a vigorous finisher and is not afraid to take a chance in a tight place.

MAYDAY, a bay mare by Foul Shot (Barney Schreiber's) won the Flying Handicap (six furlongs) at the Patea (N. Z.) meeting, April 11th. She carried 110 pounds. Singleshot (by Foul Shot also) finished second and the same day won the Alton Handicap, one mile, with 106 pounds up, Mayday, 110 pounds, second.

WHILE galloping in company with Multiform on March 29, Currasow (by Cuirassier—Albatross) broke one of his fetlocks. The horse was one of Mr. Stead's candidates in the Great Easter Handicap and other races at the forthcoming meetings. The accident has probably put an end to Currasow's racing career.—Sporting Review, Auckland, N. Z.

COL. DAN was unnerved a couple of weeks ago, which may account for his poor showing Saturday. Trainer McCormick says the colt has been lame off and on all his life, and no one can locate the lameness. Sometimes the veterinarian says it is in his shoulders, then his legs, occasionally his feet. McCormick is unable to place his hand on the spot, and thinks it is movable.

THE full list of Harlem racing officials is as follows: Presiding Judge, Col. M. Lewis Clark; Associate Judges, John W. Kelsey and Col. A. W. Hamilton; Patrol Judge, Hugh E. Keough; Paddock Judge, James Laughman; Starter, Richard Dwyer; Assistant Starter, A. McKnight; Secretary, M. Nathanson; Assistant Secretary, Thomas M. Chivington; Clerk of the Scales, P. P. Pomeroy.

FRANK GARNER brings the news that Charley Slaughter has retired from the saddle, and returned to his home in Texas. Charley used to ride for Barney Schreiber of St. Louis. He was nearly killed by a fall from Nancy Nance at the Fair Grounds last season and has not been right since. He started out to ride for his brother Elmer at Little Rock this spring, but had poor success and quit in disgust.—St. Louis Republic.

E. D. McSWEENEY will invoke the aid of the law to recover St. Calatine and damages. Mr. Lynch, in whose name the filly ran on Friday, and a prominent hay and grain merchant, will be sued for damages. McSweeney claims that they had secured possession of the mare for bills due but had no business risking her in cheap selling races, as her value was far above her entered selling price. McSweeney is right as to her value, but should have protested the mare's starting, say some folks.

THE Nomad filly Toluca, formerly owned and trained by "Bill" Murray, is now the property of Sam Hildreth, and should be heard from around Chicago the coming summer. The purchase price was not made public.

DR. BERNAYS is as enthusiastic as ever over his Bersau—Flying Rumor colt, which has been christened Flying Word. This youngster is a bay in color and is a well developed, substantially made colt. Dr. Bernays bought him last fall from Abe Cahn and has him engaged in a large number of valuable stakes on the Western and Eastern circuits. Flying Word is in the Futurity. He will probably make his debut in the Kindergarten Stakes at the St. Louis Fair Grounds.

The great race of four miles 856 yards run in England this spring, during a blinding snow storm, in nine minutes 43½ seconds, does not indicate a deterioration of pluck and endurance in the English race horse. Commenting upon this race a writer says: Taking into consideration the state of the track, which must have been in a very slippery condition, also the number of jumps in the course, and the season of the year, makes it a most remarkable exhibition of nerve, force, courage and endurance, and still proves that the thoroughbred is still holding his own.

THE Sacramento Bee is authority for the report that Edward Corrigan, one of the best-known horsemen in the United States, has established a breeding farm on the old Monument Ranch in this county near the Sacramento river, and expects to make it famous in the State for fine results. The Monument Ranch, containing 400 acres, was formerly the property of the late Senator James G. Fair, and is said to be favorably located for this purpose. Mr. Corrigan has sixty head of fine stock there now. It is his intention to construct a private race course on the place and otherwise improve it.

OUR much esteemed friend, Hugh Keough, has been appointed patrol judge for the Lakeside and Harlem meetings. Hugh's newspaper work will probably be confined to the World of Sport, a very excellent publication just started in Chicago, and in which Col. John D. Hopkins and Charles E. ("Parson") Davies are interested. Keough will attend to the racing department of the paper. The first number of the World of Sport was very creditable, and nearly everything worth covering in the line of sport was written about. The paper can scarcely fail to be a financial success. It is already a success in an artistic sense.

ABOUT a score of sporting men of this city attended the races under the auspices of the Petaluma Jockey Club Sunday. There was also a large contingent from Sebastopol. The events were as follows: First race, half-mile dash—Won by Frank S., King Kraft second; time, 0:48½. Second race, 3/8 mile dash—Won by Homestead; Stella second; time, 36 seconds. Third race, 1/2 mile dash—Won by Mollie A., King Kraft second; time, 1:18. Fourth race, 3/8 mile match—Won by Lulu B., Frank S. second; time 35 seconds. Bob Malone was starter. The judges were Charles Northup, John Lawrence and F. M. Cooper.—Santa Rosa Democrat.

AFTER St. Calatine had easily won the last race May 6th there was excitement galore. The St. Carlo mare was entered to be sold for $500, and By Holly ran her up to $1,000, when Sam Hildreth bid $1,050, at which price she was sold to him. The excitement comes over the fact that St. Calatine is owned by J. D. McSweeney, who mortgaged the mare to P. G. Lynch to secure a note of $402 payable on May 30th. Lynch turned the mare over to Sam Hildreth to train, and he had absolutely no right to enter a valuable mare like this one for $500. McSweeney intimates that there is a conspiracy to get the mare away from him. He will resort to legal methods to recover possession of St. Calatine.

THE turfmen were highly amused yesterday at the clever way in which the Widder stable secured the well-known race horse Rubicon for $300 at Sheriff's sale. With the exception of Trainer Short, there was not a single racing man at the sale. Racing was going on at Oakland and the horse was sold at Lakeside, the only outsider present being one of Galen Brown's rubbers, who only had $10 with him and could not afford to take chances by bidding. He was present by accident and not by request. As the horse cost Widder & Co. $2,500 and was sold for $300, it is extremely probable that the sale will be set aside by the courts, particularly as it is common gossip that several well-known racehorse owners were willing to go to $1,500 or $2,000 for the crack weight-packer.

JUST as soon as the weather will permit, T. W. Coulter will get old Red Skin ready. He is in good condition, and all he needs to fit him for a race is work. Jockey Gray, who had the mount on Bonita, and W. H. Martin, who was riding Papa Harry, were fined $10 each by Starter Dwyer for delaying the start in the third race. Monte Fosse, who was supposed to have broken down hopelessly at Ingall's park last summer, is ready to race again. Louis Ezell says he will start him before the close of the present meeting. Malachi Hogan went out to Lakeside yesterday to see his namesake, a 3-year-old maiden by Logic—Queen Bess, perform. The horse was in the third race. Hogan said after the race that he did not remember ever having injured the owner of the horse, and he wondered what the man had against him.—Chicago Inter Ocean, May 7.

WE have just received the following communication, which is of interest to owners of thoroughbreds: NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 5, 1898.—Dear Sir: Notwithstanding that the Tennessee Breeders Association claimed dates early last winter for its spring meeting in 1898, the fact was overlooked or ignored by other racing associations, and we were forced to run off our program the first week in April, in face of bad weather and at a season of the year when a loss was a certainty. That there may be no misunderstanding regarding our meeting in the spring of 1899, we desire to acquaint you with the fact that we have selected April 27th to May 6th. The statement has been circulated by irresponsible persons to the effect that the Cumberland Park track would be closed to racing on account of the losses sustained by the management. This is entirely erroneous. It is true that the association did lose some money on its April meeting, but no other result was counted on, and it is gratifying to state that not a dollar of indebtedness stares the association in the face. Please remember that the dates for our spring meeting in 1899 are April 27th to May 6th. Respectfully, J. W. RUSSELL, Secretary.

TURFMAN MATT STORN has two Del Norte yearlings that he will take up next fall. They are respectively a chestnut colt from Emma Collier (dam of Rey del Bandidos) and a black filly from Miss Cromwell (dam of Morelito). Both are good lookers. His Preceptress, by imp. Maxim—Teacher, by imp. Billet, ten days ago foaled a bay colt by Jack Richelieu or Paryear D. (thinks it by the latter), and a handsomer youngster would be hard to find. Emma Collier has an exceedingly handsome suckling filly by Paryear D. He was foaled about two weeks ago. Miss Cromwell is expected to foal to Paryear D. at any time. Easel, Miss Cromwell and Preceptress will be bred to Eolo, A. B. Spreckels' great horse, and Emma Collier has been mated with Royal Flush. All of the above are at Willmans Bros.' ranch, Newman, Stanislaus Co.

AT the recent Auckland (N. Z.) meeting, Miss Anna, 3, by St. Hippo—Anna, won the Tradesman's Plate Handicap, one mile. Hermosa, ch f by St. Leger—Lady Evelyn, was first in the Northern Champagne Stakes, St. Ursula (by St. Leger—Satanella) second. Rex, ch g, 5, by St. Leger—Jessie, captured the Easter Handicap with 104 pounds up. The Eden Handicap, seven furlongs, was won by Hon. J. D. Ormond's b g Nansen, by Dreadnought—Norsemaid, with 106 pounds up. Daytree, rn c, by Castor—Vivandiere, won the Onslow Stakes Handicap with 121 pounds up. Rex won the Railway Handicap with 129 pounds on. Crusoe, by Cruiser, finished first in the Stewards' Handicap, Roxana, by Cuirassier, took the Ellerslie Handicap, the b f Waiorongamai, by Hotchkiss, the Autumn Handicap with 109 pounds up; Magpie, by Betrayer (brother to Sir Modred) the Autumn Steeplechase Handicap and the Flying Handicap by Miss Emmy, daughter of Cuirassier—Roie.

THE Champagne Stakes, for two-year olds, was won April 11th at the Canterbury (N. Z.) meeting by Mr. G. G. Stead's br c Altair, by Castor (sire of imp. Ivy) out of Cissy. Cannonshot, Mr. H. Freeland's five-year-old b g by Artillery (now at Rancho del Paso) out of Rosedale, won the Great Easter Handicap with 117 pounds up, Doris by St. Leger second and Firefly (also by Artillery) third. Djin Djin (who ran second in the Champagne Stakes) won the Autumn Nursery Handicap with 125 pounds up. He is by Apremont—Dudu. Gold Leaf, Sir G. Clifford's ch f, 3, by Stonyhurst—Golden Crest, by Apremont, won the Great Autumn Handicap, mile and a half, in 2:36 4/5, 98 pounds up. Starshot (by Chainshot—Veno) second with 108 pounds. Tirant d'Eau (by Jet d'Eau—Tirallie), 102 pounds, third. Mr. G. G. Stead's b c Multiform (by Hotchkiss—Formo, by Sterlingworth; second dam imp. Pulchra, by Rosicrucian; third dam Formosa (winner St. Leger, 2,000 Guineas and 1,000 Guineas, 1888, by Buccaneer) won the Challenge Stakes for the second time, on this occasion (he is a three-year-old) carrying 130 pounds; time, 1:28½. Gold Medallist was second and Dundas third.

OF the destination of the horses that have been taking part in the racing at Newport the Enquirer says: "Most of the horses will go to Chicago, St. Louis and Louisville. The stables that have gone or will go to Chicago are as follows: Chris Brossman, W. M. Rogers, Clint De Witt, C. H. Williams & Co., D. C. Shafer, C. C. McCafferty, J. R. Hand, C. A. Freudenberg, E. T. Graves. Among the horses in that consignment are: Imp, Richard J., Miss Gussie, Meddler, Balk Line, What Next, McCarren, Pop Dixon, Albert S., Lobengula, W. C. T., etc. 'Gene Leigh will divide his big stable, in which there are now 23 horses, one division going to Chicago and the other to St. Louis. Others that will go to St. Louis are J. H. Smith, L. W. Benson, Alex Shields, T. D. Carter, W. J. Steele & Co., J. R. Bagley, H. Higgins and M. Mack. To Louisville go the horses of T. C. McDowell, Clay & Woodford, John E. Madden, Charles Anderson, M. B. Harned, S. K. Hughes, J. B. Respass, W. H. May & Son, James Smith and others. Edward Fee, G. H. Brown and L. Winder will go from here to Detroit to race on the Canadian circuit."

WHAT may appear to laymen as a very small matter seems to have exerted an influence at Memphis in inducing turfmen who were hesitating between Chicago and St. Louis in favor of striving for purses and stakes in this vicinity. Just before the close of the Memphis meeting Dr. Bernays, representing the St. Louis Fair association, went to the Tennessee metropolis for the purpose of influencing owners to race their strings at St. Louis. He was meeting with considerable success until, in an unguarded moment, he made the statement that there would be no recall flag at the Missouri track. The best of the division racing at Memphis—John W. Schorr, George C. Bennett, Pat Dunne, Abe and Lou Cahn among them—happened to be firm believers in the recall flag, and immediately following Dr. Bernays' announcement there was a blurring of prospects for a large contingent from Memphis going to St. Louis. Starter Dick Dwyer is a firm believer in the recall flag, and it will be in use at Lakeside when that track opens Thursday. Speaking of the recall flag yesterday, Starter Dwyer said: "I wouldn't think of starting a race without the recall flag. It certainly will be used at all tracks where I officiate this year."—Inter Ocean.

FAILURE from lack of advertising was never better illustrated than yesterday at Ingleside track, when Rubicon, a high-class race horse, was sold at Sheriff's sale for $300. The horse belonged to ex-Treasurer Widder, and was valued at about $3,000. He cost the former city official $2,500 not long ago. With the exception of the one man who bought Rubicon, few knew there was a sale. It was supposed the horse would be sold to-day, and no one on the Oakland track yesterday afternoon credited the statement that he had been sold for $300. The lucky owner of Rubicon now is Ned Langan, the politician, and incidentally a partner, to a certain extent, of A. C. Widder, T. A. McGowan and W. Short. Short will retain the horse. Rubicon has attracted a good deal of attention on this Coast. He was a first-class race horse in the East, and when Tommy Griffin disposed of him to Tom McGowan for $2,500, McGowan was congratulated on his purchase. Weight never seemed to bother the horse, and anyone could ride him. Amateurs, gentlemen jockeys and bad jockeys all came alike to him. Naturally there was constant inquiry as to when and where he would be sold. Walter Hobart, the millionaire turfman, wanted to buy him privately; Ed. Corrigan was also in the market, and several other prominent turfmen announced how much they would give for him, but none had a chance, for he was quietly knocked down to Lanigan's agent yesterday at the Ingleside track.

The Owner's Opportunity.

From reports that come to this office from all parts of the State, the majority of California farmers are missing an opportunity this year. In spite of the fact that all signs point to a great scarcity of good horses within another twelve-month, very few mares are being bred, and as sure as the night follows the day the few who have had foresight to take advantage of the situation will reap a rich profit as a result. The scarcity of pasture and the high prices for hay and grain which have prevailed this spring are no doubt the causes of so many owners refusing to breed their mares, but they are making a mistake that will be a costly one to them. It will not cost any more to feed a mare after she is bred, and there is a probability that amounts almost to an absolute certainty that hay will be very cheap next spring and horses very high.

Of course plug horses will not be valuable—in fact there never has been a time that they were—but well bred, fair sized, well broke road and work horses will be in such scant supply in California in a year's time that it would not be surprising if the breeding farms of other states would have to be drawn on to supply the local demand. At the present time good sound stylish road horses do not go begging. The demand in the East is increasing for both track and road animals, while there are at the present time a half dozen European buyers travelling through the Eastern and Middle States and failing to find all they want. In view of this state of things, California farmers are surely shortsighted if they do not breed their best mares this year. There is yet another month of the season left and the owner who allows his good mares to go barren will certainly be throwing away an opportunity of making sure money.

The Big Stock Farms.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Nearly every horse paper is bewailing the fact that the big stock farms are going out of the business. I fail to see why the passing of the big farm should be deplored. The American trotter does not owe his existence to the big farm. It was the small breeder who bred and brought into popularity the light harness horse, and it was the big farm that afterwards played the "corporation" act and monopolized the sales ring and the race track.

The American trotter and pacer were popular before the big stock farms came into existence, and they will continue to attract the attention of the public even though every big farm in America should retire from the breeding and training business, and not a horse be left to score down for the word except those bred by the owner of a few mares. Alix, the champion of all the trotters, was bred by a small breeder, and so was Star Pointer, the champion of all the pacers. Directum, 2:05½, is the champion trotting stallion, and he was bred by Thos. H. Green, of Dublin, California, a gentleman who is one of the small breeders. The breaking up of the big farms is not such a calamity as it would seem.

SUBSCRIBER.

American Fails to Concur.

The American Trotting association held its biennial congress at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, Tuesday, May 3d, and the principal matter to come up was a request from the National Trotting Association to follow its action in the matter of licensing drivers and in doing away with hobbles after the present year closes. By way of bringing the matter up in proper form for discussion and action, amendments were proposed to the by laws licensing drivers and doing away with hobbles as the National association has done. There was very little discussion of the proposed departures and when a vote was taken the amendment licensing drivers was rejected by a vote of 204 to 2, and the one doing away with hobbles was thrown out by a vote of 204 to 4. This action was taken to mean by those who discussed it in the lobby the declaration of a war of more than passing importance between the two governing organizations of the harness racing world.

The congress took up another matter of its own volition, which will be favorably accepted among the subjects of the association. It voted to go back to the distances changed three years ago, and hereafter the rules will again prescribe 100 and 150 yards instead of 100 and 75 yards. As the change of three years ago was not a popular one, the action of the association in going back to former rules will prove a popular one.

Roll call showed 208 members represented at the congress, either in person or by proxy. There were present about thirty representative members, among them the following: W. P. Ijams, Terre Haute; G. B. McGill, Oskaloosa, Iowa; N. J. Coleman, St. Louis; E. C. Lewis, Chicago; T. H. Gill, Milwaukee; F. T. Moran, Detroit; J. W. Fleming, Columbus, Ohio; J. H. Ogleby, Kansas City; C. F. Strohm, Kentland, Ind.; E. E. P. Truesdell, Belvidere, Ill.; George H. Ely, Elvria, Ohio; W. I. Tenny, Troy, Ohio; C. H. Briggs, Omaha, and Secretary J. H. Steiner. E. C. Lewis was made permanent chairman and Secretary Steiner was re-elected permanent secretary.

Four Days at Salt Lake.

The Jordan Driving Club, whose members are Salt Lake harness enthusiasts, has completed arrangements for a four days' race meeting to be held at Agricultural Park May 30th and 31st and June 1st and 2d. Since the announcement of the preliminary plans for this meeting about a month ago, money has been subscribed, a certificate of membership in the American Trotting Association has been secured and Secretary H. B. Cole has been busy looking after repairs at the park. The track has been worked, fences repaired, stables renovated and other improvements made.

The officers of the club are as follows: E. H. Airis, president; J. M. Easton, vice-president; H. B. Cole, secretary; C. K. McCormick, treasurer; H. T. Duke, director.

Entries for all events will close May 20th. It is believed that several stables from the West may stop over. Besides the scheduled events, there will be two or more special races each day.

Following is the program of races:

First day, May 30th—Two-year-old trot (Utah horses), 2 in 3, half mile heats, $100; 2:24 trot, $300; 2:17 pace, $300. Second day, May 31st—3:00 trot, $250; 2:28 pace, $300. Third day, June 1st—3:00 pace, $250; free-for-all trot, $300. Fourth day, June 2d—2:35 trot, $300; free-for-all pace, $300.

A Day's Sport at Hollister.

There was quite a crowd at the Hollister track May 1st, although the weather was very disagreeable, a cold wind blowing all day and clouds of dust filling the air. Two races were brought off, the first a free for all trot for a fine set of buggy harness. In this race there were four entries, W. S. Clark's "Favor," P. L. Nash's Menlo Belle, W. E. Detels "Lindo" and N. Jessen's "Sleepy Charlie." "Favor" won in three straight heats and the others finished in the order named. The best time was 2:26. Menlo Belle showed great bursts of speed in this race, but could not be made to trot a full mile. A race for buggy horses had four starters and took four heats to decide, Daubenbis Bros.' "Daisy Bell" finally winning, though Jerry Wright's "Fly" won the third heat in the best time made in the race 2:51. Mr. Hellman is to be congratulated on arranging a splendid day's sport for the Hollister people and it is unfortunate that the weather was so unpropitious.

HUNT up a fine mare, good size, with fine trotting action for brood mare. In selecting one be sure she is sound, has quality, good head, long neck and well set ears. She should also have well-defined, frictionless action and show quite a good deal of speed naturally. She should not be of a sluggish nature, but on the contrary should be wide awake and ready and willing to road ten miles an hour without urging. A good brood mare of trotting-bred kind, properly mated will, in time, return a good profit on the investment. She is a valuable piece of property.

A Common Sense View of Horse-Shoeing

The horse-shoeing subject is of grave importance, and well merits the attention that is now being given to it, says a writer in the Spirit of the West. When used as a means of preserving and correcting the complicated structures, not only in but contiguous to the foot proper, horse-shoeing may be said to be yet in a very incipient stage of development.

That there should be different and highly antagonistic views as to the best method of reaching a desirable end need create no great surprise. Philosophy and practical science as applied to the question in hand are yet in the crucible. Later on conflicting theories will become modified and made consistent with each other, and then great good will have been accomplished.

It is true that theorists are impractical. Printed matter as all know, is a guide to mechanics, but it requires absolute practice to bring perfection and to enlarge the scope of intelligence in any mechanics. In the trade of horse-shoeing we can, in a sense, find an exception to this general rule of theory. We as a class do not study enough. Our practical ideas are somewhat clouded by a rather visionary application to our purposes; we require and must continually enlarge our ideas. The farrier who neglects the study of the horse's anatomy must certainly remain behind the times, for his ideas must continually become clouded and befogged; whether in business or social life he is handicapped.

The scientific development noticed in the horse-shoeing trade is wonderful and full of pleasure. Regarding the necessity of shoeing, for sidebones:

In order to treat a disease of the foot by shoeing, the farrier must in the first place understand the nature of the disease, and he must also know the cause, and after he thoroughly understands these two most essential parts he may hope to be fairly successful in his treatment.

Sidebones, after they are fully developed or once formed, are incurable, as they are nothing more or less than ossified cartilage, that is, the cartilage converts into the form of bone, and becomes solidly attached to the wings of the os pedis or coffin bone and grows upwards, and when cartilage once becomes ossified it is impossible to convert that ossification back to its natural state, thus making the disease incurable. With proper shoeing the horse may be given great relief and when the shoes are properly made, fitted, and adjusted, will seldom, if ever, go lame. Now as sidebones are incurable after they can be seen externally, and as there is no means of knowing of their existence until they can be seen, it is the duty of the shoer to use means to prevent their forming. As soon as contraction is observable, whether the horse is lame or not, the shoer should use some means to expand the foot, that can be done by proper shoeing, and by so doing will usually prevent the formation of sidebones. The foot should never be allowed to become dry and hard, the frog should be soft and yielding to the touch, and to keep the foot in such condition balancing and leveling is absolutely necessary, and standing at an angle of degrees to suit the line. If the foot is kept in constant use by letting the frog come in contact with the ground, it will do a great deal in keeping the foot free from disease. When calkings are used on the shoe, it becomes the duty of the groom, to a certain extent, to keep the foot in a healthy condition, for if he allows the horse to stand on a dry floor without using any artificial means to keep the foot moist, and allows the shoe to remain on too long, contraction and disease will surely follow. Sidebones may be produced by improper leveling of the foot, or uneven calkings on the shoes, thus throwing the weight of the horse all on one side, causing inflammation of the cartilage, and producing ossification, but the most common cause is contraction and the feet most affected will be found to be strong and solid, and when badly contracted the walls pressed so solid against the sensitive laminae, that great inflammation is the result, which, in turn, produces ossification of the cartilage. Now to properly shoe a horse for sidebones, we must take into consideration the condition of the disease and the class of horses we are shoeing. If the horse is lame, a bar should be used with a good bearing surface for the frog; the frog must be soft and spongy.

If calkings are necessary a four-calked shoe will be found very practical and its use will attain good results because it brings the center of gravity more directly under the bearing of the bones of the foot. To keep your horses feet strong as nature made them, level and balance them as I have sufficiently pointed out. Pare away as little of the sole, frog and bars as possible to accomplish this end in the proper way, then adjust as plain and light a shoe as accurately to the hoof as may be done, and lastly, fasten it on with no larger nor more nails than are judged sufficient to make it secure in position for a reasonable length of time, and I will guarantee on the strength of long years of experience and close observation, that the fruitful source from which arise the many dangerous compressions, inflammations, etc., already mentioned will be obviated, and you will have learned, without the aid of other tutor, the great scientific lesson of rational horse shoeing; if not all, a little to stand on.

JOHN DICKERSON will feel quite at home this season on the Eastern circuits, as he has a number of youngsters in his string by Guy Wilkes, Sable Wilkes and Oro Wilkes.

Sulky Notes.

OLD Hal Pointer will be raced again this year.

PRINCE IDLE, by Dexter Prince, is one of the fastest three-year olds ever trained at Cleveland.

THE stock returns from New South Wales show a decrease of 21,900 horses, caused by recent drouths.

THE trotting season, which opened in France early in March, bids fair to be one of the most active in many years.

MILLARD SAUNDERS is now at Cleveland, Ohio with a string of horses that will be heard from during the season of 1898.

THE pacer, Our Boy, that is out as a guideless wonder in the East, is not the San Jose pacer, Our Boy, 2:12½, by Vernon Boy.

THOMAS O'GRADY, who has Ottinger, 2:09½, in his stable at Philadelphia, thinks the California horse will reduce his record this year.

THE horse that Gen. Miles will ride in the Cuban campaign is a trotting-bred stallion, which has been wintered at Oradell, New Jersey.

THE fastest mile of the season at Selma, Ala., was worked Saturday, April 23d, by Tommy Britton and The Abbott in 2:15½, last half in 1:05½.

FRED W. WINHAM of Salinas, has purchased of Tom Clark of Gonzales the fine roadster, Billy Oaks 2:30, by John Sevenoaks, a son of Nutwood.

D. M'DONALD, of Wildflower, Fresno county, has sold a pair of standard bred mares to J. N. Barrett of Iowa, for $600. The mares are well matched blacks.

EXPEDITION, son of Electioneer and Lady Russell, full sister to Maud S., is at the Woodburn Farm, Kentucky, and is getting quite a patronage at a fee of $100.

KNOX COUNTY, Maine, horsemen have organized a syndicate for the purpose of purchasing a highly-bred stallion. This is an entirely new feature in that section.

JOE THAYER, Lexington, says he will match his yearling filly, Futurity Belle, by Electric Belle, dam by Red Wilkes, against any yearling in the country for $500 a side.

GEO. F. BECKERS has purchased Nadine, the dam of Betonica (3) 2:10½, by Wildidle, from Norah by Messenger Duroc, and has bred her to his great horse Zombro 2:11.

A REPORT comes from Europe that C. J. Hamlin will send a trotter of 2:10 calibre to compete under his own colors in the international celors at Vienna and Baden this season.

CALIFORNIA horsemen will keep an eye on the Fasig sales to see what Betonica brings. No better advertised horse ever went from this State to an eastern auction ring.

GOOD stallions are commanding plenty of attention this spring. Those who do not breed their best mares to good horses will wish they had long before foaling time next fall.

THE light harness horse is as popular as ever in this country. Over 400 dates have already been claimed for trotting and pacing meetings this year, and these figures will be doubled.

H. S. HOGABOOM will be among the California trainers trying to win money on some of the Eastern circuits this year. He will take Humboldt Maid, 2:13½ and several other good ones with him.

AN offer of $4,000 has been refused for Pearl Onward, 2:06½. Her owner, J. H. Bronson of New Haven, thinks she can beat any mare living, and expects her to hold the record for pacing mares next fall.

TOGGLES, 2:12½, is to be sold at the Blue Ribbon sale in Cleveland next week. He is a grand roadster, and though very fast, never showed racing qualities. Few horses could beat him to the half-mile post however.

TWO-YEAR-OLD colt races will not be numerous in California this year. The State Fair two-year-old trotting and pacing Stakes for 1898 have failed to fill, and have been declared off and money returned to the few who made entries.

J. B. IVERSON, of Salinas, has recently sold a team of roadsters for $600. Another team owned by this gentleman, Uncle Johnny, 2:19½, and mate were sold for a sum which is not given out, but that will take four figures to express.

W. A. STOREY's mare Mae, full sister to the dam of Bill Frazier, has foaled a bay colt by Pricemont. This youngster is a brother in blood to the noted pacer Bill Frazier, and if nothing happens he will add laurels to the family name.—Rural Spirit.

MAKE your calculations so that nothing will interfere with your attendance at the adjourned annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association which will take place at 22½ Geary street in this city, Thursday evening, June 26th.

SECRETARY GILES, of the Cleveland (Ohio) Park has arranged a programme that cannot fail to attract entries. None of the purses are less than $2,000, and there are six of $2,500 each. Cleveland is a large city and harness racing is well patronized there.

ENTER your horses in the races to be given by the Alameda Driving Club at its track on Memorial Day. There will be a good day's sport and it will be an excellent opportunity to give your horse the very sort of work he needs to fit him for the races next month.

BAYWOOD, 2:10, is looking well and showing all his old-time speed under J. M. Nelson's care at the Alameda track. Mr. Nelson drove him a mile in 2:16½ last Tuesday, and the last half was paced in 1:04. Baywood should be able to reduce his record a second or two this year.

CHAS. L. GRIFFITH has sent to the Fasig sale which opens next Monday, Flying Jib, 2:04, Miss Margaret 2:11½, Erastus C. 2:22 by Palo Alto, Alto Vela by Palo Alto, and Miss Creighton by Direct. Mr. Alvise shipped his mare Rosita A. 2:14½ with Mr. Griffiths consignment.

THE Oakwood Park Stock Farm will not have a stable of horses on the circuit this year. Owing to the scarcity of water at the farm, the track cannot be kept in condition for training, and Mr. Boyd has decided to turn the colts and fillies out and not enter them in this year's events.

GEN. B. F. TRACY, who disposed of the majority of his stallions and brood mares at auction while he was in President Harrison's cabinet, has recently purchased the celebrated Stony Ford Farm, in Orange county, New York, and will again enter upon the breeding of trotting horses.

ANDY McDOWELL's string which left Pleasanton last Tuesday for Denver consisted of Caryle Carne, 2:11½; Lena N., 2:12½; Dr. Leek, 2:15½, and Dolly Marshutz and Fanny Putnam, green trotters. Dr. Robinson, owner of the trotter Dr. Leek, will accompany Mr. McDowell on the Eastern trip.

THE famous trotting mare, Alix, who holds the world's record at 2:03½, has been purchased by F. C. Sailes, of Pawtucket, R. I., from Morris L. Jones, of Red Oak, Ia. The purchaser is a prominent horse-breeder, and it is believed that Alix will be used as a brood mare and be bred to Sable Wilkes.

DESDAMONA, 2:21, by Silver Bow, dam Topsy, by Fordstan, is one of the handsomest mares in training in California. She is a blood bay and was bred by P. W. Williams, who has her at Alameda. De-damona won several races last year and trotted to her record in a six-heat race which she won at Spokane.

TOMMY KEATING's stable which consists of Searchlight, Anaconda, Dione, Klatawa, Stam B., and Owyhee should be a great money winning string. There is not a horse in the lot but can go faster than his record when right, and in Mr. Keating's hands they are very liable to be in good condition the most of the time.

A PICTURE of Freedom, the first yearling to beat 2:30, as he now is appears in the current issue of the American Horse Breeder, and shows the black son of Sable Wilkes to have developed into a remarkably handsome horse. There will be many youngsters offered at the Corbett sale June 23, that are as well bred and as promising as Freedom.

THE Wilkes blood wins the most money in the races, brings the most money in the sales ring and demands the highest price for export to Europe. A grand opportunity to get some of the best Wilkes blood in existence will be offered at the Corbett sale to take place at the San Mateo Stock Farm at Burlingame, June 2d. Killip & Co. conduct the sale.

CAPTAIN TUTTLE, of Goshen, New York, will campaign a stable of horses this season, including Lottie Loraine, 2:05½; Dan Q., 2:08½, and B. B., 2:12½ and he has already decided on the colors they will parade in before the grand stand. He has ordered suits and caps for all his employees; and will insist that they wear them whenever they appear in front of the grand stand. His colors are white with gold trimmings.

THERE is an unnamed gelding in Chas. A. Winship's string at Los Angeles that is said to be a splendid prospect for this year. He is by Raymond a son of Simmons, and is out of Gazelle, 2:11½, who is by Gossiper, also a son of Simmons. A year ago this gelding was unbroken, but upon being taken up and trained to harness showed a most excellent disposition and a great deal of speed. It is said that he likes company and is able to trot in 2:12.

HERE are some of the names that W. B. Fasig has given the races that will be given at Charter Oak Park in July under his management: Pilgrim trot, Declaration of Independence pace, Old Colony trot, Uncle Sam trot, Plymouth Rock trot, Revolution pace, Cuban trot, Fitzhugh Lee pace, Congress trot; Red White and Blue trot, Maine trot, Flying Squadron pace, Yankee Doodle trot, America pace, Stars and Stripes pace, and several others just as patriotic.

THE absence of Palo Alto and Oakwood Park from the meetings this year will leave the Rancho del Paso as the only one of the big breeding farms to have out a string of trotters. It will be in charge of "Vet" Tryon and in all probability will be one of the best that has ever been sent out by this farm. There is a grand opportunity this year for the small breeder, and the chances are that he will be quite numerous and as usual get away with many of the biggest stakes and purses.

JOHN REAMER, a horseman of Philadelphia published a deft recently in which he offered to match his trotter George C., 2:12½ by Ayer's Gift, against any trotter owned in the city of brotherly love for $1,000 a side, mile heats, best three in five. Before the ink on the paper in which this challenge was published had a chance to dry, Thomas Henry Jr., agreed to make the match and named either of his recent purchases, Ottinger or Lady Grace as ready to trot for the money.

FATHER W. D. MCKINNON, the well known priest of Suisun, who has bred and owned many good horses, has volunteered and will go to Manila with the boys of the First Regiment as chaplain. To show the esteem with which the reverend father is held at his home, all the stores in that town closed their doors yesterday, and the entire population of the town escorted him to the train, where farewells were said and patriotic addresses made by Superior Judge Buckels and others. No braver or gentler heart ever beat than that which throbs in Father McKinnon's breast, and his patriotism is of the highest order. May he return well and sound with our victorious army after the work which it has been enlisted to do has been performed.

THERE is a colt at Ewell Farm that I want to go on record about. I want to state that he is the fastest colt for his age in the world. He is a brother to Hal Braden, 2:07½, was eleven months old on the 22d inst., can beat a 2:20 gait without any training, and can show a 2:08 gait with six weeks' work. He has been named Consul General, for the most popular man in the South to-day, and is the grandest looking, strongest colt I ever saw. He is another Star Pointer over and over.—Trotwood.

ED GEERS owns a two-year-old black colt by Direct, dam by Brown Hal that he bred himself, which he never refers to except as his "two-minute pacer," and judging from the showing the colt has made of late, the title seems almost due him. He was brought from the pasture in January in very ordinary condition, broken in February, and April 12th, paced a quarter in 0:34½, last eighth in 0:16, alongside the Abbott, and never saw a hopple. Geers has turned him out for the year. The colt resembles his sire very much, is about fifteen hands, and a good individual from nose to heels.

THE most difficult problem in the world, no doubt, is to produce a useful, valuable horse from inferior parents. No one but an inferior man would undertake such a thing. Yet there are men who try such things every year. It seems almost impossible for some men to learn to try to do the right thing in raising horses. Even after a poor colt is foaled they will insist by their words that the only way to make valuable horses is to starve the colt for the first two or three years. Men of that kind no doubt have deficient vision.

THE Lemoore Track Association is having the race track put in good condition for the coming racing events on May 20th and May 21st. The track will be sprinkled and all other necessary work be performed for putting it in first-class condition. Fox & Sweetland are having a large number of stalls erected on the ground for the accommodation of the horses to be entered in the races, and, judging from the interest manifested by horsemen and the number of entries which will be made, the coming event will be a grand success.—Lemoore Leader.

THERE was a day of sport at Dixon, Solano county, Monday May 2d, and several races were decided over the Dixon Driving Park course. In the 2:40 trot there were four starters, Lena Holly, Aunty, Ingo and Mary P. Lena Holly won in three straight heats, the best time being 2:35. Mary P. got second money. Five horses started in a race for buggy horses. Hauston Ringer was the winner in each heat, and 2:47 the best time. There was a special pace between Little Maid and Albert M. The Maid won in 2:39. There was a large crowd present and the day was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

THERE are two full brothers to Mary Best, 2:12½, one a two year-old colt, the other a three-year-old gelding that will be in the Corbett sale, either one of which ought to make a race horse. Neither of them was in just the proper condition when the last consignment was sent East from the San Mateo Stock Farm, but are all right now and very promising. None of the colts or fillies on the farm are being worked for speed, but are simply jogged daily and handled so as to have them well broke and gentle by the time the sale comes off. As the feed on the ranch is most excellent this year, all the stock looks in the very pink of condition.

A LARGE crowd attended the races given by the Madera Race Club last Saturday and Sunday. The first race Saturday was a quarter of a mile and repeat for a purse of $25 and entrance fees, and was won by J. R. Birnett's horse Butcher Boy. The second race, a free-for-all half mile dash for a purse of $25, was won by Howard Well's mare Fly. The first race on Sunday was a half-mile mixed harness race for a purse of $50, between S. D. Tooker's Advance and Scheeler's horse Topsy J., the latter horse winning easily in two straight heats. The second race was a free-for-all half-mile dash. There were only two entries in this race, which was won by Sam Westfall's mare Lillie W.—Madera Mercury.

SAM GAMBLE, who is a pretty fair judge of a horse, said in this office the other day that in his opinion the bay gelding Indiana 2:11½, by King Belair, out of a mare by Woodford a son of Bonnie Scotland, is in line for championship honors. He was a three year old last season, and got his mark at Lexington in the fifth heat of a six heat race which he won after being laid up for three heats, and after his driver had been called to the grand stand and had the law laid down to him by Major Johnston, who was the presiding judge. Mr. Gamble says the way the colt went out and won after he was given his head convinced him that Indiana was one of the best ones out last year, and that he should be up in the first flight this year.

THE fast mare Honor (a full sister to the speedy stallion Melvar) bred and formerly owned by Capt. Ben E. Harris, has been bred again to Thos. Smith's George Washington. She has a large bay colt by him at her heels, which has been very appropriately named "Honorable Washington," and which, many good judges say, well deserves the distinguished name he bears, as he is an extra finely formed and well balanced colt, George Washington his sire, has scored many a mile low down in the 'teens, and had he not gone lame, might have reduced his mark to one of the smaller figures in the unit column. His mother though never trained, even now in her crippled condition, can show unlimited speed. Truly this colt is an encouragement to breeders for the adoption of that old adage, "and if at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

SUPERINTENDENT CASH HARVEY, of the Santa Ana track, is a veteran horseman of the old school who has taken in all the good the new has to give and discarded the bad. Few better posted men on horse matters will be found and none with clearer ideas or better judgment when it comes to common sense ideas of the turf. Mr. Harvey owns some promising horses himself and has some of the best roadsters in Southern California at his stables. Among these is his famous old broodmare Lady Florence. In harness Lady Florence has never been beaten on the road. She will soon foal to Ketchum. Prospects for the fall meeting are good. The Breeders Association wants the date selected, the first week in October, but unless arrangements can be made by the breeders with Los Angeles to advance the date of its 15-day meeting a week, Santa Ana will hold fast.—Anaheim Plain-dealer.

Jockey Club Proceedings.

The stewards of the Jockey Club held a meeting Tuesday afternoon. The complaint lodged against Jockey Samuel J. Doggett by James McLaughlin was referred to the chairman with power to reprimand.

August Belmont, James R. Keene and James Galway were appointed stewards for the Westchester Racing Association spring meeting.

The question as to the eligibility of the horses Gaspard and Hermano to race on Jockey Club courses was referred to a committee for further investigation.

The applications for reinstatement of Jockeys Edward D. Ellis, George Gordon, Charles Yetter, Joseph Guest, H. Morrissey, James F. Murphy and E. L. Leland were referred to a committee for report. The following licenses were granted:

Jockeys—John Corbley, Peter Clay, John Cunningham "Fred" Cowman, Charles Garrigan, "Bud" Haggins, John Hothersall, James Irving, T. McDonald, D. Maher, W. H. McDermott, T. Murphy, William Pickering, D. Rogers, M. Sheedy, "Tod" Sloan, John Slack, W. Simms, Hezekiah Seaton, Frank Warren, Wm. Valentine, H. Spencer.

Trainers—James Brown, Julius Bauer, Frank Brown, E. Byrne, T. E. Berry, John McCarthy, John A. Clark, Arthur Carter, J. W. Driscoll, O. J. Decker, Joseph M. Dooley, George R. Eastin, Paul Fox, Robert Flynn, T. J. Gaynor, A. J. Goldborough, Edward A. McGarry, F. E. Gardner, E. L. Graves, James Howard, E. W. Heffner, H. T. Hewitt, E. H. Hanna, William Hayward Jr., Michael Hogan, M. Jordan, N. J. Johnson, Edward Johnson, B. T. Littlefield, F. T. Miller, P. McCormick, T. Magee, Thomas Mooney, C. Merritt, R. M. Murray, William T. McGivney, J. D. Odom, A. D. Payne, John Ramsey, H. C. Riddle, John Rogers, Louis Stuart, E. A. Steeds, S. Trowbridge, Louis Tartar, John Webb, H. Warnkr, Jr.

Used With Success for Coked Ankles, Etc.

ANGOLA, Ind., June 22, 1897.

Wish to use "Gombault's Caustic Balsam" on an outside splint, and our dealer has not printed instructions, I would be thankful if you would mail me pamphlet. Have used the above remedy with success on coked ankles, curbs and enlarged glands, but want some instructions on this splint, as the patient is one of my favorite driving mares.

F. W. KINNEY.

THE first shipment this season of horses from Pleasanton for the Eastern racing circuit was made May 11th. The following stables were represented in the carload of trotters and pacers that went out: Crellin & Keating—Searchlight, Dione, Anasconda, Clatawah, Stam B. and Autrema; Andy McDowell—Lena N., Carle Carne, Della Marshutte and Fannie Putnam; J. Robinson—Dr. Leake. Andy McDowell, Dr. Robinson and T. E. Keating went with the car. They go direct to Denver, with a day layover at Ogden.

Dear Sir: I take pleasure in endorsing your Absorbine. It has entirely removed two osselets from a promising two-year-old colt without turning a hair, and left his limbs as clean as ever.

Very respectfully, JOHN KELLY.

A TELEGRAM from Versailles, Ky., May 6, says: "Dr. D. Neet's famous mare Cinderella, foaled a brown filly by Spendthrift, half sister to the Derby winner, Plaudit, and full sister to Hastings, the $37,000 colt. This is Cinderella's first filly, she having previously dropped nine colts in as many years.

TOMMY BURNS rode his first winner at the far East the first day of the Morris Park meeting, May 7. It was on Filon d'Or, from August Belmont's stable. The colt, who is by Imp. Rayon d'Or out of the grand mare Fides, beat Count Wernberg a head in 0:47 1/4 for half a mile.

DUKE OF HAVEN, the three year-old colt that has been winning so many races at Newport and Lakeside, is by Imp. Whistle Jacket out of Ada D., dam of Puryear D. A. B. Spreckels owns Puryear D., and sold a number of yearlings by him last winter.

GLENHEIM, the winner of the Juvenile stakes at Morris Park May 7th, is a brother to Handsome and a half-brother to Ferrier, Plaudit and Hastings being by Hanover—Imp. Cinderella. He carried 122 lbs. and won easily by a length.

In the second day's racing of the Newmarket (England) second spring meeting yesterday August Belmont's three-year-old chestnut colt Bridgroom II. won the Newmarket plate of 103 sovereigns. Six horses ran.

GENERAL GRANT AT THE RACES.—The approach from the railway cars to the Grand Stand of the California Jockey Club is a covered walk, and the structure is in harmony with the other buildings. On both sides, the skill of the landscape artist has been brought to bear, and a more pleasing picture of the kind troublesome to conceive. Lawns, grass never greener, pastures, shubbery a mass of bloom. Keats wrote "a thing of beauty is a joy forever," and the California Jockey Club has made every effort to please artistic tastes as well as to make the racing satisfactory.

Anyone who has a fancy for the bright side of life cannot fail to find pleasure in visiting these grounds, and whether during the excitement of the racing, or on a quiet Sunday afternoon a great deal to admire.

On the northern side of the approach the structure, which forms the frontispiece of this number, attracts a great deal of attention, and there is a mystery connected with it that enhances the interest. People stop and query, and when the legend on the panel below the balustrade is read, "St. Julian, 2:12½, October 25, 1879," those who have a knowledge of the "truly American horse," the fastest of all trotters, it is recognized that the stand was placed in its present situation to commemorate the winning of the "world's championship," nearly twenty years ago. That would seem hardly appropriate for a jockey club, a purely racing association, to do and a further explanation is required to account for placing the old stand in such a prominent position.

When St. Julian trotted that memorable mile General Grant was an occupant of the stand. Returning from his tour around the world, the Golden Gate Association, under the auspices of which St. Julian was given the opportunity to break the record of Rarus, sent an invitation for the General and his party to attend.

In order to round out the sport for the afternoon a three in five race was added to the programme in which seven horses were entered. St. Julian won in the first heat, taking half a second from the record of Rarus, and no one cheered more heartily than the renowned chieftain. Honored in every country on his long trip, such demonstrations of regard as were never exhibited to anyone before, he was of course the recipient of the homage of the assemblage. When he cheered and clapped his hands over the announcement that the record was beaten there were round after round of cheers, and when some one proposed three cheers for U. S. Grant the applause was continued so long that it seemed doubtful whether the next race could be brought off.

After the seven horses were brought on the track it was several minutes before there was sufficient break in the ovation to award the positions. General Grant superintended the balloting and when the positions were recorded, he turned to Senator Sharon and proposed that Mr. S. should select a horse and he would wager him a coin he held in his hand that his choice would win. A foreign coin, which he explained was equivalent to $2.50 and the Senator posted the amount in silver. Mr. Sharon selected a fine big bay horse with the somewhat plebeian name of "Pete," General Grant's choice a treppy going little grey mare, Lady Gertrude.

Pete won the first heat in 2:28, and the Senator was warmly congratulated on his acuteness in "picking a winner. "Only a skirmish," replied Gen'l Grant, the battle is not yet ended, and though the Senator has won one game in the long rubber, two more are necessary to gain the victory."

The second heat Pete was distanced in 2:30 and when the third heat was called, Mayor Bryant—one of the General's party—rushed up the stairs into the stand—it was then two stories—almost shouting in his eagerness to convey the intelligence "General! General!! we must take the next boat to be in time for the evening engagements." "I do not care for the boat," was the response, "I am going to see which of us has won that bet." I was acting as clerk of the course and informed him that he was already the winner. The horses were scoring for the third heat, the grey mare was still in; Pete no right to start. He had knowledge enough of trotting rules to understand that he had won the wager, and eagerly inquired "who holds the stakes?"

I endeavored to give the stakeholder, A. C. Dietz, an intimation to retain the money put up and give the winner a $5 coin, but did not succeed in conveying my meaning. That two dollar-and-a-half piece would have been a cherished memento of the most celebrated military genius of the century, for though the nineteenth century embraces Bonaparte, Wellington, many others of great renown, Grant must be given the first place. Robert E. Lee, perhaps, the nearest in ability. Hard to tell. Opportunity, backing, circumstances, and in giving the first place to General Grant it may be that the Simpson strain in his pedigree has a potent influence in fixing my favoritism.

"The fighting Grants of Langham," conspicuous figures in border warfare and "blood" certainly tells in men as well as horses.

The stand is there as a memento, and to President Williams of the California Jockey Club must be awarded the praise of appreciating the connection and preserving the structure which was honored by his occupancy.

And then, too, the fact that the foremost man in the nation, honored and respected in all countries, should so far endorse speculation on races as to give a further zest to the entertainment, by investing something on the "outcome," is an argument in favor of the practice which should not be overlooked.

This October day in 1879 was the second time I met General Grant in the judges stand. The first time was soon after the close of the war, and the following description, written at the time, will not be inappropriate in this connection.

During the last Illinois State Fair in 1865, the General, attended by a brilliant company of general officers, was present. Though he paid great attention to the various departments, it was soon evident which was of the most interest to him. An old man, whose appearance was striking from the peculiarity in his manner and apparel, came in to the judge's stand where the General was seated, and asked his permission to name a favorite colt, then on the ground, after him. The request was courteously acceded to by the hero, with the promise of visiting his namesake before he left the ground. The old gentleman withdrew to prepare the colt for the distinguished company, and on the approach of Grant, led him to the front of the stall. Well did he merit the encomiums bestowed on him by his breeder.

The whole group was striking, and as I looked at the few comprising it, I would have given a pretty good trotter to have had a faithful picture of the scene. The old man was apparently verging on that period of life allotted by the psalmist as its close, but possessing all the vigor of manhood. His form was tall, spare and sinewy, the right arm gone, yet with the left he controlled the bounding motions of the vigorous colt easily, the grace of whose movement was rather heightened, than otherwise, by the constraint. His hair was white, hanging in long locks down his back. His clothing was home-made, a kind of blue jean, that set off the tendentious frame to far better advantage than the smoother broadcloth would have done. The fire in the grey eye was as brilliant as ever flashed from beneath the silky veil of the most radiant belle. The animal was of course thoroughbred, a deep chestnut, with lithe limbs and glossy coat, his form possessing the symmetry due his breeding. The General's square, massive face expressed pleasure more than I had ever seen it while receiving the ovations of the most demonstrative crowd. General Logan, with one or two officers of the Agricultural Society and Driving Park Association, were the only persons present. The colt's bridle was decorated with knots of blue ribbons, betokening the first premiums he had received. The old man, after allowing a few minutes to elapse for the General to scan his beautiful proportions and lightness of movement, said, "There is your namesake, General. I have bred many a good colt, but this is the most likely one I ever raised. He has taken twelve blue ribbons, and nary red one."

The General very handsomely signified his admiration, and the old man replaced in the stall the colt whose elastic step was not a whit more buoyant than that of the man who had owned his progenitors for many generations. I am quite a hero-worshipper, yet I thought more of General Grant for the unassuming way with which he granted that old man's request, as if he were the party honored, than for all the battles he ever gained.

Wonderful changes since October 1879 in the Oakland race course. Should some one who was present when General Grant won his wager, and with a memory which faithfully recalled the victory, would see the same far outlying scenery. Tamalpais to the westward towering above adjacent mountains, the grand bay, the Contra Costa range, but in place of the few buildings in the neighborhood of the University the whole of the slope dotted with houses. Gardens then between the course and the railways and in place of the one line of rails, four different tracks, with trains sweeping by every few minutes.

The interior something like a transformation scene in a theater. Vegetable gardens replaced by grounds that are beautified to an extent that little seems wanting to make the picture complete. In place of dilapidated stables, and a grand stand, uncouth in appearance, every building a fitting accompaniment, adornments to the general view. And in the details happy combinations, nothing incongruous, nothing to offend the most cultivated taste.

Three sketches are appended the first

THE JUDGES' STAND.

Quite a difference from that of 1879, in which General Grant was the prominent figure, but it must be borne in mind that the lower story was cut away after that date, though at its best far inferior to the present structure. The lower story is the weighing room, the second the judges' "box," the upper the stewards' stand. Nearly a model, though I like the New Orleans stand better than any other. The secretary of the Crescent City Club kindly sent the working plans, but, unfortunately, they were mislaid, or it would have been reproduced on the Oakland track.

BURNS & WATERHOUSE STABLE.

The light was wrong, so that the north side in place of the front was all that could be obtained, and, therefore, the picture does not represent the stable as it is. Enough is shown, however, to display its magnitude when it is remembered that it is only one side of the quadrangle that is represented. On the south of the approach, occupying a part of the ornamental grounds, it is far from marring the harmony of the scene. Safe to say that it is the finest, in all its appointments, of any racing stable connected with a race course.

The Burns & Waterhouse stable is the only one on the part of the grounds that lie between the approach to the track from the San Francisco gate, the southern fence of the course and the driveway which leads from the Oakland gate to the grand stand. Between that driveway and the track is a lawn, shrubbery and flowers relieving the dark green of the grass, and forming one of the most pleasing pictures of all the many attractive features of the place.

THE OAKLAND GATE.

Looking from the south side of the grand stand, the above is a fair representation of the scene. Too small to give a good representation, and in order to afford an intelligent portrayal it would be necessary to give at least a score of pictures. More than that number when all the salient points are presented, and when the portraiture is completed of the metropolitan race courses Californians will have a right to be proud of the showing.

TULE FOR BEDDING STALLS.—One of the most trying expenses connected with training horses in California is straw for bedding. In the early part of the season, or, rather, soon after the grain has been harvested, straw in average seasons is at a reasonable price. Thirty or forty cents a bale, perhaps, and before the next crop comes in one dollar or more for the light bundles that are called bales.

Judging from all evidence presented now straw will be the most expensive thing connected with training horses the coming year. Already hay has dropped under importations made from Oregon, Nebraska, Kansas and Texas. So many acres planted with the expectation of producing grain that now must be utilized for forage, that even the scant Califor-

Why Incorporate?

In answer to that question and in reply to an article which appeared in the Special Department, Mr. Alfred H. Cohen has sent the following letter. Though brief it is a comprehensive statement of the objects of incorporation.

If Mr. Cohen's plea be correct—and he is certainly competent to know the law—then it will be manifestly unjust to hold any one member responsible for all the debts of the Association. No reasonable person will contend that a burden, which properly should be carried by all, should be transferred to one or even a portion of the members, but then comes the query: should the Association be incorporated will each member have to be sued individually to secure collection of the debt?

There is no desire, however, to discuss this point further than to state that for nine years the Association has not been troubled to carry on its business without being incorporated, and the only thing in the situation that makes it necessary to forsake its course is that there was a smaller balance in the treasury at the close of last season than in previous years. But in connection with this it must be borne in mind that when the Association was organized there was only a prospective revenue, viz. that arising from membership fees and annual dues.

One person advanced the money for the rental of the hall, and when the Secretary opened his books not a dollar on hand.

A copy of the circular sent by F. W. Kelley, the Secretary, to the members of the Association follows Mr. Cohen's communication. Something of the same argument, but entirely misleading. The opening paragraph is obviously not in accordance with the action of the meeting. That would lead to the belief that incorporation had already been effected, whereas the preliminary steps towards incorporation were all that was done.

Were the circular correct, then the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association is defunct. Again misleading, as it appears in the circular, "It was also noted that the corporation should retain the name of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association and that all the business, assets and stakes of this Association should be transferred to the association bearing the same name."

Should the claims in the circular be sustained by 'the minutes,' then the minutes are falsifications. But as the minutes have not been passed upon, that "annual meeting" not yet brought to a close, the Secretary far exceeds his powers in issuing such a circular.

In place of affording the information, which every member of the association was entitled to receive; in place of a plain statement of facts, an erroneous presentation, a cunningly contrived scheme to "hoodwink," and if done with the purpose of deception cannot be overlooked or condoned.

Taken in connection with the following:—a printed "sub-circular" is referred to in the main pronouncement—gives further proof of an intention to present things in a wrong light

"I, the undersigned, hereby consent to the transfer of the name and all stakes, memberships, accounts, assets and all other business of The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association to The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association, (incorporated).

Dated.....1898. Address.....

That sub-circular. The last paragraph in the main circular: "Deeming it advisable to get the endorsement of all who are interested, at the recent members' meeting, I was directed to send out blanks for that purpose. Kindly sign and return the enclosed blank on receipt of this, and oblige, F. W. Kelly, Sec'y."

The resolution was to get the signature of those having nominations in the stakes already closed to acquiesce in transferring them to another association.

By no means to include surrendering all the rights of members such as are expressed in the sub-circular.

The third paragraph of the circular tells what the association has done to forward the interests dependent on harness-racing.

A good showing. Nearly two hundred thousand dollars distributed in purses and stakes since the organization.

"Let well enough alone." In place of following "will-of-the-wisp" projects adhere to methods that have proved successful, and if there has been a disastrous one season, taking the mistakes made in 1897 for a guide, and following a course dictated by avoiding like blunders the Association will still prosper.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12, 1898.

MR. JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON—Dear Sir:—I think a wrong impression has unintentionally been given some members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. from reading the articles in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN on the subject of incorporation.

The object of incorporation is not to facilitate the collection of entrance money.

The P. C. T. H. B. A. and the members would be in no different position in that respect if incorporated than if not incorporated.

By incorporating, the members of the Association will not incur any greater liability or burden than would exist if the Association were not incorporated, but on the contrary, their liability will be lessened and incorporation will be an advantage to them in this respect. If the Association were not incorporated, any member could be sued and compelled to pay all of the indebtedness of the Association, while if the Association were incorporated a member could not be compelled to pay more than his pro rata or proportion of said indebtedness, from which it can be plainly seen that the incorporation of the Association would be a protection and a benefit to its members, and that is the only object of the incorporation. I have presented this matter at your request and trust you will publish the same in your paper so that the members of our Association may properly understand the object of our incorporation. Truly yours,

ALFRED H. COHEN.

CIRCULAR TO MEMBERS.

DEAR SIR:—To facilitate the business of the Association and to give it a legal standing in the courts it was resolved at the annual meeting to incorporate under the laws of the State governing corporations consisting of members without the issuance of capital stock. It was also voted that the Corporation should retain the name of The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association, and that all of the business, assets and stakes of this Association should be transferred to the Corporation bearing the same name.

The objects for which this Association was organized will not be changed by its being incorporated, but its scope of usefulness be increased and it will be in a position to promote the interests of the horsemen on this Coast.

The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association was organized in 1889. Since that time it has distributed $184,734 10 among the horsemen in purses and stakes. It has never failed to meet all of its obligations and has always been foremost in sustaining harness racing in California, making special efforts to do this during the dull times that have prevailed for several years past.

The fact that the Association is incorporated will not increase the liability of its members to it for obligations for entrance money, nor will it be in any different position to collect same by process of law than it would be if not incorporated. As the Association is now organized and until it is incorporated each member is individually liable, whether on the Board of Directors or not for the full amount of all debts that might be contracted by the Board. But, after incorporation; each member will only be liable for his pro rata.

In view of the big meeting advertised to commence next month it is desirable that the incorporation be effected as soon as possible.

Deeming it advisable to get the endorsement of all who are interested, at the recent members meeting I was directed to send out blanks for that purpose. Kindly sign and return the enclosed blank on receipt of this and oblige,

F. W. KELLEY, Sec'y.

P. S.—At a Directors meeting held on the 26th ult. the entrance fee for the summer meeting was reduced from 5 per cent to enter and 5 per cent from starters, to 5 per cent to enter and 5 per cent from winners. As the purses are divided into three moneys this is a very substantial reduction which the horsemen should appreciate.

THE California Jockey Club will have a brand-new sort of official next season, and he will be known as the Presiding Steward. This official, selected through his thorough knowledge of racing and racing men and his judgment on riding to win or to lose, will take up a position in the infield, opposite the timers' stand, in a box or stand built especially for his use. He will endeavor to watch the jockeys riding in races all the way down the homestretch. He will have the power to punish offenders by fine or suspension without asking the opinion of the remaining members of the Board of Stewards. The Presiding Steward will look especially to and punish those jockeys that pull up and do not ride their mounts out for place or show when they see they cannot win a race and also those that indulge in foul riding, "taking care of" some horse or horses in a race, acting as helper and interferer-in-chief, the pushers along of "good things," etc. The move by the club is a good one and we feel especially pleased because not long ago we urged this very thing and even went further and advised racing clubs to have stewards placed on every turn and at points near the track furthest from the judges' stand, where most of the crooked work is done. With five stewards to be stationed at different points alongside the track, taking mental note of everything that was going on in their territory, with the suspicious words or actions of riders reported immediately after each race and investigations and punishment following in quick order, it would be a bold jockey that would attempt anything wrong—this with the eyes of seven or eight sharp racing officials upon them, and these men listening also for any word that sounded strange and not exactly in keeping with honest racing. Then with a closer scrutiny of riders, the passage of some law by governing turf bodies that would go far toward keeping corrupting agents away from the riders, the practice of fraud would be reduced to a minimum. Of course it would be a harsh measure that would keep riders from going where they willed, but at the same time it would improve their moral standing and increase the public respect for jockeys. The governing turf bodies have it in their power to say to jockeys: "We will only issue licenses to those riders who agree to abstain from the excessive use of intoxicating liquors and who will not become frequenters during the racing season of saloons; and a proven violation of this pledge shall cause the forfeiture of the license of any rider against whom complaint is lodged."

THE Auction Sale of all the stallions, mares, colts and fillies on Wm. Corbitt's San Mateo Stock Farm which will take place June 2d, will furnish an opportunity for Californians to get some of the choicest animals in the State at their own prices. No safer investment can be made at this time than the purchase of a good brood-mare or a likely young colt or filly by any one of the stallions that Mr. Corbitt has used on his farm. It is almost a certainty that the prices of well-bred harness horses will be double what they now are before a year has passed. The youngsters by Guy Wilkes, Sable Wilkes, Oro Wilkes and Prince Airle, that are to be offered at this sale, will be very valuable next year and purchasers will be looking for them. Prince Airle is a grand young stallion, six years old, and could get a very low record if trained. He stands 16.1 and is of grand conformation. He is to be sold with the balance of the stock, and should be a good investment, as he has the making of a great stock horse. Everything on the ranch is to be sold absolutely without reserve, the order to sell being imperative.

THE more entries you make at the breeders meeting, the more chances you will have to earn some of that $20,000 which is to be hung up for trotters and pacers during the first two weeks. Look over the long list as published in our advertising columns and you will see that every class is provided for, and the dash system will permit you to race your horse several times each week. Of course this meeting will be something of an experiment, but after a careful study of the plan we are confident that the horsemen will be wondering after the first week why they did not adopt the plan years ago.

French Coach Stud Book of America.

Is there such a stud book? Mr. Dunham will oblige us by answering the question.

IN THE last issue of The Thoroughbred Record is reprinted a long article regarding the winners of the three great classic English races that appeared in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of April 23d. No credit whatever is given us for the article, which makes nearly a page of the Lexington paper, and while that was probably an oversight, we trust the Thoroughbred Record folks will see that justice is done us. The work entailed in getting up the table in that article was enormous, it is valuable to breeders of thoroughbreds throughout the world, and we feel sure the editor of Kentucky's chief journal devoted to the thoroughbred horse has no desire to deprive a co-laborer of the just credit of so much work and neither does he desire to brand himself a pirate by refusing to say that he took the article in question from the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

HORSEMEN who are going to Denver should remember that the entries to the trotting and pacing purses close tomorrow the 15th inst. These purses are all either $500 or $1,000 and as will be seen by the advertisement on the last page of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN are arranged for all classes from three minutes to free for all. The meeting begins June 11th and continues two weeks. It is certain to be one of the greatest meetings held in the West this year. Get your entries in to-morrow and don't forget it.

nia crop will be larger than many anticipate. Every acre which should have grown grain, but was cut for hay, shortens the straw product. Importations of straw from long distance is out of the question. How, then, shall the shortage be overcome? In my opinion easy to give a solution of that problem.

Partly theoretical, partly founded on actual tests that tules can be made to "fill the gap" and the only expense, cutting, packing in proper shape and shipment. The supply inexhaustible, and while in places, the cost of harvesting, and preparing for market, may preclude marketing from sections which will require extra labor to gather the crop, plenty of other localities that do not present such obstacles. I was informed by a person, who knew well of what he spoke, that there are thousands of acres of tule lands that are so dry that the scythe could be used in cutting, and some, perhaps, where a mowing machine could do the work. In the last named a self binding reaper would seem to be the best machine to handle the product. When the tules are so dry that there is no danger of "heating" then the self-binder would be the machine.

Twine used in place of iron to tie the bundles, and while baling might be the cheapest method of handling after cutting, bundles will find far more favor with grooms. Never so good bedding as rye straw, when the thrashing had been done with flails, and bound so that every straw was in place. The best carpet for a stall ever used, and while it looked somewhat harsh, when first put down, when the occupant of the box had trod on it a little while, a luxurious couch. Not up to that of the Sybarite who claimed that there was a crumpled roseleaf in his pillow, but satisfactory to hounbyhams as any one will admit that has taken the trouble to watch them in boxes or stalls.

When previous articles appeared in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN in relation to using tules for bedding, Wilber F. Smith sent a communication relating to the only practical test that I am acquainted with.

A lot of fruit trees were received, the outside covering of which was tules. When the trees were stripped there was a big heap of these gigantic rushes. To get them out of the way they were taken into the barn where they were used for bedding the work horses. So satisfactory the result that the boxes, in which were kept the fast ones, were also supplied and that was also a demonstration that tules were useful for the purpose of bedding.

From the present outlook at least, many thousand tons of good bedding, at a price that tules could be sold for, can be marketed in San Francisco and Oakland with the next year. Probably even after, for when it is fully known that bedding of tules can be substituted for straw, peat, moss, saw dust, sand or any other of the materials hitherto used, the "weeds," in place of only being fit for the covering of wine bottles, fruit trees, etc., will have an additional value.

A boon to those who have horses in training. Even in favorable years it is a fair assumption, that tules will replace all other kinds of bedding for horses, and when attention is called to adaptability for the purpose straw at the lowest prices prevailing will not enter into competition.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

At the San Jose Track.

A reporter of the San Jose Mercury recently paid a visit to the race track in that city and writes as follows of what he saw there:

Mr. Gordon has in training that "streak of lightning" F. W., 2:12½, the handsome brown pacer owned by F. W. Warren of San Jose. This horse showed his ability to pace in 2:08 last year. What he will do this year under the able guidance of Mr. Gordon remains to be seen.

In the same stable was also found Silver Arrow, by Silver Bow, 2:16, dam Nutwood Weeks (dam of the turf queen, Ethel Downs, 2:10) and a beautiful filly sired by Rupee, 2:11, owned by R. D. Fox, the nurseryman.

John S. Phippen, formerly of Palo Alto Stock Farm, where he spent sixteen years among the light harness horses, has in his charge Rinconada, 2:17¾, (brother to Wanda, 2:14¾), owned by Thomas Seale of Mayfield. If he does not capture some of the money, breeding, looks and training go for naught.

Boodle Jr., sired by Boodle, 2:22½ dam Nina B by Electioneer, owned by Hon. Jesse D. Carr of Salinas, occupies the next stall. Like all the Boodles, he has size style and speed.

Wild Nutting, a handsome stallion owned by W. H. Vioget, is also in Mr. Phippen's string. He has more speed than any horse this great driver has ever handled.

Sans Gene, a brown filly by McKinney, a pacer sired by Wildnut that is a regular cyclone, and a three-year-old by Azmoor sire of Betonica, 2:06¾, may also be found in Mr. Phippen's stable.

The largest stable and one of the choicest is that of the Nutwood Stock Farm, owned by the prominent car-builder of Newark, Martin Carter, and trained by William Cecil. At the head of this stable is Nutwood Wilkes, record of 2:16½. He is a handsome chestnut stallion, and it is well worth a trip to the track to see him.

In the same stable is Irvington Belle, 2:18½; Central Girl, a very fast mare; Peter Jackson, like his illustrious namesake, game to the core; a three-year-old named John A. McKerron. Talk about speed, we agree with Mr. Cecil when he says: "You just look out for this fellow when the bell taps." The reporter saw this colt step a mile in 2:22, which Mr. Cecil says is not anywhere near his limit. Mr. Cecil has several others in his stable with "all kinds of speed."

In the stable of C. C. Crippen, also formerly at Palo Alto Stock Farm, attention was called to a handsome black stallion named Leonel, record 2:17½, sired by Leo Wilkes, 2:29¾ (full brother to Sable Wilkes, 2:18). This horse is greatly "afflicted with speed" and Mr. Crippen says he will trot in 2:10 this year. Mr. Crippen was driving a green pacer called Rhoderick Dhu that strikes the fancy of all lovers of the horse for his frictionless gait and easy way of going. A promising aspirant of the Stanford Stakes sired by Will Direct and a mare by Menlo, dam Silver (dam of Marin Jr., 2:14) completes the string of Mr. Crippen.

Jerry West, for many years with Johnny Perkins of Jasper Ayres fame, has a sweet moving trotter, Lida, that will be "strictly in it."

George Y. Bollinger has in the hands of Clarence Hill the good mare Lady Thornhill, 2:17, a three-year-old by Baywood, and a yearling by Boodle, 2:12½, named Boodle Boy. This youngster may be seen almost any day on the streets, being led by the side of a saddle horse. He has already shown a 2:40 gait, and Mr. Bollinger is very "sweet on him."

In the string of "Farmer" Bunch are Iran Alto, 2:19½, Boodle, 2:12½, the great race horse and sire of race horses, Ethel Downs, Valentine, Thompson and Dr. Frasse, all good ones, game and fast.

Affairs at Hawaii.

Col. W. H. Cornwell has sent in his resignation as a member of the Executive Committee of the Hawaiian Jockey Club. There will be a meeting of the officers and committeemen of the club shortly to consider the resignation. It is very probable that it will not be accepted, for Col. Cornwell's fitness for the position which he wishes to retire from, is recognized by the Honolulu sporting fraternity.

Colonel Cornwell is a strong advocate for the adoption of the two-in-three heats method for light harness racing. His suggestions for a change have met with general approval. One horse owner has objected however, and while doing so "registered a kick" against Colonel Cornwell serving on the Executive Board for the reason that the Colonel is the owner of a big string of horses.

Colonel Cornwell had already notified his colleagues on the Executive Committee that he would have absolutely nothing to do with mapping out the race program for the Kamehameha day meet, for the reason that he was the owner of horses that would participate. Although this has not been the rule heretofore, Colonel Cornwell insisted that it be adopted.

A member of the Executive Committee said last evening that he believed Colonel Cornwell could be prevailed upon to remain on the committee.—Honolulu Advertiser.

Half Mile Heats at Ogden.

The crowd at the Ogden Driving Park May 8th afternoon, if not a large one, was an enthusiastic one. A lively afternoon of sport was the result. The judges gave entire satisfaction. They were Joseph Carlson, Colonel Swan, Judge J. D. Murphy, with Wm. Goan, time-keeper.

The track was rather slow on account of the heavy rain the night before; still some very fair trotting was seen. Owing to it being so early in the season, and the horses only in fairly good condition, half mile heats were the order.

There were three horses in the 2:40 class: A. B. Corey's Rockford, Chas. Farley's Wasatch Billy, Babe and O. M. Runyon's Minnie. Rockwood took three straight heats. Babe came second in all three. Time, 1:27½, 1:25, 1:26½.

The free for all gave one of the fastest half miles ever witnessed on the Ogden track. This was done by Rimac, the handsome stallion entered by N. O. Nye. The time was 1:13½, a 2:27 gait. That old stand by, Nigger Boy, entered by J. J. Reade, came in a close second. The other horse was Chas. Hilton's promising Adelaide. Rimac took three straight heats, Nigger Boy the second in all. The time was 1:14½, 1:13, 1:13½.—Ogden Standard.

The Metropolitan Handicap Winners.

Bowling Brook, the winner of the Metropolitan Handicap at Morris Park, is a bay colt by the Epsom Derby winner of 1888, Ayrshire, dam Vacation, by Tom Ochiltree, says Daily Racing Form. Some years back the Morris family adopted the expedient of sending American mares over to England to mate with the most fashionable English stallions. Bowling Brook is one of the results. Last year he started in eight races. He showed good form, but only won a single race. In that race, however, the first part of the Double Event, he defeated the mighty Hamburg at even weights. The race yesterday was marked by one peculiarity, two three-year-olds running one-two, a rare occurrence in the history of high-class spring handicaps.

The history of the Metropolitan Handicap is as follows:

HOOF-BEATS.

MEADOWTHORPE, winner of the Crescent City Derby in 1897, has broken down.

THE Rancho del Paso yearlings are to be sold at the Brooklyn race track on June 17th.

CAPTAIN JAMES H. REES, the well-known racing official departed for Memphis May 11th, accompanied by Mrs. Rees.

TOMMY BUTLER, the jockey, has been reinstated. His riding, though, is restricted to the string of horses trained by Billy Short, comprising Rubicon, Roadwarmer, Midas and others.

HENRY BYRNES left May 11th for Montana with a carload of horses from Rancho del Paso. Byrnes will race Saintly, Briar Hill, Tea Rose, Nomad and others on the Montana circuit.

THE brown colt Mr. Clay, by Darebin—Miss Clay, has been purchased from A. J. Joyner by Hardy Campbell. The price paid was $2,500. The youngster first saw the light of day at Rancho del Paso.

THREE of the six winners May 11th were bred at E. J. Baldwin's famous Santa Anita farm. They were Midas, La Goleta and Bernardillo. Two of them were sired by Emperor of Norfolk.

DAN REEVES has sold to Zeke Abrahams the bay colt Cheer Up, 2, by Three Cheers—Waterfall, by imp. Greenback; second dam Wa-ta-wah, by War Dance. Terms private. He is a very promising youngster.

NUN NICER, winner of the One Thousand Guineas of 1898 at Newmarket, Eng., is a bay filly by Common out of Priestess and belongs to Sir J. Blundell Maple. The Duke of Portland's br f Airs and Graces, by Ayrshire—Lady Alwyne, was second and Lord Derby's ch f of All Mark, by Marcion—Altiora, third.

COL. DAN M. BURNS has hanging in one of his offices in the Crocker building the handsomest and most complete pedigree of a horse ever gotten out by mortal man, and we have seen many beautiful ones in our day, too. It is the one of Mt. McGregor II, Burns Waterhouse's superb racing son of Day Star and imp. Miss Macgregor, by Macgregor, now at the stud. E. I. Robinson presented the pedigree, which is fan form, to Col. Burns, who has been his friend since 1852, when both were small boys in Woodland. The Bruce Lowe figures have been placed alongside the names of all the horses in the pedigree table, and it shows that Mt. McGregor's sire is from the No. 4 family (the Layton Barb), the dam from the greatest of all sire families, the No. 3 (dam of the two True Blues). Star Davis, dam of Day Star, was a member of the No. 2 family (the Burton Barb mare). All the winners of the classic English stakes in the pedigree are enumerated, too, and, altogether, it would be hard to duplicate Mr. Robinson's work of art, something very highly prized by the genial multi-millionaire.

NOTICE TO ANGLERS.

Every angler is invited to drop us a line occasionally, telling us of the condition of the streams they have visited and the killing lure of the number and size of the fish caught, or any other item of interest to anglers.

Coming Events.

May 21-22—San Francisco Fly-Casting Club. Seventh series of Saturday and Sunday contests. Stow Lake, Golden Gate Park.
June 8-9—West Michigan Fly-Casting Association. First Angling Tournament. Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Fly-Casters.

The San Francisco Fly-Casting Club met on Saturday and Sunday last and held the casting contest which had been postponed from April 1st. On Saturday in the long distance event there were three casts of over 100 feet. Dr. E. N. Lowry was first with 111 feet. A. B. "Carr" second, with 110 feet, and H. C. Golcher third, with 106 feet.

In the distance and accuracy event, H. E. Skinner was first, with 82 1-3 per cent; A. B. "Carr" second, 92 per cent, and C. G. Young third, with 89 1-3 per cent.

In the accuracy and delicacy event, Dr. E. N. Lowry was first with 83 11-12 per cent, A. E. Lovett second with 83 per cent, and A. B. "Carr" third with 82 2-3 per cent.

The casting on Sunday was somewhat hampered by fog and wind but notwithstanding these drawbacks the work was most excellent particularly so in the long distance event. F. E. Daverkosen led with 102 feet, A. B. "Carr" being second with 100 feet and H. F. Reed third with 95 feet. The distance and accuracy event was won by C. Huyck and H. Smyth, each with 93 2-4 per cent. C. G. Young was next in order with 88 per cent and J. S. Turner came in third place with 85 per cent. In accuracy and delicacy C. G. Young was first with 84 7-12 per cent, and H. Smyth second with 84 2-3 per cent. The detailed scores in the events were as follows:

At the regular meeting of the club held last Tuesday evening President Mansfield read a letter received from members of the Chicago Fly-Casting Club, stating that negotiations were pending with the railroad people for the purpose of chartering a car for the use of Chicago club members attending the casting tournament here this fall. The next series of casting contests will take place May 21st and 22d at Stow Lake.

Striped Bass Fishing.

That the striped bass are now in the bay and are being caught at different times and various localities is an undisputed fact. On Friday, Saturday and Sunday of last week they were very evident in San Leandro bay, being apparently in pursuit of the schools of smelt. Several fine fish were caught on a trolley line from Oakland wharf, they had been striking the rods out for them but broke away from the light tackle. The bait used was a piece of white smelt belly and spile worms. Several anglers tried Rodeo wharf last Saturday and Sunday, although numerous strikes were made, but two three-pound fish were caught. The following account of the sport in angling for these fish in Eastern waters appears in a recent number of Shooting and Fishing:

Salt water anglers have joys and trials unknown to the man who is acquainted only with smooth-surfaced ponds and running streams. There are the tides to study and the effects of storms at sea, all of which effect the movements of the fish. Then, too, are the changes of the seasons, which have a greater bearing on the habits of the fish than can be possible in inland waters. This is particularly true of striped bass in the vicinity of New York. First comes still fishing, up the Hudson, near Tarrytown; beginning in April. Then comes trolling in Long Island sound, beginning about the first of June and lasting through the summer. This sport is also had in the bays of the south coast of Long Island. The third method of taking striped bass is at its best in September, running into October. This is surf casting.

Only the smaller fish are caught in still fishing in the Hudson. As this comes at a time when there is no other sport to be had, many anglers go out merely to get into practice as it were, for the better sport to come. But there is another class who go because they can fish from the piers and rocks, and thus get some sport, or at least enjoy the anticipation, whereas they cannot afford much outlay. Smaller hooks and lighter lines are used for stillfishing than when large fish are likely to be caught.

By the middle of May the fishing in the Hudson is practically over until later in the season. Now comes the acme of salt water fishing in northern waters—trolling in the sound and bays of Long Island. Large fish are taken, and as the work is all from rowboats, everything is favorable for the angler's getting the greatest possible enjoyment from the sport. However the bass is an uncertain fish, and although the tides may be right and the conditions the same as when good catches have been made at other times, the day may go by without a strike. Again on crossing over the same grounds the tide may be adverse, so that one may think it hardly worth while to let out a line; but the result will be some exceptional sport, perhaps a 30-pounder or two.

B. H. Dirkes, of 403 West Fifth street New York, is an enthusiastic angler for striped bass, being particularly partial to trolling in the sound. As Mr. Dirkes has fished and studied the bass for years, a description of his methods will be interesting. A rowboat is always used, never a sailboat. A first-class boatman is employed, one thoroughly familiar with the waters he wishes to fish. The boat is rowed along the shore at fair speed, often in water not more than four feet in depth. No lead is used on the line, which is trailed from 75 to 100 feet behind the boat. Plenty of line is a necessity, about 600 feet is not too much. The rod is a split bamboo about seven feet in length with independent butt, the sections in front of the reel weighing six ounces. A number 3 spinner is used with a short gut loop and a 7-0 hook attached. The hook and gut are covered with white worms. With this rod a 30-pound bass has been taken; but a heavier rod is likely to give better general satisfaction. It should have sufficient backbone so that when a strike is made the big hook can be put well into the fish.

For surf casting Mr. Dirkes advises Calcutta a bamboo, greenheart, or bethabara rod  $8\frac{1}{2}$  or 9 feet long, weighing 16 to 20 ounces. It should be quite stiff. A double action reel, 2-0, capable of holding 600 feet of line and very easy running is desirable. There is one made that permits the gear wheels to be disengaged, leaving a free spool, so that the handle does not turn when the cast is made. This reduces friction to a minimum. The line best adapted to surf casting is one of about twenty-one threads. Lighter lines may be used, but casting with three ounces of lead soon wears them. A 5-0 hook is the right size and should be attached to a 3 foot leader. For bait, blood worms and shedder crabs are good!

In the matter of rods and lines there always will be a diversity of opinion. For surf casting some anglers will insist that a 7 foot rod is the correct thing, while others get the most satisfaction with one of  $8\frac{1}{2}$  feet. But whatever the tackle used, all concede that striped bass afford great sport.

Leaders.

Upon the soundness of the silkworm gut in the leader or "casting line," as it is called in England, depends the strength of the tackle. It is the weakest link in the chain. It is seldom that a rod or a reel line is broken, but if accident occurs it is usually to the leader. Good gut costs more than poor, but is well worth it. The best is of uniform thickness and round. The latter quality is ascertained by rolling it in the fingers. Leaders are best bought already made, from a reliable house which has a stock of gut to select from, and the makers can select gut and make neater knots than the amateur. There are anglers who like a tapered leader, the first few feet of twisted gut; but I don't care for it. Others like a 12ft. leader, but my choice is one of even size, not less than 6 nor more than 9ft., and tied with slip knots, which allow the fly to have its loop cut off and the leader knots slipped apart for its insertion; then when the leader is drawn together the fly is secure, but easily removed. The next best thing is a looped leader into which the flies can be readily looped and removed, and the latter is a desideratum, for when we fasten a hand fly with a loop on it to a single line it is hard to remove. The loops are used to fasten hand flies as the tail fly, or dropper, is fastened, two loops being interlocked without a knot.

The color of a leader is a matter of individual taste. The late Francis Endicott had blue leaders for use when the sky was clear, tea-stained leaders for thunderstorms, and white ones for a sky filled with white clouds. I have my doubts about the ability of a trout to appreciate all this attention to his vision, and use a bluish leader at all times. The theory is that the line is a thing to be seen, but that the fly is some distance away, and its connection with the line is invisible. This is true when there is a ripple on the water which hides the fall of both line and leader, but on perfectly still water trout will often rise when the fall of both line and leader is seen, especially if the leader be shiny. Such conditions are not favorable for frequent rises, but they occur.

The light rod needs a light line and a light leader, i. e., all three should be in proportion. In a long cast the line strikes the water before the leader has reached that spot, and then the latter goes on and straightens out. To illustrate this, put your finger tips on your shoulder, strike your elbow on the table, and follow with your wrist, knuckles and fingers. That is the way a fly goes out. To cast a fly in this manner is quite an art, which may be considered later.—Fred Mather in Forest and Stream.

Fish Lines.

Signor Paladini (la pescador grande) was arrested on Saturday last for again having small striped bass in his possession. The case came up Monday, was postponed until Wednesday, and then continued for a week. The signor was very wrathful this time and spluttered Latin objurgations so vociferously into the aural appanage of the Police judge, that, "maladetta MacAroni" the very fences in the district infected by the fisherman bid fair to need a new construction from post to panel; this is a dangerous condition of affairs to those immediately concerned and from this time on the small fish will have full permission to keep out of the way, if they can't and not get caught, because when these things come out it blocks the wheels of commerce controlled by the Spanish, French, Italian and market restaurant keepers, etc., etc., to say nothing of an odd fine of $20 or so now and then.

By the way, the next session of the Legislature will probably be called upon to take action in regard to a proposed close season for striped bass and also to allow the taking of these fish of less than three pounds weight, say of a pound in size and weight.

Three boxes of small striped bass were shipped from a point near Giant on Monday, consigned to the American Union Fish Company and Scatena and Company, they contained about 460 pounds of fish and were seized in this city before reaching the consignees. If the boxes had been followed down and arrests made of those in possession of the fish when offered for sale, Signor Paladini would have had a chance for companions in misery and also of mutual condolence, but probably this was not thought necessary by the Fish Commission's patrolmen.

The Hotel Coronado management has inaugurated a novel feature, and one that is greatly appreciated by the guests, and that is the construction of a large tank, which will be filled with fresh salt water, into which all the fish caught are to be deposited and kept alive, so that the guests of the hotel can visit the tank and select their own fish to eat. The first catch of fifty fine fish was placed in the tank last Saturday.

The method of transferring the fish is unique and attractive. A small cigar-shaped boat, made of slate, is towed along behind the fishing boat, the fish are placed in this open-work boat as soon as caught, thus practically returning them to freedom. After the fishing is over the boat is towed to the ocean pier and hoisted up with its lively contents, which are quickly transferred to the big tank, where they are soon sporting as fresh and vigorous as if they had never felt the hook.

Still another improvement for the convenience of guests will be the addition of glass-bottomed boats to the pleasure fleet. These boats will enable the occupant to see far down into the ocean depths, where the many forms of seaweed, kelp and other vegetation, and the strange fish and shell creatures are of continual interest.

Between fifteen and twenty anglers industriously devoted their attention to the effort of inducing the trout in Lagunitas Lake to take fly, bait and spinner last Sunday. Chas. Breitenstein caught the limit from a boat, as did Frank Dolliver. Warden Hale and some friends were earnest in their work but we wish them better luck next time. Most of the other anglers had a nice day's outing on the lake shore.

The close season for black bass is from the first day of January until the first day of July of each year. The statement in the columns of a contemporary in respect to black bass fishing on the Russian river, at the present time, is not founded on fact.

Al. Cumming returned on Monday from the Klamath Hot Springs. He reports having had a most successful and enjoyable fishing trip. He caught 465 pounds of fish in the Klamath river, the average weight of each fish being three pounds.

"Doc" Watts spread the gospel of the coachman, the spinner and the blue rail to the denizens of Lagunitas lake on Thursday. His converts followed him to the city and selected their graves in the stomachs of his friends.

Under Sheriff T. L. Robinson and Lorenz Romer of Susan had a pleasant day's fishing in the Wild Horse dam last Friday afternoon a week ago and returned with 60 fine trout.

Fine baskets of trout have been brought into Sunol recently; they were caught in Alameda and Calaveras creek; the latter stream has always been a good late stream.

Recent visits to Garcia and Navarro rivers and Rancheria creek in Mendocino county have been productive of fairly good results for several Santa Rosa anglers.

W. C. Brown, W. Berg, John Bergez and Fred Drinkhouse fished in Throckmorton lagoon last Sunday. The catch was only fair.

Al Wilson is credited with catching a fine fifteen pound striped bass in Russian river last week.

Fly-fishing it now reported to be first class on Battle Creek. Anglers who have whipped this stream recently have enjoyed excellent fishing.

NOTICE TO SECRETARIES.

If secretaries of gun clubs will send us the full scores of their regular monthly shoots we will be pleased to publish them; but we must receive the copy on Wednesday to insure its insertion that week.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Live Birds at the Ingleside Traps

The Olympic Gun Club members devoted their attention to live birds last Sunday. Twenty-two shooters faced the traps in the club medal shoot on the grounds at Ingleside. W. J. Golcher was the only man who shot through the string of twelve birds without a miss. His share of the birds had a fair percentage of hard ones, but he shot throughout in perfect time and centered them with an unerring skill. C. A. Haight, who was looked upon as a straight score man lost his twelfth bird, which was a fast left quarterer from No. 4 trap. The trap, when opened, flew up and for an instant obscured the shooter's view of the bird. The interval of time proved fatal, and, although the pigeon was hard hit with both barrels, it managed to carry the double shot charge out of bounds.

A piece of hard luck deprived Frank Maskey of a straight score. His fifth bird was a twisting incomer. It was hard hit and dropped at Maskey's feet with such force that, although dead, it bounded over the dead line and was scored lost. W. H. T. Huie, a comparative novice, shot in nice form, and, with H. T. Wagner, furnished company for the group of experts credited with eleven kills each.

Seven men landed in the ten hole. They were "Slade," Frank Vernon, F. J. Schultz, W. J. Hynes, M. E. Unger, Dr. H. S. Smith and Mr. Green. The other scores averaged well considering the quality of birds, and the club race may be said to have brought out an all-round exhibition of high-class shooting. The detailed record of the match is as follows:

W. J. Golcher.....30-1111111111-12	Smith.....27-0221221212-11

*Dead out of bounds.

In a second six-bird race Wagner, Vernon and H. C. Golcher killed straight and took all the money. The detailed scores were:

H. C. Golcher.....222222-6	Sweeney.....220202-4
H. F. Wagner.....112212-6	Devlin.....210022-4
F. Vernon.....111111-6	Neustadter.....11022-4

Green.....102122-5	A. M. Shields.....2120-3
C. A. Haight.....212111-5

Several shooters in the pool events shot up missing club scores for previous shoots. H. C. Golcher distinguished himself by duplicating the straight score made by his brother in the preceding match. Frank Maskey made a second score of eleven, losing his fifth bird dead out of bounds. Hynes shot a score of ten and Sweeney a score of nine. Huie and Green also scored nine.

Empire Break Blue Rocks.

The third regular shoot for this season of the Empire Gun Club was held on the Alameda grounds last Sunday, May 8th. The shooters were handicapped by a high wind which cut down the scores. In the first event the classification re-entry race at twenty-five birds, twenty-one men faced the traps; the scores were as follows:

Sears, W.....11111101101111111111-23	Klevesahl.....11111111111111111111-22

Besides the regular club matches a number of pool and practice events were shot out during the day.

Lincoln Gun Club.

The regular monthly shoot will take place to-morrow on the club grounds at Alameda Junction.

The schedule of events will commence with the club shoot at 10 A. M. In the afternoon at 1 P. M. the "couple shoot" will be first in order, $1.00 entrance and added money. The "try-out" team shoot between Olympic, Empire and Lincoln representatives, $1 side pool, will then follow. Besides these principal events the usual practice and pool races will be made up.

Stockton Blue Rock Shoot.

The regular semi-monthly shoot of the Stockton Gun Club at twenty-five bluerocks was held last Sunday afternoon. The following scores were made: N. Brown 20, G. Ditz 19, Lonjers 10, Jackson 19, Keys, 18, Jensen 16, C. Johnson 16, W. Ditz 15, Barnett 15, Crane 14, Connors 14 and Frye 13.

South End Gun Club.

The traps at Colma drew the attention of the usual number of shooters last Sunday, the regular series of practice and pool events were shot out during the day. To-morrow the club proposes to have a live-bird shoot. It is presumed that a number of the cracks will be present. Fifty dozen birds will be at the disposal of the shooters; some close and lively races being anticipated.

Alert Gun Club.

This recent addition to the trap-shooting clubs was organized about a month ago, the officers are E. E. Fittler, president; J. J. Raphael, vice-president; Al Palmer, treasurer; D. Klobstock, secretary and Chas Krause, outside sentinel.

The club's shooting grounds are located on the old shooting place at Birds point which has been recently fitted up. Practice and pool shooting will be open-to-all every Sunday. The club has placed the price of birds at one cent each. The club membership is limited to twenty-five. A number of the members will be at the traps to-morrow. The scores in a twenty-five target race last Sunday were as follows:

Spoonbill Gun Club

There was not a large turnout of Spoonbill members at the bluerock shoot at Eckhardt's East Park grounds last Sunday at Sacramento. Some belonged to Company E, which departed at 2 o'clock for San Francisco, and others had friends in the company whom they wanted to "see off."

The first match was at 10 bluerocks. W. H. Eckhardt scored 8, Roberts 7, Frank Rubstaller, Jr., 6, Smith and Flohr 4 each.

A 15-"bird" match resulted: Eckhardt 11, Rubstaller 10, Smith 10, Roberts, Flohr and Peek nine each.

The score in the regular medal shoot at 25 bluerocks was: Eckhardt 18, Smith 17, Rubstaller 16, Roberts 15, Peek 13, Soule 9, Flohr 7.

Soule and Wormer shot at 25 bluerocks, the latter scoring 16 to the former's 13.

In a 10-bird match Sharp and Peek broke 3 each. Smith, Roberts and Eckhardt shot a 25-bird match, in which Smith scored 18, Roberts 12 and Eckhardt 10.

A 15-bird match between Smith and Eckhardt resulted in 11 for the former and 8 for the latter.

Soule scored 18 and Roberts 17 in 25 bird match.—Record-Union.

Ammunition Will be Higher.

There has been a sharp advance in the cost of paper shells, in consequence of which the prices of loaded shot-gun cartridges will be higher. What effect the war has on this increase in prices is not stated, but as the United States Government is purchasing vast quantities of ammunition, etc., and rushing the manufacturers to fill orders, it would naturally affect the prices of all similar goods. However, our shooters are patriotic and to a man wish the triumphant success of the army and navy and no doubt will be perfectly willing to pay a share of the expense, indirectly at least. See the announcement of the E. T. Allen Co., on page 380.

The Blue Rock Tournament.

The program for the coming State blue-rock tournament, at Ingleside, which was issued to-day announces a variety of events and shows a money inducement that will no doubt be taken advantage of by shooters from far and near. The races for the first day, Sunday, May 29th, are: 1st event, 15 singles, entrance $1.25, $10.00 added, class shooting, 3 moneys. 2nd event, 15 singles, entrance $1.25, $10.00 added, class shooting, 3 moneys. 3rd event, E. In this match the Olympic Gun Club offers $15 to the second high gun and $10 to the third.

The purses in all high gun events will be divided as follows: Ten entries or less in a race, two moneys 60 and 40 per cent, eleven to fifteen entries, three moneys, 50, 30 and 25 per cent; more than fifteen entries four moneys, 40, 30, 20 and 10 per cent.

Standards.

THE POINTER—Head: large, flat; stop well defined, and with a depression running from stop to occiput, full development of occipital bone imperative. The head should not be heavy, as this indicates coarseness and an unreliable disposition. The nose is an important organ, and should be large, long, deep and broad enough to make it "square" muzzled (black in all colors except lemon and white, when it should be a deep flesh color. Nostrils: large and open, and cold and moist. Ears: moderately long, fibert shaped and lying flat, they should be set on low, leather thin and flexible and the coverings silky. Eyes: of medium size, not wide apart, and of various shades of brown, varying with color of the coat. Lips: full, not thick nor pendulous.

Neck: arched, firm, round and not too short; no tendency to throatiness, no dewlap. Shoulders: long, sloping and powerful. Chest: deep with narrow sternum, sloping backward to a well tucked-up abdomen. Ribs: moderately sprung, not flat.

Hind-quarters—Loins: should be broad and slightly arched Hips: thick, strong and muscular. Stiffles are generally straight.

Legs.—Good legs are most essential. Front legs should be straight and strong; hind legs also straight and strong, and both should be covered with strong compact muscles well developed. The elbow and hock joints should be hinged long and set straight with sides of the body.

Feet: with surface enough to sustain the weight, but not too large, round, cat-like; pads full and tough: Nails short and thick, with plenty of hair between the toes.

Tail: set on well up, and should taper to a decided point, the straighter the better, carried low and action free.

Coat: fairly dense and not too soft.

Color: liver and white, black and white, orange and white, whole black or whole liver, this being the order of preference.

The countenance should be lively and intelligent. Brains, nose and speed make the Pointer.

The Bench Show Next Week.

The opening of the doors of the Mechanic's Pavilion next Wednesday morning will be an occasion long to be remembered, by the fancy and general public, in the annals of bench shows in this city. The arduous work of preparation has been almost finished by the officers of the Kennel Club, and that this will be satisfactory to exhibitors and spectators alike is assured by the great care and attention paid to every detail. Under the direction of Superintendent Oldhan the arrangements made for the judging, and early and correct announcements thereof will be a model for future shows. A notable feature in respect to this exhibition, that is creating a vast deal of interest, is the charitable disposition of 75 per cent. of the receipts. The number of entries this year as announced is 552 as against 601 last year. A notable feature in the entries for this show is the number of entries made by ladies. A summary of the list of entries is as follows:

A High Class Cocker.

One of the most notable recent additions to the ranks of dogdom on the Coast arrived in this city during the week. Mr. H. A. Wagener, the well known fancier, can be congratulated on his purchase of Champion Havoc, from Mr. George Douglass of Woodstock, Ont.

CHAMPION HAVOC.

This excellent black cocker spaniel was whelped January 13, 1896, and is by Champion Black Duke ex Woodland Jude. A noted Eastern authority says of Havoc, "that he can, in my opinion beat any dog on the Coast." He has won his laurels by victories over such cracks as Middy, whom he beat twice, Brother S., three times, Jake W. once, Premier once, Simcoe Duke once, Black Obo twice, Red Mack once, and numerous others. His record on the bench is a good one as will be seen by the following wins: Boston, 1897, 1st in puppy sweepstakes and first in open class; St. Louis, 1897, first in open class; Louisville, 1897, 1st in open class; Pittsburg, 1897, 1st in open class; Baltimore, 1897, 1st in challenge class and three specials; Toronto, 1897, 1st in challenge class and one of best pair with Premier; Toronto Industrial Show, 1897, one of best kennel; Brooklyn, 1897, 1st in challenge class and one of best brace with Premier; Washington, 1897, 1st in challenge class.

Ch. Havoc will be seen on the bench in the Mechanics' Pavilion next week and will no doubt cut out the pace in his class.

Union Coursing Park Notes

A decided evidence in the choice of lovers of coursing and also a positive expression of increased interest in the sport was evidenced last Sunday by an unusually large attendance at Union Coursing Park. The wise people received several upsets during the day in the placement of their money and the short enders were correspondingly jubilant. The coursing was of a high order. Rusty Gold, a hot favorite, won the final over Flying Buck; this over a field of 72 entries. Since this grand park opened on February 28th, the management has given to the leshmen in added money, the comfortable sum of $12,135, which is a remarkably good showing.

The draw last Wednesday evening for the coursing to-day and to-morrow brought out the largest entry of dogs to be run in one day that have ever been entered on a California field. There were twenty-four puppies and sixty-four all-aged entries. The total of the stakes is $950, of which $725 is in the all-aged and $225 is in the puppy stake. The draw resulted as follows:

All-aged stake—Dr A J Baldwin's Ben Lass vs R E de B Lopez Camilla; J Goldman's Sarcastic vs J Connell's Senorita; R B Kay's Diana vs J McNeill's Sportsman; M Nealon's Van Knapp vs S H Harrison's Hattie M; E V Sullivan's False Flatterer vs D Kane's Spry; H O'Donnell's Elmer G vs Derby Kennel's Fleeting Fancy; J Munkhouse's Black Pete vs George Smart's Silkwood; Deckelman & Panario's Glen Roy vs Simmond & Donahue's Moore's Prescription; A Johnson's Lissak vs E Campbell's Bend Along; Curtis & Son's Maud S vs R C Scott's Mystery; N Hattus's Correct vs F McCormick's Olen; D J Healey's Rusty Gold vs E Scott's Lord Byron; E N Sullivan's Mercy May vs A Johnson's Mountain Beauty; Pierce & Sullivan's Little Dottie vs R E de B Lopez Winona; William Murphy's Dottie Dimple vs J J Edmond's Move On; C Strehl's Skylark vs D L Desimone's Buckwa; R B Kay's Cross Patch vs J McCormick's Black Prince; J McCormick's White Lily vs E V Sullivan's Flying Buck; Curtis & Son's Lady Campbell vs E V Sullivan's Miramonte; E Jones's Gaslight vs P Lenahan's Encinal; R B Kays Eclipse vs T Hayes's Chiquita; R E de B Lopez's Green Valley Maid vs F Herring's Susie; S E Portal's At Last vs Curtis & Son's Chartist; R E de B Lopez's Minneapolis vs Pasha Kennel's Rey Alfonso; Thos Birmingham's Ajax vs Pasha Kennel's Arapahoe; Pierce & Sullivan's Jessie Maid vs P Brophy's Benicia Boy; J Segerson's White Chief vs John Kerrigan's St Lawrence; F P Courtney's The Turk vs J Shea's Firenze; Al Austin's Glen Stone vs S E Portal's Laurelwood; E V Sullivan's Jesse Moore vs E V Sullivan's Jester; Curtis & Son's McKinley vs Derby Kennel's Little Dorrit; Pasha Kennel's Metallic vs J F Roger's Precita Girl.

Puppy Stake—Larkey & Rock's Liberty Bell vs D J Healey's Pastime; Larkey & Rock's Minerva vs J Perigo's Belle Seward; E V Sullivan's Snapshot vs J F Wehmeyer's Sunbeam; E V Sullivan's Fox Kenny vs J F Wehmeyer's One Spot; E V Sullivan's Golden Russett vs O H Hoag Jr's Obadiab; Pasha Kennel's Rich and Artless vs E V Sullivan's Flyaway; Cronin & McDonald's Thornhill vs J Lettich's Crusader; E V Sullivan's Flash vs E V Sullivan's Flying Faster; B Dougherty's Palmer Hill vs J McCormick's White Wings; Holmes & Shifting's Scarf Pin vs Pasha Kennel's Riot Act; J J Edmond's Morning Glory vs J Murphy's Dempsey Lass; Deckelman & Panario's Royal Oak vs B & S Kennel's Bad Shot.

To-morrow will witness a great gathering of wheelmen at Union Coursing Park, the following circular issued by the management is self-explanatory:

The Union Coursing Park Association, recognizing the bond of fellowship in all lines of sport, and being desirous of further cementing the same, has set aside Sunday, May 15th, as Wheelmen's Day. Ample arrangements have been made on our grounds for the checking of wheels, free of charge, and a careful employee will be in constant attendance for that purpose.

Your organization is respectfully invited to hold a Club Run on the above date, having for its objective point our spacious Park near Colma. While it is our wish to make this emphatically a Wheelman's Day, and to see as many as possible in club costume, we desire to say that the badge of any Cycling Club will admit the bearer to the grounds without charge. Unattached wheelmen in costume will be cordially welcomed, as well. Coursing will commence at 11:30. Ladies are specially invited, and to one and all a day of exceptional sport is assured."

Breeding Horses for Harness Use.

An Eastern correspondent sends the following communication. In the main good, and his arguments well worthy of careful consideration, some of the conclusions perhaps, not justified by the history of the breeding of that class of horses in the United States.

Until within the last few years the great aim of the breeders of harness horses in this country has been speed at the harness gaits, especially trotting speed. While quite a fair proportion of fast horses has been reared by the small breeders, the big establishments have presented the bulk of "Grand Circuit" winners. The most notable exception, Axtell and Allerton, and then Rilma comes in to the credit of "outside s." But as this kind of breeding has progressed, the advantages secured by the owners of great stallions and with scores or hundreds of the best mares to breed to them, has brought a change, and now the question arises, What is the best policy for farmers to pursue? that is a majority of those who are engaged in breeding horses.

A farmer, or small breeder, might have a mare, or more than one, which would be likely to prove the dam of fast trotters, but without the qualifications that are necessary to produce coach horses. If unsuccessful in securing progeny that would have an "even chance" to win in such fields as now face the starter on all the prominent tracks of the country, valuable animals in the "light harness horse" division.

There is another class of breeders, however, that breed horses. The owner of a favorite road mare or one which has won distinction on the tracks. This owner desires something of the same type, a fast trotter, a money winner, if so Dame Fortune decides, failing in that one that will take the trotter's place on the road. Fifteen hands should be the minimum size for either of these purposes, a carriage horse should be at least two inches higher, a coacher must pass the standard to sixteen hands and something over will be still more appropriate. And as "the market" stands now coach horses are the "surest sale." Many trotting bred horses and fast trotters, too, are good specimens of both types.

The picture presented last week, that of Elmo, is almost faultless so far as conformation goes for either. A little more depth of chest, a little longer in the back ribs, and a trifle more depth of quarters might be added to the ideal coach horse.

"Admirable, whose picture appeared in the issue of April 16th, can be accepted as "a perfect type of the French coach horse," or it may be better to say that duplicates would ensure purchasers.

Unless there should be a complete "flattening out" of prospects, coach and carriage horses will bring a remunerative price from this time on. Little question that horses bred on the same lines as "Cogent" will be sought for, as well as the best specimens of coach horses bred from a combination of trotting and thoroughbred blood, and the breeder who gives the closest study will be the one who secures the most prizes.

A new lease of life has been taken by the various state associations formed some years ago by the breeders and importers of horses. At that time many farmers and others became interested in these associations but during the recent period of financial depression, the meetings were at most instances rather poorly attended. This spring, however, it is different, and among the societies of the sort that have held on will still hold successful conventions is the Ohio Draft and Coach Horse breeders association, at which the attendance was large and enthusiastic. So many inquiries had been received touching the best method by which the high-priced carriage and coach horse may be produced that the management determined to make a talk on the subject a leading feature of the meeting and Mr. J. B. McLaughlin, importer of French horses, Columbus, Ohio, was selected to deliver it. The interest taken in the address was very keen, the many evidences of the large profits to be made from breeding fine carriage horses being so conclusive as to defy denial.

After discussing briefly a few of the methods by which the carriage horse may be or has been produced, and the sires that have been used for his production Mr. McLaughlin said:

Fourth, and last, but in my opinion the best is the French Coach horse. He has the size, the color, the action and the quality to produce from our native mares the best results, and I will attempt to tell you in a few words upon which I base my belief. The French people have always been foremost in leading the styles among all the nations of Europe and America as well. In art, in the style of dress, in equipages and horses they lead the world. In order to meet the demands of her people for these horses, carriage horses especially, the French government has taken an interest in their breeding that has never been equaled by any other nation.

In 1833, during the reign of Louis Phillippe, they established a Stud Book for Coachers, and ever since that time they have taken an interest in the improvement of this class of horses. They have established a school for the education of young men in horse breeding, and these are the men who have charge of the buying and choosing horses for the government. Thus we can see how, educated in the same school, they always seek for the same form and the same quality in the horse, and have thus produced a breed whose qualities are more certain, and whose type is more fixed than that of any other bred of coach horses. In France there are only three sorts of horses that are permitted to stand for public service. First, those that belong to the government. Second, those that are approved and receive a subsidy of from 300 to 1,800 francs a year. Third, those that are simply approved. Thus we see that no horse is permitted to stand for public service in France unless he is examined and approved by the government.

These horses vary in height from 15¾ hands to 16¾ hands, in weight from 1,200 lbs. to 1,400 lbs. Their usual color is bay and brown, although there are some chestnuts and blacks as well. The French government annually purchases a large number of these coach stallions and stands the most of them in Northwestern corner of France, in Calvados, all of Le Manche and a part of Orne. The main stations are at St. Lo and Le Pin. From these stations, early in the winter, the government scatters the horses in districts a few miles apart, all over that section of France.

These horses since about fifteen years ago have been imported into this country very sparingly. In the neighborhood of 1,000 stallions in all have been brought to this country. When crossed with our native mares that possess a little trotting or thoroughbred blood they have produced excellent results.

WHERE A MISTAKE IS MADE.

The greatest error that has been committed by our American horse breeders is that they do not stick to one type of horse. They will breed the same mare to a draft horse one year, the next year to a trotting horse, and the next year to a coach horse; and this produce has been bred as indiscriminately as the mares that produced it.

Now we cannot expect in one year to offset the bad results of fifty years of indiscriminate and bad breeding. But where the purchasers of French Coach stallions have used good judgment and have bred reasonably good mares to their horses, they have had the best of results. The progeny of French Coachers have uniformly brought the highest prices in the markets of the large cities of this country. The average quotation for coach or carriage horses is from $300 to $600. Exceptionally good ones sell for very much higher prices. A short time ago Mr. Bryant, of Iowa, shipped to New York a car-load about one-half of which were half-blood French Coachers. One pair brought $2,200, another $1,600, and if I remember correctly, the average price of his coachers not in pairs but singly was about $600.

Mr. Hamlin, of Buffalo, sold Cogent, a half blood French coach horse, at public auction for $4,500. The fact is that really good ones are so scarce and hard to find that the ones offered for sale will bring almost any price asked.

But however we attempt to produce this horse we must always bear in mind the old maxim that like produces like; and we must bear in mind that the sire can not do all, but we must pick our mares with fully as good judgment as we choose our sires.

In his last sentence Mr. McLaughlin makes a most important point. Indeed, this has been the trouble with American home-breeding generally. Time was when even the breeders of trotters thought the sire should do it all and any kind of mare was good enough. So it has been with the most of the few coach horses that have been imported. Very few of them have been mated with a class of mares well suited to him. Enough really good mares, however, have been bred to these stallions to show that the cross is the one man is looking for. A very good maxim for the breeder to remember is that a good horse never had a poor mother.

With the breeders of trotters, the belief has changed entirely and now only those mares that have proven themselves producers of speed or those bred in certain favored lines are now considered of value for breeding purposes. This throws a great army of well-bred mares of good individuality and action, but lacking the electric speed spark or the power to produce it, out of use in the stud of the breeders of trotting speed, and among these very mares are the ones best suited to cross with French coach stallions, especially of the trotting families of that breed.

Proven worthless for the production of speed after several chances in the stud, when mated to good sires, these mares sell anywhere from $60 to $100 and their purchasers either put them to work or breed them to some useful sort of horse—obviously it is no use breeding them to produce speed, for they have proved they cannot transmit it. Being well bred in trotting lines these mares have the requisite quality but they lack size, substance and rotundity of form. They have excellent road qualities and plenty of endurance with speed enough for carriage purposes. Bred to the handsome French Coacher, who possesses his good qualities by right of inheritance, these mares produce foals that develop into very fine carriage horses, and their fillies are unequalled for carrying on the good work. Take a mare of this kind, that recent sales have proved can be bought for $60, $75 or $100 and breed her to a good French Coach stallion well bred in trotting lines and the resulting foal will when six months old—old enough to wean—be worth more than was paid for the mare. A mare that produces foals worth $100 at weaning time is worth certainly $250 to $300 to the man that owns her, indeed any breeder could well afford to give that for her, and, with ordinary luck, be sure of making a handsome profit.

In this way the trotting bred mares that are practically worthless to-day may, by simply mating them to the French Coach stallions of the right breeding and stamp, be invested with a tangible value that in the aggregate will increase the worth of the breeders' holdings very materially.

Nor must it be supposed that all trotting bred mares are fitted to mate with Coachers. Some of them are not but the grand majority of them, say nine out of every ten, are so fitted and it is easily seen what a tremendous addition would be made to the breeders' possessions if these mares should be changed from mere money eaters cumberers of the ground, to revenue producers. This can be done by breeding them to good French Coach stallions and the man who owns such mares and does not make use of the opportunity now presented to him will have himself only to blame if he falls behind the procession.

CATTLE.

Cattle Breeding in California.

SIXTH PAPER.

It may appear to a casual observer that the idea of breeding cattle for working purposes in California is so far out of place, that the minutes given to consider it are valuable moments thrown away.

Notwithstanding that prevailing impression the time is surely coming when the cheapest available labor will find employment, a higher grade not marketable. It may appear still more strange that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN should advocate breeding something that will come in the way of horses. Not antagonistical, however, as whatever will enhance the value of one may redound to the interests of the others. Beef and milk the whole thought of those who have been breeding cattle. When it comes to another quality being considered, capacity to work, one more element is introduced. Almost idle to say that beef producing and milk producing are the only qualities recognized in cattle breeding. When the capacity to labor is also brought into the calculation, then there is another problem. Still more idle to advise people who are engaged in furnishing beef to consumers to accept mongrel breeds, or those who are selling milk or butter to forsake the established breeds of dairy cattle.

And yet the time may come when a combination of qualities will give the best return. To small breeders assuredly, or it will be better to state, that a person who is looking to make his small operations remunerative the more good qualities you can secure in any one breed will pay the best. Outside of those definite lines where cattle come in.

The future is now the point to be considered. Doubtful, it may be, that the small farmers of California will combine the breeding of their working force with their farming operations. It may be in that portion of the country between foot-hills and plains something analogous to the conditions in the far away Eastern States may prevail. Not at all likely. There it was obligatory. Oxen did the work or it would not have been done. Never a man who made the home in the woods could have secured it without the labor of oxen. Those times are past and gone. Now there is an entirely changed condition of affairs.

Anomaly will hardly express it. What can be expected of a man who said that he was endeavoring to combine beef producing qualities, milk and its products, and working capacity in the same animal. Nothing but ridicule. Certainly anomalous, when one claimed that he could combine the beef making of the heavy races, the lacteal flow of Ayrshires, Jerseys and other breeds with the activity of far-away breeds which could cover as many miles in a day as some of the more agile races of the Orient can accomplish. Out of the question. Still it may be that when cattle are doing the slow work of the farm, when the horse has become too expensive to perform this labor as economically as his patient collaborator can render it, the docile ox will be better appreciated. And not to the detriment of horses. When oxen were "clearing up" the land of the Eastern States, breeders of horses were making "good money" on their ventures. One good broodmare would pay the annual payment and interest on the land contracted for, and while oxen were doing the main work of the farms, the sale of a horse would tide them over the flats, render it possible for them to pay what they could not have done had not the extra horse been ready to make up the deficit.

Queer, it may seem, that cattle will ever take the place of horses in farm work. Especially in California. So far out of the way, that the consideration of the question will be regarded as time ill spent, and yet the future may prove that the prognostications that the cheapest labor will, necessarily, drive out the dearer, be verified. An absolute necessity that the work of clearing up farms in the heavily timbered sections of the East should be done with oxen. While there is little analogy between hauling logs and plowing between stumps, and the requirements of California farming, they are not so far divergent as to preclude comparison.

An allusion was made a few weeks ago to the use of cows as draft cattle in Thuringia, and while it may seem unnatural to make the female sex labor the compensation may come from ameliorating their condition. The following is the consular report:

COWS AS DRAFT-CATTLE.

A noticeable feature of industrial life in this region is the almost universal use of the cow as a draft animal. In the labor of the farm women take the place of men and cows the place of oxen. Comparatively few horses and oxen are seen, but nearly every family, especially in the country and small villages, owns at least one cow, and they use them, either singly or in pairs, for all kinds of draft work. Instead of a yoke a narrow piece of wood passes across the forehead, just beneath the horns, to each end of which a chain or leather trace is attached, passing thence through lug-holes in a surcingle around the waist to whipple-trees that are fastened to the load. Thus the strain comes upon the forehead and neck. The cows wear iron shoes like oxen. They are worked the year round, their owners claiming that it makes but little difference in either the quantity or quality of their milk. All grades of cattle are used in this way, even the dainty Allgauer being sought by many farmers primarily on account of their powers as draft-animals. Such usage through many generations has, I think, produced a kind of masculine grossness and stoutness in the cows which is not noticeable in their native home and normal condition.

Notes.

Ernest Carlon and Ira Bradley will start to Roseburg in a few days to bring out some cattle which they bought there last winter.

A train load of cattle which were bought from Hansen & Bardin by Messrs. Hake & Inman were shipped from Salinas on the 7th inst. to Nebraska.

Owing to the scarcity of hay in the Santa Clara Valley, stockmen are importing timothy hay in large quantities from Oregon and Nevada. Those who have used it are much pleased with it as feed.

Tom Allen, whom all the vaqueros remember, has been in Silver Lake valley a few days trying to buy cattle and mules. Tom is just the same old genial boy. He now represents Hanley Bros. of Harney.

The Lakeview, Ore., Examiner says: Two large droves of ZX cattle have, during the past week, been driven to summer range in Sycan. J. D. ought to have some exceptionally fine beef again this fall, for the grass in the hills is simply "all right."

Thomas Wingfield started east from Lakeview, Ore., on the 8th inst. with his band of 300 cattle. He is looking for a good summer range and doesn't know just where his destination is.

James Taylor, of the butcher firm of Taylor & Iverson, of Salinas, has gone to their ranch at Slack's Canyon to look after their cattle.

Geo. P. McNear has bought the hay crop of John Connell, of the Bliss ranch near Petaluma, which consists of about 250 tons of good wheat hay. The price paid was $17, considered reasonable as hay is a scarce article in that vicinity.

Some 8,000 head of cattle purchased in the Humboldt river region in Nevada, will be pastured this season in southern Wyoming. These were bought by Mr. Murphy, who intends to ship some 3,000 more head to these ranges.

The scarcity of feed in Southern California has caused alfalfa to command a good price in Northern California, by reason of driving stock north. Good alfalfa is now held at $10 a ton, and several farmers are not anxious to sell at that.

Siason & Crocker, owners of the Pratt ranch on the Little Humboldt, have sold all of their cattle to a North Dakota stockman, and 90 carloads of the cattle were shipped from Iron Point on the 8th inst. Forty more carloads were shipped on the 11th.

Our correspondent at Murphy's writes: The cattle ranges of Calaveras and Tuolumne counties are rapidly being filled by the numerous bands of stock that yearly come this way for summer pasturage. It is reported that the valleys are full of stock. All unclaimed grazing land will be overstocked this year. Pasturage good.

Our correspondent writes: The stockmen of Siskiyou are not anxious to sell any cattle at present, preferring to keep them for next fall, especially since the stock raisers of the lower part of the State are selling at any price, in consequence of having no feed on the ranges by reason of the extraordinary drouth. The mountain ranges of Siskiyou never looked better than at present, and if we have a few more spring showers, feed will be good all summer.

As the result of an attempt to slip in a bunch of 600 head of California cattle through Utah by the S. P. R. Co. without first notifying the Board of Health of that State, the Ogden stock pens of that company have been ordered closed pending the action of the Board.

F. E. Humphrey, of Sierra Valley, was in Marysville last week, and unloaded a drove of cattle. They are cattle that the firm of Humphrey Bros. purchased in the San Joaquin Valley and will take out to their range for pasturage. Mr. Rutler, a stockman from Lassen county, also unloaded 1,200 head. They were bought in the southern part of the State and will find pasturage in Lassen county. Mr. Humphrey informed our correspondent that cars for the transportation of 10,000 head of cattle from California have already been secured. It seems the only chance to save the cattle in the lower part of the State is to get them into the mountains somewhere. Mountain pasture hereabout has already been engaged for the season and the range will doubtless be overrun this summer.

From Red Bluff, under date May 10th, we learn: A special train of thirty-five cars arrived on the 9th inst. with starving cattle from Paso Robles and San Luis Obispo. A lot of 600 head of sheep from the latter place in 26 cars belonged to Leon Carteri and they were in a frightful condition. They had been on the road about 40 hours without feed or water, and when the unloading was completed it was found that there was one and sometimes two or three dead in a car. 50 in all. Another lot of 200 cattle in nine cars arrived on the same train. They were in charge of H. S. Wells, of Shasta Valley, who went to Paso Robles and purchased them for $10 a head. They were in good shape and none were dead. They were put in the cars again and taken to Siskiyou county, where Mr. Wells has plenty of pasture in Squaw Valley, and he says a person would not know they were the same cattle in three months from now. A few half-dead cows were got on their feet and taken from the cars, as they were given to anyone who would get them away.

DAIRYING.

Management of Creameries

With last week's issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, we started out with a series of articles upon dairying with the intention of following up this subject, which is one of wide and increasing interest from Maine to California. The question is one of such magnitude, that the same cannot be disposed of in a week or a month, and in order to give a full and comprehensive account of this important branch of commerce and its many ramifications, we begin this week by giving some insight as to the management of creameries. It may be that our ideas do not coincide with those of practical superintendents who have made a life study of the business and should this article not be to the liking of managers of those institutions, we invite their criticisms and will give full publicity to the same in the columns of this journal.

In order to be an up-to-date and successful manager of a creamery, it requires much ability and many combinations of qualities in a man. In the first place, the man occupying the position must act as a sort of middle man between the producer and market; secondly, he is handicapped from the fact that he is handling a product which is liable to spoil on his hands from the time the milk is being secreted until the butter reaches the table of the consumer; thirdly, he has to have a fair knowledge of mechanics, for he is called constantly in contact with costly and intricate machinery; fourthly, he has to contend against incompetent labor; lastly, competition is so keen that he must have all the requirements of an up-to-date business man, and be a master of his business.

We stated first, that the creamery manager must be a middle man between the producer and the market. This implies that the creamery has to take the raw product from fifty and one hundred and fifty farmers, produced under all sorts of conditions. From this he is called upon to make a uniform article of butter that will command the highest market price. If the butter does not bring the highest market figures the patrons will find fault, the manager becomes discouraged, and there is trouble all along the line. But let us see, to whom can the blame be attributed? The manager in most cases will be held responsible from the fact that he did not reject the poor milk from some of his patrons or was unable to control the conditions, whether climatic or otherwise, after the milk was delivered.

In discussing the subject with an expert creamery superintendent, he informed the writer that in returning poor milk, the manager not only owes it to himself to do this, but to the producer as well, from the fact that one lot of poor milk will act as a fore-runner and give the entire run a poor flavor; therefore the manager is as much entitled to protect the patrons from one another as he is to get the best market value he can for his butter. Of course, it is a delicate question to tell a man his milk is "off," but yet he must do so firmly, not, however, with a view of being antagonistic; he must be sure of being able to back his opinion, and as most people are liable to be skeptical when their interests are infringed upon, it becomes the manager to verify his statement by demonstrating to his patron that his judgment was correct. This can readily be accomplished by taking some of the milk and warming it to 110 degrees, which will conclusively prove to him that the milk is "off." Trouble of this nature is most likely to occur in co-operative plants, where the patrons think they know what is best for the interests of the creamery better than the manager.

In managing a creamery one authority informs us that it is a good thing to work up a cream trade particularly at this season of the year, when butter under other conditions than in a dry year is generally low. Cream too new is a delicate article to handle and requires great care in handling, as when once it becomes sour it is, of course, of no value. A great deal in the success of this business depends upon the selection of milk. Only such milk should be received which does not contain more than 0.2 of 1 per cent of acid. This can readily be ascertained by the use of Farrington's tablets.

We stated secondly that the creamery manager had to handle a product which was highly susceptible to contamination. Among some of the many things affecting the flavor of butter, we might mention stagnant water, cows coming in contact with foul odors, milk absorbing odors, stable or pig pen, dirty cans, drains, inferior salt coming into contact with dirty packages in shipping. In fact, butter, which is a very delicate article, is liable to meet with a hundred and one opportunities to ruin the same and all of which will be charged to the manager.

It is a good point for the creamery manager to visit his patrons' home, look over the water supply, stables, cow sheds, and make a careful observation of the surroundings. As we stated, the manager must be somewhat of a mechanic. He is called upon to buy and pass upon costly and intricate machinery. There are the engines, boilers, separators, churns, testing apparatus, butter worker and vats, all of which require constant watching and are liable to get out of order. He is required to know how to run and operate all of the machinery, besides taking in milk, and must be so alive to all the workings of the creamery that at any time he must be able in an instant to tell any part of the machinery which may break down.

The up-to-date manager who appreciates the responsibility of his position will take from time to time composite samples of his skim milk and butter-milk and thereby keep himself fully informed of the kind of work he is doing. He will also frequently test the fat in his cream, and the acidity of the cream then churned, and thereby find out what degree of acidity makes the best butter under his conditions. He should train his butter-maker to do this work and submit the result to him.

One word as to help. Poor help is expensive at any price. Get a good man and pay him living wages. The manager should interest him in his work by telling him about prices received weekly or daily from the creamery butter. Get him to read a journal that treats upon dairy subjects so he will become thoroughly conversant with his trade. In marketing the product, a good point for the manager is to select his trade, be it private, grocer or commission merchant, and also his market. By having packages neatly made up uniform in size, and in keeping with the requirements of his trade. It is a good point to find out what each market demands and endeavor to fulfill these requirements. It is well to have a trade mark and display it conspicuously on both tub and print butter and have shipments follow regularly. There are a few of the points which are essential in the management of a creamery, and are points which if followed, will be found advantageous to both the new and the old creamery manager, as well as highly satisfactory to the creamery's patrons.

Effect of Food Upon the Quality of Butter.

In our last issue we stated that the cotton seed fed to cows in the southern States, influenced the quality of the butter produced there. Not only cotton seed meal, but other foods, which will be enumerated later, have a tendency within certain limits, to produce either hard or soft butters. It should be borne in mind that fat contained in the food is not the main supply for fat in the milk. As proof of this it is only necessary to note that the fat found in milk, furnished by a cow in the course of a year, far exceeds the amount of fat consumed in the food. In the reconstruction and elaboration of fat within the body, the nature of the food elements consumed, have a marked influence upon the way in which the fat is finally put together.

This example will illustrate the effects of food upon the quality of butter. A cow fed largely on coarse hay and receiving only a little grain, say, a few ground oats or a little barley, will produce a very hard butter—in fact, so hard that the cream must be churned and the butter worked at a higher temperature than most creams require. If a small amount of oil meal is added to this ration, the result would be that the butter would not be so hard and crumbly, but of a consistency more like that found in our markets. This change would be due to the effect of the oil meal, in the ration, upon the quality of the fat found in the cream.

Ordinary butter fat contains about fifty per cent of hard fats—pulmatin and stearin—two fats which for a long time went by the name of margarine, and having a very high melting point—stearin melting at 157 degrees and pulmatin at 145 degrees. If the quantity of stearin or pulmatin is increased, the result is a very hard, tallow-like butter. On the other hand, if the quantity of olein is increased the butter is softer. About forty per cent of ordinary butter is olein, a soft fat or oil similar to olive oil. This fat melts at about 40 degrees. In addition to these fats there are small amounts of others present. These hard and soft fats are so combined as to give a melting point of from 90 degrees to 96 degrees. Oil meal contains about thirty-three per cent of that vital nutriment known as protein and some seven or eight per cent of fat. This fat is of an oily nature, which even at best forms only a small amount of the fat in milk. A ration in which cotton seed meal forms a liberal part, produces a butter melting several degrees higher than normal butter. This meal is rich in hard fat products—the soft fat being removed in extracting the cotton seed oil. In the southern states where cotton seed-meal is largely used, the milk has to be separated and handled at a high temperature. In fact cotton seed meal milk, if put through a separator in the ordinary way, would so clog the machine that the fats would not be separated. As a rule most of our rough fodders, particularly those cut when over ripe, have a tendency to produce hard tallowy butter. This was particularly observable in experiments at Eastern Experiment stations, in which it was found that hay produced a harder butter than ensilage. This is a point in favor of ensilage because this like hay is stored for winter use and a mixture of both will produce better results than if coarse rough hay is fed alone. Corn meal when fed in large quantities has a tendency to rather soften butter. Gluten meal the product arrived from corn meal in making glucose, produces even softer butter than corn meal. Ground oats produces a fine quality of butter and of good color, although if fed in too large quantities it has a tendency to make the butter crumbly. Bran and shorts, both have a tendency to produce butter of good quality, they are, what may be called, normal foods as far as the effects upon the hard or soft qualities of the butter are concerned. In the combination of foods to form well balanced rations the special qualities of each food should be duly considered. Make combinations so as to produce normal butters, rather than excessively hard or soft ones. If the butter is too hard, a little corn meal or better still, a little oil-meal added to the ration, will correct it. Ground corn and oats which are so generally fed make a good combination—the oats having a tendency to harden while the corn has a tendency to soften the butter.

Notes.

The Woodville, Cal., Star Creamery, which has been in operation scarcely one month, is reported as being an assured success. Over $700 was paid out to the neighboring farmers for milk, 100,000 pounds having been taken in. The Creamery's separators run through 5,000 pounds of milk per day. The above is a very flattering start and a bright future can but result with prudent and economic management.

Wm. A. Meyenberg, one of the best experts on the Coast as a condensed milk manufacturer, informs our correspondent at Anaheim, that his factory at Buena Park, is running day and night, with plenty of orders ahead and every prospect for a good and active year. The factory is now taking 17,000 pounds of milk and turning out 150 cases daily. Three years ago when the plant was started Mr. Meyenberg says they thought they were doing very well to consume 300 pounds of milk and turn out 10 cases per day. The business has grown rapidly and is still growing steadily. A large force is employed and best of all, excellent wages paid. Most of the girls in the factory earn $40 or more a month and none earn less than $1 a day. There are but few who are not earning more than that in the factory.

Sea Gem, the champion Shorthorn cow of England for 1897, was recently sold for 4,000 guineas, or over $20,000, to go to South America, the highest price paid for a cow in England since 1880; one of her calves sold for fifty-four guineas or $257.

Remember that even on the best pasture a daily feed of bran will pay well. The heaviest bran is not always best but that which weighs 10 or 20 pounds to the bushel.

No ration will keep up a constant flow in the dairy, for there will be shrinkage as lactation advances, but let there be a generous system of mixed feeds and as few ups and downs in temperature as possible, and the shrinkage will be at a minimum.

The matter of breeding should be governed by the excellence of the parents, while pedigree should be used only to keep track of the family. If the cow of pedigree is of little worth as a milker, do not go on breeding from her merely to keep up the numbers.

Henry Talcott, ex-dairy commissioner of Ohio, says: "I can make from $50 to $75 per cow from winter dairying easier than I can make $25 to $40 in summer. Therefore I have my cows come fresh in fall and early winter.

SHEEP.

Care of Sheep.

The English breeds of sheep, having less grease or yolk in the wool, are more liable to be infected with ticks than the Merino. These vermine are easily killed by dipping the animal in a decoction of tobacco, or with an emulsion of kerosene, or carbolic acid and soap. Another remedy is to fill a tin dredging box with white hellebore powder, and opening the fleece, thoroughly shake the powder into the skin. These openings in the fleece should not be more than three inches apart and made all over the body. If the wool is damp so much the better as the powder is then less liable to get into their eyes and nostrils. Hellebore powder is cheap; use it freely—say, two ounces to a sheep or lamb. When the work is done, do not shut up the animal in close quarters but let it run out in the open air. In the course of a couple of weeks repeat the operation, when the vermin should be disposed of.

Foot rot is a terrible scourge, for if it gets into a flock, no half way measure will banish it. The hoofs of every sheep in the flock should be pared when it makes its appearance, and the whole hoof—especially the afflicted parts—washed with strong, crude carbolic acid. A sharp knife and skillful hand will be necessary to pare away the hoof, and lay bare the diseased part, when apply the acid unsparingly. It is desirable to separate the worst cases from the balance of the flock in order that they may be attended to every day. The balance of the flock, whether affected or not should have their feet washed with carbolic acid at least once a week, until the disease is entirely eradicated. As prevention is better than cure, it is well to always have on hand a gallon of crude carbolic acid, and on the least symptom of lameness, wash the hoofs with it.

Numbers of lambs are lost each year, simply because the ewes are not properly fed. Ordinarily farmers feed their sheep too sparingly, others again feed too liberally on corn, which induces garget, rendering the udders of the dams so inflamed and sore, that they will not let their lambs suckle and in consequence the lambs are actually starved. When this condition exists, the ewe should be put into a small inclosure and tied so close in a corner thereof, that she cannot turn her head and prevent the lamb from sucking. The udder should be rubbed with water, made as hot as the hand will bear, and thereafter smeared with a softening ointment not injurious to the lambs.

Under no circumstances should sheep be managed so as to be constipated or feverish. The lamb is a tender animal and so too is the mother. Sheep are naturally constipated, their excrement being hard and dry. When fed straw or timothy hay, this natural condition is aggravated, but when fed clover hay and bran it is avoided.

Regulations—Sheep on the Reserve.

The recent order promulgated by the interior department, which permits the entrance of sheep into the Sierra Forest Reserve under certain restrictions, is liable to cause considerable perplexity to those flock masters who are not familiar with its conditions. We therefore publish a copy of the official letter from Commissioner Herman to Mr. B. F. Allen, the special forest agent, which is self explanatory.

"Sir: In response to a telegram from you and Hon. Stephen M. White, United States Senator, of the 9th ultimo, the Secretary of the Interior telegraphed you on the 10th ultimo as follows:

"You are authorized in present emergency to permit sheep to be driven to lands of parties holding such within forest reservations, under such regulations as you may devise that shall minimize the danger. Guard especially against fire."

"This was in response to representation of critical condition of affairs in California, due to an unusual drought during the past winter, which has reduced the pasturage to such an extent as to make it imperatively necessary, as it is claimed, that sheep be permitted to enter the mountain ranges in the forest reservations for summer pasturage to obviate their destruction from starvation.

"In carrying out the directions of the secretary, you will prevent as far as possible the pasturage of sheep on public lands in the reservations on their drives to the private lands of the sheep-owners, where they are supposed to graze. You will make all owners fully aware of this requirement, and that they will be held to a strict accountability for its observance, and any damage that may be done the public land or public property by their sheep or their employees. They will also be expected to use every effort to prevent forest fires and to assist in the extermination of any that may be started.

"You will also prevent as far as possible, the grazing of sheep in localities where the water supply of towns or villages is apt to be polluted by the presence of the sheep.

"So far as can be ascertained from communication received from you and from other sources, the desire to drive sheep through the reserve to private pasturage seems to be confined to the Sierra and Stanislaus forest reservations, and consequently the Secretary's order will be held to apply only to those two reservations until I can hear from you to the contrary. It is important that no sheep be allowed to be driven or pastured on the public lands in the reserve in Southern California, in view of the constant protests against their presence there, and only the most urgent necessity should cause any change in this policy.

Very respectfully,
"HINGER HERMANN, Commissioner."

Sheep and Wool Notes.

Tulare County sheep men have been very busy shipping sheep to Utah this last week; Kramer Bros. of Alila, forwarded thirty-five cars and went along with them, and W. L. Smith, from the same locality, fifty cars.

Adolph Zimmerman, of Alila, has shipped his spring wool to San Francisco. The quality is reported as being very choice.

The driving of large bands of sheep into the mountains of Northern California from below, will give Siskiyou County some revenue for eating out the open ranges as a sheep tax ordinance adopted by Siskiyou, Modoc, and other counties obliges them to pay license for the privilege.

A. L. Hobson of Ventura who with his brothers is largely interested in growing mutton and wool in renewing the situation says: "The drought which has overcome the ranges in California this season, says Mr. Hobson, has compelled growers to seek new ones for their flocks and thousands have been driven into New Mexico, Arizona, Oregon and Nebraska. His firm recently delivered 10,000 head of sheep to H. B. Saunders of Salt Lake City, while 7,000 head are now at Ogden, these to be followed by 21,000 that are now on the trail from California. At Ventura he has 100 tons of wool stored and awaiting a purchaser, he reports some growers have sold but at a low figure, the majority preferring to hold their clip until conditions loosen up. The growers in this State are experiencing the similar conditions as those in other States and are without a market. Last year they obtained 11 cents for their wool.

F. M. Lacy, a well-known sheep buyer, of Lakeview, Oregon, has started two bands aggregating 13,000 head of sheep from Heppner, Morrow County, Org., the destination being Sydney, Nebraska. He purchased thirty head of pack-horses, paying for them from $20 to $75 per head. The distance of the drive is about 1500 miles over a trail. Mr. Lacy's drives are said to be the most extensive of any made from the Pacific Coast.

The sheep tick is a pest from which very few flocks are entirely free. It thrives best on poor, ill-fed sheep with weak fleeces, and is found in the greatest number on those parts of the body which the animal cannot reach. Its presence is shown by the sheep nibbling at its sides, or rubbing against walls or fences to relieve the skin irritation which the tick sets up, the itching from which is even more persistent than with mosquito bites, owing to the poisonous matter they secrete while feeding. As the parasites multiply, which they do very rapidly, especially in warm weather, this irritation becomes so great that the animal goes off its feed and soon loses condition. The eggs of the tick are oval in form and are found attached to the fibre of the wool by a sticky substance secreted from the female. Dipping alone will successfully eradicate these pests and keep them at bay.

POULTRY.

Starting a Chicken Ranch

We have lately received two or three inquiries as to whether poultry raising pays in California, but the mail of a few days since brought the following poser: "Would you advise a man of limited means to adopt chicken raising as a business?" As regards this question we would say that we would advise no man to adopt any particular business unless we knew personally that he was adapted to the same. The idea that any and every person can successfully run a chicken ranch is preposterous, unless a man has a natural liking for the business, is willing to give his whole time to it, studies the habits and wants of his feathered stock, and can learn not only by his own experience, but also by the experience of older men in the business, he had better let chickens alone.

As to whether poultry raising pays in this State many will answer in the negative; others in the affirmative. As for the writer his experience has been that poultry raising often does not pay, but that it can be made to pay.

The fault with too many would be poultry farmers is, that they are misled regarding the profits of the business by the foolish articles that are too often given space in the daily papers. The writer noticed one within the last month that stated that a hen could be kept for a year at a cost of 52 cents, or 1 cent a week. Multiply that by three and you will come much nearer the real expense.

The best plan for a new beginner is to go slowly in the business. Start with a few hens, study their ways, learn that cleanliness is one of the most important factors in poultry raising, that proper and regular feeding is another, that prevention of disease is better than cure and that gentleness with the hens will meet with its reward.

But first of all make up your mind whether you intend raising chickens for eggs, or poultry for the market. Then purchase the nucleus of your stock accordingly. For egg production the Mediterranean breeds are the best, the Leghorns preferred, and between the different varieties of Leghorns the writer has failed to note much difference as far as egg production is concerned. For market purposes a heavier fowl is desirable, say one of the several varieties of Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks. In fact as all round fowls—for egg production and market—these breeds are hard to beat.

Having the chickens, if your object is egg production, remember that a hen cannot produce eggs unless she has the proper materials supplied in her food, that a thin hen can't lay and that a hen that is too fat won't lay. See that your chicken houses are warm, dry and comfortable—not hermetically sealed, but with good roofs and boarded up on at least three sides. Roop and kindred diseases can too often be traced to allowing the hens to become damp and chilled in their houses during the rainy weather.

Don't build the perches in your hen houses like steps of stairs. Use plain poles about four feet from the ground for Leghorns, and say three feet from the ground for heavier breeds. If possible, keep the nest boxes outside of the houses, as they are apt to become infested with vermin. At all events, clean them often and thoroughly, and also the roosting poles. This work should be done at least once a week, the poles being taken down and nest and poles whitewashed. Coal oil or carbolic acid mixed in the whitewash will go far to kill off vermin. Once a week remove the droppings from the houses and twice or three times a year whitewash thoroughly the interior.

For extensive poultry raising incubators and brooders are absolutely necessary, but it would not be advisable for the beginner to start out on too large a scale. If you purchase a large machine don't load it to its full capacity until you have thoroughly tested it and mastered its workings. Eggs cooked in an incubator are not good eating and are not saleable. Small incubators holding from four to five dozen eggs are on the market and their work is fully as good as that of larger machines. They are comparatively cheap, but eventually larger incubators will become necessary as the beginner increases his business.

The above is but a general resume, and all the points mentioned might be considerably elaborated upon. To the proper feeding of fowls alone might be devoted an article as lengthy as the above, but our purpose has been to give our correspondent a general idea of what is necessary for successful poultry raising. Constant work is an absolute requirement.

Notes.

For chicks, when first hatched, the best food is hard boiled eggs and bread crumbs rubbed up fine and moistened with a little milk. The chicks should be fed often, but given little at a time. After a few days crushed wheat, granulated oatmeal or cracked corn could be given. Milk is preferable to water, and food or drink must always be supplied in scrupulously clean vessels. Place the coop with the brood on fresh ground, in a place sheltered from wind, keeping the hen confined for about ten days before allowing her to wander off with the chicks. If she be allowed her liberty earlier the strength of the chicks will be overtaxed.

The question is often asked can turkey eggs be successfully hatched under common hens? There is no doubt but that it can be done, but whether one can get the best quality of stock from poultry so hatched and reared is quite a different matter. The best poultry men have entirely given up the idea of trying to raise young turkeys by any means other than by the natural mothers. While it is very true that turkeys can be reared by domestic hens with more or less success, it is entirely impossible to attain the lusty, vigorous growth of stock that have developed under the charge of the mother turkey. Still, any one who wishes to give the turkey a trial and begin by buying eggs to place under the common farm hens need not feel discouraged.

Soil that contains a great deal of fine gravel is excellent for poultry. Every time it is dug over a lot of sharp grit is brought to the surface.

There are more writers on poultry than there are hens. If a man were to read up all the advice of the poultry writers and endeavor to follow it he would be kept busy all the year around attending to one rooster. For this reason, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN condenses each week its poultry notes, in order that the same may be instructive, interesting and comprehensive to the beginner as well as the expert raiser.

There is a poultry man in Sydney, Ohio, who has $60,000 invested in the chicken business. He keeps 3,000 laying hens, runs 300-egg sized incubators and markets daily from 200 to 250 broilers. His brooder pens contain on an average about 200,000 growing chicks and he estimates the profits of the plant at $25,000 per annum.

In hatching ducks under hens it is best to remove them from the nest the moment they are dry as they are more or less restless and the hen is very apt to tread upon them. Hens make good incubators for duck eggs, but very poor mothers. The duckling is too weak in the legs to keep up with the activity of the mother hen. There is more labor attached to duck raising than to any other branch of poultry culture, but the profits are larger when the business is once understood.

A convenient arrangement for feeding chicks is to have a coop four feet square, made of lath, or if preferred it may be covered. Leave an opening at the lower part so that the chicks can run in and out, and keep a feed hopper full of feed in the coop all the time. The object is to have feed where the chicks can reach it any time, but beyond the hens. It is an excellent contrivance for yards that contain both hens and chicks as the chicks will be in no danger of being interfered with by the larger fowls.

The greatest profit is not always derived from the hens that lay the largest number of eggs, but from those that lay the greatest number when prices are high. There is more profit in two dozen eggs at thirty cents a dozen than from three dozen at twenty cents a dozen, although the sum—sixty cents—is the same for both lots, for the reason that the cost of two dozen is less than for the three dozen. A hen may lay well from April to July and apparently be an extraordinary layer, because she lays an egg every day, but after awhile she may do but very little, while another hen that does not seem to be doing her duty, slowly reaches the number and still keeps on laying. The record should therefore be kept for a year and the average for each month made. The best hens for the year should then be retained as breeders, from which to hatch the next season's pullets, and they should be mated with cockerel of a good laying family so as to secure better progeny than the parents.

SWINE.

Advantages of a Good Brood Sow

One of the most important characteristics of a good brood sow is that of furnishing an abundant supply of nutritious milk. Not only does she give the nourishment that her litter requires, but in other respects her maternal qualities are apt to be better developed. For this much can be done before her young are born. Feeding properly has much to do with developing her milk supply, and blood has much.

Hence it is necessary to inquire carefully into this characteristic, so prominent a factor in the success of rearing hogs. It is of more importance than pedigree, and no one in this day denies the importance of pedigree. It ought to be a quality looked for in tracing back the history of the stock. It ought to be a quality developed in keeping up the stock—developed by breeding the sows that excel in this quality to boars that are from dams that possessed the same excellence. The sow that converts her food principally into flesh and fat will not be a good milker, and her young will fail to get from her the needed supply of food at an age when they are susceptible of the most rapid growth—and susceptible, also, of an injury from lack of nutrition that will retard them so seriously that they will probably never after make the gain of which they were capable.

The young of sows that yield abundantly a rich quality of milk will be strong and healthy and will be ready to wean at an age earlier than the average age of weanlings, and will have had a start that will be of inestimable advantage to them throughout life. They need never become poor or low in condition. They will mature earlier and at less cost. They can be fattened with less feed, and in less time and will go into the market smoother and better looking than a hog that has been stunted during any of what ought to be an uninterrupted growing period.

There is no doubt that by judicious breeding and care the milk producing qualities can be developed in sows with as much certainty as in cattle. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN does not know that any breeding has ever been done with exactly this in view, but it is a faculty of such prime importance in the development of that desideratum, the early maturing hog, that it is certainly a quality that must and will be looked to by breeders. The time will come when families that produce good milkers will be sought after and will have an especial value. Certainly there is nothing upon which the success of the swine breeder more depends than that the dam should be able to abundantly nourish the young.

Artichokes as Hog Feed.

A good deal has been said lately through the agricultural press relative to the value of artichokes as a live stock feed and it is evident that farmers are beginning to give it much attention. For hogs it seems to be especially valuable. It is said that a plantation of it properly managed will last for years, and it makes not only an excellent but cheap feed for hogs, while the tops are a good forage for sheep and cattle. They pay best however as a hog feed, and should be sown where the hogs can run on them and gather the harvest themselves. If, in the spring, after the hogs have been taken off, the ground is plowed and, after two or three weeks, harrowed to kill out weeds, no after cultivation is necessary to secure a good crop. So uniform is the commendation of their value that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN believes it would be well for California farmers to test them thoroughly. It would probably not be advisable to try to keep enough hogs on the patch to clean them out of the ground too closely. But whether it would be better to try to raise a second crop from the one sowing or to sow each season could be determined only by actual experience.

Notes.

Michael Barry, of Hallstead, Pa., has made himself famous on account of his wonderful invention. A few days since 17 pigs, the largest litter ever known in this section, arrived on Barry's farm. The mother had made no arrangements for such a large family, and something had to be done to provide nourishment for the young rosters, so the inventive genius of Barry came into play, says the New York Press. He made a large tin receptacle and around the bottom of this miniature reservoir he attached short pieces of rubber hose to small holes made for the purpose. On the ends are fastened ordinary rubber nursing nipples. Then the pail is filled with milk, and the young pigs waddle up and draw nourishment. The litter is doing well.

While the feeding value of artichokes per hundred pounds is not great, a very large quantity per acre can be raised and they have besides nutritive value a great value as an aid to digestion, assimilation and health. They make an excellent accompaniment to corn by their effect in enabling the hog to convert the largest possible part of it into meat.

It is a good plan to begin feeding the pigs separate from the sow at a very early age, at first giving only milk, in which some more solid food in gradually increasing portions can be given as the pigs approach weaning time. Let them have, while growing, bulky food and such as makes bone and muscle. Grazing will supply them best with what their natural and healthy development requires.

In order to demonstrate the fact that hogs are particularly fond of alfalfa just drive into the hog lot with a lot of alfalfa and a load of corn. Throw off both loads and watch the result. The hogs will not tackle the corn until every blade of alfalfa is gone.

To pasture hogs on alfalfa successfully it is necessary to observe certain precautions. In the first place, two pastures are necessary, so that one may be grazed upon while the other is being irrigated. Be careful to have a good border between the two pastures, for if water comes into the patch where the hogs are feeding they cannot resist the temptation to root in the cool, moist earth. The best means of preventing the hogs from rooting up and eating the alfalfa roots is to cut the hard gristle of their snouts. No amount of rings will prevent them.

Veterinary Department.

THIS DEPARTMENT is edited by Dr. A. E. Buzard, M. R. C. V. S., 2128 Market Street, San Francisco. Subscribers can have gratuitous advice in cases of sick or injured animals by sending full particulars of the ailment. Communications must reach this office not later than Tuesday to insure an answer in that week's issue. Communications that require answering by mail must be accompanied by $1.00 and addressed to DR. BUZARD'S VETERINARY HOSPITAL.

Bloody Milk—The Secretion of Milk.

In answer to W. S., Willows, Cal., I will state that cows are sometimes constitutionally inclined to give bloody milk and this trouble chiefly exists among high bred or very large milkers. The tension of the glands, under the strain of a large secretion, causes the capillary vessels to give way and the blood exudes with the glandular secretion. To remedy the trouble, first reduce the feed, give no grain food, but some potatoes or beets. It may be well to give a pound of Epsom salts to relieve any fever which may exist. The milk should be drawn frequently and the udder bathed in warm water and then well rubbed with camphorated soap liniment.

A newly calved cow should be milked promptly if the udder is hard and appears full, or previous to calving if the udder is swollen and hard. A cow about to calve should have no grain food for three or four weeks previously.

THE SECRETION OF MILK.

Milk is secreted by and in two longitudinal glands commonly called the udder. These are separated by a fibrous partition which is attached to connective tissues under the skin. That tissue also spreads through the udder apparently for its support in position. The udder is spoken of as having four quarters, that is popularly correct, although the division between the two quarters on each side is not definite or distinct. The gland, stripped of its covering, is a reddish gray substance. In dry cows the deposits of fat in the connective tissues give it a yellowish appearance. The internal canal of the teat opens into a small milk cistern. The total quantity of milk held in the four cisterns or reservoirs at the top of the teats will seldom exceed one quart. Numerous ducts rise from these and branch into all parts of the udder. The ducts and their branches become smaller as they spread, until each one ends in a vesicle. Into these tiny cavities the serum of the milk (its water, casein, sugar, albumen, etc.) seem to pass from the arterial blood through the capillary tissues.

A change of the cell albumen of the blood into casein is believed to take place during that transudation. The inside of each vesicle is studded with innumerable cells. Through these the fat is produced, supposedly by budding. Each bud becomes a fat globule, drops into the verum, and so passes through the ducts into the milk reservoir, and on through the teat during the milking process. There are ordinarily as many as one thousand millions of globules in a cubic inch of milk. They have no organic pellicles or so called skins. The researches of Dr. Babcock of the New York Experiment station on that point have been very instructive. The activity of milk secretion depends largely upon the vigor of blood circulation. The production of fat depends mainly upon the temperament of the cow, gentle handling and feed rich in albuminoid. Violent disturbance of her nervous system has a disastrous effect upon the cell action and capillary activity, arteries, veins, and nerves together pervade the whole of the udder structure. Nerve ducts, such as those I referred to above, are formed by branching or sprouting out from others. Rubbing of the udder and rapid and clean milking will promote their growth and development until the sixth year.

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climatic and crop conditions is based upon reports received from nine Weather Bureau Stations, fifty-two telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company and many reports scattered throughout the State received from correspondents in their districts:

Shasta County—Heavy norther latter part of the week. Wheat is doing well; fair yield.

Glenn County—Haying under headway; light crop. Farmers cutting only enough for home consumption.

Butte County—Olive trees in bloom and very heavy on young as well as old trees.

Yolo County—Warm winds advancing fruit. Apricots coloring. Now haying.

Sacramento County—Most of the crops so poor they will be fed without being cut for grain. Haying about over.

Solano County—Most hay cut, but only one-fourth average crop. Cool weather helping grain on low land to fill after a fashion. Shipping cherries, crop large, fruit smaller than usual.

El Dorado County—All fruits looking well. Little hay or grain.

Stanislaus County—No crops this season except on lands under irrigation. Fruit doing fairly well.

Merced County—Plenty of water in ditches. Fruit doing well. Weather favorable for growing grain. Haying; light crop. Conditions not improved in irrigated district. Sorghum seed being sown for feed. Vineyards coming on slowly. Kings County—Some grain on irrigated lands; farmers buying. Some varieties of plums promise fair crop; pear yield heavy; prunes dropping some; vineyards doing finely. Haying in irrigated section.

Kern County—Now cutting first crop of alfalfa, light crop. Grain doing well.

Lake County—Crops of all kinds look well except late sown grain. Haying has begun nearly three weeks earlier than usual, yield good. Fruit trees are making a good growth but the crop will be light except apples, pears and prunes. Vines very thrifty with many grapes.

Sonoma County—Cutting some volunteer hay; very light. Hay and grain growing slowly but bright and green. Fruit of all kinds doing well. Good crop of apples, pears and prunes.

San Mateo County—Water supply so low that roads have not been sprinkled. Strawberry crop heavy, cherries ripening, peaches doing well; no apricots.

Santa Clara County—Cherries promise good crop if irrigated. Water is being hauled to trees that cannot be reached by irrigation ditches. Some apricots blown off by heavy wind. Berries ripening fast. Haying. Some crops on low lands look well; on higher land drying fast.

Santa Cruz County—Foggy nights and mornings of great benefit to crops.

Monterey County—Cool and foggy.

San Luis Obispo County—Cloudy with strong winds. No crops. Very little feed. Fruit in fair condition. Cattle are still being shipped to pasture.

Santa Barbara County—Some hay will be harvested but not more than enough for local consumption. New beet sugar factory will not run this season. Santa Ynez valley farmers will have no grain. Hay crop limited to a few small patches of alfalfa land. Grain lands will get a much needed rest.

Ventura County—Foggy. Orange shipments short.

Los Angeles County—Bassett. Some alfalfa being cut; what corn there is planted looks well. Duarte. Cool and damp; favorable for fruits and cereals. Oranges moving east. Los Angeles. Feed scarce; vegetables and fruits doing well. Shipping sheep east to pasture. Palmdale. Drouth still prevailing; very light pasture; alfalfa drying. Fernando. Pears and apricots doing well; oranges all shipped.

San Bernardino County—Fair alfalfa, and small barley crop. Whole valley looking brighter.

Orange County—No grain and little hay. Feed getting scarce.

Riverside County—No improvement in situation in back country. Movement of oranges continues good.

San Diego County—Showers have been of great benefit. Cutting hay in the bay region of the county and outlook good for light crop inland. Some grain will be harvested. Strawberries plentiful and of excellent quality. Thinning apricots; peaches and oranges setting well. The rain will benefit orchards, vineyards and considerable late sown grain; perhaps the honey crop also.

Eureka Summary—Grass on prairies drying up. Cherries, prunes and other small fruits very promising though all crops will be much benefited by rain.

Los Angeles Summary—Cloudy weather beneficial to growing crops. Late rain increased demand for irrigation water. Light crop of hay being cut in extreme north. Oranges setting well.

THE MARKETS.

Reports of Butchertown, Western Meat Company Refrigerated Meats, Local Wool, Hides, Tallow, Butter and Cheese, and Eastern Cattle Markets by Telegraph.

EASTERN LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Today's trade in cattle was slow, and lower, prices prevailed for rough Westerns. Strictly choice B. v. 55¢; common Steers, $3.90@4.25; Westerns, $3.90@4.85; Stockers and Feeders, $3.90@4.80; Calves, $4.75@6.60.

SHEEP—Receipts, none; market unchanged.

BUTCHERTOWN.

The market for dressed meats at Butchertown has been weak and unsettled throughout the week. If any arrivals of poor stock is what is keeping the market down and there is practically no immediate prospect for a firmer market. Stockmen are anxious to crowd their stock to market and considerable cattle are being shipped on commission, which means they are to be rushed through as fast as the demand will permit.

MUTTON—Is also unsettled with plenty of poor stuff on hand and to arrive; good wethers are bringing our outside figure.

HOGS—Owing to the sharp advance in the East on hog products our market is slightly advanced. Only good, hard, grain-fed stock, however, will bring our quotations.

STEERS—First quality, very choice, 6¢; choice, No. 1, 6¢@6½¢; Steers, No. 2, 5¢@5½¢; Steers No. 3, 5¢@5½¢. Extra choice Cows and Heifers 5¢; Good to Fair, 4¢@4½¢; Bulls, stags and old Cows, 4¢@4½¢; Calves, choice range, large, 4¢@4½¢; Dairy, 5¢@5½¢; Wethers, first quality, 8¢; Wether, second quality, 7¢@7½¢; Lamb, first quality, 7½¢; Ewes, second quality, 7¢; Lamb, yearlings, ———, Lamb (this Spring), 8¢; Hogs, dressed, hard, 5¢@5½¢; Hogs, live, hard, medium, 4¢@4½¢; Hogs, live, hard, heavy, 3¢@3½¢.

REFRIGERATED DRESSED MEATS.

The market for Refrigerated Meats continues in much the same condition as reported last week. Arrivals of live stock, sheep and hogs have been very plentiful, and with the exception of hogs, which show more firmness, the market is unsteady. Some 300 head of poor cattle known as canners stock, are being dis. osed of and canned every week, Wholesale Market, Sixth and Townsend, San Francisco.

Beef carcasses, prime, 6¢@6½¢; beef carcasses, second quality, 5¢@6¢. No. 1, Cows and Heifers, 5¢@5½¢; No. 2 Cows and Heifers, 4¢@5¢; Mutton, Wethers, carcasses, 7¢@8¢; Mutton, Wethers, carcasses, No. 2, 6¢@7¢; Mutton Ewes, carcasses, No. 1, 1¢@1½¢; Mutton, Ewes, carcasses, No. 2, 5¢@6¢; Lamb (this year's Spring) 8¢@8½¢; Veal, light, 5¢@6¢; Veal, heavy, 4¢@5¢; Pork, carcasses, 5¢@6¢.

HIDES AND SKINS.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Eastern market has advanced and has a further upward tendency, our local market does not appear to be improving. Dealers will not admit that hides have gone up, but nevertheless this fact is indisputable and we are of the opinion that hides will advance here at an early date. The market is, however, firm at quotations. This also applies to pelts, which for the present remain unchanged. We quote:

WET SALTED HIDES—Heavy Steers, over 56 lbs, 10c, culis, 9c; Medium, 48 to 56 lbs, 9c, culis 8c; Light Steer, under 48 lbs, 8c, culis, 8c; Heavy Cows, over 50 lbs, 9c, culis 8c; Light Cows, 30 to 50 lbs, 8c, culis 8c; 8 aags, 6c, culis 5c; Kips, 9c, culis 8c; Veal, 9c, culis 8c; Calf, 10c, culis 9c; Dry Hides, 16c, culis, 13c; Dry Kip and Veal, 14¢@15c, culis, 11c; Dry Calf, 18¢@20c, culis, 15¢@16c. Horses Hides, large prime, $2 25 each; medium, $1.75; small 75 cents.

TAILS—Large size 35 cents per dozen. PELTS AND SHEARINGS—20¢@30¢ each; do, short, 4¢@70¢ each; do, medium, 7¢@90¢ each; do, long, 9¢@1.30 each; Deer Skins, summer, 2¢@30¢; do, good medium, 20¢; do, winter, 10¢ per lb; Goat Skins, 20¢@37½¢ apiece for prime to perfect; 1¢@20¢ for damaged and 1¢@10¢ each for Kids. TALLOW—We quote: No. 1, Rendered, 3¢@3½¢ per lb; No. 2, 2¢@2½¢; Grease, 1¼¢@2¢ per lb.

WOOL REPORT.

There is no change what'soever in the local wool market. Everything is at a standstill and buyers are, so to say, out of the question. Considerable new clip is coming in and is being stored in warehouses. The quality so far is reported as good, clean and of good staple. Our quotations are purely nominal, as no prices have as yet been established. We quote: CALIFORNIA FALL CLIP—Plains, 1¢@9¢; Mountains, 9¢@11¢; Northern, 10¢@13¢; and Northern defective 8¢@10¢; Mendocino and Humboldt, 15¢@16¢.

NEVADA SPRING—Light and choice, 1¢@13¢. OREGON SPRING—Eastern choice, 10¢@14¢; Eastern poor, 9¢@11¢; Valley choice, 14¢@16¢; Valley low grade, 12¢@13¢.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

The butter market has ruled about the same throughout the week, one day it would advance half a cent, next day drop, then again advance a point, so taken as a whole, quotations are about the same at the close of the week as last reported. The market closed steady for the best grade of creameries and dairies which have an upward tendency. We quote: Creamery extras per lb, 19½¢@21½¢; firsts, 19¢@19½¢; seconds, 18½¢@19¢; Dairy select, 18½¢@19¢; seconds, 19¢—c; Dairy soft and weedy, —@—; Mixed store, 18¢@17¢; Creamery in tubs, 19¢@22¢; Pickled roll, —@—; Dairy in tubs, —@—c; Firkin, Cal., choice to select, 19¢@21¢; Firkin, common to fair, 16¢@18¢.

CHEESE—Arrivals of cheese throughout the week have been particularly heavy, which tends to give the market an easy tendency. The demand has not been equal to the supply and unless a better condition of affairs exists before next week we may find quotations reduced a point. We quote: California per lb, Cheddars, 14¢@15¢; Flats, mild, new, 9¢@14¢; fair to good, 8¢@8½¢; Young America, 10¢@11¢; Eastern, New York Cream, Cheddars and Flats 12¢@13½¢; Western, 11½¢@12½¢.

EGGS—The condition of the egg market has shown considerable firmness throughout the week, and quotations are correspondingly higher. Arrivals of choice ranch have been less than the demand called for, and we look unless supplies come in more freely to a further advance. We quote: California Ranch, 13¢@14¢; California Store, 11½¢@12½¢; Eastern, 12¢; Duck eggs, 16¢.

POULTRY—The market has ruled somewhat weak for California poultry, owing to heavy arrivals of the Eastern article, which consignors were particularly anxious to dispose of. Old stock was not in much demand and prices closed easy for this grade. We quote: Old Roosters, per doz, $3.50@4.1; young, $7.50@8.50; Fryers, $5.50@6.50; Broilers, large, $4@5; small, $3.50@4.50; Hens, $4.50@5.50; Ducks, old, do, $3@3.50; young, $4@5.50; Turkeys, live, Hens, per lb, 11¢@12¢; (cobs), 11¢@12¢; dressed, per lb, 15¢; Geese, pair, 1.25; Goats, pair, 1.75@2.1; Pigeons, young, $1.50@1.75; do, old, $1.25.

Eastern Poultry—Old Roosters, per doz, $1.80@1.75; Hens, $5.50@6; Fryers, $6.50; Broilers, —; Young Roosters, $6.50@7; Ducks, $5; Turkeys, per lb, 12¢@13¢; Geese, pair, $2. WHEAT—Advanced in an excited market during the past week, but is now quieting down with lower prices at Chicago and less demand for stock abroad. The present quotations, however, are still slightly higher than those given in our issue of last week. Tidewater quotations are as follows: $1.77@1.80 for ship, ing and $1.85@1.90 per cbl. for milling.

HAY—Receipts of outside Hay continue to fall off and the market is steady in consequence. More new Wheat sold at $20; new Oat sold at $16; Straw is weaker. (Ex-car) in round lots—Wheat, $21@24.50 per ton; Wheat and Oat, $20@23.50; Oat, $18@19; Barley, none; compressed Wheat, $21@24; compressed Oat, $18@20; Alfalfa, $13@14; Clover, nominal; Oregon Timothy, $16@18.

FEEDSTUFFS show no change. Rolled Barley, $29 per ton; Oatmeal, Meal at the mill, $19@21.50; Jobbing, $32@32.50; Coconut Cake, $24@25; Cottonseed Meal, $28@30 per ton; Cornmeal, $24.50; Cracked Corn, $5.5.

STRAW—75¢@1.05 per bale. It is scarce and firm.

BRAN—$20.5¢@21 per ton.

MIDDLINGS—$23.50@25 per ton.

FLOUR—Has advanced. Net cash prices are: Family extras, $6@6.10; Bakers' extras, 5.75@5.85 per barrel.

MILLSTUFFS—Prices in sacks are follows, usual discount to the trade: Graham Flour, $3 per 100 lbs.; Rye Flour, $2.75 per 100; Rice Flour, $6; Cornmeal, $2.50; extra cream Cornmeal $3.25; Oatmeal, $4; Oat Groats, $4.25; Hominy, $3.25@3.50; Buckwheat Flour, $4@4.25; Cracked Wheat, $3.75; Farina, $4.75; Whole Wheat Flour, $1.25; Rolled Oats (barrels), $5.80@6.20; in sacks, $5.60@6; Pearl Barley, $4.75; Split Peas, $1.25; Green Peas, $4.50 per 100 lbs.

BEANS show but little or no change. Bayos, $2.90@3; Small Whites $2.05@2.15; Pinks, $2.65@2.75; Reds, $2.75@2.85; Blackeye, $3.50; Butters, $1.65@1.75; Limas, $3.15; Peas, $2@2.15; Red Kidneys, $2.65@2.75. Large Whites, $2@2.25 per cbl.

SEEDS—Brown Mustard, $2.25@2.50 per cbl; Yellow Mustard, $3.15@3.25; Flax, 2.25; Canary seed, 2¼¢@2½¢ per lb; Alfalfa, 3¢@6¢; Rape, 2¼¢@3¼¢; Hemp, 2¼¢@3¢; Timothy, 5¢@4¢.

DRIED PEAS—Niles, $1.75@2; Green, $1.90@2.25 per cbl.

POTATOES—Early Rose, 1¢@35¢; River Reds, 40¢@50¢; River Burbanks, 5¢@65¢ per sack; Oregon Burbanks, 50¢@90¢; Petaluma Burbanks, 50¢@65¢; Sweet Potatoes, 1¢@1.25 for Merced; new Potatoes, 1¢@2¢ per lb.

ONIONS—Australian, $3.50@4 per cbl; new, 65¢@80 per cbl.

VEGETABLES—Asparagus, $2.00 for extra large, $1.50@1.75 per box for No. 1 and 65¢@1.25 for small; Rhubarb, 40¢@80 per box for good, and 65¢@75 for extra choice; Alameda Green Peas, $1.50 per sack; Garden Peas 2½¢@3¢ per lb; String Beans, 8¢@8½¢; Horse Beans, 2¢@30¢ per sack; Dried Peas, 6¢@6½¢ per lb. Dried Okra 12¢; Cabbage, 6¢@75¢ per sack; Cucumbers, 25¢@31¢ per dozen; Mexican Tomatoes, $1@1.75 per box; Summer Squash, 12¢ per lb; New Garlic, 6¢@8¢ per lb.

EVAPORATED VEGETABLES—Potatoes, sliced raw, 12¢ per lb in lots of 25 lbs; sliced desiccated, 16¢@18¢; granulated raw, 13¢; Onions, 60¢; Carrots old, 13¢; new, 18¢; Cabbage, 30¢; Sweet Potatoes, 30¢; Turnips, 25¢; String Beans, 30¢; Tomatoes, 50¢.

RAISINS—1½¢@2¢ for two-crown, 2¢ for three-crown, 3½¢ for four-crown, 4½¢ for Seedless Sultanas, 2¼¢ for Seedless Muscatis and 1¢@1.10 for London layers; dried grapes, 2½¢.

NUTS—Chestnuts are quotable at 8¢ per lb; Walnuts, 3¢@1 for hard-shell and 4¢@6¢ for soft-shell; Almonds, 3¢@4 for hardshell, 6¢@7¢ for softshell and 5¢@9¢ for papershell; Peanuts, 4¢@5¢ for Eastern and 4½¢ for California; Pecans, 6¢@8; Filberts, 8¢@10; Brazil Nuts, 8¢@9 per lb; Cocanuts, $1.50@5 per 100.

HONEY—Comb, 9¢@10¢ for bright and 6¢@7¢ for lower grades; water-white extracted, 5¢@6¢; light amber extracted, 4¼¢@5¼¢ per lb; Beeswax, 24¢@26¢ per lb.

APPLES—40¢@50¢ per box for common, 75¢@81 for good to choice and $1.25@1.50 for fancy.

TACOMA, May 12.—Wheat market strong. Closing: No. 1 club, $1.06; No. 1 bluestem, $1.10.

Cattle for Modoc

We are informed from San Luis Obispo, that to-day Mr. J. F. Ingram will leave with a train of about twenty-seven carloads of mixed steers and cows. He has gathered twenty-four carloads from Los Alamos and Guadalupe. Three carloads will be added to the train here and probably some more will be taken on at Salinas.

Ma. Ingram has purchased these cattle for Jesse D. Carr, and they will be shipped to the great Carr ranch in Modoc County.

Inspection of Cattle.

William Penn Anderson, special agent of the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company of Chicago, writing from Denver, has reported to the National Live Stock Association that Nebraska has promised to send a man to inspect a train load of California cattle which is billed into and through Nebraska. Mr. Anderson said Sacramento, seemed to be the most strategic point for the purpose. Such arrangements will privilege the owners to both railway and market competition as well as avoid the probability of detention which might be caused either by accident or unforeseen diversion of shipment.

Subduing a New Milker.

Sometimes a cow freshly come to milk, or a young heifer, will give a great deal of trouble about milking. If the milker kicks or abuses the animal she is liable to be made vicious for life. To manage her, fasten her securely and pass a strap or rope around the body, just in front of the bag, letting it pass beyond the right hip and in front of the left. Draw this girth rather tightly, and then sit down to milk. The strap tightens the muscles, and although the animal may make some attempts to kick she will do no harm and will soon get over the idea.

BECOME A MAN

This will interest those who have doctored with "medical companies" and "free prescriptions" fakes and electric belts, until they are thoroughly disgusted. I am a well known physician of Chicago and have made nervous disorders and all diseases peculiar to men a special study for 20 years. I have a remedy that will do wonders in a few days, but with patience and the correct use of my treatment I will guarantee to MAKE A MAN OF YOU IN TIME. For a short time I will send a full month's treatment of my "NERVE-FULFILLER" with some valuable instructions for $1.00, or 6 boxes a full course for $5.00. I HAVE CURED THOUSANDS AND CAN CURE YOU. If suffering from a chronic disease of any nature write me in confidence at once. All ailments sent in plain wrapper. DOCTOR CHAHAN, 114 Dearborn St., Room 1109, Chicago, Ill.

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm. Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

Alameda, at $100 the Season.

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities. In having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a pacing-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electioneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Prince. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONT'S.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

NOTE—Besie Rankin, by Altamont, sold November, 1897, brought the highest price obtained for a harness horse at public auction in California during the year. Address

SEYMOUR WILKES, 2:08 1/2

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

J. H. White's Stock Farm, Lakeville, Cal.

TERMS—$25 FOR THE SEASON

SEYMOUR WILKES was sired by the King of the Wilkes family, Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, dam Early Bird, by Playmail (brother to Barney, 2:25 1/4); second dam Lucy, by Odd Fellow (son of Chloroform); third dam by a son of Williamson's Belmont; fourth dam by Blackhawk 767. Playmail was by Mike 3403 (the by Vermont 322, out of the Peniger mare), out of Kate McDonough (dam of Ella Lewis 2:27, and granddam of Saladin, 2:05 1/4).

SEYMOUR WILKES stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a seal brown in color, and in conformation is one of the most symmetrical of any in California. His qualities as a level-headed, game and speedy race horse are known to all horsemen. He is the fastest son of the mighty Guy Wilkes, and on his maternal side traces to the very best of sires and dams. He has an iron constitution, and all owners of good mares that want horses that will have breeding, size, bone, quality, good disposition and extreme speed should not overlook this horse. His service fee is placed at a very low figure considering his merits. He never was bred but to a few mares, and his progeny are models of perfection.

Mares can be shipped direct to the ranch via steamer "Gold." The best of care taken of them on the farm, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Pasturage $3 per month. For further particulars apply to

THOS. ROCHE, Lakeville, Cal.

SUCCESSFUL STALLIONS—STATISTICAL.

The Sires of California, 1897, and Their Principal Money-Winners—Crackjacks of the Season.

The following shows the principal winners by the various sires quartered in California, or bred here, during the year 1897. The showing of imp. Sir Modred, imp. Midlothian, imp. Darebin, Apache and several younger sires is worthy of attention, and this season (1898) more new and young stallions are represented in California than ever. Nomad, imp. Golden Garter, imp. Goldfinch, Orizaba, Darriwell, Rio Bravo, imp. Crighton and imp. Watercross have racing representatives in America for the first time, and all are doing well. Next year we will have some of imp. Star Ruby's get, besides some of Eolos and Trentolas and youngsters by imp. Artillery. The sons and daughters of the latter are doing exceedingly well in New Zealand, winning important stake races from the best in the land. We believe there is a great deal in the Bruce Lowe theory regarding "sire blood," else those of the No. 3 family would not be at the top of the "winning stallions" list or near it in the great thoroughbred horse breeding countries—England, New Zealand, Australia and America. In a short time we will print the Bruce Lowe figures (the top four crosses) of some of the successful stallions of this part of the world and give our opinion of some horses that on "the figure system" ought to make great names for themselves at the stud, though they are as yet untried.

The incomparable Ornament easily headed the list of individual winners of 1897, having earned $53,375 in stakes and purses during the season. The next biggest winner was L'Alouette, the Futurity winner, who gathered in for her owner $40,540, beating Hamburg who came third with $40,070. It is rare, indeed, that a three-year-old is the biggest winner of the year, as the richest stakes are given for the two-year-olds, and emphasizes the fact that Ornament was the champion of the year at any age. The Friar was the next largest three-year-old winner, he having won $25,925, the bulk of which came from the Realization, decidedly the richest three-year-old stake of the season. Of other three-year-olds, Typhoon II. only won $13,400 and Algol $1,070. Buckvidere won $6,550; Dr. Catlett won $4,500, Cavalero $4,346, Howard S. $7,150, On Deck $4,210, Renas laer $10,591, Fleischmann $7,150, Octagon, $12,710 Don de Oro $10,735, Voter $9,835, Cleophus $5,165, Sunny Slope $5,550 and White Frost $11,945.

Among the good two-year-olds, besides L'Alouette and Hamburg, Previous (by imp. Meddler) won $19,622, Banockburn $10,080, Frohman $11,000, Plautit $8,710, Malvolio $4,250, Traverser $3,960, MacIvor $3,050, and Howland $2,810.

The great Hanover led the stallions of 1897 in the number of winners, he having 49 to his credit, though he is hard-pressed by Fonso with 35 winners. Imp. Deceiver is next in order with 37 winners, and Strathmore 35; then comes Hindoo, Leonatus and Sir Dixon with 31 each; imp. Rosington with 29, and Falsetto, imp. Midlothian and imp. Pirate of Penzance with 28 each; Himyar with 27 and Bramble with 26.

A full list of the number of the stallions in California which sired ten winners or more in 1897 is given below, with an additional list of their get who earned money, i. e., were second or third, but did not win. The list is compiled from Goodwin's "Winning Sires of 1897," which gives a complete list of the winnings of each horse which started in 1897 arranged under the respective sires:

Alexander, at Rancho del Paso—Nicholas, $1,793.
Alta (dead)—Don Fulano, $3,205.
Amigo, at Santa Anita Rancho—La Goleta, $3,945; Alvarado II., $2,185.

AMERICA'S GRANDEST STUD MATRONS.

The Most Distinguished Mothers of Racers Ever Known in This Country and Their Descent in the Female Line—Our Ideas Regarding Selections.

While the marked excellence of such comparatively short-bred stud matrons as Marion, Belle Knight, Betsey Malone, Picayune, Magenta, Balloon, Maggie R., Sweetbriar, Thora and Miss Woodford indicates to us that it is the "individuality" and not the blood lines that make these mares so valuable as producers, still it may prove interesting to pedigree students to trace the most wonderful mothers of American-bred gallopers to the "tap root." With this in view we will give this week a list of fifty of the most celebrated mothers of American racers from the earliest day as far as it goes—mares that grew three or more notabilities of the turf or stud. Next week we will trace fifty more of the great matrons.

It is our opinion, however, that if a mare is an individual far above the ordinary and has four good top crosses, breeders will make no mistake in using her at the stud. And the chances are she will, if not put to the stud too soon after her racing career comes to an end (the hard muscles of an athlete allowed to relax and become the muscles of a matron, soft and motherly) give to the world something out of the common as a racer. There have been so many short-bred stud matrons that have thrown such a host of horses that could go long journeys at a high rate of speed and such a host of well-bred mares whose foals never do well at any distance beyond six furlongs that we begin to believe that "individuality" is the great desideratum in a mare to be sent to the stud. The "weeds" of the thoroughbred garden should be cast aside forever, and if more attention was paid to the bone, roominess and muscular development of brood mares than to pedigree, regardless of power, a much better race of horses would be the result. The breeding of stallions, it would appear, counts for more than that of mares in a breeding establishment. There seems to be a great deal in the Bruce Lowe theory that the most successful sires come from Nos. 3, 8, 11, 12 and 14 families, in other words, stallions tracing their female descent respectively to the dam of the two True Blues, the Bustler mare (dam of the Beverly Turk mare), the Sedbury Royal Mare, the Royal Mare (3d dam of the Old Montague mare) and the Oldfield Mare are the best to breed your mares to if you desire to get a good turf performer. If there is nothing in the theory, it is at least peculiar that the most of the great stallions in the four great horse-breeding countries (England, New Zealand, Australia and America) should be of the No. 3 family. The best stallions, by the records, ever known in England were Stockwell and Sir Peter, and they both traced to the dam of the two True Blues. Musket, the greatest stallion ever known in New Zealand, traced to the same source. Australian Newminster was of the No. 3 family, and imp. Medley, American Eclipse, imp. Rayon d'Or, Reform and imp. Glengarry, in this country, were descendants of the dam of the two True Blues. Therefore, with such statistics at hand, and also that regarding the members of the Nos. 8, 11, 12 and 14 families, if we were going to purchase a stallion we would not look outside of these lines for a sire. But if we were looking for a mare she would have to come up to our physical standard first and the breeding would be a second consideration. Of course, the stallion would have to be sound and "masculine looking," but breeding would be the first requisite in his case.

Australasia News.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN]

The yearling sales of March show the market to be in a very healthy condition, and that good racing material will still fetch fair prices. The Messrs. Campbell & Sons sold Mr. Andrew Chirnside's Newminster Park yearlings at the City Horse Bazaar, and there was a goodly attendance of racing men on hand. The best prices were: 610 guineas (about $3,132) for a gelding by Zilinski from Nemesis, Mr. W. Allen being the purchaser. Other good prices were 250 for a brown filly by Vengeance from Primrose, Mr. G. Gray; 210 guineas for br f by Zilinski from Queen Bee, Mr. Chas. Ayrey; 200 guineas for br f from Busy Bee; 170 guineas for a bay gelding by Vengeance from Constellation, Mr. Chas. Ayrey, and 150 guineas for a bay filly by Vengeance from Forest Queen, purchased by Mr. G. Gray. The average of the sale was 128½ guineas, or $672—very good, truly.

At the sales of thoroughbred yearlings on Wednesday following the Newminster Park yearlings, the best prices were 400 guineas for br f by Malna from Cipriote, bought by Mr. R. G. Talbot; 260 guineas for ch c by Carnage from Lady Disdain, bought by Mr. A. Murphy; 240 guineas for ch c by Pilgrim's Progress from Lady Belle, bought by Mr. G. Towton; 230 guineas for b c by Carnage from Princess Alice, bought by J. N. McArthur; 230 guineas for br c by Bill of Portland (son of St. Simon) out of The Fortune Teller, bought by Mr. S. McKay, and 270 guineas for b c by Trenton from Gardenia, purchased by Mr. J. N. McArthur.

W. R. Wilson's Aurum (by Trenton Aura), who goes to Mrs. Langtry, won the V. R. C. St. Leger February 26th with 122 pounds up, ridden by H. J. Morrison. He won by ten lengths with ease. The Tola was second and Keera third. Time, 3:12. Aurum's sire, Trenton, is now in England. The fourth dam of this great colt, Lady Evelyn, by Don John, won the Oaks in England, as did her dam, Indus try, by Priam.

S. Fielder's Amiable (blk m, 5, by Lochiel—Affection) won the Newmarket Handicap with 124 lbs. up in 1:14, Reaper second, with 106 lbs., Resolute third with 129 lbs. There were twenty-six starters and the mare won easily by two lengths in 1:14 flat.

R. Cherside's Cordite (by Zilinski—Busy Bee by the Marquis) won the Sires' Produce Stakes in 1:14½, 117 lbs. up, Cocos second, Bobadil third.

Battalion, winner of the Essendon stakes (mile and a half in 2:36½, with 124 pounds in the saddle) is by Battailo's out of Nancy Till.

The first crop of youngsters by the Melbourne Cup winner, Tarcoola, are fine-lookers, and as a family took first prize at the horse show held near where the son of Newminster and Imogene is standing. More than twenty stallions were represented, too. Last season Tarcoola served some fifty-six mares, and it is said fifty-three of them are safely in foal. The conqueror of the record-breaking, Portsea, et al., is bred on sire lines with a vengeance, he being by Newminster (No. 3, Lowe plan) out of Imogene (of the 12 family). Besides, he has close up the blood of Stockwell (3), The Marquis (2), Newminster (8) and King of the Ring (3). We never saw a horse better bred for a sire than Tarcoola, and with his great record on the turf behind him, should be a valuable stallion.

The Brunswick Stakes (once captured by Loyalist, now at Palo Alto stud, California) was won this season by S. G. Cook's m The Parisienne, 5, by Trenton—Marie Louise, in 2:09, Vakeel second and Pinfire third. Loyalist won in 2:08½, which was the Australian record for a time, if we remember right.

At the V. R. C. meeting March 1st, R. Batty's Clondalkin (by Goldsborough—Songstress) won the hurdle race, two and a half miles, with 142 pounds up. W. R. Wilson's Bobadil (by Bill of Portland [son of St. Simon]—She, by Nordenfeldt) easily captured the Ascot Vale Stakes, six furlongs, with 122 pounds up, Cordite (127 pound) second, Cocos (132 pounds) third. Pretty good weights, these, for two-year-olds. Mr. Wilson's Aurum won it in 1897, and his Challenger in 1895. W. H. Davidson's br h Ayrshire, 5, won the Australian Cup by three and a half lengths, Battalion (a, 135 pounds) second, Aurum (3, 129 pounds) third. The winner's closing price was 16 to 1. Ayrshire is by Dunlop (winner of the Melbourne Cup) out of imp. Hionomungie, by Blink-hoolie, second dam Patchwork, by Young Melbourne. The steeplechase, about two miles, was won by S. Miller's b g Wherside, by Glorious—Mildura, with 178 pounds up. He won by eight lengths. W. R. Wilson's blk c Ormuz, with 113 pounds up, won the Junior Handicap, five furlongs. The winner is by Bill of Portland (St. Simon—Electric Light, by Sterling) out of Cooya. W. R. Wilson's b c Resolute, 4, annexed the Burke Handicap, seven furlongs, carrying 134 pounds. D. S. Wallace's Moonlyong, second, had but 109 pounds.

On March 3d (V. R. C. meeting) Mr. Batty's Clondalkin (156 lbs.) won the second hurdle race. J. Wilton Jr.'s Avalon (by Strathmore—Chintz) won the Maiden Stakes, one mile. J. Crozier's b g Vakeel, a (by Robinson Crusoe—Eileen) finished first in the Autumn Handicap with 105 lbs., running the mile and five furlongs in 2:52½. W. Duggan's b c Amberite, 3 years, (by Carbine—Duenna, by Lecturer), carrying 110 lbs., won the Champion stakes by twenty lengths, from Bundook (the only other starter). J. Wilson's Relic (by Off Colour—Tonia), 101 lbs., won the Nursery Handicap, seven furlongs, and D. S. Wallace's br f Moonlyong, 4, by Mentor—Sierra, 113 lbs., time 2:08½ for the mile and a quarter.

The Takupuna (Auckland) Jockey Club wound up a most successful three days' summer meeting. Marksman, a son of the Musket horse Foulshot (who is in America) won the Maiden Hurdles from a half-dozen others. The leading flat event was the summer handicap, one mile; and in a field of seven Anita was made a great favorite, but the winner turned up in Supplejack, a four-year-old son of Hippocampus and Empress, by Maribyrnong out of Peeress, who won easily from Castashore; the second favorite, Lufra, finishing third; Anita was badly beaten. Pansy, by King Quail—Winnie, won the three mile Steeplechase easily from Miss Nelson and three others. After a great race the two favorites, St. Innis and Daphtree, were beaten over the four furlongs of the two-year-old race, the Marme Handicap, by Roxana, a daughter of Cuirassier and Vieux Rose, whose first win it was. The victory was only gained by a head. The double winner of the first day, Rex, beat nine others in the six-furlong Devonport Handicap, The Sharper finishing second and Miss Anna third. Amongst the unplaced division were the favorites, Supplejack and St. Elmo, the latter of whom had won, earlier in the day, the four furlong Borough Handicap from Atlanta, the Sharper and nine others, including Rex and Cuirassette.—"Leonatus" in the Australasian.

The Musket blood was greatly in evidence at the meeting, being considerably assisted to a prominent position by the aid of the Tocal-owned sire Medallion, says "Leonatus" in The Australasian. What sort of a stud, had he wished to breed on a large scale, might Mr. Stead have had with Medallion, Maxim, Lochiel, not to mention Trenton and others. But to return to the Riccarton racing, of which it will be only necessary for the Australasian readers to touch on the principal events. There were a couple of 250 sovereign races on the first day, and out of the first, of which the Middlepark Plate, for two and three-year-olds, special weights, over six furlongs, Mr. Stead's crack two-year-old Conqueror, by Medallion from Siesta, frightened all opposition; but Falka, a two-year-old daughter of St. George and Melusina, running in Mr. E. Cutt's name, with 8 sterling 3 pounds, including a penalty of 10 pounds, and conceding Faika 15 pounds, Conqueror simply walked in in 1:21; and to show what the public thought, I may say that the only investments on the totalisator consisted of £2 on the winner. Conqueror claims several valuable engagements yet this season. Like many other of New Zealand's special weight races, Mr. Stead's name figures prominently in conjunction with the Middlepark Plate, which he has won eight seasons, the four last consecutively. Another Medallion prevailed in the other big race, the Midsummer Handicap, one mile and a half. The winner was Mountebank, a three-year old son of Vaultress, by Albany (Thormanby—Griselda) from Miranda (Traducer—Belle of the Isle). Mountebank who is owned by Mr. Harry Goodman of Dunedin, and has grown into a fine looking colt, was made a bit better favorite than the uncertain Skirmisher, Eulverin, and Star Shot, a trio that were pretty equally backed. Cuirassier's three-year old daughter from Radiant, Sequin, owned by Messrs. Stephenson and Hazlett, was a great tip, but she failed to run up to expectations, and could only get third behind Culverin, a neck away, while after a great finish Mountebank was only able to get home by a bare length. The time was 2 min 39 2-5 sec., and the dividend (£5) was a good one in a field of nine, which included Epaulet, the four-year-old son of Medallion and Dndu, who ran last behind Sir George Clifford's filly Goldleaf, the other starters being Red Lancer and Rangefinder. As on the first day, so on the second, the new weight-for-age race, the Champion Plate, of 300 sovs., for three-year-olds, one mile and a quarter, was reduced to a match—albeit a very unequal one—between two, for Mountebank was the only one sent out to oppose Gold Medallist. Speculation was limited again, and while there were ten investors on Medallion's son, there were only two on Mountebank, who was beaten at the finish easily by nearly two lengths.

Mr. W. R. Wilson is a long way ahead of everyone as far as stakes are concerned, says "Terlinga" in the Australasian, notwithstanding that the Newmarket Handicap, Australian Cup and Champion Race went else. The crack two-year-old Bobadil was the principal winner, and the success of this colt and Ormuz was very satisfactory, inasmuch as it established Bill of Portland's worth as a stallion. Aurum won £880. This is not much for him. Before the meeting began it seemed almost a certainty that he would secure the Champion Race and the Loch Plate. If he had not been such a favorite for the Australian Cup, I fancy he would have been withdrawn from that race and reserved for the Champion on Thursday. Amiable's own win brought Mr. Fielder £1,404. After the Newmarket she was a failure. Amiable was advertised for sale on Monday, but she was withdrawn and sent back to Sydney. Amiable, Amberite and Cravat won the only New South Wales horses to win. As it happened, the horses from Sydney did not prove as formidable as was expected. They had a grand innings in the spring, and when Spectator and Johansen came down and won their races at Canfield so easily, it looked as though history was about to repeat itself. Only one race went to South Australia, and about £10,000 of the £12,909 given in stakes remains in Victoria.

Mr. Ben Richards, at one time a well-known supporter of the turf in South Wales, died last week. He was the breeder of Cap-a-pie, Sir William, Anæus and Milbrodale. Mr. Richards was 80 years of age when he died.

At the V. R. C. meeting, March 5th, W. R. Wilson's Bobodil, two years, won the All-aged Stakes by seven lengths, with 96 pounds up, mile in 1:40½, Waitabit (126 pounds) second, Relic, 2 (93 pounds), third. Wherside won the second handicap steeplechase with 139 pounds up. Battalion (129 pounds) beat Amberite (124 pounds) and Bundook (126 pounds) for the Loch Plate, while A. Yuille's b c Spencer, 3, by Carbine—Silvia, won the Farewell Handicap in 1:41 with 93 pounds up.

The Ascendal Park races (March 8th) were won by Canonite, Ray Olaf, Goodman, Carmyle and Flint, respectively by Matador, Cheviot, Malua, Segenhoe, Trenton and Gang Forward.

The winners at the A. J. C. meeting (Sydney) May 5th were Ettebab, Mirella, Alaria, Raven's Plume and Eastern King, respectively by Invader, Nordenfeldt, Far Niente, Carbine and Sunrise. Eastern King, winner of the Welter Handicap, is a half brother to A. B. Spreckels Crighton, being out of Ghinni Ghinni.

W. Walter's Swordfish by Hotchkiss—Fish Girl, won the Wanganui (N. Z.) Jubilee Cup, one mile and three-quarters. On the second day of the Stratford Club meeting the big event, the President's Handicap, one mile and a quarter, fell to a four-year-old son of Cuirassier and Aida, in Uhlan, who had no trouble in defeating three others, including the Castor horse, Adam, who was third. Vanguard had three winning representatives at the meeting, and one of Major George's breeding in St. Vincent, by Nelson—Florence, won the seven furlongs Welter. Foulshot, who is in America, occasionally gets a turn by one of his get prevailing, and at this meeting Singleshot, a five-year-old by him, was awarded the five furlongs race, the winner being disqualified for crossing. More Musket blood was to the front, through one of the progeny of that well bred horse Lebel—whose son, Tukapa, from the jumping mare Jenny, won easily over six furlongs. This is the first winner by Lebel, who was got in 1888, by Nordenfeldt by Pulchra, dam of Formo and Co., and as a two-year-old bore the "yellow jacket, black cap," of Mr. Stead to the front in the Great Northern Foal Stakes at Ellerslie.

Aurum is reported to be amiss, and will not take part in the A. S. C. Autumn Meeting.

Three or four well-known racehorses were put up for sale by Messrs. Wm. C. Yuille and Co. (through Messrs. Campbell and Sone) at Kirk's Bazaar on Monday, says the Australasian. The hurdle-racer Podarces was the only one sold, he finding a new owner in Mr. J. Campbell at 100 guineas. Mr. S. Miller was anxious to get Clondalkin, but his best bid was 295 guineas, at which price the son of Goldsborough was passed in. Olaf was passed in at 260 guineas, and Telegraph at 170 guineas. Messrs. Campbell and Sons sold Barratta to Er. T. J. Burke for 8½ guineas, and Mazeppa to Mr. R. Powell for 7½ guineas.

The winners at the Victoria Amateur Turf Club meeting March 12th, were Cardamon (Federal Stakes), Nilus Goodman, Blue Peter, Aluminum and Eidepor.

R. Ray's b f Starshot, 4 (by Chainshot—Veno) won the Dunedin (N. Z.) Cup and the Dunedin Jockey Club Handicap respectively, at a mile and three quarters and a mile and a half.

Mr. J. B. Clark came out second best in his complaint against Mr. R. Dakin in connection with the handicapping of Jack Hanwell, the V. R. C. Committee's finding being as follows: "Having considered the statement submitted by Mr. J. B. Clark, the committee is of opinion that substantial justice was done by Mr. Dakin, and that there is no occasion for the committee to interfere."—AMERICAN.

Saddle Notes.

FRAWLEY is to ride on the Montana circuit for Farrar & Tuberville.

NEWGATHERER won a mile race at Lakeside in 1:42½ on the 12th of May, beating a field of eight.

TENDER, a two-year-old winner at Morris Park May 12th, is a bay filly by the great swayback, Tenny, out of Darine.

JUDGE J. H. TAMM ran Lucky Star up to $500 after the last race May 17th, at which price he secured the useful Friar Tuck horse.

Ms. BAITER, a winner at Morris Park May 12th, is by Iroquois—Carlotta, therefore a brother to the $8,000 counterfeiter, Eakins.

Mrs. NETTIE HARRISON will send Alma, Beautiful Girl, Lola Montez, B. & W. and Cazalero to Montana in charge of Trainer Tom Burns.

COL. BURNS says that both Altamax and Mt. McGregor will be fit to race next season. The great firm will ship twelve horses to Chicago next week.

GALEN BROWN leaves for Chicago on Saturday. Yesterday he concluded arrangements with I. P. Diggs of Woodland to lease Diomed, the yearling brother of Olinthus.

RED BIRD was not eligible to start in the race on May 13th, in which he finished second, and has been disqualified by the judges. This decision gives second money to Wenoma and third to Celoso.

JOE WEBER rode Marito to victory at Lakeside May 11th. The son of Volante and Maori was at odds of 8 to 1 and won by two lengths from Enchanter and ten others in 1:14½ for six furlongs.

SPENCER, who went East recently to ride for the Thompson Brothers, piloted The Huguenot to victory in a mile race at Morris Park May 12th. The brother to Henry of Navarre closed at 6 to 1.

KINGDON who won the Bouquet Stakes at Morris Park by four lengths, is by the "brown whirlwind" Kingston, out of Lady Ballard. He belongs to M. F. Dwyer, who owned Kingston when he raced.

THE HUGUENOT, brother to Henry of Navarre, won a mile race at Morris Park on Saturday, Our Johnny, by Fresno, won at a mile and a sixteenth, and Jean Beraud captured the National Stallion Stakes.

MERCUTIO had a pair of Capt. Harris patent blinds on May 17th, and they worked to a charm. He got away pretty well and won cleverly from a good field. Matt Storn is now training the bad actor, and had Mercutio in condition to run for a kingdom.

MIDLIGHT, the four-year old mare by imp. Madlothian-Electric Light, who belongs to the comedian, Richard Golden, was blistered yesterday and the effect was to throw her into a fit. Of necessity she was scratched in the second race.—Chicago Inter Ocean, May 10.

THE New York Herald advocates the barring of the starting gate and the early return to flag starting. The Herald man forgets what vexatious delays the gate saves and that two or three more races can be comfortably run during an afternoon now, when the gate is in use.

A NEW YORK paper claims that Glenheim is another Hamburg. He captured the Juvenile Stake at Morris Park in a decisive manner, but was afterward beaten by Jean Beraud. Glenheim is a full brother to Handsome and a half brother to Ferrier, Plaudit and Hastings.

EARLY next week Trainer Billy Short will leave for Denver with the crack sprinters, Rubicon, Roadwarmer, R. Q. Ban, Kaiser Ludwig, Midas and a couple of others. The big meeting which commences in that city on June 2th will attract a large number of horsemen from this part of the country.

GEORGE BAYLESS, the well-known trainer, who died suddenly in Oakland on Sunday, first came to this coast with the great horse, True Blue. The deceased horseman was one of the most capable trainers in this country, but continued ill health had kept him in the background for the past two or three years.

TERRENE, by Terra Cotta, Duchess of Montrose, a two-year-old winner at Louisville on Saturday, May 7th, is one of the four fillies that Messrs. Clay & Woodford unsexed in the yearling form, believing that the operation would make them more reliable racing performers. The others were Factory Girl, May-Be-So and Duplicate.

SIGMUND ISAACS, of this city, has been very successful as a turfman in Japan. His horses, Idaho and Oregon, won the Emperor's Vase and the Ladies' Purse, the two great events of the Yokohama meeting. He also has an unbeaten Chinese pony racing there. Mr. Isaacs has relatives in this city and a host of friends who will be pleased to hear of his success.

MR. BATES, who rode the winner of the gentlemen's race Saturday, is one of the prominent members of the Reliance Club. As soon as he knew his mount in the race he sought out the owners, and in business fashion asked to have a workout on the horse, and also worked out J. O. C. and several others in the stable. Judging from the clever manner in which he handled William O'B. Saturday, he is possessed of more than average speed in the saddle, for he has fair hands, a good seat and is a good judge of pace. Mr. Bates is a son of C. R. Bates, President of the Alameda Macadamizing Company, and one of the old residents of Oakland.

PRESIDENT THOS. H. WILLIAMS JR. said May 16th to the Chronicle representative: "Our association will not get out a stake book until September, but it is our idea to give specials instead of some of the guaranteed stakes. It has taken a few seasons to find out what is best in these matters, and we intend to give fewer stake events, but will endeavor to make them richer and more attractive." President Williams is very well satisfied with the outcome of the present season and holds the opinion that the class of horses was better than last year. At the conclusion of the meeting he will sail for Japan for a three or four months' trip.

MESSRS. NORTON AND HEADLEY, owners of Ornament and May Hempstead, returned from New York Monday. Their horses have been placed in the hands of "Jimmy" Rowe, one of the most famous of American trainers. Rowe trained Requit and L'Alouette, Futurity winners. Mr. Rowe has The Huguenot and other young horses in his stable, but nothing that would conflict with Ornament. Mr. Patterson sold the two cracks without reservation, and probably did not expect to train them for the purchasers, as he took charge of Macy and Algol, both Brooklyn and Surbanban Handicap candidates, the two big events for which Ornament is being pointed. The relations between the two parties are however exceedingly friendly and Mr. Patterson took charge of them on their journey East and gave them the same care as he had when they were in his charge.—Thoroughbred Record.

JOCKEY CASSIUS SLOAN reached here yesterday from San Francisco. He will ride at Lakeside and he expects to be able to reduce so as to ride at 108 pounds this year. Starter Dwyer will begin schooling two-year-olds again. To-day at 11 o'clock the gate will be placed and he will be present in person to teach the youngsters. Jockey Kitley, the lightweight under contract to J. W. Schorr & Son, has gone to St. Louis to join the Western string of his employer. He expects to ride Timemaker in the Inaugural, but this is not likely. "Skeets" Martin has broken a number of engagements he has made to ride horses since his arrival here, and he was in bad odor with the officials and owners until yesterday, when it became known that he was married Thursday night. Paul Miles, who winters his horses at the Little Rock track, gave Kirk, the horse that won the third race yesterday, to an Arkansas farmer last Decombe. The agriculturist looked at the horse and agreed to send for him, but he neglected to do so, very likely considering him worthless. He has won $600 for Miles this week.—Lakeside items in Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THE Two Thousand Guineas was run last week at Newmarket in England and won by Disraeli, a son of that grand old horse Galopin, now past 26 years of age. This makes his second winner of the Two Thousand, Galliard having won in 1889. Galopin was by Vedette, who won the Two Thousand in 1857, and had been entered in the Derby and St. Leger of that year it is not likely that either Blink Bonny or Imperieuse would have ever been bracketed outside of races reserved for fillies exclusively. Voltigeur and the Flying Dutchman were the contending horses of 1850, and while both were comparative failures at the stud, a union of their blood produced Galopin, a horse that literally donkey-licked (as they say in Australia) every good race horse of his day. He beat stayers like Craig Millar at long distances and sprinters like Lowlander at the shorter ranges. It is worthy of note that the second and third horses in this year's Two Thousand were both by Sheen, the Cesarewitch winner of 1891. He is by Hampton, out of Radiance, by Tibthorpe; and Hampton, who died about four weeks ago, got three winners of the Derby and one of the Oaks, while his get were twice second for the St. Leger.—Los Angeles Phoenix.

MR. W. H. ROWE writes The Spirit: "I have seen no mention in our American papers of the loss which Mr. Leopold de Rothschild recently sustained in the death of his three-year-old filly Isabinda, by St. Simon, out of Isabel, and hence full sister to his recent champion, St. Frusquin. Isabinda was of unusual promise, and her engagements were very heavy, so it is genuinely bad luck for St. Simon to lose so likely a representative just when his star seems a trifle on the wane. Isabinda did not start last year, but it is a favorite trick with our English cousins to reserve their stars for later struggles. Would that the valuable events in America were so regulated as to induce our owners to follow the same tactics! Mr. Rothschild has a two-year-old in training which is more than half brother to St. Frusquin and Isabinda, this being the colt St. Gris, by Galopin (sire of St. Simon), out of Isabel herself, and it will be interesting to see how he conducts himself in his heavy engagements for the future. Isabinda is not the first of Isabel's produce to meet an early grave, for it will be remembered that her son, Kallikrates, by Hermit, met an untimely death in this country shortly after entering upon his stud career, in which, with but comparatively meagre opportunities, he sired the winners Masterpiece, Myth, Ollean, Panchita and Honeydew."

J. E. MADDEN, the owner of Plaudit, has had a remarkable run of luck, if luck it can be called, in the last few years. He has a keen eye for the good points of a thoroughbred or trotter, and as he is essentially a trader, he has developed some of the most noted of equine flyers and sold them to the very best advantage, and this, too, after winning a small fortune by their performances on the turf. Hamburg alone made him a rich man, and he opens the present season with an extraordinary run of good fortune both East and West. Madden, who is nearly forty years of age, was born in Pennsylvania, but has lived in Kentucky a good portion of his life. He has a splendid stock farm near Lexington which he calls Hamburg place, and which is now his home. The Derby winner, Plaudit, is not one of those animals purchased for a song as a yearling. In fact he was the star of the Woodard & Shanklin sale in Lexington in 1896 and after spirited bidding he was knocked down to "Brown Dick" for $4,000. Last year Mr. Madden purchased an interest in the colt and later secured him outright. Plaudit has a number of valuable stake engagements, both East and West, including two or three Derbies. Albert Simon, the trainer of Plaudit, was born and bred here in Louisville. Years ago he was a trotting horse driver, but gave up the reins in favor of the thoroughbred. He handled Glenheim before the latter was sent East.—Louisville cor. Spirit of the Times.

JAMES T. WILLIAMS, one of the best known turfmen in the West, has boldly branched out into politics, and is a candidate for Congress in the Louisville District. He is a rampant free silver man, and as politics are beautifully mixed hereabouts, with the Democrats and the Republicans divided, and the A. P. A. a working factor, Williams tells me he has a great chance to win. The silver wave that swept a portion of the country a couple of years ago produced political demoralization here in Louisville, and the Courier-Journal, a pronounced goldbug organ, very seriously felt the effects of the storm, a new free silver daily supplanting it in the affections of tens of thousands of people. The silver element in the Democratic party have the whip hand now, and so it is "Jim" Williams expects to quit the turf for the halls of Congress.—Louisville cor. Spirit of the Times.

GEORGE BAYLISS, the well known trainer of race horses, died of dropsy at the Ranlett House, Emeryville, about 1 P. M. May 15th. He was found dead in bed. Bayliss, who had been ailing for about three years, had an operation for dropsy performed about a month ago, and was supposed to be on the improve. His colt Flandes has won two good races within two weeks, and the deceased was giving his personal attention to the horses in his charge. Bayliss was about forty-five years of age and a thorough horseman. Editor Joseph Cairn Simpson remembers him as an exercise boy in Illinois as far back as 1869, and later he became a jockey. After George got too heavy he trained and drove horses on the California circuit, and with great success. His last season with trotters was with Mr. Perkins, of Visalia, this, though, after he had trained runners for D. J. McCarty and later for the Messrs. Boots, of Milpitas. It was Bayliss who had the first marked success with the get of imp. Brutus. He was careful and attentive, thoroughly reliable, and a host of people will be sorry to hear of the death of George Bayliss, a man that always ran his horses to win.

W. M. MURRY has leased the River View Ranch, a few miles below Sacramento, and from the quite imposing list of stallions and broodmares he has on the place will be a breeder of no little importance in the coming years. The stallions are Thornhill, Yankee Doodle, King William, Abalanzar and Rey del Bandidos. The broodmares are Miss Walling (due to foal to Thornhill), Miss Pickwick (bred to Rey del Bandidos), Circe (bred to Yankee Doodle), Julia O. (has a filly at foot by Thornhill and bred again to the white-faced horse), Mamie H. (has a handsome light bay filly by Thornhill and bred to Yankee Doodle), Claire (bred to Thornhill), Tillie S. (has a bay colt at foot by imp. Loyalist and has been bred to Thornhill), chestnut El Rio Rey mare (bred to Yankee Doodle), Laura C., by Three Cheers (has a filly at foot by imp. True Briton and bred to Thornhill), Nita Murphy (bred to Yankee Doodle), Abbie W. (bred to Thornhill), Major Ban mare (bred to Thornhill), and Scarf Pin (bred to Yankee Doodle). The following yearlings are also on the place: Brown or black filly by imp. True Briton—Circe, brown or black filly by imp. True Briton—Miss Walling; chestnut colt by — out of Miss Pickwick, bay colt by Metal out of Claire, colt by Three Cheers out of Wilds, and chestnut filly by imp. Loyalist from Tillie S. Tod Sloan has three or four thoroughbreds on the place, two of them mares that have been bred to King William.

ALTHOUGH Marcus Daly is one of the great captains of peace and industry, he seems to be taking a very lively interest in the war. The town in which he lives and in whose prosperity he is an important factor, has sent two splendid companies to the front. In Butte a few evenings ago he assured one of the local companies that he would help the widows and orphans should any casualties happen to its members while fighting for Old Glory, and to-day he proposes that Captain Stivers, of the Butte cavalry, shall have as a present the finest horse in the service if he will go to the Bitter Root ranch and select the charger. Thus Mr. Daly has set an example which all patriotic citizens of means may follow. He would go to the front himself if he were not suspected of being a trifle over 45 years of age. So he will remain ready to be mustered into the home guards if necessary, and in the meantime commanding a peace army of nearly 10,000 copper miners, coal miners, smeltermen, lumbermen and other industrials.—Butte Inter-Mountain. Later—This afternoon Captain Stivers left for Marcus Daly's ranch in the Bitter Root, to arrange for a shipment of horses to this city for his troop. Mr. Daly has entered into the matter of the equipment of Butte's troop with considerable enthusiasm and has announced his intention of doing something handsome for the troop, and his liberality will be displayed before many days. It is reported that he will present Captain Stivers with a magnificent animal valued at $2,500. A consignment of horses will arrive from the Bitter Root farm before Friday.—Butte Inter-Mountain.

"CURLY" BROWN, the starter, was at Lakeside yesterday, and the Brown-Foster feud is on again. Just after the official announcement of the result of the last race, which was won by Deyo, with Headlight II. second, and Sutton third, Brown filed a claim for the Foster horse with the clerk of the scales. Headlight was entered for $300, and $600 accompanied the claim. While the horse is conceded to be well worth the amount, the action is attributed to be the outcome of the quarrel which began with the running up of Glenmoyné at New Orleans by the starter of the Palmer-Hendrie syndicate, last winter. Matt Foster resented the action of Brown, and threats, a blow or two, and a war of words were exchanged by the men on the Crescent City track, and Foster was fined $50. Soon after this the two men met at a West End resort in New Orleans, and after an exchange of compliments, Brown assaulted Foster with the butt end of a revolver—at least a Justice of the Peace so decided, and fined the starter $25. Matt Foster swore out the warrant for assault, and the evidence produced was convincing to the Justice. The incident was supposed to have been closed, but the claiming of Headlight II. will probably reopen hostilities. "Curly" Brown, who has just finished an engagement as starter at Newport, shipped two horses to Lakeside. At least, Deyo, who won the race yesterday, and Carrie Lyle were given to the starter, although they are registered as owned by T. F. Buckley and Deyo runs in his name. The claim of yesterday was made by Brown in the name of Buckley. Aside from the Headlight II. incident, there was nothing to indicate that a selling race was in progress. This was due, doubtless, to the fact that the other horsemen, who are fighting each other, did not have any horses in the two selling racing on the card.—Chicago Inter Ocean, May 10.

The Outlook for 1898.

The year 1898 is to be a memorable one in the history of light harness horse affairs in California. While fewer meetings will be held in the State than in any year since the district organizations were first organized, which is a natural result of the drought now so seriously affecting many of the interior counties, there will be so many new features introduced, diversions from the old stereotyped plan of harness racing, that in the records of the future, 1898 will have a very prominent place. There are many existing circumstances which seem to detract from the assured success of meetings this year—the war, the drought, the high prices of hay and grain, and the consignment to Eastern sales rings of many of our fastest trotters and pacers; but on the other hand, there is a determination on the part of so many owners to give the new ideas a fair trial, and an expressed desire by the public to see the reforms and innovations introduced that it seems to be the general opinion that the new order of things will prove so attractive that they will more than offset the losses which the elements and other conditions have brought about. That the proposed plan of a four or six weeks' meeting at a central point, made up of a majority of dash races and a minority of heat affairs, will be advantageous to horse owners is certain. The earning capacity of the average trotter or pacer is so evidently increased by the new plan, and the expenses of a stable so materially reduced that the extra price asked for hay and grain will be much more than offset. In the matter of railroad transportation alone there will be enough saved to feed the horses during the entire season. It being the consensus of opinion among the trainers, drivers and owners of trotting and pacing horses that the new plan as formulated by the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will be an improvement over old methods, they, of course, will give proof of the faith that is in them by making many entries to the events already advertised to take place during the first two weeks of the meeting. It lies entirely with the horse owners to make it, and from all reports so far it is almost an assured fact that this year's entry list will equal in number and class that of any previous meeting. The first of June will tell the story.

Taking it for granted that the California horsemen are sufficiently alive to their own interests to do their duty in this matter, the question arises, will the public do its part and give the meeting a sufficient patronage to make it a success? It will not be assuming too much to answer this with an emphatic "yes." The public of San Francisco and Oakland attend the racing meetings here for six months continuously, and the attendance during this, the closing week, has been as large or larger than during the first week of the meeting. The interest and attendance are kept up because the public as a whole believes it is (in the vast majority of instances) getting a square deal—or in the parlance of the track, "a run for its money." Ninety-nine out of every hundred race-goers in San Francisco will assert that though there may be a race now and then which has a bad appearance, a very large proportion are good, square contests, and the jockey clubs show a disposition to mete out justice and punishment in cases where fraud is proven. If the officers and members of the Breeders Association will adopt the same measures to discover fraud, and give something of the same energy in punishing those who attempt it, begin operations the first day of the meeting and continue it throughout, at the same time using every effort to bring horses together so that good contests will result, there need be no fear but the public will show some of the old-time enthusiasm over harness races which was shown in this State years ago, and which was so prevalent in the East last year that on many occasions more than 30,000 people congregated to see trotters and pacers competing for first honors.

Every horse owner should be intelligent enough to realize that it is to his interest and the interest of the business in which he is engaged to have his horses driven to win in every race in which they start, but if there are owners, trainers or drivers who believe otherwise, then it is the duty of the officials of the association to enforce the rules, strictly and to the letter, that the many who are interested in clean and honest racing may not be injured by the few whose regard for the sport consists entirely of the opportunity it affords them of making a little sure money from the pool box. There should be a thorough understanding between the drivers and the judges before the races start, and after having announced that the rules will be enforced, let there be no eyes closed to infractions and no disposition to refrain from punishment of violations.

An opportunity is offered this year to the P. C. T. H. B. A. and to the owners, trainers and drivers in California to not only make harness racing popular, but to add to the value of harness horses. They have but to do their whole duty and the public will respond with its presence, and its approval of the new plan.

Trotting Stock for California.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15th, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—As I have purchased quite a number of highly bred and handsome driving and breeding stock during the last three months for various parties, among them fourteen head of young mares and fillies for parties in California, I will enclose you the list of the trotting bred mares together with the stallions bred to them this season. They will probably be shipped out here from the East this fall.

La Belta, brown filly 15 3, foaled 1894, by Bow Bells 2:19½, dam Lottie Thorn 2:23½ (dam of Oscar William 2:12½ by Mambrino Patchen. Bred to Axtell 2:12.

Lady Simmons, brown filly 15.2, foaled 1895, by Simmons 2:28, dam Jennet 2:28, by Artillery. Bred to Axtell 2:12.

Bertelle, brown mare 15 2, foaled 1892, by Axtell 2:12, dam Merry Thought 2:22, (dam of the fast green mare Lurline McGregor) by Happy Medium. Bred to Baron Wilkes 2:18.

Perza, brown filly foaled 1897, by Allie Wilkes 2:15, dam Angelina 2:27, (sister to Patchen Wilkes 2:29, sire of Joe Patchen 2:01½) by George Wilkes. This filly is handsome, good gaited and speedy.

Emma Smally, bay mare, 15.2, foaled 1894, by Blue Dawn 2:21; son of Jay Bird, dam Sally Russell 2:23, by Mambrino Russell. Bred to Delmarch 2:11.

Kutani, bay filly foaled 1897, by Kremlin 2:07½, dam Bravissima by Robert McGregor, 2:17½. This is a very handsome, speedy, good gaited filly.

Brown mare 15.2, foaled 1893, by Baron Wilkes 2:18, dam Isabel, dam of Christabel 2:26 and Ben Bramble 2:28, by Belmont 64. This mare has a colt by her side by Allerton 2:09½ and will be bred back to him this season.

Bay mare, 15.2, foaled 1880, by William L., dam the dam of Bob's Jug 2:22, by Honest Allen. This mare is the dam of Marietta (2) 2:24, trial 2:19, now in McHenry's stable and expected to get a very low record this year. She is being bred to Bow Bells 2:19½ this year.

Melba, bay filly foaled 1897, a full sister to Henry Barrett 2:10½, trial 2:07, the fastest record ever obtained by a green horse in his first season on the turf. Melba is by Baron de Stein, the best producing son of Baron Wilkes, dam Ellen Tree, dam of Henry Barrett 2:10½, Lola Montez 2:16, (record made in Europe) and Rachael 2:25, by Mambrino Russell. Keep an eye on this miss. She is music in the air.

Black filly 15 1, foaled 1897, by Simmons 2:28, dam the dam of one with a record of 2:13, by Baron Wilkes, 2d dam by Mambrino Patchen, 3d dam a thoroughbred. This is one of the handsomest fillies in the land, with the best of feet and legs, speedy and a better gaited one is hard to be found. She trotted a quarter as a yearling last fall in 39 seconds.

SAMUEL GAMBLE.

The Next State Fair.

The State Board of Agriculture met at Sacramento last Monday for the purpose of considering reports of the various committees. The report of the Premium List Committee was the most important, inasmuch as it contained a revision of the entire premium list for 1898, making such changes as were deemed advisable. The principal change was to have expert single judges in all classes where practical, and the Secretary was directed to correspond with several experts of various classes of live stock.

The dates of the State Fair were fixed from September 5th to 17th inclusive.

The admission rate to the Pavilion was reduced to 25 cents. This change was made at the earnest solicitation of many exhibitors, and considering the condition of the times, the board deemed it prudent to make the change. The admission to the Park will be 50 cents, as heretofore.

After considering other matters of minor importance, the board adjourned to call of the Chair.

Successful Meetings Depend on Honest Racing.

Successful race meetings from a financial standpoint depend almost entirely upon the amount of gate receipts. If the receipts are good the meeting will be all right and horsemen will get their money. But if not there is a luke-warmness about the meeting that savors of distrust and lack of interest.

If horsemen will show the public they mean business and will race their horses as they should be raced the gate receipts will be all right, if not the same old song year after year will continue to be sung. The biggest farce in the world is a fixed race and the public will know it just about as quickly as the men who fixed the race. The people must have a contest and if the contest is a hard one all the better for all concerned. There is nothing cheaper than a tame race, even the horse, will show it.

It is to be hoped this year will be marked with the best horse racing ever witnessed. If it should prove so the people of the whole United States will endorse it. This will insure good gate receipts and good receipts will pay horsemen their premiums. The horse business will then be strengthened and established on such business principles as will guarantee every man engaged in it an honorable standing with the world. Too much cannot be said against sham racing and the sooner horsemen realize the fact of racing horses upon their merit just that much sooner will the horse business be established an honorable calling.

In talking with a man last year who had won fifteen second moneys out of that many starts admitted that he had not only done himself a wrong but that he had misled the public. He said that he had not made a dollar whereas, if he had gone and won the races which he could have done he would go home with a goodly sum of money. He also said he was through with that kind of business, and would have quit it long ago if he had only looked at the proposition from a practical business standpoint before. Horsemen, he said, as a rule meant to do right, but get into wrong channel of thinking about the matter. The only practical way for horsemen to do is to win right from the start if they can and if they cannot the sooner they know they cannot and act in the matter as they should the better it will be for them. What is the use of trying to win 2:10 races with a 2:20 horse. It means great expense and poor satisfaction. A horseman of that kind is always behind in all matters.—Spirit of the West.

The Career of Oro Wilkes 2:11

One of the best horses ever bred in California, is Oro Wilkes 2:11, by Sable Wilkes 2:18, from Ellen Mayhew 2:22, by the great Director 2:17, second dam by Speculation, third dam the dam of Lou Whipple 2:26½. Oro Wilkes began his trotting career as a two-year-old, trotting seven races at that age, winning three, was second in two, third in one, fourth in one, taking a record of 2:21½. As a three year-old he trotted eight races, winning five, was second in two, third in one, taking a record of 2:15 in the third heat of the great Stallion Representative Stake ($11,850), for three year-olds, a five heat race which he won at Lexington, Kentucky, October 9, 1893, when he won the third, fourth and fifth heats in 2:15, 2:16½, 2:17½, from a field of eleven, including the Conqueror 2:22½, Georgie Lee 2:12½, Baronmore 2:14½, Medio 2:14½ and others. His winnings that year amounted to $14,000. In 1894, as a four-year-old, his record of 2:15 made the previous year forced him to compete against aged horses of a very high class and in fields numbering in most instances 12 to 18 composed of such seasoned campaigners as Azote, Trevillian, Dandy Jim, Prince Herschel, etc, and others of like quality, yet of the eight races trotted that season, he won two, was second in three and third in three, taking his present record of 2:11 in the second heat, forcing Trevillian to 'go the third and fourth heats in 2:10½, 2:09½, to beat him, with Azote, Prince Herschel and six others behind him. During his turf career he trotted 24 races; won a share of the purse in every race, and with a single exception won either first, second or third money, and has been timed in a race in 2:08½. He was placed in the stud at Mr. Corbitt's San Mateo Stock Farm in 1895, and consequently his oldest foals are two years old. These were sent east at Mr. Corbitt's March sale this year, and their grand individuality attracted bidders and they brought good prices. Oro Wilkes himself sold for $4,700 at that sale and the average for the 42 head was $456. There will be a number of yearlings by Oro Wilkes offered at the sale to take place at the farm at Burlingame on June 2d, and they are a grand lot, proving plainly that Oro Wilkes is destined to be a great stock horse. The mares, colts, fillies and geldings that are to be sold at the same time are the finest lot ever put up at auction in California. Catalogues are now out and can be had by applying to Killip & Co., auctioneers, 11 Montgomery street, or at this office.

The Colusa Meeting

The meeting given by the Colusa Jockey Club at that place last week was not largely attended, but everything passed off pleasantly and there was some good racing. The following summaries of the races have been sent us:

"THE most effective way of softening and taking the fever out of contracted feet," says J. L. McCarthy, "is hot water and poultices, but it is well to remember that after a foot has been soaked for some time in hot water it will dry out very rapidly, consequently it should be wrapped in a wet swab for several hours after it is taken from the water in order to have it dry more slowly."

The Horse's Speed.

A man on a horse is twice a man. He feels more secure, is braver, is in every way more formidable. European officers know this. In cleaning the streets of Paris only cavalry are used. We call out the infantry of the militia and have to shoot people. In Europe they use the flat of a sword held by a mounted man. No unarmed body of men will stand the impact of horses. They melt before the charge like snow. It is the uncontrollable instinct to get out of the way, and to do it as soon as possible. Some day we will grow wiser on this side of the Atlantic. Just now we have fifty infantry companies of militia to one of cavalry. Many of our militia men are unable to pay for the keep of a horse, which is expensive, even if the man does the currying and bedding with his own hands. Many others of them would not know what to do with a horse if they had one. This is bad, but with the trolley and the bicycle crowding the steed of our fathers closer and closer to the wall, there is not much chance that it will be bettered. Five hundred years from now, unless all signs fail, grayheaded college professors, with piano leg calves and eight-inch chests, will be lecturing upon an extinct animal and reconstructing him for the benefit of students from a piece of stifle and a front foot.

I believe that the horse is the swiftest animal in the world. One hears strange tales of the speed of the antelope, the white-tailed fawn, the springbok, the elephant, the jack rabbit and the wolf. The fastest of these is the American antelope, and I have never seen one that a good pony could not beat. As for the rabbit or any kind of deer, the horse will simply run over him. Taking into consideration the fact that the horse generally carries more than 150 pounds of rider, saddle and gun, one gets an idea of how much superior he is. A speedy pony will outrun a greyhound. I have seen this tried. It is customary among men who use them to give the dogs all the law possible in order to avoid riding over them. In hunting with a brace of very good coursing hounds five years ago it was found that there were five ponies in the party which would outfoot the dogs, and one of them, a gray of undoubted mustang ancestry, if given the bit, would do his best to run over them and kill them. He did not like them. They belonged to his owner and he was jealous. —Chicago Times-Herald.

Good Ones From This Coast.

J. L. McCarthy, formerly of Chicago, who has been in the far West for two seasons past, is back in the windy city, says the Chicago Horse Review. He is one of the best starting judges in the country, but last year he deserted the stand to sell the auctions on the Montana Circuit—for which his keen eye and really clarion voice well qualify him. Of the horses that did wonders at Anaconda and Butte last summer and are coming East for the '98 campaign he offers a few points worth printing.

"Chehalis," says Mr. McCarthy, "is simply the best hobbled horse that stands on iron. I think he should beat Frank Bogash easily. Yes, I mean it. Why, he was only ogging, with the exception of a little piece of the way, in 2:07½, and twenty feet from the pole at that. You can't drive him to a break, and he wears his hobbles very loose. As for looks you'll all take off your hats when he goes by.

"Searchlight is the fastest and gamest colt I ever saw. jChehalis held him safe easily, but the way he tried to head him was wonderful. I believe that he is championship timber.

"Anaconda was good, but not so awfully good as he showed later on the coast. That is also true of Caryl Carne, the gray trotter that Andy McDowell is to bring over, but I think the Californians have overruled him a little. Lena N., the Sidney pacing mare in Andy's string, has got all kinds of speed, but she can't get home from the half the way she goes to it. Around the first turn she can just fly.

"If Stam B. trains sound you will see a great trotter. He went very lame in his last race at Anaconda, but, although they were beating 2:12, he never gave up, although he was so lame it was pitiful to see him. He is, altogether a very high-class horse."

Speed Sustaining Oats.

Along in the 70's Fletcher Smith, of Drakeville, Ia., was campaigning a pacer named Sealskin. After winning his race at Keokuk one afternoon, says Yarrum of the Horse Review, a match for a half-mile dash was arranged between Sealskin and a Keokuk mare, to be paced the following afternoon. Mr. Smith fed his horse, at noon, his usual allowance of six quarts of oats, and put six quarts more in a bucket full of water to soak for supper, and then went to his own dinner, leaving the horse, as he thought, securely tied in his stall. While he was gone Sealskin got loose, and not only ate up all the extra six quarts of oats, but drank another bucket of water that sat in the stall. The race was to be called at two o'clock. Mr. Smith was too proud to back out, and so responded to the call of the bell, expecting, of course, to be beaten, but imagine his surprise at his horse's going the race of his life, pacing the half-mile in 1:08, the fastest he ever covered that distance. Iowa oats certainly agree with Iowa pacers, and the two form a combination hard to beat. Mr. Smith is president of the Davis County Agricultural Society, and while he has retired from the sulky he still takes a great interest in the light harness horse.

Golden Gate Club at Oakland.

Memorial Day being a legal holiday, offers the members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association an opportunity to have a grand day of sport, and the Oakland race track has been selected as the place where the events will be held and the races decided. The club held a meeting at 1200 Market street last Tuesday evening which was well attended and gave proof of the fact that the members of this club are enthusiastic road drivers. The club has decided to give an afternoon of trotting and pacing at the Oakland Race track, the California Jockey Club having kindly extended the use of its beautiful grounds for the purpose.

There will be no admission fee charged but the gates will be open to all. Three purses of $90 each are to be hung up and it begins to look as though the entries will be so numerous that another purse will be necessary. If so it will be given in the same amount as the others.

The races are open to horses owned by members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association only, and none but members must drive. They will be mile heats, two in three and strictly to rule. The plan of classifying the horses is a most excellent one in affairs of this kind and will result in some hotly contested races beyond a doubt. By this plan the entries are made with the secretary of the club and on a date named the speed committee meets and classifies the horses dividing them up into groups according to their present ability to trot or pace. By this plan a horse that has a fast record, but is known to be unable to go a mile up to his mark can be put in a race with horses with much slower records, but fully able to compete with his present speed.

There will be book-making on all the events and every effort will be made by the officers and members of the club to make the day an enjoyable one for all who attend. A general invitation is extended to the public, and when it is known that such fast pacers as Plunkett, 2:13½, and Algregor, 2:11, are to meet, besides many other fast ones with the ability to trot or pace miles in 2:15 or better, the chances are that the Oakland track will be visited by a great crowd on that day. San Franciscans who wish to go in their own conveyances to the track should take the creek route ferry to the foot of Broadway in Oakland, and drive from there over the smoothest and best of pavements direct to the track.

The Fasig Sale.

Telegraphic reports of the Blue Ribbon sale of trotters and pacers at Cleveland this week are very meagre. Enough is known, however, to warrant the assertion that it has been the best sale held in the United States for some years. Out here in California it may be hard for some to realize that the harness horse is increasing in popularity and value every day, but it is a fact nevertheless, and good horses are actually becoming scarce. The first five head of the Palo Alto horses sold at the opening of the Fasig sale brought a total of $16,650.

Betonica, 2:10½, brought $7,800 and was bought by Senator Frank H. Jones, of Portsmouth, N. H. Betonica made his record as a three-year-old, and at the same age paced a trial in 2:06½. Senator Jones also bought the colt Idolita, by Monaco, for $4,700. This the largest price paid for a two-year-old in several years.

The great mares, Pasonte, 2:13, and Peko, 2:11½, were bought for Cleveland horsemen. George W. Saunders paid $2,000 for Pasonte and Charles Tanner bid off Peko for $1,000. The filly Nordean, 2:17½, also brought $1,000, J. McCarthy of Boston being the purchaser.

Other notable sales were as follows:

Hyita, ch f, by Dexter Prince, Palo Alto farm, to James Alden, Boston, $1,900.

Lillian May, br f, by Advertiser, Palo Alto farm, to M. Playfair, Vienna, Austria, $850.

Javelin, b m, 2:08½, by Creole, Oakwood farm, to W. J. White, Cleveland, $700.

Incense, b m, 2:17½, by Young Jim, O. G. Kent, to C. E. Emery, Cleveland, $1,200.

Sulky Notes.

RACING will be in full swing in the East this year by the first of June.

THE outlook for giving a meeting in Spokane this year is not very bright.

D. J. CAMPAU's mare Lulu, by Axtell, out of Daisy Cuyler, has foaled a fine colt by Directum 2:05½.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Association will have some good racing at its meeting at the Oakland track, May 30th.

ENTRIES for the races of the Alameda Driving Association close to-day. Look at the advertisement and make your entries.

PHYLLIS KELLY, a two-year-old sister to Directum Kelly, 2:23½, by Direct, is a member of John Kelly's East View Farm stable.

ST. LAWRENCE 2:34, founder of the St. Lawrence family, was on the turf from 1848 to 1856. He started in 37 races, 14 of which he won.

THE California trotting mare Visalia, 2:12½, after changing hands a number of times, will be campaigned by John A. Davidson, of Pittsburg, Pa.

THE name Commodore Dewey has already been claimed by W. W. Estill, of Lexington, for a colt foaled April 21st, by Bow Bells, dam Macedonia, by Onward.

NICK JESSEN, of King City, has sent his pacer, Frank Murphy, to Henry Helman at Hollister to be fitted for the Breeders' meeting, which begins at Oakland, June 25th.

FIVE hundred head of horses were driven through Napa Valley last week on the way from the San Joaquin ranches of Miller & Lux to the green pastures of Lake and Mendocino counties.

A LETTER from James Dustin received in this city states that he has entirely regained his health and will very likely return to California this fall after the trotting season is over in the East.

CHINA WILKES, by Adrian Wilkes—Mambrino Queen, by Mambrino Patchen, has six living foals. Four of these have records of 2:22½ or better, and the records of three of them average 2:10½.

FAVOR, the horse that defeated Menlo Belle and others at Hollister, May 1st, was sired by Daly, 2:15, the premier stallion of Rosedale Stock Farm, Santa Rosa. Favor is said to be able to trot in 2:20 easily.

ALL kinds of farm stock enjoy a change of food, and both hay and pasturage would be better relished and do more good when the field consists of several kinds of grass and clover instead of a single variety.

BETONICA, 2:10½, and Searchlight, 2:09½, are both entered in the 2:08 pace which will be decided at Cleveland, Ohio, in July next. Chehalis will be in the same race, and the Pacific Coast should carry off first money.

G. LAPHAM has built a row of stalls at the Alameda track for the stalling of his trotters and pacers. There are ten large, roomy box stalls in the row; they are substantially built and will make comfortable quarters.

LITTLE GEM 2:15½, claimed by his owner, H. T. Booth to be the fastest horse in the world for his size, remains with Huber's Ti Point string again. Huber says he will put him against any horse in the world of his size.

OF the two stakes opened by the Buffalo Driving Club which are declared filled, the Queen City, $5,000 for 2:16 trotters, received twenty-four entries and the Electric City, $5,000 for 2:30 trotters, received twenty-six entries.

At least twenty-five buyers were in Philadelphia Friday last, looking for common riding stock to use in the United States cavalry. They visited all the dealers and markets. These kind of horses are scarce and but few were purchased.

B. O. VAN BOKKELEN will start East next week with his string of trotters, consisting of Wayland W., 2:12½, Ellert, 2:19, and Stamboulette, 2:19. The last two named are both sons of Stamboul, and are likely candidates for that sire's 2:10 list this year.

A VERY great interest is being manifested in this city over the race meeting to be held at Honolulu, June 11th. The race where Loupe, 2:09½, Our Boy, 2:12½, and W. Wood, 2:07, are expected to meet should be a contest worth crossing the briny to see.

IRA RYERSON, who was expelled by the N. T. A., on a charge of ringing, recently carried his case into the civil courts. He undertook to compel the N. T. A., to reinstate him, but he was promptly sat upon by the judge, who refused to entertain his motion.

"HOBBS has a theory about the war."

"What is it?"

"He says it was intended to make the bicycle go to the rear and push the old fashioned four-legged horse once more to the front."—Chicago Record.

THE good sire Hambletonian Wilkes, son of Phoebe Wilkes 2:08½ and 23 others better than 2:30 has been taken from Pleasanton back to the home of his owner, John Moorhead, Green Meadow Stock Farm, Santa Clara County. Hambletonian Wilkes was bred to quite a number of good mares this season while at Pleasanton, and will be kept in the stud the balance of the season at the home place. His progeny in California are among the most promising young trotters now in training and will be heard from this year at the meetings.

P. H. QUINN, of Humboldt county, has sent Eureka 2:15½, Arthur W. and Forrest W., by Wayland W., Brice McNeill by Dudley, and John A. (2) by Wayland W. to Santa Rosa, where they will be placed in training for the Breeder's meeting which opens at Oakland next month.

THE Goshen Driving Park Association will open for its circuit meeting in August a 2:05 pace and a 5:09 trot, and will permit them to stand if three entries in each are received. It is hoped to bring Ooqua, 2:08½, Bush, 2:09½, and Page, 2:09½, together in the 2:09 class.

MIKE MCMAHON, who has trained and driven Loupe 2:09 and other fast pacers and trotters in this State, recently resigned his position at Patchen Wilkes farm in Kentucky, and has gone to New York, where he will probably be seen with a string of horses on the State circuit.

THE 2:12 trot which is to come off over the Cleveland, Ohio, track during the last week in July, has a California look when the entries are scanned. Among the horses named for this $2,500 event are Peko, 2:11½; Pasonte, 2:13; Stam B. 2:11½; Wayland W., 2:12½, and Caryle Carne, 2:11½.

THE trotting stallion Melbourne King, sire of Jubilee, 2:17½, the pacers Belle, 2:11, and Helen, 2:16½, etc., died recently, the property of C. L. Shipp, Frederickton, N. B. He was a son of Mambrino King and Helen McGregor, dam of Almont Rattler, etc., by Rattler and was 21 years of age.

JOHN DELANY has received word from Willows that his pacer Captain Hackett is doing well this year at the Willows track, where he is in the care of that well known trainer, James Sullivan. Jimmy thinks the Captain is steady enough to win a race or two this year. He always had the necessary speed.

WE are in receipt from Messrs. Lewis & Albaugh, of the Grand View Farm, Circleville, Ohio, of a very handsomely prepared and printed history and description of their great horse Wilton, 2:19½. With twenty-nine of his get in the 2:20 list at eighteen years old, Wilton stands high in the list of great sires.

THE Rural Spirit wants to know who owns the pacing stallion Prince Almont, 2:13½. He is owned by J. Nightingale and is at the owner's stock farm at Cordelia, Solano county, California. We understand that Prince Almont may be put in training and entered in the races to be given by the Breeders Association at Oakland next month.

MAJOR P. P. JOHNSTON, President of the National Trotting Association and also President of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, is being pushed for Brigadier General of the Kentucky troops for the war with Spain. He was a distinguished officer in the Confederate Army under the noted J. E. B. Stuart, and was recognized as a splendid organizer.

THOSE two great sires McKinney 2:11½, and Altamont the leading sires of 2:10 performers, together with Monterey 2:13½, will be exhibited on the track at the Alameda Driving Association's course, Monday, May 30th. Any one of these stallions is worth going a long ways to see, and where there is an opportunity to view three such great ones, it should not be overlooked.

DAN MCCARTY recently sold a gelding by Col. K. R., 2:22½, out of a full sister to Hanford Medium, 2:11½, to a Los Angeles gentleman for the munificent sum of $112.50. The gelding had the name "White Hat" bestowed on him, and as evidence of his speedy name and breeding recently went a mile over the Los Angeles track in 2:09½. Look out for this fellow when the bell taps.

ALLEGOR, 2:11, will be started in some of the dash races at the Breeders meeting which commences June 25th. Many of the trotters and pacers which have been sold during the past few years for road purposes are being fitted for the dash events, which show that the owners realize the excellent opportunity offered by the new system whereby a horse can earn something more than his oats.

A FULL sister to the great Beautiful Bells, heavy with foal to Oro Wilkes, 2:11, ought to be worth a neat sum, and when it is further understood that this mare is herself the dam of two in the list, there should be no trouble to find a purchaser for her. The mare in question is Atlanta, by The Moor out of Minnehaha, that great broodmare by Stevens' Bald Chief. She will be sold at the Corbett sale at Burlingame June 2d.

SABLE, the dam of Sable Wilkes, was foaled in 1874 and is therefore twenty-four years of age. She has produced four Sable Wilkes (3), 2:18, Burlingame (4), 2:18½, Ulee Wilkes (4), 2:23, and Leo Wilkes, 2:29½. Sable is now heavy with foal to Prince Airlie, a grand individual and son of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½. The foal should be worth a great deal of money. The mare will be sold at the Corbett Sale, June 2d.

REMEMBER that the entries for the Breeders meeting close June 1st, and that the classes provided for are more numerous than were ever offered by any association in the United States for two weeks' racing. If the two weeks are reasonably successful, there will be three or four weeks additional races provided. If you want to help the harness horse business, enter your horse in as many of these races as possible.

"WHAT is the outlook for the trotter?" Major Bean, the well known auctioneer, was asked in Chicago last week and replied: "It is good—better than for many years. There will be more demand for good trotters this year than for men to go to war. I believe I can say without fear of being disputed that more breeders are buying, or rather are seeking to buy, broodmares to replenish their studs, than during the past five years combined.

THERE is a horse in the string of Doug. Thomas at Paris, Kentucky, that is looked upon in that section as being a coming wonder. This is Kodras, 2:15½, a bay horse foaled in 1891, by Norval, son of Electioneer. Kodras took his record in 1896, but was not out last year. It is told of him that he has worked quarters this year in 30 seconds and eights at a faster gait, and some of his enthusiastic admirers believe he is the coming champion trotter.

COMMENTING upon the action of the Messrs. Hicks in requiring drivers and grooms to be properly attired at their tracks on race days this season, Trotter and Pacer says: "If all track managers would see to it that these rules are strictly observed they would add not a little to the picturesqueness of their meetings. We have all too often seen drivers slovenly, indeed, hardly decently dressed, parade before audiences largely composed of ladies, and as for the usual attire of the grooms it is certainly not calculated to increase public respect for trotting sport. The public will appreciate reform in these particulars."

PLUNKETT, 2:13½, now owned by Mr. Stevens of this city, will be out with the pacing brigade again this year. This great little horse is now eleven years old, and as fast or faster than he ever was. Though being so unfortunate as to get a record at almost the limit of his speed in his four-year-old form, thus compelling him to meet the fastest pacers on the Pacific Coast, every year thereafter he has consistently paced nearly every heat in which he has started very close to his record, and has been a good second more than once to horses that have won heats in 2:10 or better. Plunkett's owner drove him a half in 1:04 the other day.

UNCLE SAM is not the only one who has no docked horses in his cavalry, as the following story from Halifax, N. S. proves that "there are others." An officer recently wanted a charger and a citizen undertook to provide one. He produced a very fine mare at a cost of $200, with a certificate as to soundness. On being taken to the officer the dealer was astounded by his saying: "It will not suit." "Why not?" he asked. "It is a splendid animal," "Yes," said the officer, "but its tail is docked, and the queen's regulations prevent us from using it. Her majesty's orders are that horses with docked tails are not to be used in the service." The mare eventually sold for $60. Don't dock the horse intended for the government's use.

"THE American Stock Farm," distinctively a Kentucky organ, sends out the following cheering intelligence: "We do not claim for the Blue Grass region that it is as extensively engaged in breeding trotters as in former years, but we have not gone out of the business by any means. On the contrary we are taking on a new life, and there are more being bred in Kentucky than have been known for years, and all the stallion owners report a good business. Within a few years we expect to be back upon the same footing which we held when the panic came upon us, though we can hardly hope to ever again see the exorbitant prices of boom times. We will then have just as many and just as good ones to sell as we ever had, and probably better ones."

THE pacer Fred Wilkes, 2:12½, by Allectus, owned by Mr. J. B. Rhodes of New Bedford, Mass., was killed by an accident lately, having become frightened at an electric car and ran away. The horse had a splendid funeral for one of the equine sort. The body was placed in a huge air-tight coffin lined with tin, and his harness and blanket, traps, etc., were hermetically sealed with it. The prominent horsemen of New Bedford were invited to take a last look before interment and quite a party assembled; then the coffin was placed on a gear covered with an American flag. Four hacks containing the mourners escorted the gear to Acushnet, where the interment took place. The horses were draped in black, and the cortege passed through the city with all the horses on a trot. This was done as a last mark of respect of Fred Wilkes, who, it is said, was never known to walk.

THEY breed many a fine road horse out at the Chino Ranch, owned by Richard Gird and Wilbur Parker, writes Capt. Tom Merry of Los Angeles. Before Sunol 2:08½, achieved any record or victory whatever, Mr. Gird, who was then mixed up in Arizona mining enterprises with the late "Ned" Schieffelin, went to Palo Alto and bought Wolsey, a full brother to the afterwards famous Sunol. After the filly had trotted her first exhibition mile in 2:12½, the Governor sent a friend to Mr. Gird to buy back Wolsey, but Mr. Gird was not a trout and refused to bite. While Wolsey has no race-winners and is not known as a sire of extreme speed, he gets the finest and most stylish driving horses in this part of the State, all either beautiful bays or chestnuts, and gifted with the soundest of legs and feet, which is something unusual for the male line of Humbletonian 10. Another Electioneer horse that Mr. Gird bought of Governor Stanford was Albion, who got old Alcro, that won a race here at the fair of 1895. Alcro is rather too fat to drive well at long distances but the old chap is hard to beat for style. Moreover, the Wolseys are all of excellent disposition, while Sunol was always as cross as a bear. How do you account for it? [Capt. Merry is mistaken in his assertion that Wolsey got no race-winners. Race-goers in this State will remember that good mare, Nelly W., 2:17½, who won many races, also Alias, 2:19½, and Princess, 2:19½. Then there are Abeto, a pacer with a mark of 2:10½, and the mare Loyaleer, 2:30. Wehina, 2:21, never won a race, but she won many heats in long-drawn races and got her mark in the fifth heat of a race. As to Sunol's bad temper there is a good deal of newspaper romance about the stories told of her.—Ed.]

THE Executive Committee of the National Horse Show Association has adopted for the November exhibition at Madison Square Garden all of the later suggestions with regard to trotting and roadster classes made by the committee appointed for that purpose. The amended conditions of class for stallion to be shown with four of his get, oldest of get not to exceed six years, require that the stallion and get shall be judged by their individuality, the pedigree of the dam and the sire and the racing and show ring qualities of the progeny. The first premium is $500, the second $200 and the third $100. This should in a way be a most interesting competition. In class for broodmare to be shown with two of her produce, one a weanling, the other not to exceed four years, the condition is that they are to be judged by their individuality, the pedigree and producing qualities of the dam and the show ring qualities of the progeny. The premiums are $200, $100 and $50. The class for mares or geldings with records of 2:20 or better has been stricken out, and so has class for fillies three years old. The added classes are 13, for mares or geldings four years old or over with records of 2:30 or better, to be shown in harness; and 14, for mares and geldings three years old and under four, to be shown in harness. In all breeding classes the name of the dam and the name of the sire of her dam shall be given. With this information before him, the compiler of the catalogue should be able to extend pedigrees and furnish information valuable to visitors to the show.

The Two Thousand Guineas Winner of 1898.
At the second day's racing of the Newmarket First Spring Meeting (April 27th), the Lorillard-Beresford Stable's bay colt, Elfin, won the three-year-old Welter Handicap. This race is of 400 sovereigns, by subscription of five sovereigns each, and ten sovereigns extra for starters; the second to receive fifty sovereigns out of the plate. There were thirteen starters, over the Rowley mile. The result in detail was as follows:
Lorillard-Beresford Stable's b c Elfin, by Sensation, out of Equality.....	1
Wallace Johnstone's ch g Nikko, by Trayles, out of Dolly Varden.....	3
E. C. Clayton's br c Boy of Egremonte, by Noble Chieftain, out of Gill Beck.....	3
Wallace Johnstone's bay colt, Disraeli, won the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes. This race is 100 sovereigns each, for three-year-olds; the second to receive 300 sovereigns out of the stakes and the third to save his stakes. Fourteen horses ran over the course, the Rowley mile, and the following was the result in detail:

CHARLESTON, S. C.
DR. H. CLAY GLOVER, Dear Sir—I have a fine setter dog which last winter I placed in the hands of a trainer. When returned to me he was badly broken down with distemper. After giving him careful attention and finding that he was growing worse on recommendation concluded to use your Distemper Cure. I am happy to say the animal entirely recovered and is now in excellent condition. I. O. LEA, Treasury Office.
On the strength of his victory in the Two Thousand Guineas, Disraeli is the favorite for the Epsom Derby, one mile and a half, to be run May 25. About him 3 to 1 is offered, though Dieudonne is a strong second choice at 4 to 1. Hawfinch, 7 to 1, and Batt, 8 to 1, come next to order. Mr. August Belmont's candidate, Bridegroom 11., is at 33 to 1, Archduke 66 to 1.
THE New York "Spirit of the Times" representative recently asked Mr. Powers, representative of Mr. Marcus Daly, what was going to be done with Hamburg this season, and received the following reply: "Mr. Daly was here only a few days ago and I was able to consult him upon the subject, and our plans dependent of course on the horse's condition at the date of the various events, are as follows: Hamburg's first start will be in the Belmont at a mile and three furlongs, which will be run on May 26th, the last day of the Morris Park spring meeting. The Realization at a mile and five furlongs, to be run on July 4th, the closing day of the Coney Island Jockey Club's first summer meeting, will see his second appearance, and if he proves that he has stamina as well as speed, as we think he will do, we shall start him in the Brighton cup, at two miles and a quarter, on July 30th. During all this time Hamburg will be trained at Brigeton, where Lakeland has him now, and will only be shipped to Morris Park for the Belmont, and walked over to Sheepshead Bay for the Realization upon the day the events are run for. We did think of sending him to Washington Park, Chicago, for the $10,000 American Derby, but the date for its running is too close to the Realization for us to risk the journey. After the Brighton cup we have formulated no plans as yet."

ALAMEDA DRIVING CLUB } Quite safe to say, and that without equivocation, or any tendency to flatter, that so far as tracks are concerned, the Alameda Driving Course and Boulevard adjoining form the best training ground for harness horses in this or any other State. It may be better to qualify the statement by changing best to the equal of any training grounds where ever located, though I cannot imagine where the track and boulevard could be bettered when the object sought is to teach horses to trot or pace, and to bring them into such "condition" as will best fit them for races.

The "regulation track" i. e. a mile in circuit the turns semi-circles of a quarter of a mile each, connected with parallel, straight stretches which, of course, are also a quarter of a mile each, is nearly faultless, though the turns might be "thrown up" somewhat more with advantage. The track was built by a few men who have a fondness for driving, and who did not look for a money return on their expenditure. Then a satisfactory lease could not be obtained and the only improvements a rail on the turns and some other fencing, cooling out sheds, a few stalls, and the judges stand, the cut represents the stalls, the angle forming a better protection from the western winds than if on one straight line.

A MORNING SCENE, ALAMEDA TRACK.

Watching the horses exercise is fully as attractive to some harness-horse fanciers as to go to the races. There is this advantage, there is something going on every minute. It may be that there are several parties "working out" together, two, three or it may be more in competition, while one section is cooling out another is on the track, and scarcely an interval of ten minutes without something to interest.

The Boulevard is not properly appreciated, one mile and an eighth in length, one hundred feet wide, straight with the exception of an easy curve that with so long a radius that it virtually "straight going." The material the same as the track, and better for dry weather could not be, silt pumped from the estuary, so that it so nearly level that a few inches will mark the difference. The advantages are so many and so great that a long article, with advantages for training purposes of the Alameda boulevard for a text, will be required to do it justice. Were those stalls commensurate with the demand, more horses would be in training on the Alameda track than any other one in the state, and it seems to me that if stables like those occupied by Mr. Nelson, and Mr. Williams were built the rental would make the investment a paying one.

Alameda is one of the most beautiful towns in California. It may appear like rank heresy on the part of one who has resided in Oakland for twenty-four years to say that as a residence place it is superior, in many respects, to the bigger city across the creek. Just as convenient for those who do business in the metropolis, and though Oakland has advantages, which its larger population secures, there are compensations to offset.

A city of homes, the finest streets for driving, a more equable temperature, more beautiful adornments in the way of shrubbery and flowers, the tranquility of the country, urban, suburban and rural enjoyments combined.

The following cut represents the residence of the late Josiah H. White, a man who was intimately connected with harness horses, a large breeder, and on his farm at Lakeside constructed the best shaped track I ever saw. In place of being semi-circles the curves were parabolas, the connecting stretches being, of course, straight. The advantages of the parabolic "turns" are evident; the curve gradually grows sharper so that the horse becomes habituated to the change from straight, going to circular, not so abrupt a change as when a semi-circle has to be "negotiated." Mr. White was a civil engineer; he laid out the Bay District and the old Oakland tracks and his profession suggested the shape of the Lakeside course.

A very short acquaintance with Mr. White was enough to discern he was a man of superior attainments, further intimacy resulted in the discovery of so many admirable and loveable qualities that he was endeared to his friends, and if he had enemies even those were forced to respect him for his sterling worth. There was general rejoicing when he made the "rich strike" in Arizona, and what is somewhat wonderful, the radically envious did not express their feelings audibly.

Mr. White was the first president of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association.

BONNIE SCOTLAND, MALCOLM, REGENT. Owing to the type becoming misplaced, after the proof was corrected, there was a slight error in the notes regarding Bonnie Scotland in the paper of Saturday, that being that I owned the horse in Waukegan, Ill. In order to straighten that and add something to the information about the greatest son of Queen Mary, gaps are filled up.

Mr. Kutz sold his interest in all the horses owned by him and Mr. Reber to a Cincinnati party, two of which were E. A. Smith and Samuel Leonard. In a division Bonnie Scotland and Ontario were among the horses which Messrs. Smith and Leonard got. They sent Bonnie Scotland to Kentucky and raced quite a strong stable, winning many races with Ontario, at that time the "queen of the turf." Leonard's father-in-law, "Deacon" Stevens, had loaned them a good deal of money, and took a bill of sale of the horses. Hearing that Bonnie Scotland was for sale, and would be sold for a great deal less than Mr. Robert Alexander had offered, after some correspondence I went with Mr. Smith to Kentucky to see the horse and Mr. Stevens accompanied me to Iowa to look at the farm I proposed to trade for the stallion. The price put on him $6,000, was satisfactory and mine for the farm $8,000, was also sufficient inducement for Mr. Stevens to make the journey.

A close bargainer was the Deacon, and the "swap" was finally consummated by giving me Bonnie and $1,750 for the little farm.

Lamenting the outlay of "ready money" already invested, Mr. Smith asked me if I would not take other horses for the balance due, or a part of it.

"What will you take for Ontario?" I replied.

"He answered, 'one thousand dollars.'

"I will take her" my reply.

"Wait a moment," he said, and referring to a little memorandum book, added, "the boys have marked her not to be sold."

"Will take the mare and square the account," was my reply.

"Let it rest until I go home and I will send the mare or the money."

Feeling sure that "the boys" would not agree to part with her the only chance to secure the mare was to have the question decided then, though I finally concurred in the offer to await his decision until we got back to Chicago.

Evidently a great struggle whether to offend the boys or pay the $1,750, though the advances to his son-in-law and Smith was not so sore a point as losses made in a partnership with a Mr. S. S. Grant, and Smith in army contracts, through Grant not only gambling away recent profits, but absorbing a draft of $90,000, which Mr. Stevens had sent him to purchase horses and mules. The boys carried the day, but he swore that would be the last money he would furnish.

I sold a half interest to Hon. D. A. Gage for $3,000, and that season Bonnie stood at Mr. Gage's farm, Riverside, that beautiful suburb of Chicago now occupying the ground which barns, buildings, fields and paddocks covered, adopting the name of the farm as well as the other "appurtenances," and hereditaments thereto belonging.

The big barn, the largest at that time in the country, was moved some two miles up "the ridge" in 1869, and the breeding farm of Atwood Place established.

Few thoroughbred mares I can recall, two were bred to Bonnie in 1868, Eva Shepherd by Sovereign, and an Endorser mare, neither having foals.

The fall of 1838 I sold my interest in the horse to C. C. and Robert Parks of Waukegan, Illinois, and he made a few seasons there. Few thoroughbred mares in that stud; trotting horses, Durham and Jersey cattle, being also a part of the business; still the veteran campaigner, Joe Howell was bred there; (his dam Eva Shepherd), and a mare I sold him, Maud, by imp. Australian foaled Paper Maker at Glen Flora.

I bought Regent, then two years old, of Mr. Reber early in the spring of 1869 for myself, Columbia and her sister Wauanita on joint account with Mr. Gage; those and several other horses Mr. Coyle trained for us at Dexter Park after Riverside was dismantled. Regent was a "natural born" race horse and an exceedingly handsome colt. Smith and Leonard induced Mr. Stevens, he being the owner of Malcolm, to write me several letters proposing a trade, Malcolm for Regent, and would pay a reasonable difference. I refused to name any sum, but when the summer race and trotting meeting came to an end and people were leaving for their homes, I fully realized that for the first time in many, many years myself and family were without a home of our own. Good quarters at the Transit House, my children at the best of schools, but the yearning for the little farm became so strong that I offered Mr. Stevens a sum for it in cash or would take Malcolm and let him have Regent at $2,500 less money. From his reluctance to pay any more money out I supposed he would take the all money offer, though much to my surprise I received a telegram: "Accept offer; have sent to Nashville for Malcolm; ship colt at once."

A friend who was a warm admirer of the colt urged me not to send him, and though fully believing that he was one of the best colts I ever saw could not do otherwise than comply. And thus I became the owner of Malcolm, and lost Regent. That fall he won the young America stake at Nashville and Mr. Stevens was offered $7,500 for him.

George Bayliss who died so suddenly at Emeryville last Sunday rode Regent in his exercise while I owned him, and it almost broke his heart when the colt went away. A quiet, well behaved lad, a general favorite and with good promise to make a first-class jockey.

"TUNNEL DAY" Saturday next the racing season will wind up with a benefit day, the proceeds of which will go into the tunnel fund, and from the outlook at present it will be the largest gathering of people of the winter at the C. J. C. course, excepting, perhaps, that of Thanksgiving day. If all the people of Oakland fully realized the advantages that will follow from a good road through, in place of over, the mountains, everyone who can afford to pay a dollar will surely do so.

An extra good programme for that day has been arranged, so that there will be a double return, the pleasure of witnessing high-mettled racers in exciting contests and aiding a laudable enterprise. To those who have not seen the course, the buildings and grounds on a racing day will be well repaid for the time and money spent by the beauty of the place, one of the very finest race courses in the United States; the finest in many respects.

Good Lessons Taught Us by Our Eastern and Australian Friends.

The marked success of racing at the East under the jurisdiction of The Jockey Club, the increasing popularity of the galloper with the masses, the confidence felt in the officials having matters in charge, all largely due to the strict enforcement of the rules under which the club is working, has had the effect of elevating, in public opinion, the turfman, the trainer of horses and the jockey. They command the respect of all sorts of citizens, for their actions are above reproach. It is to be regretted that trainers and jockeys out this way, as a class, are not looked upon as they are at the far East. There is not that feeling of confidence in either class that should be felt and naturally one looks around for the cause. At the far East there are bookmakers, just as here. There are the same direct rewards for fraudulent practices, the running of "dead ones" and "dividing the sheet," sending horses to the post "short" when the trainer knows the public will bet long and furiously on the animal, etc. The solution of this problem, then, must be that there is no catering to the low-class racers or to the owners of "dogs." Besides, there has been a lengthening of the distances in races since The Jockey Club took the helm of the racing ship at the far East, an increase in the weights, so that a rider can remain at the business for many years and become proficient in his art.

The craze for "time" is dying out, too, and this is mainly due to the action of the governing turf body of the far East having many of the races at odd distances, such as 172 feet short of six furlongs, about a mile, mile and fifty yards, &c. In this way the race-goer is made to forget a good deal about "time." The great increase in the weights carried has also crushed the stickler for "time" somewhat.

The rule which says it is unlawful for "plungers" to make presents to riders is also a good one, the club doubtless arguing that if a jockey would accept money for winnings he would also accept coin for losing, and that the time would soon come when a rider would not greatly exert himself to win if he were not promised a substantial sum from the plunging brigade. The late Admiral Rous did not approve of plunging, and tried to have a law passed that any member of the Jockey Club of England trying to win over £20,000 on any event should be expelled from the organization. The "plungers" should be kept as far away from the jockeys as possible, so that they could neither offer a reward to a rider for being honest or dishonest. "Plungers" have ruined many a jockey. They have, through their liberality given jockeys a false idea of their importance upon this mundane sphere, and as the cranium of the knight of the saddle swelled his usefulness decreased in proportion. The successful race rider of to-day is flattered until he begins to believe himself a Napoleon, a Dewey or an Edison—a veritable genius that all the world should salaam and scrape to.

If the West will not follow in the footsteps of their successful Eastern brethren, placing the turf upon a higher plane of morality, the introduction of the totalizer will do the good work. It will do away with the direct reward for fraud. The dishonest trainer, running his horse to lose, cannot gain anything. A winner has to be picked in a race, and that's not always so easy. The "plunger" who wanted to make a heavy "clean-up" would have to "fix" nearly every ride in a race in order to have his horse "shooed in," and one of the jockeys would "give him away." Besides, on a totalizer, a heavy play on a particular horse would reduce the odds materially. Therefore, the "plunger," generally a non-producer, will not look upon the "tote" with much favor. But it will come just the same and be the savior of the sport. It will enforce honesty and render the efforts of the dishonest useless. It will increase the revenues of the clubs through having a larger "gate." It will make the public have confidence, a belief that they will at all times secure a "run for the money." If the clubs are as liberal in the future as they have been in the past, they will increase the size of the purses and stakes, and that will insure the entrance in races of a higher class of horses, the "skate" being relegated to the background. Larger purses and stakes means larger breeding operations, an improvement in our breed of horses—supposed to be the chief aim of all racing organizations in the world. All of the above predictions will be verified here if the racing clubs would only use the totalizer adopted in New Zealand and South Australia. Racing was at a very low ebb in those countries when the totalizer took the place of the bookmaker. The purses were small; little interest was felt in turf affairs (caused through lack of confidence in the squareness of the sport), and bettors kept their coin in their pockets. With the introduction of the totalizer, all this was changed. The interest and the gate receipts commenced to swell, the coin came out of the feather beds and banks, the purses and stakes were increased four-fold and the breeding interest was stimulated as breeders never dreamed it would be. All this was due to the use of the totalizer by the racing clubs, and every sporting paper in those provinces sing the praises of "the tote" in every issue, pronouncing it the saviour of the sport of kings in those localities, as indeed it was.

ON the 31st instant Messrs. Killip & Co., live stock auctioneers, will sell at the salesyard corner Market and Van Ness avenue in this city, by order of A. W. Foster, Esq., twenty head of Hungarian ponies, twelve hands and under. This is a choice lot and they are perfect beauties. The sale will be positive and without reserve. The firm will also sell a consignment of trotting bred and draft horses from the Yerba Buena Farm. Full particulars of this sale next week.

HORSE owners and trainers should remember that they have but one week more to study over the programme of the Trotting Horse Breeders' Association races, and arrange for making entries. It will be the best meeting ever given in California in all probability. Don't be left out in the cold when there is so much money to be earned. The entries will close June 1st.

THE meeting to be given by the Alameda Driving Association Monday May 30th, promises to be one of the most enjoyable ever held on that club's excellent track. The races are open to all and the conditions are set forth in our advertising columns. Entries close today, Saturday May 21st, with the Secretary A. O. Gott, 1413 Park street, Alameda. Get your entries mailed to-day.

MR. ALLISON says that "roaring is not by any means of necessity a serious matter at all, whereas under no circumstances is it anything like such a drawback to a horse as stilty forelegs, calf knees, spavined hocks, bad feet, or hereditary tendency to break blood vessels—which is the most hereditary trouble of all. Clover, the successful French sire, is by the roaring Wellingtonia (son of the roaring Chattanooga), out of Princess Catherine, by the roaring Prince Charlie, and Clover was a sound, good race horse." Resolute is demonstrative proof that a horse may be touched in the wind and still retain his pace.

VOLLEY, Strathmore, Patron, The Officer and Aurum are the only horses who have won the double, Caulfield Guineas and V. R. C. St. Leger.

THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN's mailing clerk has gone to be a soldier. Albert Jackson Martineau, is a native of Vallejo in this State, and he has been connected with this office for some months. A young man of brains and strict uprightness, he always seemed to take his greatest pleasure in doing his duty. Prompt and reliable his aim was to do everything in the proper manner and on time. A member of Company C., First Infantry and Third Battalion of California Volunteers, our "Jack" will, in a few days, be on his way to Manila to defend his country's flag and honor. We know he will faithfully discharge every duty required of him, and we hope to see him return safe and sound, wearing the shoulder straps of an officer. An honest, kind, and gentle boy is "Jack," and the idol of the employees of this office, but now

"Dreams he of cutting foreign throats
Of breaches, ambuscades, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathoms deep."

TOD SLOAN is riding in superb form at Morris Park. Hardly a day passes but that he rides a couple of winners. A scribe pays the following tribute to his work of last Thursday: "Tod Sloan's riding was the feature of the day. There are those who have claimed that Sloan is no finisher, but all doubts as to his ability in this line were dispelled by his efforts with Geisha. The little crack in two of the races had the satisfaction of beating his great rival, Tommy Burns." Sloan started in badly at the Aqueduct, but there was little doubt in the minds of his friends but that he would soon round to his best form.

AN impression exists in New Zealand that Uniform was purchased from Mr. Stead, on account of an English owner, but the seller states that he has neither disclosed the name of the purchaser to anyone, nor the amount for which he sold the son of Hotchkiss and Formo. O'Toole who came out with the blood stock Mr. Stead purchased when on his visit to England, will take Uniform to England. The total winnings of Uniform during his career as a three and four-year-old have amounted to £2,100—Melbourne Leader.

GEORGE BARRETT, who recently died in England, had a most successful career as a jockey, and amongst the numerous winners steered by him were Common (2000 guineas, Derby and St. Leger), Ormonde (2000 guineas), Buccaneer (City and Suburban), La Fleche (1000 guineas, Cambridge Stakes and Oaks), Carlton (Chester Cup), and Orme (Eclipse Stakes and Middle Park Plate).

VENGEANCE (whose yearlings recently brought such good prices in Australia) is by Newminster, for years the leading stallion of Australia, the sire of Newhaven and Tarcoola, winners of the Melbourne Cup.

THE success in Australia of Bobadil and Ormuz omens favorably for the St. Simon-cum-Musket experiments now being instituted by the Duke of Portland through the agency of Carbine.

MCDONALD, who has been riding excellently here of late, left for St. Louis May 19th. He will ride for Hughey Jones, and ought to do well.

EDWARD CORRIGAN has been publicly warned that the people of Cicero township will not stand for the opening up of Hawthorne.

CLEVELAND SALE.—The "Blue Ribbon" sale at Cleveland from the accounts received up to this time was undoubtedly an "unqualified success," the Palo Alto contingent bringing prices far beyond any previous sale this year, and according to my recollection $7,800, the price paid for Betonica, the highest figure ever reached at an auction sale for a four-year-old pacer.

The two year-old, Idolita, by Monaco from Edith Carr by George Wilkes, at $4,100 has taken the highest place when measured by money value, than anyone of his age has brought in several years. And dirt cheap at that, in my opinion, as he takes the lead of all the colts that have been driven on that famous track; even Arion never equalled the time made by Idolita so early in the season, 2:24½ in April. Manaco shows good indications of being a first-class sire. The Beautiful Bells yearling is certainly the best looking of her colts at the same age, and all the Monacos I have seen are highly formed.

Plenty of near infusions in Idolita. The third dam of Edith was by imp. Margrave and the next dam the thoroughbred mare Kitty Muse by Shakespeare, and a filly by American Eclipse from Kitty Muse was the dam of Idol a son of Mambrino chief. The third dam of Monaco was by Piedmont and the second dam of Piedmont was by the thoroughbred Grey Eagle.

As is well known Betonica is half thoroughbred through his sire and dam, and were all the other thoroughbred strains he carries collected, little but thoroughbred would remain.

Pasante by Palo Alto brought the next highest price, $2000, and she is by a "half-and-half" sire. With careful handling this highly-bred mare (her grandam being by Billy Townes thoroughbred, and her third dam was by Sir Charles, who was so well thought of that he was matched against American Eclipse, but unfortunately went amiss) and highly formed mare as all good judges must admit, is almost sure to get a mark very nearly at the top-notch of the measuring rod.

The next in price Hyita, two years old, $1,900, is very close to the infusions. Her dam was by Carr's Mambrino, his dam very nearly thoroughbred, and her second dam by Owen Dale by Belmont (Williamson's), her third dam by Belmont, and as Directum has two strains of Belmont, the most captious must admit its value in fast trotters.

The second dam of Peko was Planetia by Planet, then La Henderson by Lexington, Kitty Clark by imp. Glencos, not only thoroughbred, but that of the highest class.

Nordeau, $1,000, is from a daughter of Wildidle, and her sire, Norris, is by Ansel, and Ansel from Annette, through bred, by Lexington. The dam of Norris by Norman, his second dam by T. d. Hunter's Sir Wallace very nearly, if not entirely thoroughbred, and the third dam Eagletta, thoroughbred, by Grey Eagle.

These confident prophets who predict that nothing good would come from Palo Alto, owing to Governor Stanford's strange infatuation in using thoroughbred blood with the vain expectation of getting even moderate trotters if at all fair-minded and sensible enough to know and understand what Palo Alto has done, they will be ready to acknowledge that the crowning glory of that famous breeding comes from the mixture of thoroughbred blood, closely up, too, with trotting strains.

The above is a representation of the end stalls in the north row of stables, and the filly the folks are admiring I think is Nordeau, at all events one of the lot sold at Cleveland.

ANENT INCORPORATING. I must acknowledge that I was so densely ignorant in regard to the laws of California, or any other State, governing incorporations, or the necessary steps to secure articles of incorporation, that when I offered the resolution at the annual meeting, Dec. 6, 1897, that the P. C. T. H. B. A. should be incorporated, I supposed that there would be no change in the organization. That the constitution under which the Association had conducted its affairs from the first, or one amended in accordance with that constitution, would be the groundwork: that the directors and members would remain the same, the only difference from its present standing, a legalized body, in place of an assemblage of men associated to advance harness-horse interests.

In place of that should the projected Association be incorporated, I find that everything will be changed excepting the name, everyone of the Association, save those who sign the articles of incorporation before it is filed, will be thrown out. In place of fifteen directors eleven the limit; not a member, however good his standing, of the present Association that will be a member of the one proposed, until elected by the new in accordance with the by-laws, articles of incorporation, or whatever the new conditions may be that will govern.

It is my fault that I am ignorant of the provisions made in the articles of incorporation. Mr. Cohen brought the document into the office requesting, urging me to sign it, but having firmly resolved not to sign whatever the conditions embodied therein might be, the opportunity was lost. Since then I have been unable to obtain a copy for publication, and considering the importance of the issue it will be well if the secretary has copies printed in time to mail them to the members the first of the week. In all probability a large majority of the members are as ignorant as I was in regard to the effects that will follow incorporation, and with a copy of the articles they can note the difference between those and the constitution of the P. C. T. H. B. A. as it now stands.

That the constitution can be amended advantageously is beyond question, and the adjourned Annual Meeting which will be held on Thursday next will have the power to change it or adopt an entirely new instrument.

Members who have sent proxies without being aware of the changes that can be wrought, and have placed it in the power of some one to vote directly contrary to their wishes after realizing the true situation, should send a later proxy if unable to attend the meeting. In that case it will be well to state whether they are in favor or against incorporation. Hon. D. E. Knight of Marysville, John F. Boyd of San Francisco, John A. McKerron of San Francisco, Colonel Park Henshaw of Chico have not as yet committed themselves to either side of the question, and the gentlemen named will surely be in attendance.

I wish to state further that I had an object in offering the resolution favoring incorporation. That was to make changes in the constitution. It could not be amended at that annual meeting, December 6th, 1897, as the necessary three months notice had not been given. The meeting of the directors to elect officers for the ensuing year was put off two weeks. At that meeting, December 26, 1897, there was a good deal of argument many contending that the directors had the power to incorporate and adopt a new constitution. This I stubbornly contested and as the constitution Article III, Sec. 1 reads "The association shall meet annually on or before and as the 26th of April gave the necessary time for notification that it was set for that date. The following two paragraphs cut from the special department of January 1st shows the views that I held at that time and have not changed.

"There is a general consensus of opinion that the outlook for harness racing in California the coming year is anything but favorable. Some quite despondent, others who are somewhat hopeful, a few who have faith that with methods of management which will secure the approval of the public there will follow a break in the dark cloud. This is my belief, and there are many others who agree in the opinion, among them people who have come to the conclusion from a careful study of the situation. An influential body of men who advocated a course that, in my opinion, will prove a great detriment to the future of harness racing. That is for the only association which was organized to "promote" harness horse races to become a sort of quasi jockey club, give a "mixed meeting" where gallopers and harness horse racers will all be awarded a chance. This was thoroughly canvassed before the fall meeting of the Association, and at a gathering of members held in Sacramento there was an "overwhelming majority" opposed to the innovation.

"In order to effect the purpose the plan proposed, in fact already agreed upon, is to change the name of the Association and amend the constitution so that running races can be incorporated in the programme. If that is carried out in accordance with the requirements of the constitution, and the necessary number of votes secured to legally effect the change, I will do all in my power to aid in making the meetings successful. But if the attempt is made to secure the end by measures not recognized by the fundamental law, to arbitrarily grasp the power and issue an edict that the name has been changed, the original object of the organization disregarded and an entirely different course pursued, those who favor such autocratic methods must not be surprised should there be a stubborn determination to thwart the conspiracy. Too plainly apparent to anyone who will give the question a little consideration to require long arguments that the members of the association are the owners of whatever property belongs to the Association. The directors may vote that the Board has the power to transfer this property to another society, that it can sequester, or rather confiscate property belonging to one set of contributors into other coffers, but is that equitable? Is it an act which 'law of the land' will sanction?"

After the meeting on the 26th of April, adjourned to next Thursday, the 26th inst., I wrote something of the same tenor.

The mere fact that I offered the resolution under a misapprehension, and with the further purpose of securing a "legal meeting" empowered to make necessary changes in the constitution did not bind me in any shape to support incorporating.

and is well worthy of a place now, inasmuch as there are few instances of a horse lasting that long.

The race was run at Tunbridge-Wells, County of Kent, England, and there two others, at the like distance, on the same day, though in both others there were three heats.

Thursday, August, 25, 1824.—TOWN PLATE of 50 sovs. [Three miles and a distance.]

Mr. Brown's br. g. Marksman, by Paynator, out of Shepherd's dam, aged, 9st. 11lb.	1	1
Mr. Maundrell's b. f. Princess Mary, by Walton, 3 yrs., 1st. 4lb.	2	2
Mr. Holbrooke's b. h. Felix, by Comus, 5 yrs., 9st. 11lb.	3	3

The Editor is induced to swerve from his course on the present occasion; the rarity of a horse, not only continuing to run, but to win, at the age of seventeen years, creates an interest in his favour which cannot, perhaps, be better gratified than by detailing his pedigree:—MARKSMAN, the property of T. Brown, E. q. was foaled in 1808; he was got by Paynator (a son of Ld. Clermont's Trumpator); dam by Dragon; grandam Queen Mab (sister to Mercury and Venus), by Eclipse; great grandam the famous old Tartar mare; great great grandam by Mogul; great great great grandam by Sweepstakes—sister to Sloven, by Bolton—Curwen Bay Barb—Old Spot—White-legged Lowther Barb—Vintner mare. Through his sire, it will be observed, that he is descended direct from the Godolphin Arabian:—Paynator, a son of Trumpator—Conductor—Match'em—Cade—the Godolphin Arabian.

A correspondent who requested the pedigree of Marksman, says: "This is the seventy-second time the old horse has started, and the 40th plate he has won." This statement does not agree with the Racing-Calendar; but Marksman may have run on courses where no account of the sport has been preserved. We find him to have been thirty times "crowned victor of the laboured races."—J. F.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

TURFMAN PAT DUNNE lost his excellent California-bred colt, Estaca, in a selling race at Louisville May 14th. Estaca was in for $900, and when offered for sale J. G. Murphy, a stranger to most of the horsemen and race followers generally, bid $1,500. Mr. Dunne raised the bid $5, as he did with each successive boost of $100, until he had gone to $1,805, and when Murphy bid $1,900, the Chicago horseman stopped and the colt was knocked down to the stranger. Murphy was reported to be an agent of the Mexican Government commissioned to buy up good, well-bred horses, but this is a mistake, growing out of the fact that his father is connected officially with the Mexican Central Railroad. A Mexican by birth and speaking broken English, notwithstanding his name, he became infatuated with the racing game at New Orleans, and has since been backing a book run by Al Slofel, at whose suggestion he bought Estaca. They will ship him to race on the Northern circuit.

ACCORDING to that widely recognized authority, John Porter, the strain on the horse is much greater when the animal is called upon to run in short races than it is in long ones. "To be convinced of this," says the famous trainer "you have only to watch a start for a five furlong race, with the excitement to get off, the false starts and the horses "snatched" upon their haunches. This treatment, repeated as I have seen it as many as twenty times over, is ruinous, whereas in a race of a mile or upwards the horse starts smoothly, the pressure is not put on so soon, he gradually increases his speed, and the chances of his breaking down are not one-tenth as great as when he is pulled about and bustled in a short T. Y. C. Neither is his temper so likely to be soured." Another eloquent testimonial for the starting machine.

THE racing critics of England place Bridgroom II. property of August Belmont, among the formidable Derby candidates. He is a chestnut colt by Rayon d'Or out of the great race mare imp. Fides. Bridgroom was bred in America.

AMIALE, winner of the Newmarket Handicap at the V. R. C. meeting, cost but 70 guineas as a yearling.

Scouring and Hide Bound Horses.

Roth are annoyances to owners of such afflicted animals. Both evils are positively cured by feeding a liberal amount of Manhattan Food, Red Ball Brand. The undersigned has had great success with it. One of my favorite horses would scour after being driven a mile and keep this up until the dashboard would be completely covered. No matter what I fed him, he would not digest his oats. He was run down and weakened until he looked like a living skeleton. He was hide bound in the worst way. I then thought to again feed Manhattan Food and it was so efficacious that in ten days it cured him of scouring; he digested his oats thoroughly, picked up in flesh and in two months looked his old self again. He has a slick coat, is full of life and in the pink of condition. I am now convinced more than ever that it is an infallible remedy for ill conditioned horses.

ALBERT MANNING, Trainer.

Mr. Wm. Corbitt, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, says: I found it an excellent remedy.

Wm. F. Egan, V. S., says: I prescribe Manhattan Food whenever the case demands it.

Idaho Stock Farm.

Messrs. Hale & Son of Independence, Ia., write: "Some time ago, we had a colt that hurt his hind leg so it was swollen almost the size of your head; thought he was spoiled. We sent for Quinn's Ointment, used one bottle, and to day he is as smooth as ever." For curbs, splints, spavins, wind-puffs and all bunches use Quinn's Ointment. Price $1.50 per package. Address W. S. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y. For sale in San Francisco by Messrs. J. A. McKerron and J. O. Kane.

NOTICE TO ANGLERS.

Every angler is invited to drop us a line occasionally, telling us of the condition of the streams they have visited and the killing lure of the number and size of the fish caught, or any other item of interest to anglers.

Coming Events.

May 21-22.—San Francisco Fly-Casting Club. Seventh series of Saturday and Sunday contests. Stow Lake, Golden Gate Park.
June 8-9.—West Michigan Fly-Casting Association. First Angling Tournament. Grand Rapids, Mich.

Fly-Casting at Stow Lake.

To-day at 2 P. M. and to-morrow at 10 A. M. the seventh series of contests by the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club, will be held at Stow Lake.

Striped Bass in the Bay.

Striped bass anglers on the other side of the bay were very successful this week, quite a large number of these fine fish having been caught from the railroad wharves. "Andy" captured a ten pounder. A bunch of spile worms on the hook seems to be the taking lure.

Striped Bass Fishing—The Tackle Used.

Having fished for striped bass, called rockfish in the south, for ten years, I have seen many changes. A few years ago we seldom hooked striped bass along the New Jersey coast before July 1st, but during the last three years June has been the best month, especially on full moon tides.

To be successful in fishing for striped bass, one must learn where they feed. This is usually in holes along the beach, but the fish move from one hole to another, so one must hunt them. As a rule, if one can find a small stream running into the ocean, bass will be found there. The streams turn up small soft-shell crabs in the sand, of which they are fond.

There are three runs of striped bass, viz.: spring, summer (or school bass) and the fall run. The summer bass are much smaller than the spring and fall runs.

The best rod for ocean fishing is a one-piece, hand-made split bamboo 6 feet long, with a separate butt 18 inches long. German silver mountings, agate guides and tip. As these rods are expensive few anglers have them. Greenheart, bethabara, snakewood and lancewood make excellent rods. Calcutta bamboo makes a good rod, and is light and strong. Always have the agate tips, as the line does not wear so much. If German silver guides are used, have the bell guide. These rods are unhandy to take on short trips. A two-piece stick with separate butt (always carry an extra tip), will be found more convenient. Great judgment should be used in the purchase of these piece sticks, for the ferrules are apt to cut them, but this has been overcome by an invention of Frederick Malleon, with L. F. La Roche, 161 Fulton street, New York, who is the patentee of the double-serrated ferrules, which enables the maker to bind over their ends, thus preventing the rod from becoming water-soaked at the ferrules. This ferrule is also made to take off the knife-blade edge that some of the old style had. How many rods one has seen break off just at the end of the ferrule!

In purchasing a rod pay a good price and get the best. It is cheaper in the end. When through fishing always clean and dry your rod thoroughly; keep it well varnished. The hard rubber, German silver, steel pivot multiplying reel is the only reel for salt water, and should have a 600 to 900 foot spool. In lines get the best of Irish linen, 12 to 18 thread, length 600 to 900 feet. Never have a knotted line, for it interferes with casting, also of handling a fish. From experience I find the O'Shaughnessy hook the best, 5-0 to 8-0, with 3 to 4-ply long loop gut snell, and a 3-foot best gut leader, 3 or 4-ply, with patent swivel, bass-casting sinker, 2 to 5 ounces, according to the sea and current. As a rule, 2 or 3 ounces of lead is plenty. Never use two sinkers. Brass triple action swivel is the best, for it is impossible to make a mistake in arranging tackle.

Soft-shell crabs, thoroughly cleaned, are mostly used for bait. Do not leave a particle of shell on them, for the striped bass is a suspicious fish, and if it strikes a hard substance it will throw it from its mouth before the angler can hook it. If fishing at an inlet always have good, fresh bloodworms, and use two leaders, one above the other far enough so they will not tangle. Bait with crabs and worms; a crab will make four or five good baits.

Night fishing for striped bass is always the best, for then they are feeding. Never be afraid to let your fish run to sea. Have just enough pressure on the reel to tire him out. Once you have the king of salt water fishes hooked your fun begins. Bass vary greatly in size. I have seen them from 1 to 42 pounds.

I took a trip to Port Deposit, Md., the 20th of last September. Fishing all day the 21st I took three bass. On the 22d I went out again and was rewarded with twelve striped bass weighing 80 pounds, the four largest of which weighed 15, 15, 14, 10 pounds respectively; The other eight from 3 to 6 pounds. These four large fish were caught over a deep hole. Whenever I located that hole right I was sure of a fish; but when you have 150 feet of line out and a swift current running, it is hard to find a given point on the water.

Trolling is the approved method of fishing for striped bass in southern waters. A small spoon, not as large as a silver quarter, is what I used, with six to ten bloodworms on the hook, and a small sinker, just enough to sink the line 3 or 4 feet. —J. F. Marshall, M. D. in Shooting and Fishing.

Flies.

I might as well confess that in the matter of flies I am a Philistine, because the adherent to the natural school will rise and call me so. Many books have been written about artificial flies and how to tie them so as to imitate the natural insect, and I may have a dozen such books besides the chapters on flies in a hundred general works on angling, for my angling library is a large one, a collection of over thirty years. Besides this I regularly read the London fishing Gazette, in which hardly a week passes without an article or at least an item about dressing flies to imitate some fly, caterpillar, moth, or other thing on which trout feed, and by an imitation of which they may be deceived into taking the hook that is concealed therein. I mention this to show that I have studied the subject in the books and on the streams, and I hereby avow my opinion that fidelity to nature in trout flies is a humbug.

I know scores of anglers who use all sorts of nondescript dier, but know of none who has had the courage to assail this antiquated, yet popular, belief. This is the rankest kind of fly-casting heresy, and will be so received in England, where they are more conservative, and have more reverence for traditions than we have; but it may not pass unchallenged on this side of the water. But as I have already called myself a Philistine, they are spared the trouble.

For years anglers have shed tears in asking: "What does the salmon take the fly for?" And it has not been satisfactorily answered. A salmon fly, let it be a Jock Scot, silver doctor or other well-known killer, does not resemble any insect that ever inhabited the earth, and as the adult salmon when ascending rivers to spawn takes no other nutrition than Jock Scots, doctors, silver doctors, mandarins and the like, all of which have a barbed steel sting in their tails, the question is a puzzle at which we all may guess. Most of the salmon flies are as gaudy as flies can be made, but they are creations of the fly-tier's fancy; but salmon take them, and there our knowledge ends.

The long and lengthening list of trout flies contains more nondescripts than alleged imitations, and I use the word "alleged" advisedly, for when I see a beautifully illustrated page of natural flies and their imitations I wonder that a trout could think them genuine. As I write I have before me the third edition of "The Practical Fly-Fisher," by the late John Jackson, London, 1880. The lithograph plates are fine, but I will only criticize the first plate. Here are four natural flies and their alleged imitations. Three of them may pass, but No. 3 illustrates what I have said: The natural insect has the shape of a bedbug; has four wings; the hinder pair are drab while the others are scarlet. The imitation looks like a brown hackle, all hairs. If the student will turn to Plate VII. and note the pictures of Insects Nos. 35 and 38, and their "imitations" and can then believe that a trout can see any difference between the imitations, then he has the gift of imagination.

Size, color and form attract trout in the order named. Trout in some streams and lakes will only take large flies, but these waters are usually remote, and the fish have not had the caution bred into them that trout in waters which have been fished in for years have got. Men may argue about reason and instinct, but it is a fact that a green backwoods trout will rise to anything that is offered, just as the Sheriff of Wayback comes to New York to buy green goods and gold bricks; but an old trout often pricked, learns caution, and transmits that quality to its progeny; the heedless young trout takes the first lure, and has no progeny to transmit its rashness to. If this statement needs proof let us look at ducks, deer and other animals which once merely kept out of reach of the man who had the bow and arrow, and see how their progeny have increased the distance as man has lengthened his reach, first with flintlock rifles, good for 100 yds., to their caution to-day. Their is no instinct in it; it is reason, pure and simple. The wounded that survived learned a lesson and transmitted it to their posterity.

If we admit this, why not admit it in the case of the trout? We might as well do it, because the evidence is all on our side. In the State of New York there is the great Caledonia Creek; it would be a "river" in some parts of the world; it has been fished many generations and a man might cast several days over thousands of trout and not get a rise. Then comes a day when they will rise for natural flies by the thousand, but a strange angler who uses as large a fly as he takes trout in the Adirondacks with would have the torment of Tantalus about him, trout rising everywhere but at his flies.

A glance at a list of trout flies will show that most of them are nondescripts, such as red ibis, Ferguson, Parmachenee Belle, Montreal, queen of the water, grizzly king, Abbey, jungle cock, beaver-king, king of the water, Governor Alvord, St. Patrick, Professor, Rangeley, Henshall, black prince, General Hooker, and a hundred more. Many of these are favorites of long standing and great reputation as killers. Against this we have but few so-called imitations of the natural fly, such as white miller, green and gray drakes, stone fly, cow-dung, black gnat, sand fly, alder fly, May fly, black and red ant, and a few others.

All flies can be made on different sized hooks, and as a rule you may use a larger fly where the fly is not much used, and they seem to attract green trout better than small ones. Some twenty-five years ago I fished some mill-ponds back of Peterboro, Ont., and they preferred flies tied on No. 4 Sproat hook to the smaller ones, while on Long Island I never used a larger hook than an 8 Sproat, and often a No. 10. Therefore no special directions can be given as to the size of the hook the fly is tied on.

The dealer has a bewildering display of flies to offer, because he has occasional demands for some of them, and the names are on them, or even he would be in doubt as to their "pedigree." I freely confess that of the vast numbers of trout flies "I know them by sight," but cannot name more than twenty; and that is enough to be intimate with, although one may have a nodding acquaintance with many of the herd.

From eight to twelve kinds of flies are enough for most waters, but the angler will need half a dozen of each kind if he is out for a week's trouting, for flies have a way of eloping with a handsome trout, of preferring to remain imbedded in a sunken log, or of choosing a rest in some tree top, and if the trout are choosing to feast on that kind of fly at that time, and you have no duplicate, why there you are!

Ignoring the names, the angler, having settled on the size, will do well to select an assortment of colors. Suppose he decides on eight varieties; then he wants a white-miller for dusk, a royal coachman or some fly with both white and dark for early dawn and late afternoon, with browns, grays, reds, yellows, and a couple of combinations of these colors. If he takes a dozen varieties he can select four more variations, for flies are made in kaleidoscope variety. Flies are made in such great variety for the same purpose that Peter Pindar's razors were.

If, however, the trout angler be a worm-fisher, as many unconverted good men are, then I will say unto him: Use the slim, long-shanked hook known as the New York trout hook; or, if that is not obtainable, the long-shanked Kirby will do; but for the worm the ordinary shank of most hooks is too short.

As this article has been taken up by talk about tackle, I will reel up and consider how it is to be used for trout, both with fly and worm; but what I have said about flies may bring a hornet's nest about my ears from those who are shocked at my disregard for tradition when it does not accord with experience; but what can they expect from a Philistine, if that is the proper term for a man who does his own thinking?—Fred Mather in Forest and Stream.

Advices from Santa Cruz, of the 12 inst, state that on account of the wind in the morning a large number of salmon fishers were compelled to come in early. They all made catches, although they were not large ones.

Frank Maskey caught two very fine fish a week ago. Wednesday was one of the best days this year, about a hundred salmon were caught. Every boat was lucky, many coming in with six, seven and eight fish. The average weight of the salmon was about twelve pounds.

The Stockton Independent of May 13th has the following: "Freeman Black, Gus Ruhl and Frank Goodell made a trip down the river last evening on a fishing expedition. They returned about 11 o'clock with twenty four shad and report some great sport. Shad are running in the stream in large numbers, and taking them is one of the most enjoyable branches of sport at this season of the year."

A steel head measuring twenty nine inches was caught in the upper Carmel ten days ago by J. B. Sheehy. It was the largest trout caught in that section this season and only lacked three inches from being the largest ever caught in the Carmel.

A display of half a dozen fine cutthroat trout, from the Klamath river, in the window of E. T. Allen Co's attracted a great deal attention last Monday. The fish were beautiful to look at, but

F. W. S. Van Slyke while prospecting about the islands of the San Mateo bay shore last Saturday, made a large catch of very fine perch. He used a light rod and tackle.

Salt water anglers have recently had good sport on the old San Quentin wharf, catching flounders and soles. The fish are plentiful and in fine condition.

Dr. Cluness and A. S. Carman returned from Bartlett's last Saturday with a fine catch of beautiful trout. The fish in their baskets weighed 25 lbs.

Al Wilson caught a number of fine striped bass of good weight in Russian river, near Duncans, during the week.

Red Rock and the Two Brothers afford the best rock-fish fishing spots in the bay at present.

John Bemis' latest fly, the "Dewey" has been in evidence among the anglers this week.

Paper Mill was higher after the rain last week, than at any time during the winter.

At Point Reyes fishing in the tide water has not been good for a week past.

The run of salmon in the Sacramento has been very light so far.

"Last Sunday, I took a spin into the country on my wheel and witnessed a sight I never expected to see outside of Europe. I was following along on a levee when I came upon two Italians who had a net of fine mesh, about fifty feet long stretched along a patch of brush. This brush extends along the levee for miles and is inhabited by thousands of small birds, especially the Intermediate White-crowned Sparrow and Heerman's Song Sparrow. When I saw this net I supposed it was used for catching fish and that the Italians were simply repairing it. As I was tired I dismounted and sat down to watch the men fix the net and was very much surprised to see them begin to beat the brush with sticks. They began about one hundred yards from the net and came toward their snare, all the while keeping up their whipping of the brush. As soon as I saw this I thought they were snaring birds, and sure enough when they had finished their drive they had captured about fifty birds, which was a very small number as I afterwards found out. When they had removed the birds I examined them and found about twenty Intermediate Sparrows, fifteen Heerman's Song Sparrows, five Spurred Towhees, five Golden-crowned Sparrows and several California Towhees. These happened to be all the varieties in this brush, for had there been more, they would have captured them, as not one bird escaped. In that one afternoon they captured 300 birds. I began to question these Italians and found that they had been practicing this same thing for some time and had captured as high as 2 000 birds in one day. It makes no difference what kind of a bird they drive into their snare, and I think if it is kept up it will prove disastrous to some of our songsters. These Italians go on nearly every Sunday, and probably there are more practicing the same thing. I have heard of parties in San Francisco shooting sparrows for the markets but never had any idea that they were capturing birds in such large numbers and so near home. If you have heard of or seen anything of this kind in your vicinity, kindly let me know."

The San Francisco Bench Show.

The second annual bench show of the San Francisco Kennel Club opened at the Mechanics Pavilion last Wednesday morning in a most auspicious manner. The number of entries this year was 554.

The arrangements of the benching, and the many numerous details of the show under the direction of Superintendent Oldham were nearly perfect. The Committee work has been harmonious and satisfactory. The attendance was very good on the part of the public at large, and at times during the evenings of the show the exhibit took on the phase of a society function.

The judging was commenced on Wednesday at 2 p. m. Mr. Geo. Bell judging all classes, excepting the collies, who were judged by Mr. J. W. Burrell. The judging has been satisfactory in most respects, excepting, of course, the usual differences of opinion which seem to be an integral part of a bench show. The judging was concluded last evening with the awards of the special prizes which were valuable and numerous.

The exhibit of dogs was a good one; the general average being of a fine standard, excepting in a few of the classes.

The show will be further commented upon next week. The awards not having been completed in time for our going to press, prevented a full list of results being given this week. The following is a partial list of awards:

Union Coursing Park Notes.

The attendance at this popular park last Saturday and Sunday was up to the usual average. The coursing on Sunday was a fine exhibition of the sport, the hares being a superior lot.

The open stake races were run to the finals and there left unfinished, for both first and second prizes went to E. V.
Sullivan, the owner of False Flatterer and Mira Monte. The Puppy stake was won by Bad Shot.

On the run-off of the final a preconcerted exhibition of ruffianism was shown when the judge's decision was announced. An attempt to do violence to Mr. Bull was frustrated by the park attendants. The decision was satisfactory to all coursing men present, as it was warranted by the rules of the game.

Seventy-two dogs were entered last Wednesday evening for the coursing meeting which will be held at the Union Coursing Park Association grounds to-day and to-morrow. Among the entries are many crack flyers. The total amount of cash prizes for the stake is $810, including the regular and special prizes. The result of the drawing was as follows:

Open Stake—Orient Kennels' Uncle Sam vs M Nealon's
Van Knap; L A Hansen's Wheel of Fortune vs W S Glasson's Terrona; M Michalek's Fireball vs Derby Kennels'

Move On; Pasha Kennels' Gilt Edge vs J Lennan's Little Doubt; H O'Donnell's Elma G vs C F Ingersoll's Glenwood;
E V Sullivan's Jessie Moore vs Gibson's & Moore's Monitor;
R B Kay's Diana vs J Seggerson's White Chief.

R. L. Taylor, who has acted in the capacity of slipper since the inauguration of coursing at Union Park, resigned his position on Monday last and the managers of the park have wisely selected the veteran and champion slipper of the plains, genial Jim Wren, to fill this important position.

A noted collie, formerly owned by Barney Barnato and imported by him from England at a high price, is now on his way from Capetown, South Africa, to this city. This fine collie has been purchased by Thos. H. Browne, the President of the St. Bernard Club of California. His pedigree and the price paid for him has not yet been given out; he is claimed, however, to be a high class dog in every respect; his record as a stud dog has been excellent; his bench and field qualities are said to be of a high standard.

Exports of Horses 1897.

The following article, an editorial in the Spirit of the Times May 8th, shows that the European demand for horses bred in the United States is large now, likely to increase into such proportions as will bring the business of horse breeding into its old-time standing.

As is stated in the article: "The value for American bred horses for general utility purposes is recognized by all persons and breeders will do well to cater to this demand."

Great Britain being by far the largest purchaser it is well to bear in mind that a very small proportion of the 19,350 that were shipped there were fast trotters. "Useful horses," those which are likely to perform well in any of the many branches of business in which horses are used, from the "cob" to the "machiner" will meet their requirements. Well-formed horses, of good solid colors, bone and tendons in proportion to their size, good feet, etc. "Blocky horses" that is horses of compact shape, muscular and short-legged, or rather, if there is any deviation from what would be considered the proper length of limbs it must be on the short side.

Absolute soundness is a sine qua non, and those who buy for the markets of Great Britain are, in the main, expert judges. If even the hocks are wide, if the set is wrong, or there is a tendency to roundness or puffiness of the joint, the animal with these defects would be rejected.

Farmers on this side of the continent can breed and rear horses at less expense than Eastern breeders, and, by selecting the very best for shipment, that will, in a measure, overcome the expense of the "long haul" to Chicago. Then there is a prospect that railway freights will be greatly reduced, there being an absolute assurance of competitive roads in the "near future." Carriage, coach horses, matched pairs that are too small for the carriage, but nicely matched and that can "step some" are sure hereafter to command prices that will well repay the cost of transportation from the Pacific, and when farmers pay proper attention to the selection of sires and dams, keeping in mind that size, color and shape of the progeny should, as far as can be secured, be uniform, whatever the aim may be, there will be more than a fair chance for making the business remunerative.

The demand for American bred horses for the English market is larger to-day than ever before, and the rapid rate at which the demand has increased in the past seven years is surprising. The United States custom records show that in 1890 England was put down as the destination of 220 horses, and the value placed at $91,785. In the following year England imported 399 horses, their declared value being $141,693. The trade steadily increased in the two years following, as in 1893 the English total was $204,035, or about two-sevenths of the whole value of the horse exportations of that year. In 1894, which was a low price year, following the panic of 1893, the horse trade showed decided growth, and the English figures for that year were more than double those of 1893. The continental trade also showed an improvement, and the story of the next three years is best told by the following figures:

NUMBER OF HORSES EXPORTED.
	1894	1895	1896
Great Britain .....	1,355	5,834	12,022
Germany .....	12	1,324	3,686

France .....		60,875	58,600
Italy .....	3,000	15,000	3,200

In 1897 England received from American ports no less than 19,350 horses of the declared value of over half a million sterling. If the rate of increase of the past few years is maintained the total for the present year will be about 26,000 horses. This does not include horses shipped from Canada, though many alleged Canadian horses are bred in the United States.

The value for American bred horses for general utility purposes is recognized by all persons, and breeders will do well to cater to this demand.

Not only has the English trade maintained a steady growth, but the Continental trade, with the exception of France, has been equally good.

The following is a summary from the official statistics of the custom service of the past year, showing the growth of the trade.

CATTLE.

Cattle Breeding in California.

SEVENTH PAPER.

The Mission San Francisco de los Dolores was founded October 9, 1776, Santa Clara January 18, 1777, San Jose June 22, 1797. San Diego, the oldest of the missions, was founded 1769, the last Sonoma, April 25, 1820. Twenty-one in all, the most northern the last named, San Diego the Southern point, but all within six degrees of latitude, none of them however, far from the coast line of the ocean, which gives a similarity of temperature and all favorable for the breeding of cattle, the only drawback being occasional dry seasons. In the early days of breeding the range was practically boundless, and nearly the whole dependence on natural forage little provision otherwise, if any, for cattle, sheep and "wild horses" and at the best a small stock of hay and grain for the most favored animals. The accumulation of stock from the date of the founding of the first Mission to 1825, fifty-six years, so that under the conditions which prevailed, it is a marvellous exhibition of the adaptability of the country for stock breeding. When it was decided to establish Missions in upper California, two expeditions were organized. One by sea to carry all the heavy materials and supplies, the land division to drive the flocks and herds. The information as to the numbers brought cannot be obtained, but from the following quotation it is not likely that many horses, cattle and sheep were brought.

"The land expedition was formed into two divisions Don Gaspar de Portalo, who had been appointed Military Governor of the new territory by Don Jose de Galvaez, the special agent of the King of Spain, appointed Captain Rivera y Moncado to take charge of the second. Rivera and his party, consisting of Father Crespo, twenty-five soldiers, six muleteers, and a party of Indians from Lower California, started from Villacata on the 24th of March 1768, and arrived at San Diego on the 15th of May. This was the first white settlement in Upper California."

Busy in establishing missions, five being founded in the first three years it is not likely that the breeding department received much attention until the others were well under way and whatever the number of the importations might be the following compiled from the report made by the Rev'd Walter Colton, Chaplain of the U. S. ship Congress, the first protestant Clergyman that resided at California, and the first Alcalde of Monterey after that port had been taken by Commodore Sloat, will show the enormous increase of stock in fifty years after the first settlement of the country. The report furnishes the basis for the following tabulation, that giving a better opportunity to understand the vast stockbreeding business carried on by the Mission Fathers than the long accounts from which the information was obtained:

Missions.	Cattle.	Tame Horses.	Broken Horses.	Working Oxen.	Mules.	Sheep.	Hogs.
San Francisco 1825	76,000	950	2,000	456	820	79,000	200
Santa Clara 1825	74,280	1,890	4,235	407	725	82,510	1,000
San Jose 1825	62,000	A 810	1,500	310	420	62,000
San Juan Bautista 1820	43,870	B 1,360	4,870			69,500
San Carlos 1825	87,600	1,800		365		7,500
Soledad 1826	36,000	C		300		70,000
San Antonio 1822	52,800	D 1,800	3,000	500	600	48,000	1,000
San Miguel 1821	91,000	1,100	3,000	170	2,000	47,000
San Luis Obispo	87,000	2,000	3,500		3,700	72,000
Total .....	610,550	17,740	22,105	2,508	8,265	465,640	2,200

A—Broken to saddle. B—Broken horses. C—Horses and mares. D—More horses and mares than any other mission. E—Mares and colts.

As additional evidence of the magnitude of the business, and also corroborative of the correctness of the count, Santa Clara Mission branded, in the year 1823, 22,400 calves, as the increase of that year.

In the report of the San Francisco Mission are included "84 stud of choice breeds," stud, in all probability, meaning stallions, the omission of the final s in stud a typographical error.

To show the riches of the missions the report states "one of the Fathers of this Mission (San Luis Obispo) took $100,000 when he left for Spain in 1828. "All the other Missions were equally rich in live stock" is the language used, and after making due allowance for those established after the close of the eighteenth century; Santa Inez, 1804, San Rafael 1817, and San Francisco de Solano de Sonoma 1827, the aggregate of the cattle in the twenty-one missions must have been in the neighborhood of 1,200,000. In a work published in San Francisco, "The Natural Wealth of California," 1868, says: "The present number of cattle in California is about six hundred thousand."

Quite a contrast when forty odd years before nine of the Missions had 610,550.

One of the most striking features of the table, however, are the vast numbers of working oxen. Two thousand five hundred and eight yokes on the nine big farms and that in a country where so little attention was paid to agriculture. The 11,740 "tame horses" and the 826 mules were saddle animals, and for draft purposes oxen held supreme sway. An argument in favor of doing a share of the work of the farm now with cattle as one of the like conditions still prevails. Comparative cheapness of the motive power. As the laborers were mostly Indians, the simple yoke in favor of the more complex harness, ease of management, less liability to accident suited their capacity the best.

The Missions covered a great many acres of the best part of California, giving practically the whole of the State, from the Golden Gate to San Diego, for a pasture field. This immense area was nearly all covered with the most nutritious grasses furnishing almost constant pasturage for nearly the whole year. The only period when the feed was poor was after the commencement of the rainy season, the rains spoiling the dry forage and the new was not far enough advanced to give sustenance. Still there was a reserve in the fat accumulated before the rains came, and then there was a choice of location from plains to hills, and though cattle would lose flesh it would not be long till the sunshine and warmth of that genial climate brought the herbage so far forward that it was sufficient to restore a part of the lost condition. Never grasses, indigenous to a country, so well adapted to keep herbivorous animals the year round on what nature supplied. Soon after the first rain fall Alfilerilla (fillaree) and wild oats in profusion. Burr-clover starting about the same time. Unless forced by a scarcity of wild-oats or fillaree cattle will not eat the green clover, but when fully ripened and strewn over the surface it is eaten with avidity, and when to a person unacquainted with the country its looks like bare ground it is covered with the small burrs and these contain minute seeds, rich in oil, furnishing so much nourishment that cattle will keep rolling fat when the supply is adequate.

Alfilerilla, to a stranger, looks like a weed akin to wild geraniums. Flattened to the ground, after it has got some of its growth, one would not expect such a mass of herbage as is disclosed when raised, and it, too, has seeds which are relished and highly nutritious.

But wild oats are, above all others, the dominating native grass of California. In the days of the Mission the whole country was an immense oat field in appearance, so strongly resembling the cultivated varieties that however close an observer an Eastern agriculturalist might be, from a little distance he would be unable to see any difference. Growing so high on the mesas that cattle would be hidden among the stalks, and even on the hills a luxuriant growth. When in "the milk" it has fattening properties almost beyond belief. Oxen which had been worn out with a long journey, after a few weeks run would trouble their owners to recognize them. When the seed was ripened in place of falling to the ground, as the cultivated varieties do, they are held firmly in the enclosing husk, and the straw so stiff as to keep upright until the rains come. Hay mow and granaries, forage and grain together, and these in fields measured by hundreds of square leagues. All these natural advantages made it possible for the padres to breed and rear these immense herds. The conditions which now govern are so different that a parallel cannot be drawn.

The big cattle and horse-breeding ranches of California of the present time are insignificant when acres and numbers of animals are the test, though to make amends there is about as great a difference in the characters of the stock. The success, however, of the Mission Fathers prove the adaptability of California for stock-raising, and so in that way be serviceable.

Notes.

Two cars of cattle were shipped from Petaluma to the Western Meat Co. on Monday last.

The Lakeview, Org. Examiner says: E. B. Edson, the Gazelle cattle buyer, has purchased 1600 head of Southern California cattle, 500 of which are for Mike Hartery of Tule Lake valley. Mr. Hartery will have them shipped to Montague and driven across the mountains to Klamath bunch grass. Here they will recuperate from the effects of the California drouth.

Kansas commission dealers are advertising in the San Francisco dailies to lay down oat hay in any large city in California for $17 to $20 per ton.

The recent rain fall has caused dealers to cut the price of hay both in this city and the interior. The best wheat hay is being retailed at $22, while inferior grades bring less money—oat $20 and alfalfa $16 to $17. There is some new hay in the market, but as yet it does nothing more than act as a governor of prices.

Miller & Lux sent in twenty-two carloads of cattle from their Kern county ranch to the tule pasture on the 16th inst.

Considerable feed for stock is being shipped from Humboldt county to the southern part of the State. The outlook throughout that State is reported as being very promising and pasture is fully up to the ranchers' expectations.

Thomas Groves, of Gonzales, Cal., has shipped over one hundred head of cattle to his mountain ranch in Monterey County during the past week.

Twenty-five carloads of cattle were brought into Stockton on the 16th inst, and transferred upon a barge where they were towed to Bouldin Island, where they will pasture this summer.

Alfalfa hay has been selling this week at Oroville, for $7 per ton in the field with farmers very reluctant to dispose of their crops at this figure.

Our correspondent from Honcut, Cal., writes: The Prewett cattle, 700 head, recently unloaded from the cars here to be driven to Merrimac are reported to be badly scattered. I am informed that only about one-half of the band reached the destination.

The sale of Mavericks held at Helena, Mont., last week, developed some brisk bidding, and a sale was ultimately made to Thomas A. Cummings, at $19.25 per head. They sold last year at $17 per head, and the price of this season is, with one exception, the highest on record. The mavericks consist of unbranded yearlings and upwards.

In a competitive show of beef breeds in England, a Shorthorn, a Devon, a Red Poll, a Hereford and an Aberdeen-Angus heifer were pitted against one another. The weight of each had been carefully registered from time to time. The final weighing test showed that the Red Poll had made a larger daily gain than any of the rest except the Shorthorn. In proportion to age and time of feeding the Red Poll also came out the heaviest of any except the Shorthorn.

Our Montana correspondent writes: It is reported that there will be a falling off of 40 per cent on beef shipments from Montana this season compared with that of last year. Southern stock growers are making a great mistake in not placing 100,000 head of cattle on Montana ranges this season. There is plenty room on our ranges in Custer county for 200,000 head more cattle. Things are not so bad as they were a few years ago, when we had 9,000,000 more cattle than we have now and an Irish friend of mine wrote me that, "Cattle are gone to the devil and the Chicago market has gone to h—l and I'll be there to-morrow."

It is a very common thing to come across dairy farmers, who commencing with a herd of native cows, have used first a Jersey sire, then a Short-horn, or Holstein, or Guernsey, or some other of the well known breeds. They do this under the mistaken notion that they are going to get a more profitable cow thereby, says Hoards dairyman. They are trying to get a little more butter through a Jersey, a little better flow of milk through the Holstein, a little more beef through the Short-horn, and a little more color in the milk through the Guernsey. All very nice in theory, but it is a theory that don't work. Almost invariably the herd goes down in dairy capacity and gains nothing for beef. It is "general purpose" with a vengeance. Much better and more profitable cows are produced where the breeding is kept "in line." If one starts with any of the four dairy breeds, Jersey, Guernsey, Ayrshire, or Holstein, he had better stay right by it, and under no circumstances cross in any way with the beef breeds. If the latter is done he will lose a good deal more in dairy capacity than he will gain in meat.

Feed on the tule lands was never better at this season of the year than at present, the recent flood tides having come in the right time to do a vast amount of good. Solano county seems to be the Mecca for stockmen, many thousands of cattle having been shipped here from other counties to be pastured during the remainder of the year. Local buyers have also purchased much outside stock and will do well.

Henry Miller was in Stockton during the latter part of the week superintending the shipment of a large band of cattle which passed through town on their way to the tule pastures on the river. Mr. McBride was in charge.

DAIRYING.

The Average Cow

"The average income from dairy cows in localities where the milk is sold to condensing factories is said to be about $38 a year. It sometimes runs as high as $75 to a cow, and sometimes as low as $25, but the general average is estimated to be about $38, says Hood's Dairyman."

If two things were better known by the farmers who keep these cows, there would be more of the $75 type and less of the low average $38 cows. These two things are:

First—That the way to raise the capacity of a herd of cows is to breed up. Too many dairymen think it is all in the feed. They do not realize that one might as well try to fatten a fanning mill by running oats through it as to get a profit from certain cows by costly feed.

Second—That the money a man has left after a year's work with a cow depends not upon her gross product, but rather on her net profit; for instance, we know of instances where one man received from a neighboring creamery not quite 100 per cent. more in gross returns per cow than another patron, but his profits per cow were six hundred per cent. more. What a change it would make in the fortunes of thousands of these cow keepers if they could be persuaded to look at things as they are and try to make dairymen of themselves. By their actions, at least, they proclaim that they think that the more a man spends for beefy cows and costly food and the less he spends for sound dairy knowledge the more money he will make.

The Raising of Calves.

Selection of Calves—In any case the calves from the best milking cows only should be selected for rearing. The herd bull should have a pedigree linking him to a family distinguished for milking qualities.

His points should indicate the possession of powers that do credit to his pedigree. If a calf with a big body at one, two, three or six months old be what is wanted, it had better be allowed to suck its dam. But if a calf having a large profit on its rearing at two years old and a large profit on its milking, or fattening, be the object sought for, then it should be reared another way. Where a calf is allowed to suck the cow, even for a few days, the cow is in a less contented condition to yield her milk to the hand for some weeks. The restlessness thus caused will tend to the lessening of the milk yield in most cases. The task of teaching the calf to drink is doubly difficult after it has acquired the habit of getting rations in the natural way. Invariably where a calf has been permitted to run with its mother for ten days, it will be found to go back, or at least fail to gain in condition for a fortnight or more, when a change is made to hand feeding. The checking of its growth and thrift at that early stage in its development entails more loss of possible profit in after years than a partial starvation when eighteen months old. The organs of digestion, whose functions it is to get for the animal all possible good out of its food, for maintenance, growth, beef, milk or work can never be injured with impunity. The treatment from the day of birth should be to preserve the assimilating power.

The First Milking—Milk from the first six milkings of the dam should be fed to her calf three times a day. The first milking is of medicinal as well as food value to the young calf. For two weeks the calf will not need, nor take, much besides the two or three quarts of milk of each feed. The milk should be fed as near the blood temperature, 98 degrees Fahrenheit, as practicable. After the lapse of a fortnight a gradual change can be best effected by putting skim milk, in gradually increasing quantity, with the whole milk till it is wholly substituted for it.

Sweet Milk—The skim milk should always be fed sweet. The sourness of milk is evidence that some of the feeding value of its sugar of milk (of which it contains, say 4½ per cent) has been lost by the change into lactic acid. Besides the sourness renders the food unsuited to the stomach of a yet tender calf. Sour feed favors growth in but two ways. The calf so fed will develop marvelous girth extension. "Pot bellied" is hardly sufficiently expressive of the enlargement from that cause. Then the growth of hair is effectually and speedily promoted. It becomes so strong in "stalk" that it stands out in daily protestations against that kind of food.

Warm Milk—The skim milk should be fed warm; blood heat is the best. Where no better convenience exists for the heating of the milk, hot water may be added with advantage. A feed of ice-cold milk, such as comes from the deep setting cans will leave the calf uncomfortable. That condition is but the evidence that indigestion exists and may easily be made partially permanent by a continuation of such injurious treatment. The power and practice of digesting and appropriating all that is possible out of its feed should be encouraged into a fixed habit, by giving the young animal only easily digested food in the best condition of preparation.

Regularity—Attention to strict regularity in the line of feeding and the quantity of milk given, is essential to health and safety as well as to profitable increase of weight. These points about the feeding of skim milk will apply to young pigs as well as calves. A gutty, thriftless hog is the necessary product of a careless and wasteful mode of feeding even excellent skim milk.

The Ration—To make up for the butter taken out of the milk in the shape of cream, some supplementary feed should be given with the skim milk. Linseed, oil-cake, cotton-seed meal, bran, oats and peas are all good. Bran is frequently mixed with chopped oats and peas, and fed raw in the milk. That practice is most objectionable, and frequently results in the loss of the full value of the grain fed, besides inflicting injury upon the calf by scouring. The better plan is to put the bran, and chopped oats and peas, with ground linseed in a dry state into a box conveniently placed within the reach of the calf. Between the ages of one and three weeks most calves will begin to eat the mixture. The chewing necessary to comfortable swallowing fits the food for proper digestion and prevents all risk of scouring from that cause. The chewing also favors the free flow in the mouth of a great deal of saliva needed to thoroughly digest the milk gulped down so hurriedly from the feeding pail. Linseed, oil cake or cotton-seed meal may be boiled or well scalded and mixed in a syrupy state with the milk. The composition of additional feed might be about equal parts by bulk of bran, oats and peas.

No fixed quantity per head for feeding need be mentioned. It has been found desirable to allow the calves to take as much as they care to eat. Handful of the best clover hay (and all hay for fodder should be cut on the green side) may be offered, and most calves will eat it with relish at a month old. As soon as grass can be got it should be given in liberal quantities after calves are three months old.

Notes

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is constantly on the look-out for all that may be of interest to breeders of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry, in fact all that is of interest to the up to date rancher.

The butter shipments from Humboldt last month showed a most surprising increase over those for the previous months of the year, being nearly three times greater than those of the preceding month, while a comparison with those for January and February make them appear insignificant. For the year so far the shipments have amounted to 618,465 pounds divided as follows: January 98,300 pounds, February 66,100 pounds, March 132,970 pounds and April 321,095 pounds. Other dairy products show a corresponding increase, there having been 575 cases of condensed milk and 395 dressed veal shipped.

Ranchers in the vicinity of Penn Valley have subscribed $1000 worth of stock in the new creamery which it is proposed to establish there.

A meeting of the directors of the Woodland Creamery was held at Woodland last week, at the office of the Secretary. The report was highly satisfactory to both the directors and stockholders.

The dairymen of San Luis Obispo County are reported as having disposed of their cattle at shameful prices. Some have been shipped to different parts of the State for feed and some have been let out on shares. Dairymen are very cautious to keep only a reasonable portion on hand and are trying to carry them through the season.

San Francisco buyers of dairy cows are in the Salinas Valley purchasing desirable milch cows. Good prices are offered for choice dairy stock.

Watch the cow which gradually declines in yield while her mates, under the same management, do not. Pedigree counts for nothing when a cow will not respond to good feed with a fair yield of milk.

In butter making everything is being sifted down to a business proposition. Dairymen make more money now than in the days when butter was higher because of more scientific methods, more creameries, more summer crops raised and better cows kept.

Failure will be certain to the dairyman who has not the gift of punctuality and he had better quit. No employment requires more method. Every part of the work must be performed every day, and almost the same hour in the day. Any variation is actual loss.

It has been again and again demonstrated that the less the butter is worked the better. If the granular system of churning is practised, and ample time given for the water to drain out, no wording will be needed, or only enough to bring the butter to a solid condition. If the buttermilk has all been washed out, there will be none left to work out.

SHEEP.

Where Are We At.

We have been spending many years in attempting to find out where we are at in the sheep business, and the more we study the question, the more confirmed we are in the belief that we have not made the advancement which this important branch of live stock industry demands. Years ago, it was predicted by well posted authorities that everybody would rush into the sheep business, and in a short time sheep could not be given away. We listened then to such talk as we do now when we hear it, with much amusement, and we have stoutly maintained, that if the right kind of sheep be grown, there would be no such dire calamity befall the sheep industry of the country.

We have always entertained the idea that the sheep that can be profitably grown without the aid of tariff tinkers, is the sheep that can stand up under all the vicissitudes of oppression. If the hog can be made the source of profit amid attacks of cholera and kindred complaints, when the only object sought is meat, why can not the sheep be made profitable when it yields its fleece as an additional source of revenue which the hog has not?

We are at a stage when the demand calls for the very best grade of mutton sheep. The mutton eaters are not only demanding it, but the high price of land is compelling the sheep breeders to breed and keep that grade of sheep, for they cannot afford to keep any other on land that will sell for $50 per acre.

We were once of the opinion that the largest sheep was the coming sheep, and we advocated largely the growing by flock masters of this class of mutton. We are still of the belief that this sheep is not without its purpose, its purpose being to build up the little common sheep and to make them presentable at trade marts. Once whilst visiting at the State Fair, and conversing with one of the leading breeders of short horns, he said, he would cheerfully give $5,000 for a short horn which would class in size with the elephant Jumbo, and we felt that this remark would be equally appropriate as regards sheep. The demand for large mutton has been greater in all the large meat centers of the West and Middle West the past season than for years. In fact, there were not enough of them in sight to fill the demand.

The sheep which in our opinion will be most in request in the near future is the sheep that will combine both quantity and quality of mutton. We have them in almost all the mutton breeds, and the breeder and feeder who can put them in the finest condition for the flock with feed and blood is the sheep owner who knows where he is at.

It would not be out of place for us to suggest that the breeder of sheep paint an imaginary typical sheep, and then breed to attain that end. Next to the introduction of good blood is the eradication of poor blood. If there is a sheep that fails to come up to the standard, cull him out and dispose of him. Keep the flock uniform. Care for them as you would a delicate child, and beauty will be stamped on the flock, and when sale day comes the owner will find where he is at.

Sheep and Wool Notes.

The losses among sheep men in California will undoubtedly be very heavy and the lamb crop will be cut very short. Heavy losses are reported throughout the Southern and Middle portions of the State, and the only escape from still heavier losses is for the sheep men to move their flocks eastward where fair pasture can be obtained.

Flock masters are always on the look-out for some feed which will enable them to fatten their sheep for market in the quickest possible time. A good plan which has proved very successful in the Eastern States is to give the following rations: Oil meal mixed with grain, of the former about six ounces, daily. It is an excellent plan to vary the feed; the following week give corn with the same amount of oil meal. Following that give peas oats with oil meal. This will make the due proportion of fat and lean meat, besides the sheep like it and they fatten very readily.

The very considerable increase in the consumption of mutton in this country was caused by the depression in the sheep industry. During the time of this depression thousands of breeders, desirous of going out of business, rushed their flocks to the markets, and mutton became a cheap enough food to induce many to purchase, who under former conditions, had not learned to appreciate it. The consumption will probably be still further increased by the higher price of beef, which will for several years be a more costly food than during recent years. Indeed, it is not at all unlikely that the demand for mutton will outgrow the increase in flocks, and the large marketing of lambs, for which, especially, the demand is strong, will delay a production equal to the requirements of the markets.

The sheepmen of northern Montana are preparing for their busy season and the arrangements being made all tend to show that the flockmasters expect the most prosperous year since Cleveland almost bankrupted them.

A lamb is considered to be a sheep so soon as it gets its permanent teeth. This is when it is about a year old generally, so that as a working rule a yearling lamb is to be set down as a sheep. In city restaurants, however, a sheep is a lamb all its life.

"Sugar lambs" is the latest fad. They come from Colorado and are fattened upon sugar beets and finished on corn. Some few were handled in this manner last winter, and it is said that the result was so satisfactory that next winter the most of the feeding will be done with the beets, says the Denver Stockman. As a material for a sugar factory, the beets are worth $1.00 per ton, but as feed for lambs and cattle they are said to be worth $4.50 to $5.00 per ton, and for cattle feed it is not necessary to take such care in producing as for sugar. There will be many thousands of acres raised this year, and a market is certain for all that can be produced. In northern California lamb feeders are particularly anxious to have a supply of sugar beets for next fall's feeding, and there is great interest in the experiments that have and are being made. "Colorado fed lambs" are already celebrated all over the world, and "Colorado sugar lambs" sounds inviting and should make even a greater hit.

Shear the sheep before sending them to market. There is no profit in selling the fleece at meat prices.

We learn from Stockton under date May 19th that the Valley Road brought in forty-three carloads of sheep from Angeola last night and unloaded them at the chutes on the water front. There were 6280 head in the lot and they will be shipped to Whiskey slough and pastured. The steamer A. C. Freese will take about half of them down on the barge Echo and expects to return before night after the others. There will be twenty-five carloads of cattle in from Merced this afternoon for transfer to the islands and on Thursday there will be about the same number of cars in from the upper part of the valley.

SWINE.

Feeding Pigs

Having stated in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN a couple of weeks ago, under the heading of "Feeding Milk to Pigs," that independent relation in the selection and use of foods will place a man on a high vantage ground, we shall now attempt to briefly explain our meaning of "independent relation."

All food compounds, whether for man or beast, can be divided into two elementary classes—carbohydrates and protein. Carbohydrate foods contain three chemical elements—carbon hydrogen and oxygen. These three elements chemically united in the life of the plant make all of the carbonaceous food; sugar is a pure carbohydrate, starch is another; the woody fibre in corn stalks, in oat or wheat straw and these when fed make carbonaceous food. The second element—protein or nitrogenous food contains four chemical elements—carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen. One of the most concentrated of nitrogenous food for the human body is eggs; cheese is another; skim milk, containing as it does the cheese of milk is nitrogenous; lean meat is also, and so too is blood. Among the foods fed to live stock are shorts, bran, oil meal, cottonseed meal, all of which are rich in protein, while of the rough foods, clover and alfalfa is the richest that we have. Remember that there is a broad distinction between Carbohydrates and Protein foods, that feed like bran, shorts, oil meal, clover and alfalfa hay all have the elements of nitrogen. In Germany the chemists at Experimental Stations have been at work for many years, feeding animals, with the view of ascertaining how much of these different kinds of food each should have, in order to make perfect growth and at the same time do it the most economically. If an animal body is naturally made up of certain proportions of Carbonaceous and Protein materials, does it not follow that we can so feed such animals as to maintain such proportions through life and waste nothing. The farmer may be feeding an animal injudiciously and perhaps would so continue did he not know something about this—that is to say: he may be feeding too much protein in proportion to Carbohydrates, or the opposite and thus not only wasting but failing in accomplishing the best results. The mason in preparing his mortar to be used in the building of a brick structure, uses certain proportions of lime and sand. Were either of these elements supplied in excess of its due proportion, the ingredients or the compound would not only be wasted, but if used the existence of the structure would be endangered. So it is with feed. The proper proportions of carbohydrates and protein must be supplied in order that there be no waste and that the best results will ensue.

The pig, when young, needs one pound of protein to each five pounds of carbohydrates and the farmer that feeds differently wastes more or less of his feed. In California, barley and Indian corn, generally speaking, supply the cheapest carbohydrates that can be procured. One hundred pounds of Indian corn contains over seventy pounds of digestible carbohydrates, while it contains but about eight pounds of digestible protein. If we divide eight into seventy-two, the product is nine, so that there is about one pound of protein to nine of carbohydrates in Indian corn—while the pig needs only one to five. This explains why Indian corn is not in itself a perfect food for the animal when young. Sweet skim milk is one part protein to two of carbohydrates—so that skim milk in itself is too rich in protein to feed alone. The best results, therefore, are obtained by mixing skim milk with the Indian corn, or barley, which is of similar nature to corn and make a perfect ration of the two.

As the pig grows older and is fattening, it needs less protein matter—the ratio being then one to eight, which is pretty near the proportions existing in Indian Corn. This explains why Indian Corn or Barley are such perfect and economical foods by themselves for fattening hogs and why they are poorer feeds alone for the younger animal. Protein matter goes to make red meat and muscle, while carbonaceous feed goes to make fat in the body, whether it be men pigs or babies—the principle is the same. Our bodies must be kept up to a temperature of ninety-eight degrees and to keep that heat in the cold months we eat carbonaceous foods, while to deep up the muscles of our bodies we eat eggs, lean meat, whole wheat, graham flour and materials of that kind. To make muscle for our live stock, such as the pig, horse or ox, we feed oats (which is rich in protein) bran, shorts, oil meal or alfalfa hay, with our rough fodder. This is best illustrated when attention is drawn to the well known fact that if a dog be shut up in a room and supplied with all the water it could drink and all the sugar or starch that it could consume—that it would live comfortably for a few days after which he would become emaciated, its muscles would shrivel, and it would die for want of protein food. If on the other hand it had been fed on cheese, lean meat and blood it would keep on in good health. Protein foods can take the place of carbohydrates, but carbohydrates cannot take the place of protein, so that we might with safety pick out protein feeds and get along with them, while we could not with the carbohydrates. But the difficulty is that protein foods cost more than carbohydrates. Straw is always cheaper than bran because it is more easily raised and so it is with other protein foods and they therefore have a high market value. Nitrogen is an expensive element wherever produced. The problem of rational feeding therefore is in combining the two elements—carbohydrates and protein—in proper proportions needed and so as not to use the expensive protein needed in greater quantities than is required.

Bran is one of the cheapest feeds we can buy to furnish protein. Nature, in growing the wheat grain, put the protein around the outside of the wheat grain; the inside is starch, and the ambition of the miller is to get into his flour as little of the protein feed as he can, much to the detriment, in consequence, of the human family. Our stock get the best part of the wheat grain.

If we were to sow a ton of starch upon our field hoping to get a fertilizer therefrom we would miserably fail, but in a ton of shorts or bran made from wheat lies about all the elements of fertility that there are in the wheat grain. Every farmer knows that the growing of wheat robs his land of fertility; it is somewhere in the grain, and if it is not on the inside of the grain it must be in the outside. If the miller puts all the starch in the flour, we must get the protein in the bran, and that fertility passes into the animal and goes into the body and then passes out in the excrement and we have the benefit of it in fertilizing the land.

Care of the Pregnant Sow

There is a prevalent opinion quite common among hog raisers that brood sows must not be fat, says a writer in Breeders' Gazette, but we are satisfied from our own experience and observation that more loss results from underfeeding and injudicious feeding than from overfattening. Liberal feeding of the right kind of feeds is desirable, for the reason that, other things being equal, the fleshy brood sow, at the time of farrowing is always best prepared to nourish and suckle a large litter. The same principle applies in the management of dairy herds. A good suckling animal always makes milk, not only from the daily ration consumed, but draws upon stored flesh of the body as well, and the surplus of flesh fortifies the dam for this task, which is always severe. The important point to be observed in the management of brood sows, however, is the supply of suitable feed and exercise. They should be so handled that they will be obliged to take daily exercise; and it is especially important that during the latter part of the period the grain ration consists largely of bran, oats, shorts, oil-meal or something of that character that is laxative and nutritious and not heating. In this connection there is no more valuable adjunct to the brood sow's rations than roots, both prior to and after farrowing. We invariably advise the practice of root-feeding to all brood sows on the farm, and are abundantly satisfied with its results. The opinion is also prevalent to some extent, that brood sows cannot be fed on the droppings of fattening cattle without injury, but there is no practical foundation for this belief provided some roots and nitrogenous grain-feed be furnished in addition. In many cases, however, we have seen good results where they have had practically no other feed and the cattle being fed almost exclusively on corn. It is best, however, to properly supplement this ration. When sows are handled as outlined above, a fair degree of flesh is beneficial rather than injurious.

Notes.

There are several good breeds of hogs. Select the breed you prefer and stick to that in breeding up. Few good results are obtained by cross breeding.

Select a boar with a good chest, feet, back, loins and ham, and one of a pedigree that traces back through families that have the same characteristics and that have the faculty of transmitting them.

Don't keep the hog too fat in the summer and give him plenty of shade and pure water. The feeding should be done on a clean place. Regularity of feeding is important, but if there is good pasturage there is little need of feeding.

What the English call "a bacon pig" is lighter than the most marketable hogs in this country, as the weight of the "bacon pig" is 160 to 200 pounds. They are said to bring the best prices. The feed recommended consists of rye, peas, barley and shorts. It produces the lean meat preferred in this country as well as in England.

In selecting young sows to be used as breeders, take those that are well developed, and that feed well and thrive on their feed. These things indicate a good constitution and good digestion with ready assimilation of food, qualities that will be valuable inheritances of their offsprings. These qualities are necessary to early maturity, now so highly prized and always so valuable in all classes of live stock especially in those that are raised for the meat market.

POULTRY.

Why First Crosses are Desirable.

So much has been written from time to time in poultry journals upon the desirability of first crosses without exhausting the subject that further discussion does not appear out of place. It is a well established fact that the largest, fleshiest and most hardy specimens of the market fowl have been secured by crossing. Short-sighted breeders of pure bred stock oppose the teaching of these facts and try to dispute and argue them down, with little or no satisfaction to themselves. Writers who preach the doctrine of pure bred only, are seriously injuring the development of this important industry more than they are helping it and virtually are going back on both the farmer and producer. If poultry raisers could be converted to these views, taught how to avoid the evils of and how to realize the greater profits to be gained from choice pure bred breeding birds, the demand for stock would increase one hundred fold.

No one believes more in the value of pure bred birds than we do, or the importance of insuring their distribution throughout the country. The producer would be in a very bad boat without pure breeds to draw on. We are, however, strongly of the opinion that the practical raiser, one who simply raises for the market, does not make the best use of his pure breeds if he does not raise crosses. The market producer who also sells pure bred stock and eggs for breeding purposes, if successful, probably gains more than he loses by refraining from crossing. The producer of either eggs or poultry for market, who owns pure breeds and does not cross them, is in our opinion not making the best of his opportunities and is decidedly behind the times. It requires undoubtedly more knowledge to do it right, but why not acquire it? If he does not adhere to the proper course the results will be disastrous; it is much easier to sail along with pure breeds, perhaps, but we believe the game is worth the candle. The trouble heretofore has been that those who have tried it, had but a slight knowledge of how it should and should not be done.

When crossing is followed, it is wise to use pure bred birds on both sides. The first cross produced should not be bred from, but should be marketed or only for egg production, except when females are to be graded up. These birds are usually such fine specimens, that although the raiser is told never to breed from them, especially from the females, he is tempted to disregard this advice, and the result after one or two seasons is that he has the most inferior lot of fowls he has ever owned. First crosses may be depended upon, but second or third crosses or fowls mixed indiscriminately deteriorate very rapidly. The pure bred has a strong influence in one direction. When two breeds are crossed each has a strong influence on the progeny, which is like both. Crossing destroys this influence. The cross progeny have little prepotency; there is little strong influence in any one direction.

All sorts of ancestral influences effect their progeny and there is no uniformity. Cross-bred males are worthless for this reason, no matter how choice they may look they are almost sure to produce inferior stock. There is a wrong way to cross as well as a right way, and the former course is the worst in breeding. If this plan is adopted, be sure it is done in the right way, then the evils will be avoided and the benefits secured.

Notes.

Do not feed stimulating feed to poultry now.

Poultry can not be kept healthy on wet ground or in damp houses.

Hatch the guineas under common hens, they will be gentler.

A dusty house is not so likely to be infested with lice.

Make the hens scratch for a living by scattering their grain.

Little chickens do not need food twenty-four hours after scratching.

A capon is equal to a turkey as a table fowl.

Red pepper is only a temporary stimulant and increases the appetite only a short time.

Old geese should be kept for breeding and the surplus goslings marketed as soon as possible.

For keeping fowls in good health in small rooms their quarters should be kept clean and be occasionally disinfected.

Thoroughly scalded ground feed will give better results than feeding it raw wet up with cold water or milk.

One point in favor of the white fowls is that when dressed the pin feathers do not show as plainly as the black breeds.

Beware of over-feeding; it is variety of feed and shell-producing articles that bring the best results, the quantity must be determined by the condition.

While hens may readily get too fat to lay this will rarely be the case with pullets and it will pay to feed them liberally, even when on a good range.

Whole wheat is the best grain for laying hens at this season and where they have a good range is almost the only grain that is actually needed.

With matured fowls those weighing not over four or five pounds will sell readily and bring the highest price, and it will pay to sell when this weight is secured.

The perfect and rapid development of spring chickens depends greatly on the start they get.

Twisted combs in fowls is often caused by the hen being allowed to cover the chickens after they should have been left to themselves.

If a chick has once been chilled, no matter what excellent care it may afterward receive, it will never thrive as it would have done otherwise.

Some decomposition is necessary in order to make the droppings most available. The best plan is to mix a little fine soil with it as it is gathered up, let stand in a vessel a few days, when it will be in a good condition for use and can be applied to a good advantage either in the hill or as a top dressing.

There is no good or sufficient reason for landing one variety to the skies and condemning others as worthless. Nearly or quite all breeds have their excellencies and at the same time have their drawbacks, so that there is no breed that excels in all things that are needed in fowls. Up to eight or ten weeks of age there is practically no difference in the growth of chickens of different breeds. But as layers of eggs, or as table fowls, there is a considerable difference but no one breed excels in both these items.

A capon is considered nearly or quite equal to the turkey as a table fowl. A cockerel that at eight months old would weigh five pounds would if caponized in good season will with the same amount of feed weigh eight pounds and would bring nearly or quite double the amount and of course would be considered more profitable. The art of caponizing is not difficult to learn and a little experience is needed. But to make the most out of them one must be reasonably close to a good market.

While cholera may be almost impossible to cure once a fowl is infected, yet in a majority of cases the loss may be considerably lessened by proper precautions to prevent its spreading. It is very contagious and at the first indication the sick fowls should all be separated from the well ones and put to themselves and the quarters thoroughly cleaned up and thoroughly disinfected. One of the most common ways of spreading the disease is by the excrement, hence the necessity of thoroughly cleaning up as soon as the disease is noticed among the fowls. Coal oil is a good remedy if given in the first stages of the disease. All things taken into consideration, hydrosulphite of soda dissolved in water is as good a remedy as can be used. Some give small doses of laudanum. Some venetian red or Spanish mace. But with all there will be more or less failures to cure and this with the fact that once it gets fairly started in a flock it is difficult to eradicate all reasonable care should be taken to prevent its development.

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climatic and crop conditions is based upon reports received from nine Weather Bureau Stations, fifty-two telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company and many reports scattered throughout the State received from correspondents in their districts.

The heaviest rainfall, except one, since January and in some sections the heaviest of the season, occurred in California at the close of the week. Over an inch of rain fell at a number of stations in the central and southern coast portion. At Los Angeles the rainfall amounted to 1.46 inches. The rainfall in excess of the normal varied from about three-quarters of an inch to one inch and over, except on the northwestern coast, where the rainfall was below the normal about one-tenth of an inch. The rain breaks the long drouth and while too late to be of much benefit to the chief agricultural interests, reinforces the water supply, and will in many ways be of the utmost advantage. The temperature has been below the normal, and the weather generally cloudy. The cold, cloudy weather has been beneficial to whatever late sown grain is still alive; summer fallowed grain is heading out and some patches will yield a fair crop. All hay that was cut was damaged somewhat by the rain. Owing to heavy rainfall, beans will probably be planted. The rain has greatly benefited beets.

Shasta County.—Vegetation not suffering so badly here as elsewhere. Figs are doing well. Cutting alfalfa; fair crop. Rain Saturday and Sunday will benefit grain and vegetables.

Butte County.—Horticulturists busy irrigating. Showers along the higher foot hills. Feather river two inches below low water mark last year and falling rapidly.

Placer County.—Haying in full blast; about three-fourths of a crop. Cold weather filling wheat and barley nicely, and these now promise average yield; fruit doing well.

Yolo County.—Rain very beneficial to fruit and late sown grain, but will damage cut hay.

Sacramento County.—Heavy rain will injure cut hay but benefit grass, grain, orchards, vineyards and hop fields, which show need of moisture.

Solano County.—Cool, cloudy weather beneficial to late sown grain and all fruit. Cherries improving. Heavy rain Saturday and Sunday may damage hay, but otherwise will be beneficial. Only enough hay cut for home use; expect half crop of barley and summer fallowed wheat.

San Joaquin County.—Half an inch of rain; will do very little damage, as but a small quantity of hay was cut; will benefit growing grain and late fruit; prospect for plums and pears good; apricots and peaches a failure.

Stanislaus County.—Rain and cool weather will make fair crop on summer fallow; winter sown grain will make straw. Grain and hay inside canal limits doing well. Considerable hay in shock during storm.

Merced County.—Wheat heading out on summer fallowed land and some patches will yield fair crop if cool weather continues two weeks. About nine-tenths inch of rain Saturday will do no particular good to grain and will damage some hay just cut.

Fresno County.—Rain helped growing grain; no damage to cut hay. Fruit trees doing well. No apricots or peaches. Grape vines sprouting. Rain will make hay of some wheat; otherwise a total loss. Thrips not doing damage expected.

Kings County.—Deciduous fruits will be almost a total failure on account of severe frost March 17th. Not much hay damaged by rain. Feed prospect good; full crop of raisins.

Tulare County.—Rain Sunday will probably injure dry feed and hay. Some grain in irrigated sections will be cut for hay. Prunus Simoni and peaches doing well; orange trees set full.

Kern County.—Rain beneficial to growing grain. Bulk of first crop of alfalfa cut and cared for. Cutting grain hay on irrigated lands. No apricots, peaches or almonds. Good crop of grapes.

Lake County.—Rain did more damage than good; first crop of alfalfa nearly cut and hauled; yield fair. Some grain hay being cut. Grain crop will be three-quarters of normal yield. Vines are very thrifty and making excellent growth. Fruit trees look well, but the fruit crop is short. Not much pasture except along the lakes.

Sonoma County.—Last sown grain very light. Apples, pears and prunes good; peaches and cherries light. Rain Sunday damaged volunteer hay already cut; great benefit to everything except range feed.

Napa County.—Fruit doing well. Cherries not far enough along to be injured. Grapes promise a fine yield. Hay short, but good quality. Grain not over half crop. Corn doing well.

Alameda County.—Rain will do much good to beets, fruit, hay and grain. Black Tartarian cherries blighted badly. Dry feed injured. Vegetables all in.

Santa Clara County.—Fruit trees continue to look well in most parts of valley. Cherries ripening rapidly, but small; in some places they will probably not mature.

San Benito County.—Cool, foggy weather benefited hay. No grain will be harvested. Prunes doing well. Light crop of peaches and apricots.

San Luis Obispo County.—Fair horses sold for $1.25. Cattle nearly all sent out of county.

Santa Barbara County.—One inch of rain Sunday, too late for grain. If sufficient rain falls grain will be planted. Apricots and walnuts setting well but large proportion will probably drop.

Ventura County.—One inch of rain Saturday followed by heavy west wind which dried the ground. Late barley and fruit benefited, grain and beans too far gone.

Los Angeles County.—Basset. One and a half inches of rain. Hay on ground will be damaged, but more good than harm. Duarte. Heavy rain of great benefit for irrigation. Los Angeles. Heavy rain; great benefit to beans, sugar beets, corn and all crops. Palmdale. Showers will start pasture; fine crop apples, pears and small fruits. Fernando. One inch of rain, will greatly benefit fruit; hay and grain all dried up. Moving stock. Pomona. One inch of rain greatly benefited orchards and beets.

San Bernardino Co.—Rain helped feed and in some places hay and grain. Heavy rains in mountains have increased summer supply.

Orange Co.—Good rain. Some damage to hay, other crops improved. Farmers busy mowing hay. All fruit trees looking well.

San Diego Co.—Heavy crop of prunes, plums and apples.

Eureka summary.—The dry weather was beginning to affect grass and grain, but the late rains gave impetus to all kinds of crops.

Los Angeles summary.—Cool, cloudy weather favored crops. Week ending with rain, which will benefit feed, trees and root crops, besides adding to water supply.

THE MARKETS.

Reports of Butchertown, Western Meat Company Refrigerated Meats, Local Wool, Hides, Tallow, Butter and Cheese, and Eastern Cattle Markets by Telegraph.

EASTERN LIVESTOCK MARKETS.

CHICAGO, May 19.—Cattle ruled 10@15c lower. Stockers and Feeders $3.90@4.65; Cows and Heifers, $3@4.65; Bulls, $3@4.25; Calves, $6@8.85.

The market opened weak and prices broke 10@15c. Trade was active at the decline. Bulk of sales, $4.30@4.55; Lights, $4.50; Packers, $4.15@4.42; Pigs, $4@4.25; common to choice, $4.20@4.50.

Yesterday's advance was well sustained to-day for Sheep. Clipped Sheep $3.50@4.40; Western Feeders, $4@4.30; Clipped Lambs, $4@4.40; Woolled Lambs, $4.90@5.45.

Receipts—Cattle, 16,000; Hogs, 58,000; Sheep, 20,000.

SHEEP—Receipts, none. Market unchanged.

BUTCHERTOWN.

Arrivals of all grades of cattle at butchertown continues very heavy, and this has a depressing effect in holding prices down. Our quotations are a fair indication of market prices, though at times throughout the week our prices have been made. We do not look for any immediate change in the beef market; in fact, it is highly probable that prices will have a further set back before a further improvement will take place.

MUTTON—Shipments of sheep this week have not been so heavy and on the strength of this prices have slightly stiffened; there is, however, plenty of stock to meet all requirements.

CALVES are coming in plentiful both as regards range and dairy, the demand is good and prices steady.

HOGS—the demand for hogs this week has much improved, and good hard grain stock is readily bringing over figures. The condition of the Eastern market is reported as very strong with a sharp upward tendency, and we look to higher prices in our local market at any moment.

STEERS—First quality, very choice, 6c; Steers, No. 1, 6@6 1/2c; Steers, No. 2, 5 1/2@5 3/4c; Steers, No. 3, 5@5 1/4c. Extra choice Cows and Heifers 5 1/2@6c; Good to Fair, 5@5 1/4c; Buns, stags and old cows, 4@4 1/2c; Calves, choice range, large, 4@4 1/2c; Dairy, 6@7c; Wethers, first quality, 8@8 1/2c; Wethers, second quality, 7 1/2@7 3/4c; Ewes, first quality, 8c; Ewes, second quality, 7 1/2c; Lamb, yearlings, —; Lamb (this Spring), 8 1/2@9c; Hog, dressed hard, 5 1/2@6c; Hogs, live, hard, medium, 4 1/2@4 1/4c; Hogs, live, hard, heavy, 3 7/8@4c.

REFRIGERATED DRESSED MEATS.

There is no change to report in refrigerated dressed meats this week. Stocks are plentiful of all grades of cattle, veal and sheep. Hogs have advanced on the hoof a good deal and are in good demand.

Beef carcasses, prime, 10@11c; beef carcasses, second quality, 9 1/2@10c. No. 1, Cows and Heifers, 5@5 1/4c; No. 2, Cows and Heifers, 4 1/2@5c; Mutton, Wethers, carcasses, 6c; Mutton, Wethers, carcasses, No. 2, 7@7 1/2c; Mutton, Ewes, carcasses, No. 1, 7 1/2c; Mutton, Ewes, carcasses, No. 2, 6 1/2@6 3/4c; Lamb (this year's Spring), 8 1/2@8 3/4c; Veal, light, 5 1/2@5 3/4c; Veal, heavy, 4 1/2@5c; Pork, carcasses, 5 1/2@6c.

HIDES AND SKINS.

The recent reports contained in the last two issues of the BREEDER and SPORTSMAN, regarding the condition of the local hide market has turned out precisely as we stated. Local dealers are at last compelled to raise quotations all along the line and prices are advanced a strong half a cent on all grades of hides, including calf and veal. We look for a further improvement as the Eastern market is very strong, with an upward tendency. The demand from tanners is reported quite good and they are ready to pay the increase in values for desirable stock.

WEIGHTED HIDES—Heavy Steers, over 500 lbs, 10 1/2c; culls, 9 1/2c; Medium, 48 to 500 lbs, 9 1/2c; culls 8 1/2c; Light Steer, under 48 lbs, 9 1/2c; culls, 8 1/2c; Heavy Cows, over 50 lbs, 9 1/2c; culls 8 1/2c; Light Cows, 30 to 50 lbs, 9 1/2c; culls 8 1/2c; Stags, 6@7c; culls 5 1/2c; Kids, 9 1/2c; culls 8 1/2c; Veal, 9 1/2c; culls 8 1/2c; Calf, 10 1/2c; culls 9 1/2c; Dry Hides, 16 1/2c; culls, 13 1/2@14c; Dry Kip and Veal, 16c; culls, 13c; Dry Calf, 18@20c; culls, 15@16c. Hides, large prime, $2.50 each; medium, $2; small $1.

TAILS—Large size 35 cents per dozen.

FEELS AND SHEARINGS—20@30c each; do, short, 4@70c each; do medium, 70@90c each; do, long wool, 3@1.30 each; Deer Skins, summer, 2@30c; do, goat, medium, 20c; do, winter, 10c per lb; Goat skins, 30@37 1/2c; do, large prime to perfect; 1@20c for damaged and 1@10c each for Kids.

TALLOW—We quote: No. 1, Rendered, 3@3 1/2c per lb; No. 2, 2@2 1/2c; Grease, 1 1/2@2c per lb.

WOOL REPORT.

Nothing but extreme dullness is noticeable in the local wool market, and nothing has transpired so far which will permit of our giving any absolute figures for spring wools. Considerable wools are coming in and going into warehouse; in fact, we may say that the only activity noticeable in the warehouses, where grading the new clip is going. We quote:

CALIFORNIA FALL CLIP—Plains, 6@9c; Mountains, 5@12c; Northern, 11@13c; and Northern defective 8@10c; Mendocino and Humboldt, 15@16c.

NEVADA SPRING—Light and choice, 10@13c.

OREGON SPRING—Eastern choice, 12@14c; Eastern poor, 10@11c; Valley choice, 14@16c; Valley low grade, 12@13c.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

BUTTER—The tone of the butter market is in much the same condition as reported by us last week. The recent rains have materially improved the outlook for green feed throughout those portions of the dairy districts of the State. The stocks of packed butter in the city are very light and what packing has so far been done has come mostly from the creameries and little, if any, has been shipped. We quote:

Creamery extras per lb, 20@21c; firsts, 19 1/2@20; seconds, 18 1/2@19c; Dairy select, 19@20c; seconds, 19@—c; Dairy soft and weedy, —@—c; Mixed store, 16@17c; Creamery in tubs, 19@22c; Pickled roll, —@—c; Dairy in tubs, —@—c; Firkin, Cal., choice to select, 19@21c; Firkin, common to fair, 17@18c.

CHEESE—Owing to a number of good sales this week stocks have been very much reduced, yet there is ample on hand to meet all requirements. The better qualities are bringing over full figures and have at the close of the week an upward tendency. We quote: California per lb, Cheddars, 10@11c; Flats, mild, new, 9@9 1/2c; fair to good, 8@8 1/2c; Young America, 10@11c; Eastern, New York Cream Cheddars and Flats 12@13 1/2c; Western, 1 1/2@12 1/2c.

EGGS—The upward tendency we spoke of last week in the egg market has been realized. There has been a sharp advance of 1 to 1 1/2c per dozen with a strong market at increased quotations. Arrivals of the domestic product has been very light and offerings of Eastern scarce. The market closed firm.

We quote: California Ranch, 15@16c; California Store, 13 1/2@14 1/2c; Eastern, 14@15c; Duck eggs, 16c.

POULTRY—The market continues to remain over-supplied with old poultry and quotations are slightly reduced. The heavy arrivals are no doubt due to the high price of feed, and farmers are shipping their old poultry freely to market; prices, except for young choice hens, are reduced all around.

We quote: Old Roosters, per doz, $3.25@3.50; young, $2@9; Fryers, $5.50@6.50; Broilers, large, $4.50@5; small $2.25@3; Hens, $4@5; Ducks, old, 2, 2@7.5; young, $3.50@5; Turkeys, live, Hens, per lb, 11@11c; Gobblers, 10@11c; dressed, per lb, 13@14c; Geese, pair $7@8; Goslings, pair, $1.25@1.50; Pigeons, young, $1.25@1.50; do, old, $1.

Eastern Poultry—Old Roosters per doz, $4.50@5.75; Hens, $5@5.50; Fryers, —; Broilers, —; Young Roosters, —; Ducks, $4; Turkeys, per lb, 11c; Geese, pair, $2.

WHEAT—The downward tendency continues here and all along the line. There is very little doing here in California wheat, for the reason there is very little to do with. The bulk of stock is coming from the north. Time water quotations are as follows: $1.67@1.70 for shipping and $1.75@1.80 per ctn. for milling.

HAY—Receipts of Hay continue to come in more freely. Old hay is still held very firm. New wheat sold at $1.70@20; new oat, $1.50@16; straw 75c@1.

(Box-car in round lots)—Wheat, $2.00@25 per ton; Wheat and Oat, $2.00@23.50; Oat, $1.50@10; Barley, $1.6@18.50; compressed Wheat, $2.1@24; compressed Oat, $1.1@20; Alfalfa, $1.2@13; Clover, nominal; Oregon Timothy, $1.1@18.

FEEDSTUFFS show no change. Rolled Barley, $2.29 per ton; Oatcake Meal at the mill, $3.1@3.50; Jobbing, $3.2@3.50; Coconut Cake, $2.4@2.5; Cottonseed Meal, $2.8@30 per ton; Cornmeal, $2.4@50; Cracked Corn, $2.6.

STRAW—75c@1.05 per bale. It is scarce and firm.

BRAH—$17.50@18.50 per ton.

MIDDLINGS—$21.50@23.50 per ton.

FLOUR—Has advanced. Net cash prices are: Family extras, $6@6.10; Bakers' extras, 5.75@5.85 per barrel.

MILLSTUFFS—Prices in sacks are follows, usual discount to the trade: Graham Flour, $3 per 100 lbs.; Rye Flour, $2.75 per 100; Rice Flour, $6; Cornmeal, $2.50; extra cream Cornmeal $3.25 Oatmeal, $4; Oat Groats, $4.25; Hominy, $3.25@3.50; Buckwheat Flour, $4.1@4.25; Cracked Wheat, $3.75; Farina, $4.75; Whole Wheat Flour, $3.25; Roiled Oats (barrels), $3.80@5.20; In sacks, $5.60@6; Pearl Barley, $4.75; Split Peas, $4.25; Green Peas, $4.50 per 100 lbs.

BEANS show but little change except whites, which are higher. Bayos, $2.90@3.05; Small Whites, $1.95@2.50; Pinks, $2.55@2.75; Reds, $2.75@3; Blackeyes, $3.50; Butters, $1.65@1.75; Limas, $3.15; Pea, $2@2.15; Red Kidneys, $2.65@2.85; Large Whites, $1.90@2.05 per ctn.

Veterinarians Know its Use.

POMONA, Cal., June 7, 1897.

Since I have practiced my profession (Veterinary Surgeon) in this place I have had occasion to prescribe "Gombault's Caustic Balsam" contrary to my usual method of practice, which is to avoid the use or recommendation of any proprietary medicine, but experience has shown me its value. When I came here in '93 the remedy was unknown. I think if I can make some arrangement with you for an exclusive agency for this community I can push the sale of the same in a way that will be highly satisfactory to you and profitable to myself. If you will come to some understanding with me, please advise me of the terms you are willing to give.

WALTER P. KELTY, V. S.

THOUGH the club did not have much time, forty-three horses are entered for the American Derby, to be decided at Washington Park, Chicago, this summer. The most promising are Lieber Karl, Plaudit and Traverser, who are already Derby winners at a mile and a quarter or over. The American Derby is a sweepstakes for three-year-olds (foals of 1895), $25 to accompany the nomination, $175 additional to start; $10,000 added, of which $2,000 to the second and $1,000 to the third horse. A winner of a three-year-old stake of the value of $3,000 to carry three pounds; of two such stakes, or one of $5,000, five pounds; of three or more three-year-old stakes of the value of $3,000 each, seven pounds extra Maidens allowed seven pounds. To be run the first day of the meeting. One mile and a half. The entries are: Linstock, Pingree, Depending, Sir Joseph Lister, Borgia, Traverser, Bromstene, Van Antwerp, Nuto, Eddie Jones, Surmount, Eva Rice, Bitter Root, Bangle, The Dauphin, Algareta, Fongovannah, Goodrich, Frank Thompson, Duke of Haven, Dr. Black, Plaudit, Gibraltar, Lizzie Cavalier, Bannockburn, Marcato, Mirthful, Warrenton, Pacemaker, Midian, Count of Flanders, Lieber Karl, Presbyterian, Alleviate, Ed. Farrell, Sacket, Isabey, John Bright, Hampden, Pink Coat.

THE OWNER of the English two-year-old "Neurastheniponskelesterizo" has named another of his two-year-olds "Alice Where Art Thou."

A Jockey With Merit.

Michael Hennessy, who left for Montana on Monday evening last, and will ride this season for Marcus Daly, the Montana Copper King, is a self-made man and one of the promising jockeys of the country. Born in Springfield, Mass., in August, 1867, he came at an early age to California, and being a lover of man's best friend—the horse—he found employment as an exercise boy with the well known turfman, J. B. Haggin. Hennessy, was then but a stripling of sixteen years of age, and after serving his apprenticeship with that stable, acquired sufficient confidence to ride and follow the California Circuit. It was then that the training he had received as an exercise boy with the Haggin stable showed itself and he won his first laurels on the turf by bringing under the wire such horses as Daisy D., Captain Al, Mero and other prominent horses of their day. He then accepted an engagement with Porter Ashe to go East, and during his two years contract with that gentleman rode the famous Geraldine to many successful victories. We find Hennessy, the following year employed by Otto Steifel, the St. Louis brewer, and he acquitted himself by putting in for his owner a very successful summer. The well known racing stable of Burns & Waterhouse, were the next to engage Mr. Hennessy's services.

As a steeple and hurdle rider, he has achieved considerable prominence, having brought to the front more winners in comparison to the amount of mounts than any rider of his time. Among the jumpers which we recall are Three Forks, with 170 pounds, 1 1/2 miles, in 2:17; Flashlight, winning with the latter at Oakland, a stake the first time he ever faced the sticks; five straights with J. O. C. etc. We have omitted the fact that Hennessy has ridden in the most prominent races throughout the country, viz.: The Futurity; he was also third on Briar Sweet, in the Great Eastern at 150 to 1; rode "Guido" to six successive victories at Garfield Park, and is credited with riding the winner in the last race which was ever run at that course on "Fakir," the property of Chas. Romal. There are few boys who are quicker in getting away from the post than Hennessy and as a judge of pace he is certainly in the front rank. We predict a season of prosperity for Mr. Hennessy under his new engagement, and are satisfied that a warm welcome will await him in California on his return next fall by the many friends he has left behind.

JUDGE J. H. TAMM, who purchased Lucky Star out of a selling race on Tuesday, sold the useful sprinter to B. C. Holly, who will take him to Montana.

HUGH JONES bought Adam Andrew and Pat Murphy from Atkin & Lottridge May 18th, and shipped them with the balance of his stable to St. Louis.

OCTAGON won the Toboggan Stake last year and again this. Irish Reel ran second to him on both occasions. Belmont has won this event four times, while no other stable scored more than once.

B. C. HOLLY has decided to drop off and try and win a purse or two at his old home, Colorado Springs, on the way to Denver.

The San Francisco Race Track Speculators.

The racing season which is now rapidly drawing to a close has been a disastrous one for the bookmakers and heavy plungers. But one pencil is a big winner on the season, and that is Joe Rose, who is fully $50,000 ahead on the three books operated by him. He and his confreres appear to be able to win where nearly every one else has failed. Rose is $25,000 winner in his own book, while W. Jackman, better known as "English Bill," is $20,000 ahead on a bank roll of $2,000 which Joe Rose staked him to originally. Jackman is a strange figure in the gambling world. When poolrooms were in full blast in this city ten or twelve years ago Jackman ran the proverbial "shoestring" up to $27,000, which he afterward lost in a few weeks. He has been "broke" for five or six years. Jack Atkins, who has been operating for Joe Rose the past month or two, is $5,000 to the good.

Pete Riley went away about $10,000 winner in the early part of the season. W. E. Applegate is also credited with winning a like amount, but he won the most of his money from the outside. John Humphreys, a very conservative bookmaker, Tom Hurlick and Phil Archibald are small winners, anywhere from $3,000 to $6,000.

But the array of losers is a most formidable one. George Rose is said to be $27,000 loser, although he was fully $40,000 behind on the season at one time. He paid a princely sum for the field book privileges at both tracks and they have not been remunerative this season and, in fact, have just about paid expenses. For a while George Rose operated three books and a fortune was gobbled up in a losing streak of a couple of weeks.

Maxey Blumenthal dropped a bank roll of $20,000, but he is still on deck. Barney Schreiber possibly quit $5,000 loser and John Coleman lost a similar amount, notwithstanding that he was $25,000 winner at one stage of the game. John O'Neil and Frank Eckert are about even on their operations, losing their winnings of $30,000 the latter part of the meeting. Joe Harlan let a bank roll of $10,000 slip through his fingers. Charles Walter, who has a penchant for laying the longest prices against horses that look to have no chance, was a consistent loser throughout the season and went home $20,000 to the bad. Sam Summerfield and George Wheelock were small losers, but nothing to speak about. Jack Newman of St. Louis got rid of $10,000. Hugh Jones and W. Cheppu are each probably $5000 loser by going on the block. W. Beverly is behind this year on his ring operations, which is quite a new experience for him. Herman Hoffman, the Anaconda Club, Ed. Wallace and Cesar Young quit loser. Every book that went on periodically during the season with a small bank roll fell by the wayside, with the exception of two or three noted above.

Charles Quinn was the only plunger on the outside who won anything to speak of. He went East $25,000 ahead of the game—Chronicle.

Plunger Ed Purser had a most disastrous season, but is supposed to have recouped some of his losses on Cromwell, who won at odds of 15 to 1 the other day.

Elie Perles, as usual, had access to more bank-rolls than any other layer of odds in this vicinity.

William Fitch made money on the block, but lost it back "on the outside."

The Sullivan-Harrison combination was credited with being $55,000 to the good at one time, but the impression prevails that they have lost about $25,000 of this sum.

At Castleton Stud, May 8th, Logical foaled a bay colt by Chorister. May 8th imp. Dutch Flag foaled a bay or brown filly by Tournament. May 9th imp. Edith (own sister to Melton) foaled a chestnut filly by Domino. This makes the fourteenth Domino for 1898.—Thoroughbred Record.

JOCKEY BEAUCHAMP, who has been riding Will Wallace's horses this spring, will leave him next month to fill his contract with Marcus Daly on the Montana circuit. The Wallace stable will probably have Will Woodward's boy, Dupee, as its jockey after the Louisville meeting.

COL. JACK CHINN and George Lindenberger undertook to have a little sale of their own on the quiet at the Louisville race track last Monday. The result is told as follows in the Courier-Journal:

"The thoroughbred sale at Churchill Downs yesterday morning proved to be a fiasco. Only a small number of purchasers were present, and when the owners of the horses saw how Mr. George H. Lindenberger's lot was going, they did not put theirs up for sale. Col. Jack Chinn said that he has a good pack of hounds at his farm and he would rather ship his colts back there to be killed for dogmeat than to take the prices that were bid. There were no bids at all on some of the offers, and the auctioneer was frantic. He implored the crowd to make just a small bid. 'If you don't start this one,' he yelled in desperation, 'I will start him myself, but it will be back where he came from.' A two-year-old Candelmas colt was purchased by Mr. J. H. Jones for $200. Mr. Bob Dorsey bought a two-year-old for $25. Desdmona, a young broodmare, was knocked down to Ike Frost for $35, and a gelding, O'Hearn, went to J. Weissen for $10. The last two gentlemen will use their purchases as buggy-horses. The four comprise the full list of purchasers."

At Fleetwood Stud, property of J. B. Tarleton, Esq., Missive, dam of Roseland, Marsian, Roslyn and Greatland, foaled a colt by imp. Aintree. Other recent foals at Fleetwood are:

Claret, brown filly by Portland.

Aileen, by George Kinney, brown colt by Portland.

Mr. Tarleton has a yearling out of Missive by imp. Aintree, which will be sold at the Fleetwood sales this spring. He is a chestnut in color, as are his great half brothers, and Mr. Tarleton says looks like the Stockwells.

Hadley, Mass.

I have used Absorbine for four years and I must admit that it is the article.

Yours truly, ROBERT E. RICHARDSON.

BOWLING BROOK, winner of this year's Metropolitan Handicap, is blind in one eye and his forelegs are bad. He has three more engagements at Morris Park—the Toboggan Handicap, for horses three years old and over, to be run over the Eclipse course on Thursday; the New Rochelle Handicap, for three-year-olds and over, at seven furlongs around the upper turn of the Withers mile, to be run on May 19th, and in the Belmont stakes, at one mile and three furlongs over the hill, which will be the feature of the last day's card. The Belmont is for three-year-olds exclusively, and in it Bowling Brook will likely meet August Belmont's Firearm, M. F. Dwyer's Previous, P. J. Dwyer's Handball, John E. Madden's Howland, Marcus Daly's Hamburg and one or two more of last year's good two-year-olds.—Thoroughbred Record.

L. P. TARLETON, the breeder of the two-year-old colt Greatland, by Blue Eyes—Missive, in speaking of that good youngster, said: "Greatland is a striking illustration of the inbreeding of the Lexington and Glencoe blood. His sire, Blue Eyes, although descended in the female line from Lexington's dam, was by Enquirer, whose dam was by Lexington. Missive, Greatland's dam, is by Congressman, by War Dance, the son of Lexington and Reel by Glencoe, while Saratoga, the dam of Congressman, was out of a sister to Pryor, by Glencoe. Then Missive's dam was by Daniel Boone, the son of Lexington and Magnolia, by Glencoe. In addition to all this, Greatland's fifth dam is the great mare Peytona, by Glencoe.—Thoroughbred Record.

THOMAS H. WILLIAMS JR. will take a summer's rest in Japan, but will return in time to attend to the details for the winter meeting.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 63,816.
Susie M. Lewiston, plaintiff vs. Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, send greeting to Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's failure to provide for more than two years last past for plaintiff the common necessities of life, said failure to so provide being caused by the idleness of defendant. Plaintiff also asks for the custody of the minor child, the issue of the marriage, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 14th day of April, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety eight.

Superior Court. C. F. CURRY, Clerk.
SEAL
San Francisco County, Cal.
Reel B. Terry, Attorney for Plaintiff, 401 California Street.

For Sale.

NASSAR, bay stallion, 15.1 hands high, weighs 1,100 pounds; foaled 1-191; sired by STAMBOUL, 2:07; dam OAKLAND MAID, 2:22 (dam of Princess, 2:19), by SPECULATION; second dam LADY VERNON, 2:29. NASSAR is a horse of size, style, finish and beauty of conformation, is bred in ultra-fashionable lines, a square-gaited trotter, and will be very fast. His sire was a race horse of rare quality and the sire of race horses. OAKLAND MAID, the dam of NASSAR, was in her day the Queen of the California turf, starting in 11 races and winning them all. Her produce have all been very fast. For further particulars apply to

OAKLAWN FARM

PARTISAN.

Partisan is a bay horse, foaled March 23, 1893, winner of first prize in class World's Fair, 1893; first, shown with sire, World's Fair, 1893; first, shown with sire, National Horse Show, New York, 1906; first, class 39, same show, 1896; second (Perfection, his sire, first), with get, same show, 1896; second (Perfection, first) in class, Chicago, 1897; second (Perfection first) with his get, same show, 1897. Partisan is a splendid type of the Coach horse, so much in demand, fit to compete in harness in any company; a very high actor, abundance of nerve and dash and one of the most impressive and successful sires ever bred. Some of the cracks of the Oaklawn Stud are by him. A sensation: horse in every way. He stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1275 lbs. Admirably suited to cross with trotting-bred mares. Forty other French Coach and French trotting stallions are FOR SALE AT OAKLAWN, bred in the best lines, grand individuals, high actors and many of them fast. Choice of 300 Percherons also. For price, terms and catalogues address

M. W. DUNHAM, Wayne, Ill.

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.
Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me as strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."
Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities. In having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a pacing-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electioneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Prince. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONTS.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

(REGISTERED 0232)

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

J. H. White's Stock Farm, Lakeville, Cal

TERMS—$25 FOR THE SEASON

SEYMOUR WILKES was sired by the King of the Wilkes family, Guy Wilkes, 2:15<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>, dam Early Bird, by Playmail (brother to Barney, 2:25<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>); second dam Lucy, by Odd Fellow (son of Chloroform); third dam by a son of Williamson's Belmont; fourth dam by Blackhawk 767. Playmail was by Mike 3403 (he by Vermont 322, out of the Peniger mare), out of Kate McDonough (dam of Ella Lewis 2:27, and grandam of Saladin, 2:05<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>).

SEYMOUR WILKES stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a seal brown in color, and in conformation is one of the most symmetrical of any in California. His qualities as a level-headed, game and speedy race horse are known to all horsemen. He is the fastest son of the mighty Guy Wilkes, and on his maternal side traces to the very best of sires and dams. He has an iron constitution, and all owners of good mares that want horses that will have breeding, size, bone, quality, good disposition and extreme speed should not overlook this horse. His service fee is placed at a very low figure considering his merits. He never was bred but to a few mares, and his progeny are models of perfection.

Mares can be shipped direct to the ranch via steamer "Gold." The best of care taken of them on the farm, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Pasturage $3 per month. For further particulars apply to

MUSKET.

The Stockwell of New Zealand, Sire of Carbine, Trenton, Nordenfeldt, Martini-Henry, Cuirassier, Brigadier, Maxim and Many Other Turf Celebrities.

THE COLONIES' MOST SUCCESSFUL SIRE

Musket—His Turf and Stud Achievements—A Horse With a Romance—His Blood in This and Other Countries.

The picture of the Stockwell of New Zealand, the dead hero Musket, graces our first page this week, and it is the first one of the greatest sire ever known in the Colonies that has ever appeared in an American paper, we believe. Musket had a romantic history of peculiar interest to the people of this country, because it was an American that saved his life. He was bred by the eccentric Lord Glasgow, in his day one of Great Britain's most famous breeders. The story goes that if Lord Glasgow did not like the appearance of a horse he would order it to be shot, declaring that it ought not be allowed to live to transmit bad traits to future generations. It was entirely owing to the intervention of the great American trainer, J. B. Pryor, who went to England to train for Richard Ten Broeck, that Musket's career was not cut short by a bullet in his early colthood. It was just after Mr. Pryor had severed his connection with the Ten Broeck stable in the tight little isle that he received an invitation to visit the stud of Lord Glasgow. That changeable old nobleman had taken quite a fancy to the American conditioner of gallopers and placed a lot of confidence in his judgment regarding horses, this being because of some incident that occurred in their dealings in horseflesh. While being shown about the farm Pryor saw a taking-looking dark bay colt by Toxophilite from a West Australian mare that struck his fancy immensely. To his amazement the superintendent of the farm informed the American that Lord Glasgow had picked this particular one, among others, to be destroyed. Astonished that a youngster of kindly appearance should meet with such an ignominious fate, Mr. Pryor sought Lord Glasgow without delay, protesting against the proposed slaughter in a most vigorous fashion, something that no one on the place dared do. Among other things he declared to Lord Glasgow that he was making the mistake of his life in ordering the dark bay Toxophilite colt shot, arguing that from his conformation the youngster was certain to make a racehorse of high class. The result was that the nobleman went out for another look at the racy-looking youngster that displeased him, and finally, to the gratification of Mr. Pryor, ordered that the colt be allowed to live. Lord Glasgow, however, never overcame his dislike to the horse that afterwards became known as Musket and which ran the following races:

MUSKET'S TURF CAREER.

As a two-year-old, in 1869, ran, but was unplaced.

As a three-year-old ran second at a mile to fids at Newmarket; won the handicap plate, 200 sovereigns, two miles, beating Graunale by four lengths, also Miss Polly; won the Flying Dutchman's Handicap, one and one-quarter miles, 280 sovereigns, at York, beating Viscount and Waterloo; won the Ascot Stakes, 505 sovereigns, two and a half miles, defeating Silver Band and Curio; won the Queen's Plate, 100 guineas, at Worcester, beating Dutch Skater and Blue Gown, latter winner of the Derby in 1868; won the Queen's Plate, 100 guineas, three miles, at Shrewsbury, beating Dutch Skater and Sornette by a block; won the Severn Cup, 390 sovereigns, two miles, at Shrewsbury, beating Cardinal York (winner of that season's Cesarewitch) at even weights; won the Great Midland Counties' Handicap, two miles, 371 sovereigns, beating Stanley and Bonny Swell.

As a four-year-old, ran second to Rosicrucian for the Alexandra Plate, three miles, 1,250 sovereigns, being beaten but three parts of a length, carrying 124 pounds; won the Midland Counties' Handicap of 720 sovereigns, two miles, beating Black Gown and several others.

As a five-year-old, carrying 132 pounds, he won the Alexandra Plate, three miles, 1,125 sovereigns, beating Albert Victor, Agility, Favonius and several others.

MUSKET'S STUD CAREER.

Put to the stud in England, Musket proved successful, his sons and daughters winning about 20,000 sovereigns. The best of his get there were Petronel (winner of the 2,000 guineas of 1880, the Epsom Stakes, four Queen's Plates, the Great Yorkshire Handicap with 124 pounds up and Doncaster Cup as a four-year-old, two Queen's Plates as a five-year-old), Rifle (winner of the Grand National Hurdle Race at Croyden), Brown Bess (winner of the Metropolitan Stakes of 1880 and Goodwood Stakes of 1881), Muscatel, Cartridge, Salute, Carina Filly, Ringleader II., Saloo, Sousie Queen, Warrior II., Caroline, Despotism, St. Bruno and Sallie Brass.

Musket was sold to a representative of the Auckland Stud Company in 1878, when 11 years of age, for something like $6,000, and brought to Victoria, where he remained until 1879, being then taken to Sylvia Park, Auckland, New Zealand. Afterwards the name of the company was changed to the New Zealand Stud Company and was kept intact until dispersion in the early '90's.

The success in New Zealand of the horse that was hated by his breeder so bitterly was simply phenomenal. Martini-Henry, about the first of Musket's get to go for the big stakes, won the V. C. R. Derby and St. Leger, the Melbourne Cup of 1884 and several other great races. Musket got the following great winners: A. J. C. Derby—Nordenfeldt, 1885; Victoria—Derby, Martini-Henry, 1883; Nordenfeldt, 1885; Canterbury Cup—Artillery, 1886; Maxim, 1887; Manton, 1888, and Tiralleur, 1889 (four years in succession by the sons of Musket) V. R. C. St. Leger—Martini-Henry, 1884; Matchlock, 1886; Volley, 1889. Champion Race—Matchlock, 1886; Carbine, 1889. A. J. C. St. Leger—Matchlock, 1886. New Zealand Cup—Manton, 1888; Tiralleur, 1889. Carbine, Musket's greatest son, is now in England, at Welbeck, the establishment of the Duke of Portland, and divides honors with the unbeaten St. Simon and St. Serf. Carbine won more money during his turf career than any other horse in Australasia, capturing thirty-three races and stakes worth $147,380. His performance in the Melbourne Cup has never been equalled. In that race there were thirty-nine starters, and he carried 145 pounds to victory over two miles of ground in 3:28. He was in the first division all the way and won off by his lonely. Australians love to speak of this performance, truly a wonderful one. In the first lot of Carbine to start in Australia was Wallace, who as a two-year-old lowered the seven-furlong record and as a three-year-old ran a dead heat with the Trenton mare Quiver at three miles, the fastest race ever run at the distance, bar one—faster than our Drake Carter's 5:24. Carbine cost the Duke of Portland 13,000 guineas. Trenton, who topped the winning stallions list in Australia one or two seasons, is also in England now, and cost something like $40,000. But we are digressing. Maxim, by Musket, for whom J. B. Haggin paid over $20,000, was nearly as good a race horse as Carbine, winning eight of his ten races, including Middle Park Stakes, Nursery Handicap, Champagne Stakes, Hawkes Bay Guineas, Flying Handicap, Canterbury Derby and Cup, and only being defeated by a small margin when he had just come off a long journey by boat and train. Others by Musket that achieved fame as racers in the Colonies were Mitrailleuse, Escopeta, Musket-er, Trenton, Necklace, Krupp, Carbineer, Ions, Miss Musket, Fusilade, Liuda, Tetford, Woodnymph, Tit Bit, Belle, Soudan, Rifleman, Torpedo, Industry, Ener, Waitiri, Derringer, Artillery, Brigadier, Richochet, Tamora, Bangle, Lady Alice, Fusileer, Revolver, Thunderbolt, Foul Shot, Rosebud, Snap Shot, Pearl Shell and Cuirassier (latter winner of the Great Northern Derby and Great Northern St. Leger, Summer Trial Stakes and Victoria Handicap). In short the get of Musket won in the colonies upward of 80,000 guineas, or over $400,000, and in England about $100,000. The memory of Musket (who died about twelve years ago) is kept green by the achievements of his grandsons and granddaughters and even his great grandsons and great granddaughters. By the last mail gallopers by Artillery, Medallion, Foul Shot, Nordenfeldt, Curassier, Trenton, Carbine and others of the Musket tribe were noted as winning good races, and Musket's name will go in history as the greatest sire ever known in the Colonies.

Very few of the sons and daughters of Musket ever came to America, the list comprising only Maxim, Artillery, Foul Shot, Lady Alice, Fusée, Platoon and Richochet.

Maxim got many good performers, such as Fleur de Lis, Miss Maxim, Napamax and Altamax, and when he died was one of the most highly prized horses at famed Rancho del Paso. In his native land Maxim got Blue Fire and Mannlicher, amongst other good ones.

Artillery, now at Rancho del Paso, will probably go back to his native New Zealand, where his sons and daughters are winning rich stakes.

Foul Shot, who is at Barney Schreiber's place, Woodlands, just out of St. Louis, has been in this country since about the 1st of July, 1895. R. E. de B. Lopez imported the horse and sold a three-fourths interest to Mr. Schreiber. By the last mail from Maoriland we observed that two Foul Shots won, and other winners by him before he left the land of his nativity were Aldershot, Proxytin, Docility, Stray Shot, Secrecy, Snapshot, Flying Shot, Mafia, Cloud Shot, Fish Oh, Nipa Pu, Miss Shot, Waylay, Bomb Shell, Grape Shot and Retrenchment, the dams of all those named above, except the mother of Aldershot, being half-breeds.

Lady Alice was owned, the last we knew, by P. Lorillard, Rancocas Stud, New Jersey, and the mare was mated with Argyle (when she was owned by Hon. L. J. Rose, her importer), to imp. Sailor Prince and Sensation.

Fusée (owned by John Mackey, of Rancho del Paso) was imported by Dr. W. G. Ross when in foal to St. Leger, at present the great sire of New Zealand. Later she was bred to the mighty Savior.

Platoon was foaled in England, and was owned at last accounts by Dr. A. W. McAlester, of Columbia, Mo.

Richochet, now at Clay & Woodford's Rummymede Stud, Paris, Kentucky, is the dam of a good winner of last season, but we cannot recall its name just at present.

It is claimed that $100,000 was refused for Nordenfeldt just a short time before he died, and his death was undoubtedly a great loss, but with such sons as Martini-Henry, Artillery, Foul Shot, Hotchkiss, Cuirassier, Chain Shot, Trenton and Carbine and such grandsons as Medallion, Uniform, Multiform, Strathmore, Zilinski, Sir George, Blood Shot, Bombshell, Aurum, Amberite and Altamax the great horse Musket, saved from ignominious death by an American and living to become famous throughout the world, wherever a good and game race horse was cared for, will not be forgotten, but be spoken of with enthusiasm. It can be truthfully said that he was the greatest "stayer" of his racing days in England and that he founded a family of racers that were unsurpassed for ability to go long journeys in a short space of time. The only wonder and regret we feel is that, with the achievements of the sons and daughters, grandsons and granddaughters of Musket before them the breeders of this country did not, like their English cousins, search for and purchase a larger number of representatives of this great race of racers. The scarcity of Musket blood in America is truly astonishing, and in view of the fact that we are many thousands of miles closer to New Zealand than English breeders, why our raisers of gallopers do not get ahead of the British ones is a mystery. It begins to look as if they do not know a good thing when they see it, or at least do not come to a realization of the worth of Musket blood in a race horse as quickly as do the breeders of the tight little isle.

Anaconda Labor Day Handicap.

From the list of entries in the $5,000 Labor Day Handicap, to be run at Anaconda, Mont., September 5th, they are going to have a horse race worth traveling many miles to see. Such celebrities of the turf as Poet Scout, imp. Ogden, Senator Bland, Rubicon, Ostler Joe, Count of Flanders, Ace, Schiller, Silver II. (brother to ol. Dan and half brother to Fleur de Lis), Salvation, Byron, McLelland, Banished and Ramp should make a close race, but there are others that might even beat those that we have mentioned. Following is a complete list of the entries to the big race, in which the distance to be run is one mile:

Anaconda Stable's ch m Tig r Cat, by Tammany—Bardana; b f Jolli-mont, by Montana—Jolli-mont.
H. Byrnes & Co's b h Poet Scout, by Longfellow—Gipsy; br c Briarhill by imp. Duncombe—Brierbush.

AMERICA'S GRANDEST STUD MATRONS.

Mothers of Three or More Celebrities of the Turf or Stud, and Their Descent, Traced in the Female Line.

As promised, we give this week the list of fifty mares necessary to make up the list of one hundred of America's most celebrated mothers of racers, and trace them to the "tap-root" on the dam's side of the house. It shows that thirteen of the one hundred mares trace to the Layton Barb mare (No. 4 under the Lowe plan of figuring), eleven to the Old Montague mare (No. 12), seven to the Old Vintner mare (read "Vintner" last week), No. 9 of the Lowe plan, but three to the Tregonwell Barb mare, No. 1 under the Lowe plan. The mares given below were entitled to rank as great stud matrons, and it shows that the No. 4 line of the late Bruce Lowe stands at the top in America, the No. 12 line nearly as high and the No. 9 line third. The No. 1 line of England ranks fifth in America in the production of great broodmares. In our list of sires of champion racers, published in the issues of May 7th and 14th, it will be seen that the No. 3 line of England is the greatest of all sire lines all over the world, but of the ninety-one champion American races from 1800 to date but one (American Eclipse) traced to this source, it ranking No. 19 on the list we printed of American champions of the turf. Following is the list of fifty great broodmares in America necessary to make up the promised one hundred:

Principal Winning Owners and Jockeys of the California Racing Season.

The table below shows the owners whose horses raced in California during the winter of 1897 and the spring of 1898 and won over $1,200. While the Burns & Waterhouse string, trained by popular and capable Jimmy McCormick, captured $24,100 more than that of the next turfman, Ed Corrigan, it must be remembered that the B. & W. folks had on an average about sixty-five horses in training against thirty-five for Mr. Corrigan. Dr. Rowell, size of string considered, had the greatest success of all the race horse owners, and when it is shown that no less than twenty-six owners or firms of owners went over the $5,000 mark, horse racing in California from November 1st to May 15th must be accounted quite profitable. Eight strings won over $10,000 apiece. The owners on the following list new to Californians were W. B. Jennings & Co., H. L. Frank, D. Cameron, J. M. Murphy, W. P. Fink, W. J. Spiers, Caesar Young, H. F. Edwards and M. D. Miller, and all did fairly well. B. J. Johnston brought a big string out, and while Paul Griggs won some good races, others of the string, notably Sutton, Diggs, Flosonso and Serena, were bitter disappointments. Sam Hildreth trained a large number of winners, but his horses won very few stakes. W. B. Jennings turned some good ones loose in Sombre, Miss Lynah and Briar Sweet, and E. F. Smith was getting most of the money at the close of the season.

H. L. Frank.....	6,115	J. H. Shields.....	1,285
A. J. Stemler.....	5,750

Below will be found a list of the principal winning jockeys that rode at Oakland and Ingleside tracks from November 1, 1897, to May 21, 1898, together with the number of mounts they had, times first, second, third and unplaced and the percentage of wins of each:

No. Mounts.	1st.	2d.	3d.	Unp.	Per Cent. of Winning Mounts.
Thorpe.....	166	100	102	309	.309
Clawson.....	146	121	124	193	.33
H. Martin.....	92	82	87	118	.268
J. Conley.....	78	72	64	151	.213
Piggott.....	66	63	50	141	.206
T. Sloan.....	45	32	8	16	.445
Spencer.....	40	20	31	178	.148
K. Jones.....	35	51	42	154	.124
J. Woods.....	35	46	47	204	.105
Gray.....	35	34	54	319	.079
W. Martin.....	25	26	5	30	.29
A. Clayton.....	25	21	20	49	.217
Hennessey.....	18	24	42	113	.101
H. Shields.....	14	21	11	66	.125
O'Connor.....	10	15	12	66	.097
C. Sloan.....	7	10	4	50	.098

It will be seen that, figuring on percentage of wins, they would rate: Tod Sloan, Charley Thorpe, W. Martin, H. Martin, A. Clayton, J. Conley, Piggott. These are the only riders with a percentage of 200 or over, though Dick Clawson comes close, with 199 per cent. The most improved riders seen here were Tod Sloan and H. Martin. Spencer is a promising lad and little Johnny Woods did excellent work toward the last of the season here. Of those new to San Franciscans, A. Clayton, Conley and Midget O'Connor filled the public eye most and rated in that order. Charley Thorpe, H. Martin, Tod Sloan and Willie Martin were comparatively few times "out of the money," and were the best to play for "a show," as the above statistics will demonstrate.

Washington Park Entries.

The thirteen Washington Park stakes which closed May 3d, received an aggregate of 805 entries, divided as follows:

Name.	Age.	Dist.	No. of Entries.
The American Derby.....	3-y-o.	1 1/4 m.	40
The Sheridan Stakes.....	3-y-o.	1 1/4 m.	33
The Drexel Stakes.....	3-y-o.	1 m.	61
The Englewood Stakes.....	3-y-o. fillies	1 m.	40
The Midway Stakes.....	3-y-o. & up.	1 1/8 m.	67
The Oakwood Handicap.....	3-y-o. & up.	1 1/8 m.	62
The Great Western Handicap.....	3-y-o. & up.	1 1/8 m.	48
The Wheeler Handicap.....	3-y-o. & up.	1 1/4 m.	72
The Lakeside Stakes.....	2-y-o. fillies	5/8 m.	72
The Kenwood Stakes.....	2-y-o. colts.	5/8 m.	71
The Edgewater Stakes.....	2-y-o.	11-16 m.	67
The Hyde Park Stakes.....	2-y-o.	3/4 m.	73
The Hickory Stakes.....	2-y-o.	1/2 m.	79

Considering the late date when it was decided by the Washington Park officials to give a race meeting this year and the enforced scantiness of time allotted for making entries to the stakes announced, it must be said that owners of good race horses have made a magnificent response to the invitation to once more gather within the hospitable inclosure of the banner race track of the West. It must be remembered that training and racing operations have now been in progress so long that the dead wood has been singled out and cleared away, so that the entries to the Washington Park stakes are made up of horses in active training that have shown their owners they can run fast enough to inspire the reasonable belief that they can win races in good company. This is a pleasing condition of affairs, because it insures good fields of starters made up of the proved best horses of the day, and nothing better could be asked for by those who are looking forward with keen anticipation to the revival of the glories of racing over the great South Side course.—Daily Racing Form.

Harlem Stake Entries.

As a foretaste of the good things to come at Washington Park, Secretary Nathanson's display of entries to the Harlem Stakes is bound to be exceedingly pleasing to the admirers of high class racing. Numbers, speed and class are all abundantly provided, and, better still, the day of initial action over the fast West Side track is near at hand. The fifteen Harlem Stakes have received 774 total entries distributed as follows:

Name	Age	Dist.	Number of Entries.
The Senior Stakes.....	3-y-o.	1-8 m.	38
The Oak Park Stakes.....	3-y-o.	1 m.	46
The Riverside Stakes.....	3-y-o.	7-8 m.	55
The Harlem Handicap.....	3-y-o. & up.	1 1/4 m.	32
The Memorial Handicap.....	3-y-o. & up.	1-16 m.	31
The Prairie State Stakes.....	3-y-o. & up.	1-8 m.	33
The Chicago Stakes.....	3-y-o. & up.	1 m.	62
The Garden City Handicap.....	3-y-o. & up.	3/4 m.	61
The Illinois Stakes.....	3-y-o. & up.	13-16 m.	62
The Petite Stakes.....	2-y-o. fillies	9-16 m.	59
The Graduate Stakes.....	2-y-o. c. & g.	5-8 m.	54
The Youngster Stakes.....	2-y-o.	5-8 m.	51
The Provost Stakes.....	2-y-o.	9-16 m.	71
The Junior Stakes.....	2-y-o.	3-4 m.	53
The La Grange Stakes.....	2-y-o.	3-4 m.	53

Young Emilios' Breeding on the Dam's Side.

Our attention was called this week by E. I. Robinson to what looks like a mistake in the breeding of Young Emilios that has been made times without number in this country, that great authority, Col. E. D. Bruce, compiler of the American Stud Book and author of The Thoroughbred Horse, being the first to fall into the presumed error in this particular case. In The Thoroughbred Horse, wherever the pedigree of imp. Australian occurs, there will be found what looks like a mistake. It is invariably given: "Young Emilios, b h, foaled 1833, by Emilios, dam Shoveler, by Scud," etc.

Below will be found a complete list of Shoveler's foals taken from vol. 4, page 423, General Stud Book of Great Britain:

- 1822, b f Mercy, by Merlin.
- 1824, b f Mulebird, by Merlin.
- 1825, b c Magnet, by Merlin.
- 1827, b c Captive, by Cervantes.
- 1828, b f Earwig, by Emilios.
- 1830, b f Moorhen, by Emilios.
- 1832, b f Wild Duck, by Whisker.
- 1833, b c Eric, by Emilios.
- 1834, b f Erica, by Emilios.
- 1836, Merganser, by Merchant.
- 1838, b f St. Calomb, by St. Patrick.
- 1839, b c St. James, by St. Patrick.
- 1841, br f by Albemarle.
- Died in 1843.

Missed in 1823, 1829, 1831, 1935 and 1840. Slipped foal in 1837.

It will be seen by the above that Eric, by Emilios, was Shoveler's foal of 1833, and they did not call him Young Emilios. But in vol. 4, page 96, General Stud Book of Great Britain, under Cobweb (dam of the unbeaten Bay Middleton), by Phantom, will be found in her list of produce: "1828, b c Young Emilios, by Emilios." Thus the sire of Emilia, dam of the famous imp. Australian, who begot Wildie, Springbok, Lizzie Lucas, Spendthrift, Rutherford &c., was probably half-brother to the undefeated winner of the Derby of 1836. Bay Middleton is apparently from Cobweb, by Phantom. At least that is what the Weatherbys, the English authorities, say, and unless Col. Bruce positively knows that Eric was also called Young Emilios, he has been in error all these years, and nearly all the catalogues in this country are wrong wherever Young Emilios occurs in a pedigree.

If Young Emilios was bred as the Weatherbys describe, he is of the No. 1 family (Tregonwell Barb mare) under the Lowe plan, the one from whence descended Whalebone, Whisker, Minting, Glencoe and more winners of the three English classics than traced to any other "tap-root" mare known. If Young Emilios was from Shoveler, by Scud, to which source went imp. Priam and imp. Diomed, not nearly so good a line as the No. 1, either in the line of producing winners or sires of winners. We would like to get the tangle straightened.

Saddle Notes.

PATSY FREEMAN rode Basquil to victory at St. Louis May 10th in a mile race.

PAT DUNNE has sent Flying Dutchman to Clay Bros' farm, near Paris, Ky., to be turned out.

LADY MEUX has purchased Mr. W. Kelso's Australian race horse Survivor for two thousand guineas.

JOCKEY JOE HILL, who is riding so well at Louisville, is said to have sustained no permanent bad effects from his fall at Latonia.

STARTER H. D. (CURLEY) BROWN was married Monday to Miss Fanny M. Keating of Covington, Ky.—Chicago Racing Form.

GEORGE WENTWORTH, of Calgary, N. W. T., formerly one of the owners of May W., left for Butte, Mont., last Monday night.

DUDLEY E., a recent St. Louis winner, is an own brother to George Rose, the colt in J. M. Murphy's stable that died here last winter.

BUENA VENTURA, as good as 10 to 1 in the betting, won at Lakeside, Ind., May 17th, in the colors of E. Trotter. Louis Ezell must have sold her.

PAT DUNNE will bring his horses to Chicago at the end of the Louisville meeting and campaign them here through the summer.—Daily Racing Form.

AMONG the entries for the two-year-old stakes at Harlem are Sevens, Rosebeau, Juggler, Lobos, Watossa, First Tenor, Canace, Goldpin and Formero.

Mrs. YOUNG having hopelessly broken down, L. V. Eaton has sold her to Milton Young for $600 and she will join the famous band of brood mares at McGrathiana.

It is now said that Glenheim would have won the $20,000 stallion stakes at Morris Park if Sloan, instead of Simms, had been up. Sloan out-jockeyed Madden's boy.

CHARLEY THORPE has ridden more winners than any jockey in America this year. He is closely pressed by T. Burns. Both have ridden over 115 first past the post.

A NEW rider named Rutter piloted three winners at Lakeside, Ind., May 19th (Buena Ventura, Newgatherer and Esperage). They were at odds of 5 to 1, 7 to 5 and 2½ to 1.

AMONG the entries for the Harlem Handicap are Salvable, Satsuma, Judge Denny, Fleur de Lis, Paul Griggs, Ramiro, May W. and Lieber Karl. This event has a decided California flavor.

THE greatest two-year-old of the season was bought today by H. Eugene Leigh for $10,000, says a Chicago dispatch of last Sunday. This is the colt that took the measure of Greatland.

DR. EICHBERG, winner of the Laureate Stakes at Morris Park May 18th (by four lengths) is by imp. Candemas out of Nell Swift. Tod Sloan rode the colt, which is owned by the Turney Brothers.

DURING the twenty-one days' racing at Newport, Ky., there were twenty selling race "boosts," and the Queen City Jockey Club's half interest in the surplus over the entered prices aggregated $2,327.50.

VENGEANCE (whose yearlings recently brought such good prices in Australia) is by Newminster, for years the leading stallion of Australia, the sire of Newhaven and Tarcoola, winners of the Melbourne Cup.

P. G. LYNCH has leased of E. W. Purser the bay horse R. Q. Ban, by Golden Ban, out of Lily Virgil, and left for Montana last Tuesday. Ban ought to win some of the sprints. Billy Short will train the horse.

THE first two races at Roby, Ind., May 16th, were won by a son and daughter of Inspector B. (J. Krepper's Presently and Louis Ezell's Espirage). Boundless loomed up as a sire, too, one of his get finishing in front.

ORNAMENT is receiving a most thorough preparation for the Brooklyn Handicap, and he is coming on well. Perhaps his defeat by Pat Dunne's Salvable at Memphis improved the chances of Ornament in the Brooklyn.

TYPHOON II. is puzzling Eastern turf critics. In his work he shows as well as any horse in training and looks to be in perfect condition, but when it comes to racing, a half mile appears to be about as far as he cares to go at speed.

It is a peculiar fact that the winner, second and third in the two-mile race Saturday, should have been foaled at Santa Anita, property of E. J. Baldwin, yet such was the case. Of the trio, the winner (Velox) and Wheel of Fortune (third) were cast-offs.

H. ("SKEETS") MARTIN made his debut at St. Louis May 19th on Ulm in the first race, finishing up a good third; won on Miss Marion (Barney Schreiber's) in the Debutante Stakes and was second on Tony Honig in the fifth. These were the only mounts he had.

A ST. LOUIS telegram dated May 23d was as follows: Clara Fields, Scottish Grit, Judge Rankin and Dick Collins fell in the third event, causing a general mix-up. Three of the boys escaped with a bad shaking, while young Dugan, on Rankin, had one of his ribs broken.

MESSRS. A. H. & D. H. MORRIS have purchased of R. W. Walden and son the 2-year-old bay colt Filigrane, by Galore—Fillette, by Kingfisher, out of Filagree, by Stockwell. Filigrane won two races at Washington, one of which was the Nursery Stakes, four furlongs in 0:50½.

THE fields were not very large at Morris Park. On the 19th of May the first race had four horses, the second nine, third five, fourth six, fifth three and sixth three. Taral rode two of the winners that day, Tod Sloan, Maher, Simms and Jackson the others. Tod was second three times.

TRAVERSER made his first appearance on the track at Morris Park last week, and was inspected with great attention by trainers and track sharps in general. The colt was merely trotted and cantered awhile, and then given a six-furlong spin in 1:25; but he made a very favorable impression on the experts who looked him over.

CHARLEY BOOTS will leave in a very few days with his string of Brutuses for Chicago. Just how many he will campaign has not been determined upon. Mr. Boots says that up to this date in 1898 there have been eighteen foals at Elmwood Farm, twelve being by imp. Brutus, six by the splendid young Three Cheers horse, Tiger.

It begins to look as though there might be as much friction this season between Starter Fitzgerald and Tod Sloan as formerly existed between Caldwell and Bergen. Sloan has been fined almost every day since the season began, and besides the starter has volunteered a great deal of advice at the post that might be supposed to be of benefit to "The Commodore."

THE young trainer, H. F. Edwards, will take in the Montana circuit this season with Magdalenas, Lady Ashley and Eta H. Mr. Edwards has had a fair share of success and expects to conclude arrangements to lay with J. Naglee Burk to campaign Bellicoso, Coda, Thelma and Dolore on the northern tracks and may also take Mistletoe, from the Boots stable.

B. C. HOLLY's good colt El Rayo, Horton (named after Sam Horton of the Post), narrowly escaped being cut down as Thorpe was pulling up after the finish. He was jumped on by Santa Flora, the latter falling to her knees, but fortunately escaped without a scratch. Horton is the first of the get of El Rayo to win, we believe. He is a half-brother to Fly and Montallade.

GALEN BROWN's horses, Olinthus, Can't Dance, Libertine, Ach, George Lee and Daisy F. reached Chicago yesterday from the coast. They will be stable at the Hawthorne track. H. Shields, the popular jockey who rides for Galen Brown, was at Lakeside yesterday. He will take one or two mounts on Saturday, the closing day of the meeting. Shields will ride at 106 pounds. Galen Brown will probably reach here to-day.—Chicago Inter Ocean, May 19.

GIDEON & DALY have announced that they will sell all of their two-year-olds at auction this fall. It will be their policy hereafter to sell the get of His Highness and Ludwigshafen at the close of their career as two-year-olds, first training and racing them so that purchasers will know what they are buying. It is a shrewd plan and likely to pay better than yearling sales. With a few like High Degree and Jean Beraud to sell each year Gideon & Daly's sale averages would run into high figures.

LAST Saturday was "getaway day" with a vengeance. Amasa won at 15 to 1, Sir Urian at 40, Velox at 100, Cromwell at 5 and Zarro at 8 to 1. Tom McCann had a Velox ticket reading $2,400 to $30, Joe Eppinger another of $800 to $10. If the two-mile race was not a "shoo-in" for Velox it bore a strong resemblance to one. Sir Urian's win was a "fluke." Cromwell won on his merits, though he was given the overlook and the "good thing" in the race was imp. Mistral, who finished a bang-up second.

T. C. McDOWELL has made a record at the Louisville meeting. His colors have been seen at the post eight times in the ten days ending Saturday, and on every occasion they have been first at the finish, Batten having three victories to his credit, Spirituelle two, and Rush, April's Lady and Benneville one each. This is a remarkable showing and is a tribute to the clever Kentuckian's skill as a trainer and to his intelligence in placing his horses. At the close of the meeting McDowell will bring his horses here for a campaign over the Chicago tracks. With him will come the excellent jockey, Joe Hill.

It is understood that the racing firm of Charles Fleischmann's Sons will not be seen on the turf after this season. This, it is said, has already been decided upon by Julius Fleischmann, who has had charge of the stable since the death of his father. So far this season the stable has been rather successful. Although only racing a short time, it has won several races with Irish Reel and Mr. Baizer, and has finished inside the money in big stakes with George Keene. Notwithstanding the fact that it has Tod Sloan under a contract and every prospect of having a successful season, the horses will be sold at auction and the Fleischmanns retire from the turf.

PAT DUNNE is not being smiled upon by Dame Fortune just now. In his gallop Sunday week Flying Dutchman pulled up lame, and it has developed that the noted handicapper horse has bowed a tendon in his good foreleg. No further attempt will be made to train the Dutchman, and he retires to easy quarters for the rest of his days. "He's been a good horse to me, and I'll see that he's taken care of," is Mr. Dunne's quiet remark that holds a world of meaning for any man to whom the thoroughbred horse is more than a gambling device. It is all the more unfortunate that Rey Salazar, Mr. Dunne's three-year-old Emperor of Norfolk colt, the beaten favorite in Monday's closing race, finished dead lame, and it is now feared that he, too, is irretrievably broken down. He ran poorly at Memphis, but won the first time out here and gave promise of being a serviceable colt in his class.—Louisville Courier Journal.

AT Newmarket, England, Tuesday of last week, Richard Croker's two-year-old colt Knickerbocker won the Exning Plate of 500 sovereigns ($2,500) over a five-furlongs course, beating twelve other starters very easily. A cablegram says of the affair: "The victory of Knickerbocker had quite a sentimental interest for the American party, for the reason that the colt is one of Mr. Croker's own breeding, being by Dobbins—Flirt, by Sailor Prince, dam Lady, by Pizarro. Both these horses were owned and raced by Mr. Croker in America. Great things were expected of Dobbins when he was sent here with the rest of the string, but he went amies and was retired to the stud, Mr. Croker making him the premier stallion of a small but select breeding establishment. He was placed in training again this spring, but as yet has not given any great encouragement that he will get back to his best form. Knickerbocker is a sturdy-looking colt, and may show to even better advantage later on."

NEVER before has a polo pony fetched the unprecedented price of 750 gs., which was given by Lord Kensington for Sailor at Messrs. E. D. and J. A. Miller's sale of first-class made polo ponies at Spring Hill, Rugby, on Monday, the 4th inst. There were in all thirty-one ponies sold, averaging £281. The first sixteen on the catalogue made an average of close on £400 which in the list of sales of polo ponies is quite unprecedented. Up to this date the purchase of Sailor held the highest record for the amount given for a polo pony, which was for Fizzer, bought at Tattersalls by him in 1897 at 510 gs.—London Live Stock Journal.

EVEN the conservative English turf is falling in line with modern progress, and has now adopted the number system of distinguishing the horses. The following notice to this effect was recently posted at Newmarket: "In order to assist the public in identifying in the paddock the horses running at the meeting, the Newmarket stewards have given instructions for the distribution of badges bearing numbers corresponding with those on the card, such badges to be strapped to the arm of the lad riding or leading the horse. Any lad refusing to comply with these instructions will be reported to the stewards. The stewards request that trainers will do their best to facilitate this arrangement, and make a point of returning the badges."—Morning Telegraph.

ED CORRIGAN has been in Chicago since Thursday. Immediately the turf writers of the daily press were seized with suspicions that his advent portended turf war with Hawthorne as a base of operations against the other tracks. It might be well for them to wait until Mr. Corrigan does something dire and dreadful before imputing to him such intentions. Better take him at his word that Hawthorne is leased to George Rose, Barney Schreiber, et al., and that his main purpose at present is the eminently peaceful and proper one of winning as many races as he possibly can with his horses now in training. With Geyser at the head he is liable to take quite a number. He and Barney Schreiber, who also represents George Rose, were together the greater part of Sunday in Chicago. Mr. Schreiber also saw John Condon and the chances are that there will be racing peace all about and that the new lessees and Harlem will divide dates after the close of the Washington Park meeting.—Daily Racing Form.

THE Executive Committee of the Washington Park Club met Saturday night and admitted Edward Corrigan's entries. When they were received by Secretary Howard they were postmarked May 4th instead of May 3d, the day designated for the closing of the stakes. It was plain, however, by the time of their arrival here that they must have been mailed in San Francisco on the evening of May 3d. It was deemed best to secure a ruling on the matter, and, therefore, the entries were held in abeyance until such a ruling could be had. The Committee held that there was satisfactory evidence that the entries had been dropped in the mail box at San Francisco on the evening of May 3d, and that they were valid and should be accepted. This action swells the Washington Park totals to 837. Sardonic, a very good filly, by Morello—Sardonyx, is by this action added to the American Derby. Mr. Corrigan's other horses distributed among the various stakes are Geyser, Joe Ullman, Won't Dance, Truth, Milt Young, Frank Ireland, Carsine, Tutbill and Chimura.

BARNEY SCHREIBER's bay filly, Miss Marion, by Himyar—Astolat, spread-eagled her field in the Debutante Stakes at the Fair Grounds, winning in a big gallop by four lengths from John Huffman's Kingston filly, Iris, who beat Brewer Schorr's Jim Gore filly, Willie Howard, for the place by two lengths. The California rider "Skeets" Martin came down from Chicago, especially to ride Miss Marion. The Schreiber filly is a large, well-made racing machine, with perfect action in a running way. She leaps over ground like a greyhound and has a marvelous burst of speed. She acted shy before the gate, but Martin got her going early, and she ran around her field before the first eighth had been traversed and was leading by four lengths at the end of the first quarter. Katie Gibbons, Iris and Willie Howard raced themselves into the ground chasing the pace-maker, who fairly burned up the track with her speed. She was under a double wrap all the way down the stretch. "Skeets" kept looking back, but nothing ever got close enough to the Schreiber filly to make her extend herself.—St. Louis Republic.

MR. ALLISON writes thus of St. Simon's sire: "It is now nearly 22 years ago since I first saw Galopin. It was on the Two Thousand Guineas afternoon when I thought Claremont won comfortably, but Camballa received the official verdict. About that time Galopin was brought down to the paddock just to get him more accustomed to a crowd, and I well remember how he sweated and lathered, and how excitable he was, thus clearly marking the type he was destined to stamp so indelibly on an illustrious progeny. I do not think any horse ever won the Derby more easily than did Galopin, and I don't suppose that John Lawson would admit that the fiery son of Vedette sired a better than himself even in the mighty St. Simon. Years have passed since Galopin's Derby day, and many changes have been seen, but the stout old fellow lives on, and has even survived his almost equally famous contemporary, Hampton. Nor is his stud career by any means ended. Moreover, his son, Disraeli, may, not improbably, credit him with another Derby—or it may be another equally well-born son, the dark Brio, will prove the better of the two."

JOHN MACKEY has commenced suit in the Superior Court against George Rose and E. W. Cavanaugh, Jr. The complaint recites that in August, 1896, plaintiff was the owner of five horses, Celiatia, Geyser, Torsina, Tea Rose and Dalion, and leased them to defendants who agreed to bear all expenses incurred in their keeping and training and their care and custody; to enter and race them in races given by agricultural societies, jockey clubs, etc., and pay plaintiff half the gross purses, stakes and sums offered by such societies and won by the horses. Plaintiff claims that during the time the horses were leased to them defendants earned with them the gross sum of $6,811, of which he is entitled, under the lease, to half, or $3,405.50; but they refused to pay it to him when demanded by him. For a separate cause of complaint he alleges that his assignor, J. A. Haggin, leased to defendants in August, 1896, on the same terms as the former lease, the horses Jay Wheeler, Miss Maggie M., Sister Beatrice, Hanetta and Principle, with which they earned $2,296.50, of which one-half $1,148.25, is due to him by J. B. Haggin, and that defendants refused to pay it to him. He therefore asks judgment for $4,603.75 and costs.—Sacramento Record Union, May 20.

The Blue Ribbon Sale.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 18, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The first day of the Blue Ribbon sale at Cleveland is over. The prospects for a grand sale never looked brighter up to the evening before the day when exhibitions of speed were to be made under the watch over the greatly improved track at Glenville, where Maud S. trotted to the world's record of 2:03½. Dark black clouds rolled over the city of Cleveland on Saturday evening and towards morning, and during the early part of the day a heavy rainfall made the track unfit for use, and on Tuesday the sale commenced in Fasig's Exchange, but few of the great prospects having been seen on the track, those being the arrivals during the early part of the week, and had been worked on the track when the weather was pleasant. On Monday night there was an exhibition of horses consigned to the sale in Fasig's Horse Exchange. The commodious structure was brilliantly illuminated with electric lights, the immense crowd in attendance composed of horsemen from all parts of America, and ladies and gentlemen of Cleveland and vicinity who are great admirers of the light harness horse. The members of the Cleveland Driving Club were present in large numbers with their families and guests, and tended to the great matinee mare Incense, when she was driven into the ring, such a hearty greeting that all lovers of the horse felt that the high-class horse had found a warm spot in the hearts of the people of Cleveland.

Mr. Fasig in a few well chosen remarks introduced Incense to visiting strangers, (she needed no introduction to the people of Cleveland,) and said, that either in the Bible or Shakespeare, there was a saying that man was the noblest work of God. (I hardly believe the ladies of Cleveland admitted this, for there were many exclamations of Oh!) but when he added that he believed the noblest work of God was the horse, and that Incense was a worthy representative, the outburst of applause that followed gave approval to his tribute to the good mare that had done so much to bring to the City of Cleveland many high class horses representing thousands of dollars, purchased by members of the Cleveland Driving Club to be used in their matinee racing. As Incense was driven from the track, Mr. Fasig asked for the attention of the audience, and in a few words, but very appropriate ones, presented to Col. Edwards of Cleveland, a magnificent set of gold mounted double harness, the handiwork of Wood & Gibson of New York, considered by good judges to be their masterpiece of work. This presentation was made by Charter Oak Park. The surprise shown and feeling response made by Col. Edwards in accepting the gift showing his heartfelt appreciation, was greeted with hearty applause, and many congratulations. Col. Edwards was for years the president of the Cleveland Driving Club, and at a late meeting was made its Honorary President for life, a worthy tribute to a life long supporter of the harness horse, racing and its interests, when conducted according to rule.

An enjoyable part of the exhibition was the good music furnished by the Cleveland Band, which throughout the evening played popular airs as the horses paraded in front of the stand. Another feature that pleased all was the singing of the Cleveland colored quartet. After an announcement of the horse being shown had been made by George Bain of Lexington, the king of auctioneers, the quartet would sing some appropriate song such as, "Get Your Money On," "The Clip is Fast," "Never Headed" and when Pasonte was shown they sang "Sweet Marie" at the suggestion of Col. Klotz in appreciation of the writer's love for the mare and his fondness for the song. It was near midnight before the great show was over, and it was certainly an exhibition of horses that will long be remembered by all who were present.

Tuesday morning was a pleasant one and long before the sale commenced a large crowd had gathered at the Exchange busy looking over the different consignments to be sold. John Splan was general entertainer and well does he merit his reputation of being able to entertain a dozen at a time. One consignor was telling him his tale of woe regarding a horse he had, that on account of not having a chance to show him on the track, he was afraid he would not sell well. Splan who always has a kind word for everybody, and a way out of all trouble, said to his woeful friend "Now don't you worry; you mark him down just as low as you please; you can't get on the track and you ain't got to show it. Trot him on paper and holler loud."

Eleven o'clock and the sale is called, the first horse, Betonica (3), 2:10½, with Houser up; he looked a great young horse, and after some spirited bidding, he was sold for $7,800.

Then Pasonte (4), 2:13, was knocked down to Geo. Saunders for $2,050. Peko seemed to be greatly admired, but only brought $1,000. Then came the grand two-year-old Idolita. He was admired by many, but only one could get him, and after a spirited contest between California, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Massachusetts gained the victory and the great colt, grandson of Electioneer, went to Boston for $4,700.

Hyita (3), daughter of Dexter Prince, and Helena, 2:11½, by Electioneer, also went to Boston at $1,900.

Lillian May (3), by Advertiser, will go to Austria at $850. Nordeau (4), 2:17½, also went to Boston at $1,000.

The average of the ten horses in training from Palo Alto was $2,016.50.

Take it all in all it was a great sale, one that invoked considerable enthusiasm and bright hopes for the future.

The Corbitt Sale.

This is the last opportunity we will have to remind the readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that on Thursday next, June 2d, one of the grandest lot of broodmares, colts, fillies and geldings ever offered at public auction in California will be sold at Burlingame by Messrs. Killip & Co., the well-known live stock auctioneers. For many years the San Mateo Stock Farm, the home of the great Guy Wilkes, 2:15½ has been the leading breeder of race winning stock on the Pacific Coast, and during more than one season its string of, campaigners has been the largest money winner on the Eastern grand circuit. The get of Guy Wilkes and Sable Wilkes have proven themselves race horses, and it is indeed unfortunate that the grand collection of broodmares which Mr. Corbitt selected and bred to mate with Guy Wilkes and his sons should be dispersed. There is one consolation, however, and that lies in the thought that these mares and young stallions are to be sold here, which will give California breeders an opportunity to purchase them and keep them in the State. The sale will be held on Thursday next, and is positive and without reserve. Trains for Burlingame will leave Third and Townsend depot at 9 o'clock A. M. and also at 10:40. The sale will begin upon the arrival of the first train. Burlingame is only eighteen miles from the city, and the trip will well repay all who take it, as no finer collection of mares, stallions and young stock was ever gotten together in California, and the sight will be well worth witnessing. There are nearly eighty animals in the catalogue, headed by that magnificent young stallion, Prince Airlie, a six-year-old son of Guy Wilkes and Chantilly, by Nutwood. Prince Airlie is 16.1 hands high, a grand looking bay horse with speed enough to win races if he is trained. He is sure to make a great stock horse, his size, style and breeding, together with his grand individuality making his success in the stud beyond question. There are mares by The Moor, Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, Sable Wilkes, 2:18, Oro Wilkes, 2:11, Nutwood, Fallie, Sultan, Princeps, Le Grande, Tilton Almont, Arthurton, Dawn and other great sires, over twenty of them with foals at foot by Oro Wilkes, 2:11, and Prince Airlie. No such opportunity to get the very best of choice trotting blood has ever before been offered in California.

ABBIE WOODNUT.

Mrs. E. W. Callendine of Sacramento has sent us a photograph of her great mare, Abbie Woodnut, with a six days old bay filly by Stam B, 2:11½, at her side. The picture is a most excellent likeness of both mare and foal. Abbie Woodnut is the dam of Diawood (2) 2:21½, by Diablo, 2:09½, and Abdine, 2:26, by Wilkesdale. She was sired by Woodnut, 2:16½, from Phyllis by imp. Admirable. The little filly by her side is her third foal. Abbie Woodnut is nine years old and was bred to Diablo, 2:09½, on the 11th inst. She is the only producing daughter of Woodnut. The picture above shows that her last foal by Stam B. is a very handsome filly and a credit to both sire and dam.

The Trotting Season.

The new plan put forth by the Breeders Association this year is going to be a drawing card. Strange as it may seem, there are probably more trotters and pacers in training in California this year than there were a year ago. From Los Angeles, Santa Ana, Lemoore, Fresno, Visalia, Hollister, Salinas, San Jose, San Mateo, Oakland, Pleasanton, Sacramento, Stockton, Woodland, Santa Rosa, Willows, Chico, Marysville, Colusa and many other places come reports that horses are in training for the Breeders' meeting. It need not surprise horse-owners if the list of entries exceeds anything in the history of the organization.

True, Palo Alto and Oakwood Park have sold their racing strings in the East, and Rancho del Paso has decided to take its trotting string across the mountains. There are enough, left, however, to make successful meetings, and there is plenty of speed among those still here to draw the attention of the public. There are over sixty trotters and pacers in the State at the present time that won heats in 2:20 or better last year and over 200 that appeared in races and won heats in slower time. Nearly all these are still here and in training, and there is a host of green ones that have never faced the starter. Material is not lacking, and there is an expressed willingness on the part of owners to utilize it. There will be horses enough and entries enough, and all the public will need to bring it to the track when the gates open will be an assurance that every race will be a contest.

It is indeed unfortunate that the drought in some parts of the State has prevented many localities from holding meetings that would have held them under ordinary circumstances. However, if the Breeders can give four or six weeks at Oakland it will in a measure make amends for the curtailment of the country circuit, and horsemen will effect a saving in the usual expensive transportation line.

On Wednesday next, June 1st, the entries for the Breeders' meeting will close. Every owner who can possibly make an entry should do so, and there should be an effort to make as many as possible. If the entries are numerous the meeting is certain to be a success, and the light harness horse will again enjoy his old-time estige in California. Everything depends on a good big entry list, and the probabilities are that it will be forthcoming.

MEMORIAL DAY HARNESS RACING.

Golden Gate Park Driving Association Arranges a Splendid Program

Fifty enthusiastic members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association held a meeting at 1200 Market street, Thursday evening of this week, and probably no more representative body of road drivers ever assembled in San Francisco. It was the time set for the closing of entries and classification of horses for the meeting to be held Monday next, at the California Jockey Club track in Oakland, and when the Secretary had received them all it was found that no less than thirty-two of the best road horses in San Francisco had been entered.

The committee appointed to classify the entries found that a very difficult proposition had been given them for solution. But four races had been provided for and the entries were so numerous that classification could not be fairly made with less than six races. Permission was therefore asked of the members that six events be carded, which was freely given and the committee's work was then read to the members. With one or two suggested changes made, the program was finally arranged as follows:

First Race, Golden Gate Park Purse—Bishop Hero, Melvar, Pardee, Our Joe, Correct, Cora C., Dahlia, Bonnie B.

Second Race, Admiral Dewey Purse—Alfred H., Jim, Kitty, Annie G., Kingcraft, Lottie.

Third Race, California Volunteers Purse, Free-for-all—Hijo del Diablo, Monterey and Algor.

Fourth Race, Decoration Purse—Polo, Mamie Wilkes, Lucky Dog, Admiral Dewey, Rey Tamias.

Fifth Race, California Jockey Club Purse—San Jose, Gen. Lafayette, Haverly, Dandy Pat, Haviland, Butcher Boy, Margaret K.

Sixth Race, Red Cross Purse—Plunkett, Golden West and

Pat. Hammond and T. J. Crowl were selected as starters. It was decided that the races be all mile heats, two in three, and that the distance be 150 yards. Where not otherwise provided in the by-laws of the association, National rules will govern.

After the meeting Thursday evening Mr. Charles Kapp, an enthusiastic road driver and member of the association, entertained his fellow members with a nice lunch. The Golden Gate Driving Association is in a flourishing condition, with a good sum of money in the treasury and a large and increasing membership.

ALAMEDA DRIVING CLUB.

An Excellent Programme For Memorial Day.

At one o'clock Monday afternoon, Memorial Day, the races at the Alameda Driving Park will begin. The track is probably the best track in the United States to train on and a very fast one for harness horses. The members of the club are among the most prominent citizens and road drivers of Alameda county and as the entries in these races are made entirely by club members the contests of speed are accompanied by a rivalry that is none the less keen because it is generous. The track has been put in the very best of order for this occasion, and an admission fee of 25 cents (the first in the history of the association) will be charged gentlemen, ladies free. To reach the track from this side of the bay take the Alameda Broad Guage ferry and train and alight at Bay Street station which is but two or three blocks from the track. Those who attend may be assured of some very interesting contests and an afternoon of good sport. The following are the list of entries for the various events which are all mixed races for trotters and pacers:

First Race, 2:20 Class—Mr. Cohen's Blackstone, Dr. Bull's Much Better, Mr. Williams' Silver Ring, Mr. Coomb's Anita.

Second Race, 2:30 Class—Mr. Transue's Silver Button, Mr. Head's Pilot McClellan, Mr. Noyes' C. H. C.

Third Race, 2:40 Class—Mr. Coomb's Operetta, Mr. Wichman's Wild Penny, Mr. Borden's Lady L., Mr. Fisher's Uncle Tip.

Butchers' Day at Oakland Track.

The San Francisco butchers held their annual picnic at Shell Mound Park across the bay Wednesday of this week. In the afternoon the crowd, which must have contained ten thousand people, went to the Oakland track where there were trotting, pacing and running races provided for their entertainment. The harness races were all heat dashes, the horse winning the first heat taking first money and being barred from starting again, the winner of the second heat taking second money. The winners were as follows:

Free for all trot—First heat, J. Chesley's b g Palermo by Berlin. Time, 2:33. Second heat, P. Williams b s Monterey by Sidney first, E. Carceat's Bishop Hero second. Time, 2:37.

Butchers' Pace—First heat: H. Levy's Ashton by El Capitan. Time, 2:35. Second heat: L. Woerner's Bonnie B. by Alex. Button first, R. E. Coombs' Anita second. Time 2:41.

Free-for all Pace—First heat: G. W. Berry's Al Gregor by Steinway. Time, 2:25. Second heat: J. M. Nelson's Hijo del Diablo first, E. Cerciat's Golden West by Roy's George second. Time, 2:24.

Butchers' Trot—First heat: Chas. Johnson's Paloma. Time, 2:35½. Second heat: James Hall's Silver Button by Silver Bow first, H. Levy's Joe second. Time, 2:41.

Free-for-all Running Race, One Mile—Rapido, Bluebell Dollie W. Time, 1:44½.

Butchers' One Mile Running Race—First, Ike L. in 1:50½; second, Aubrey.

Incorporated.

At an adjourned meeting of the members of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association held at the office of the Secretary, F. W. Kelley, Thursday evening, May 26th, it was unanimously decided to transfer all the business and property of the association to the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association, a corporation that was formed last week with the following directors: John F. Boyd, A. B. Spreckels, E. P. Heald, A. G. Gurnett, F. W. Covey, Alfred H. Cohen, T. J. Crowley, C. A. Hug, D. E. Knight, J. C. Kirkpatrick and Joseph C. Simpson. These directors are the same as those of the old association, with the exception that three names have been dropped from the old list of fifteen, the laws of this State governing the organization of corporations of this character not permitting more than eleven.

The Directors will meet in a few days to elect officers and adopt by-laws. The by-laws will in all probability be the same as those of the old association with a few minor changes.

The members of the old association present and taking part in the transactions of the meeting were E. P. Heald, President, F. W. Kelly, Secretary, and B. E. Harris, H. W. Meek, T. J. Crowley, A. J. Gurnett, Robt. Brown, D. L. Hackett, C. A. Durfee, J. M. Nelson, Wm. G. Layng, A. H. Cohen, J. C. Simpson, J. A. McKerron, D. E. Knight, P. W. Williams, Ira Dalzell, Dr. G. W. Leek, A. W. Robinson and N. A. Judd.

Portland's Meeting.

There is to be a grand meeting at the Irvington track, Portland, Oregon, this year. The Portland Racing Association is a new organization, formed by some of the leading business men and horsemen of the northwest. They are enterprising gentlemen, who recognize the many advantages of Portland as a place for trotting, pacing and running meetings during the summer months, and have consequently organized an association, arranged a program and placed the necessary money in the bank to pay the purses and all expenses. As will be seen by the advertisement in this issue the purses provided for all classes are very liberal. Horsemen who contemplate touring on the Oregon and Washington circuit should look over this program and send to Secretary Dammer at Portland for entry blanks and all necessary information, which will be promptly supplied.

A Midnight Wedding.

As notable a wedding as has ever been solemnized in Orange county was celebrated soon after midnight last night and Mrs. Bertha A. M. Goldsmith became the wife of Count Conrad Henri Von Rohden Kohsel, of Hanover, Germany. Walnut Grove Farm, the home of the bride, within a mile of the village of Washingtonville, was the scene of the happy event. Rev. Octavius Applegate, S. T. D., rector of St. George's Episcopal Church, of Newburgh, performed the ceremony. The bride wore a travelling gown of gray cloth, trimmed with mousseline de sole with hat to match. She carried lillies of the valley. The ceremony was performed with a ring and according to the custom in the groom's country, the bride gave the groom the ring. Maj. J. Owen Moore, father of the bride, gave the bride away. The wedding was attended only by near relatives and very intimate friends of the principals to the number of about a score.

The bride is a beautiful brunette of charming manners and amiable disposition. She is a fine musician, a good vocalist and a skillful equestrienne.

The Count and Mrs. Goldsmith met in New York last winter. Mrs. Goldsmith and her parents were guests at the Empire Hotel, and the Count was living there as plain Mr. Kohsel. Maj. Moore and Mr. Kohsel met frequently and became acquainted. Finally, Mr. Kohsel, who had been charmed by the handsome young American lady, asked Maj. Moore's permission to pay his addresses to her. Maj. Moore naturally made inquiries concerning Mr. Kohsel at the German Consulate in New York City, and learned that Mr. Kohsel was not only a nobleman, but a gentleman of wealth and unquestioned social position. An introduction to Mrs. Goldsmith followed.—Newburgh, N. Y., Journal, May 10.

Curing a Horse of Pulling.

By being a good listener one day last week, I learned from a successful driver something about his methods of curing horses of the habit of pulling, says a writer in the Horse Review: "I believe," said he, "that pullers are made, not born. I believe that it is possible to educate any horse in such a manner that he will never pull. We often hear of families of horses that are all pullers, but it is my opinion that these families simply have lots of nerve force, and will try to get out of the way, when anything hurts them, a little harder and sooner than the average horses. A sore mouth, caused by sharp-edged molar teeth, starts more horses to pulling than anything else, and lots and lots of trainers make the mistake of supposing that a young colt's teeth are always all right, and when his teeth are really in bad shape and begin to cut his cheeks, and he begins to go against the bit and pull, they never look in his mouth, but simply keep right on pulling on the lines, deluding themselves with the notion that 'all that old mare's colts were natural pullers,' until the habit finally becomes confirmed. A colt pulls on the bit when anything hurts his mouth for the same reason that he always crowds over against anything that hurts him. You may put the tines of a pitchfork against a colt's side, and the handle against the wall, and he will crowd against the fork until he kills himself, no matter how much room he has to get away in the opposite direction. Every driver in the land knows just how hard it is to cure a horse of the pulling habit. When the habit is once fixed in an aged horse, it is almost an impossibility to do anything with it; but with a young, good-headed one, it is always possible to overcome it. It takes two to make a pulling match; the horse will not pull his driver if his driver does not pull him. When I get hold of a colt that has learned how to pull, I first have his mouth examined by a competent veterinary dentist; then I rig him out with a nicely fitting harness and bridle that does not pinch him or hurt him anywhere and use a snaffle bit of the proper length. I give him his head to start away with, and if he reaches for the bit and doesn't feel it, and then starts off fast, as most of them will, I pull him up instantly, turn him around and start him over again with an easy rein. Every time I stop him and turn him around he will go a little farther without asking for the bit than he did the time before, and after a few lessons he generally finds out what I want."

Hungarian Ponies at Auction.

Those who attended the San Francisco Horse Show in 1894 and 1895 will surely remember the beautiful little Hungarian stallion, imp. Carlisle, owned by A. W. Foster of San Rafael. Carlisle took first prize in every class in which he was entered, and his appearance in the ring, whether hitched to a diminutive cart or led by the halter, was the occasion of "ohs" and "ahs" from the ladies and children. At Killip & Co.'s salesyard, corner of Market street and Van Ness avenue in this city, about twenty ponies sired by this great little horse will be sold at auction on Tuesday, June 7th. The ponies range from 10 to 12 hands high, all are broken to ride or drive, and are of the most tractable dispositions. Residents of San Rafael and persons who pass through that beautiful town on the North Pacific Coast Railroad are accustomed to see a handsome six-in-hand of these ponies bringing Mr. Foster to and taking him from the train each morning and evening. The ponies to be sold at the sale are of the same description. They are a very choice lot and must be seen to be appreciated.

Sulky Notes.

THE dam of Lady O., 2:15, recently slipped a colt foal by McKinney.

TWENTY-TWO trotters have won one-hundred heats or more in 2:30.

TWENTY-SIX nominators have made the third payment in the $10,000 Charter Oak Stake.

NORDICA, 2:16½, a pacing mare by Norval, was sold at auction at Boston recently for $375.

JAMES L., 2:09½, is now at Charter Oak Park, Hartford, Conn., being trained by Elmer Stevens.

THE first edition of the Year Book for 1897 has been sold, and another edition is now being put to press.

TWELVE horses are now being trained at the Hollister race track, and "work-outs" take place every morning.

THE New York trainers, now that Fleetwood Park has been cut up, train on the old running track at Guttenburg.

IF half the reports that we hear of the showing made by the get of Star Pointer are true, Star Pointer will be a great sire.

BILL FRAZIER will not be bred to any more mares this season, but will be put into active training for the spring races.

W. J. HARRIS, of Spokane, has sent King Altamont, 2:22½, by Altamont out of the dam of Klamath, to the Denver meeting.

GARBERVILLE, Humboldt county, has recently constructed a track and races will be held there on the Fourth of July this year.

JOHN PENDER will attend the spring meeting at Portland with a stable of trotters and pacers. He is located at Los Angeles now.

CHEHALIS, 2:07½, is now stepping miles better than 2:10, and he will probably be a prominent factor in the Grand Circuit races.

AT Hornellsville, N. Y., forty business men have subscribed $100 each to guarantee the stakes and purses of the July meeting.

C. J. HAMLIN says he thinks The Abbot, 2:11½, by Chimes, 2:30, son of Electioneer and Beautiful Bells, is the fastest trotter on earth.

WINELLA, 2:28½, by Altago, is being worked by Henry Hellman at the Hollister track and will be started at the Breeders' meeting.

JAMES BROWN, the Austrian trainer, has been commissioned by Vienna parties to buy twelve record horses in the New York market.

IF you want a roadster that can go the route or a good prospect for a fast trotter, go to the Pierce-Foster sale at Killip & Co.'s salesyard, June 7th.

"THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN's account of the Pleasanton celebration April 30th was the best write-up among the exchanges."—Pleasanton Bulletin.

WHILE in the West, arranging for the purchase of Alix, 2:03½, A. A. Austin, of Boston, also bought her dam, Atlanta by Attorney, of E. D. Gould, Fullerton, Neb.

THE Gentlemen's Driving Club, of Cleveland, whose matinees have become so famous, is agitating the question of barring all professional drivers from membership.

THE Overland trotting and racing association, Denver, Col., has been incorporated by Bradford H. Du Bois, Frank L. Smith and Charles N. Roberts, with a capital stock of $4,000.

ONE of the handsomest fillies foaled in California this year belongs to Neal Laymon of Salinas. She is by Bruno, 2:16½, out of a mare by Altoona, second dam by George M. Patchen Jr.

DR. POWELL REEVES of Spokane, Washington, wants to get up a two-year-old trot for 1898, at $25 per entry. It is rumored that the Doctor has a two-year-old that is a regular wind splitter.

JOHN DICKERSON is getting Fred Kohl, 2:12½, straightened out, and when he does look out for a mark of better than 2:10 on him. He has five two-year-olds by Guy Wilkes that are a very promising lot.

P. L. NASH, owner of Col. Benton 2:14½, refused an offer of $350 last week for his fine young trotting mare, "Menlo Belle." The offer was made by an Englishman who was looking for a carriage animal.

ONE hundred and fifty trotting-bred broodmares, colts, fillies and geldings from the Rancho del Paso have been shipped to Klamath county, Oregon, where they will be pastured during the rest of the year.

A HOLLISTER livery man has solved the hay question to his own satisfaction. The animals under his charge are fed good wheat straw mixed with middlings. The animals appear to thrive upon this new diet.

OUR esteemed contemporary, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, of San Francisco, seems to have taken a new lease of life under its new management and now is a vastly improved paper.—The Chicago Horse Review.

A DENVER paper estimates that there will be 500 horses quartered at Overland Park by the time the meeting opens in that city, June 11th. Already 250 entries have been received for the trotting and pacing events.

MIKE BOWERMAN is quoted as saying that Crucible, by Alcantara, and that is owned by Connecticut parties, is the fastest green trotter he ever saw. Crucible is reported to have stepped quarters in his work in 30 seconds.

THE mare by McKinney that was bred to her sire last year has a fine black filly at foot that is a natural trotter. This mare is out of a mare by Forrest Clay, by Almont 33; second dam by Almont Lightning, also by Almont 33.

LUDEMIA by McKinney, a mare that Chas. Durfee had in his string last year, but did not give a record, has been bred to Directum this year. In her work last season Ludenia stepped a half in 1:06 on more than one occasion.

KLAMATH has been taken East by his owner, G. H. Judd. His first start will be at Denver, and after a tour of the principal Eastern meetings he will close the season at Dubuque, Iowa, where he is entered in the $5,000 free-for-all.

AT Haverstock, England, last month, the Canadian-bred trotter, Horsham, covered three miles in 7:39½, though he cast both fore shoes on the journey. The trial was on a wager that the horse could not trot the distance in 8 minutes.

AT a recent New York sale a pair of high stepping geldings brought $2,100, and a single horse for his beauty, style and good action sold for $1,750. Several others sold for over $1,000 a pair. All of these animals were trotting bred.

LAUREL, 2:13½, an Electioneer mare owned by James Carroll and Buckman & Carragher of Sacramento, foaled a colt by Stam B., 2:11½, on May 1st. The colt was a very handsome and promising youngster, but contracted lung fever and died May 16th.

A CORRESPONDENT asks how the trotting bred horse Ace of Clubs is bred. He is by Lord Clive 11227, a son of Sable Wilkes, dam Kitty Clay by Alcona Clay, second dam Nelly Grant by St. Clair 656, third dam Lady Grant, 2:40½, by a horse called Good Ike.

PARTISAN, the noted prize winning French coach stallion, along with other high class animals of his breed, is offered for sale at Oaklawn Farm, Wayne, Ill. Refer to the advertisement for full description and write H. W. Dunham, Wayne, Ill., for price.

JOSEPH M. GARRETT, a breeder of saddle horses and roadsters, Woodford, Ky., says: I believe the war will help the horse business, as it will take a lot of plugs out of the country and make room for good horses. Very little breeding has been done lately, and there is bound to be a shortage.

DIRECTUM is likely to have another 2:30 trotter to his credit before fall, in Directum's Star, owned by M. (L.) I. Chase, proprietor of Grand View Stock Farm, Gilmanston, N. H. This colt, like his sire, is very rapid gaited, and shows a natural inclination to race when in company with other horses.

FANNIE PUTNAM, the mare taken East by Andy McDowell, is owned by W. G. Stevenson of Victoria, British Columbia. She won races on the British Columbia tracks last year in 2:30 or thereabouts, and during the fall went an exhibition mile in 2:16. She is thought to be good for a record of 2:10 this year.

DAVID YOUNG, Esq., of Stockton, bred four mares to McKinney, 2:11½, last year and has four foals. Two of the mares are by Nephew, one by Dexter Prince and one by Alcantara from a Nutwood mare. The last mentioned has a filly foal that is a perfect beauty, and certainly its blood lines will be hard to surpass.

SABLE WILKES was the first three-year-old to trot a mile in 2:18, and his son Freedom was the first yearling to beat 2:30. During three years the get of Sable Wilkes won nearly sixty thousand dollars on the turf. The Sable Wilkes blood is valuable. Mares and fillies by the great horse will be sold at the Corbitt sale, June 2d.

YOLO MAID, 2:12, is in fine trim this spring and in a little matinee at Denver the other day paced her halves in 1:08, 1:03½ and 1:09½. Brad Du Bois says she will be kept in work for the Overland free-for-all and he expects a winning with her, although she has been on the retired list for several years attending to maternal duties.

KILLIP & Co. sold on Tuesday of this week about twenty head of trotting bred horses belonging to Dan McCarty. The horses were not in the best of condition, but there were quite a number of bidders, and some fair prices were realized. The highest price brought by any of the lot was $110, and the sales ranged from that down to $20.

WM. MCMAHUS, a trotting horse trainer recently from the East, has located at San Jose and will have a string of trotters on the circuit. Mr. McMahon has taken out his drivers license already. Among others of his string will be Col. Moorehead's Anna Belle 2:27½, and Maud Murray a good three-year-old daughter of Anna Belle, by Hambletonian Wilkes.

FROM the manner in which the many horse shoers all over the country are taking interest in their profession the time is not far away when nearly everyone will fully understand the anatomy of the horse's foot and just what kind of shoe should fit this or that horse. The conventions are schools of instructions and those who desire to learn can gain a great deal of knowledge about the foot of the horse.

THE speed track in Golden Gate Park is now kept in the very best condition and is as fit for working and speeding horses as any track in the State. Every morning the roadsters speeded and worked there, make a scene that is lively in the extreme. The Park Commissioners are entitled to the esteem of all San Francisco horsemen for their efforts and energy in keeping the speed track in such fine order, and making it one of the attractive features of our beautiful park. The crowds of people who go out to see the horses speeded is growing larger each day.

COLONEL A. B. COIT, of the Fourteenth regiment, now at Columbus, Ohio, has received the following from his friends: "We send by Adjutant Wilson a Kentucky bred bay mare, which we propose to loan to the Fourteenth, to be ridden by one of its officers during the Spanish war, or as long as there is anything left of her or the Fourteenth. She is very fleet-footed going toward the enemy, but a Buffalo Bill could not ride her on a retreat, for she will buck worse than any Texas broncho that ever existed."

A YEARLING filly by Oro Wilkes out of Muscova by Belmont 64 sold at the March sale of the Wm. Corbitt horses at Cleveland this year for $400. Muscova now has a black colt by Oro Wilkes at foot and has been bred to Prince Air-lie. She will be offered at the Corbitt sale at Burlingame next Thursday. She has a record of 2:28½ as a three-year-old, is a grand individual and should be worth a good sum as a brood mare. The fact that a yearling from her sold for $400 this year proves her value.

CANDIDATE, owing to an injured tendon caused by a mishap that befel him early in life, was never raced and being without the prestige of a track reputation was overlooked except by a few shrewd breeders who were aware of his wonderful speed and close resemblance to his sire, the world-famed Electioneer. The few who patronize him have been amply repaid for their faith, for according to his chances he has sired as much extreme speed as any stallion ever owned in Tennessee.—Breeder and Horseman.

AT Agricultural Park, Sacramento, there are signs of preparation for the Oakland harness races, which begin June 25th. Owens Bros. arrived there last week with the pacer Joe Wheeler (2:07), a full brother of Joe Wheeler, and two others. Trainer Clark of Fresno reached the track on Wednesday with Teggies (2:12½) and the e likely looking green ones. Tom Holmes is getting Diawood (2:21½) and Abdine (2:26) into shape, and Zombro (2:11) is stepping miles just about as fast as his owner, George Beckers, could wish.

A KENTUCKY exchange says: Capt. Gen. Blanco's horse, that was sold at New Orleans a few days ago, was bought by Col. A. A. McGinnis. He is a splendid animal, 16 hands high and by Enfield. He was bought by Vega, the Spanish agent, especially for the Spanish captain general. Contractor King, who supplied the Spanish mules, says that Weyler made a fortune out of them, as he (King) received only $50 for each mule. Weyler sold them to the Spanish government for $135 each. It is said that Col. McGinnis will present Blanco's horse to Gen. Lee.

DURING the stud career of Guy Wilkes in California he has sired 3 with records of 2:09 and better; 8 in 2:12 or better; 15 with records of 2:15 or better; 23 in 2:19 list; 25 in 2:20 list; 27 in 2:21 list; 28 in 2:22 list; 29 in 2:23 list; 30 in 2:24 list; 31 in 2:25 list; 32 in 2:26 list; 33 in 2:27 list; 34 in 2:28 list; 35 in 2:29 list; 36 in 2:30 list; 37 in 2:31 list; 38 in 2:32 list; 39 in 2:33 list; 40 in 2:34 list; 41 in 2:35 list; 42 in 2:36 list; 43 in 2:37 list; 44 in 2:38 list; 45 in 2:39 list; 46 in 2:40 list; 47 in 2:41 list; 48 in 2:42 list; 49 in 2:43 list; 50 in 2:44 list; 51 in 2:45 list; ## Horse News and Gossip From the Colonies

It has long been an article of faith with me that the good quality of many of the North Island hacks is due to the fact that they are not subjected to early racing, says "Hotspur" in the Weekly Press. I am pretty sure if Waiuku had been raced as a two-year-old we would not now find him gracing the turf. Apropos of this, it is instructive to learn, in regard to the sensational horse Merloolas, the following from "Milroy's" notes in the Sydney Mail: He was not broken in until he had turned his third year, and to-day he is a great, well-furnished, sound six-year-old, who has virtually begun his usefulness while scores of other race horses that started only a couple of seasons ago as two-year-olds are now done with and useless. Merloolas was bred by Mr. John McCaughey on his famous Tooralie station, which is situated on the Darling, seventy miles below Bourke. Mr. McCaughey does not believe in racing his colts young, so the home bred ones are allowed to roam free on the rich plains until they are old enough to carry a man without injury to themselves. Last year he and I were yarning at Hawkesbury races and he told me he had half a dozen four-year-olds by his stallion St. Swithin that were just through the breakers' hands, and any one of them could carry 10st. and run half a mile in 52 seconds or under. He described them as big, properly-set "horses", and prophesied that some of them would give the metropolitan race goers a taste of their quality if they fell into good hands. These green horses which he mentioned won most of the Grass Fed races at Bourke afterwards. I hear one of them is booked for Sydney shortly, and Mr. informant warns me to "look out". Merloolas was reared in the same fashion as those Mr. McCaughey spoke of last year.

THE WINNING NEW ZEALAND TWO-YEAR-OLDS.—Appended will be found the table of winning two-year-olds up to date, which includes the amounts won at the Easter meeting up to and including Saturday. In calculating the amounts won I have deducted the five per cent. where clubs take off that amount, and placed money is added to the prize money, says a writer in the Weekly Press. BLOOD STOCK SALES.—A sale of blood stock was held at Tattersall's Bazaar, Christchurch, by Messrs. Pyne & Co. on Wednesday. There was a large attendance, but the sale was a very poor one, the lots quoted bringing low prices. The following were the sales effected:—Account of Mr. G. G. Stead—Ch c Kismis by Hotchkiss—Bridal Rose, two yrs, Mr. C. P. Murray, Aynsley, 40 gs.; br f Corselet, by Cuirassier—Rubina, two yrs, Mr. P. Campbell, 50 gs.; b c Legerity, by St. Leger—Hazel, two yrs, Mr. E. McKenzie, 20 gs. There were no bids for the yearlings submitted. Account of Mr. C. Lewis—Ch f Proposal, by St. George—Apropos, two yrs, Mr. B. Curtis, 50 gs. For Starshot, who did not enter the ring, 300 gs. was offered, but refused, while Cannonshot was also passed.

A Sydney dispatch of April 13th to the New Zealand Weekly Press was as follows: At the yearling sales the Kirkham stock realized good prices. The Abercorn—Tempe colt brought 400 gs. and two Gassoon fillies 305 gs. and 230 gs. respectively. A Grandmaster—First Love colt, included in the Duckenfield Park draft, brought 340 gs. and the Lochiel—Dona colt 300 gs.

It was a great pity that both Blazer and Gold Medallist were not amongst the runners in the Great Easter Handicap. Possibly Blazer would have been found better suited at a far longer shorter distance, but Gold Medallist ran so well in the Challenge Stakes, carrying 8st 13 pounds, that with his handicap allotment, under favorable conditions as regards getting away and position, it is not too much to suppose that he would have been very handy if he had not actually won the Easter Handicap. How Multiform would have fared at the weight Mr. Henry allotted him it is, of course, hard to say, but taking a line through his running in the Challenge Stakes, most people will say that he would have been in it—right in it—at the business end of the contest. My own opinion is that he would have won that race. He is evidently the superior of Gold Medallist over a distance, and might possibly have beaten that colt even had the Challenge Stakes been a furlong shorter, but on this point I am not at all sure. I hardly think that either of the colts were at their best. Multiform had not been working stoutly for more than a month. He had, however, not been altogether idle. Gold Medallist, on the other hand, had been doing some traveling, and, though he went to the post as soberly as an old horse, I fancy somehow that we have not seen him as well this season as we are likely to see him anon. He was probably better at Riccarton than at Hastings, and may run still better should he go on to Wellington. What his best distance is it is idle to try and guess—for it would be guesswork. I should require to know that he had been given a special training and failed to answer satisfactorily trials over a distance before I would believe that he cannot stay. When Gold Medallist is thoroughly fit he will be a hard horse to beat beyond short dashes. His pace is not possessed by many of our so-called stayers. As for Multiform, there is no question about his excellence. He is more of an every day three-year-old than Gold Medallist has proved, if not perhaps quite as fast, and he is an undoubted stayer, galloping with ease to himself and his rider; he is not so difficult a colt to handle in a race as his stable companion either. Had he been trained for the Great Autumn Handicap it is thought that his weight would not have been a prohibitive one, so good a colt has he demonstrated himself to be. The race was certainly run fast, and was a solid one from end to end, but in the spring of the year colts frequently carry their Derby weights nearly as fast over the same distance; and as some furnished three-year-olds in the autumn are reckoned as good then as ever they are in their lives, it is really hard to say what a colt like Multiform could have done in the company. As an all-round performer, he stands out by himself in the same way as Waiuku, who I take to be now the equal of any of the older division of horses racing south of line, and at all distances it would be hard to find one to match him. When trained for a short job he was all there, and we have had proof sufficient that he can keep going. This reminds me that the running of good ones further afield must not be lost sight of. Waiuku's toughest opponent during the past two seasons, the gay and brilliant St. Paul, has been showing up as brightly as ever, and his achievements under his imposts at the Auckland Racing Club's meeting, which terminated on Saturday, were of the highest order of merit. His Easter Handicap performance, with 10st 3 lb up, was a good one, though he was a good one. His second to Waiorongomai, carrying 10st. in the Autumn Handicap, a mile and a quarter, was a sterling effort, and to win, under 10st 3 lb, in the St. George Handicap, in which he covered the mile in 1min 41 sec, was probably the best performance a four-year-old or a horse of any age has recorded in this colony over a mile course. St. Paul is certainly the best four-year-old we have, and, now that Uniform and Vedette are out of the country, there is nothing of the same age in the same class with the son of St. Leger and Satanella. A wonderful performer St. Paul has proved, when it is remembered what a lot of traveling and racing he has done for three seasons past.—"Spectator" in the Weekly Press.

A Warning Against Imitators.

Our readers are no doubt familiar with Absorbine, the great remedy for removing soft bunches from man or beast. It would be remarkable indeed if the wonderful popularity of Absorbine, which has been advertised so long in our columns, had not attracted the imitator. Successes always do, and Absorbine has not escaped. We are impelled because of the unscrupulous character of the claims made by some of the Absorbine imitators, to warn our readers against every kind of imitation of this popular remedy. We are assured by the Absorbine manufacturer that any person claiming to possess the formula of Absorbine is a fraud. The moral is—don't be induced to buy anything said to be the same or as good as Absorbine, nor be deceived by any similarity of name. There is but one Absorbine, and it is always called Absorbine, manufactured only by W. F. Young, P. D. F., Springfield, Mass.

A. M. LINNELL's Deceiver mare, Clara White, has been sent to the Ruinat Stock Farm and bred to the horse after which the farm is named. Mr. Linnell's Clarillo, a bay filly 2, by Morello from Clara White, is at Dutard's stock farm. She has never started—in fact has never had a saddle on her.

LIKE RACE-HORSES IN TRAINING—There is a marked similarity between the soldiers which are now crossing the ferry and racehorses in the condition which will best fit them for the race. From Nevada, Wyoming, Nebraska and Minnesota, hardy looking, sinewy, muscles apparently "fined" to the proper point, only adipose enough to lubricate, not the least appearance as they march along of being "muscle-bound."

Sun-bronzed, every indication of robust health, and above all, on close inspection, showing the eye bright and clear, calm resolution, in some an intimation or dare-devil recklessness, scarcely one that does not look you squarely in the face when he notices the close scrutiny he is subjected to, a sort of defiance, or rather resentment at the impertinence of the inquisition. But a slight bow, a wave of the hand, or a touch of the hat, and the fierce look changes as quickly as the shadows of fleecy clouds do over a field of waving grain.

I have seen several companies of these mountaineers crossing on the ferry boat; one from Nevada were drawn up in double line from bow to stern, and another from Wyoming. No mistaking their fitness for the place they occupied and so far as could be told under the covering of clothes well entitled to the comparison embodied in the "side-head."

Nothing at all like "holiday soldiers." No attempt at adornment further than flowers in button holes, or larger bunches on haversacks or other conspicuous places. And no wonder that these were cherished, so different at this time of the year from their home surroundings.

Any thorough horseman will tell an enquirer that horses fitted for the show ring are not nearly so attractive to him as when in condition to race to the best of their ability. Even when trained under old-time methods for a long race, when ribs could be counted when the animal was fifty yards away, if there was no appearance of being overdrawn or "drilled to death" far preferable than when rounded out with flesh, be-ribboned and bedecked to please the fancy of the spectators.

The eye is a token of the condition that every observant trainer takes note of, and I am strongly impressed with the idea that it is the best indication of the nervous qualities of both horses and men. Courage, cowardice, determination, gameness, even the physical powers dominated by the spirit which shines from the eye, or rendered useless by the lack of the stimulus which the nerves should afford.

Judging from what can be seen by so cursory an examination as a trip across the bay affords, these mountaineers will never flinch when the hour of trial comes.

Long-odds that when brought into action, even against superiority in numbers, our bookies would be loath to take even money.

TROTTERING IN NEW ZEALAND.—The New Zealand fanciers of trotting horses are jubilant over the arrival from Sydney, New South Wales, of Mr. A. J. Buckland's stable of trotters, the most striking figures among which is Fritz, by a long way the champion of the Antipodes, his mark 2:14.4-5 sec's.

A good deal of California blood is in the "string" of Mr. Buckland. Quoting from "Spectator" in the Weekly Press: "The only stallion in Mr. Buckland's lot is St. Louis, a rather plain box headed dark bay with black points, ten years old. He has a track record of five minutes for two miles, and one of 2:25 for one mile."

His sire, Burlington B, won the Championship at the Sydney Centennial Exhibition, and has left a number of winners. Oakland, his dam, won races, and was got by Bob Mason, 2:27½, who has sired some fast horses.

With the nine horses which comprised Mr. Buckland's team were two belonging to that well-known trotting horse enthusiast Dr. Slade, of Sydney, who has had and imported some good horses in his time. They are both performers of some distinction, especially the aged grey mare Silver Cloud who has figured in many a contest in New South Wales. She has been trotting for seven or eight years at least, and is a particularly wiry, useful sort, showing a fair amount of quality—a deal of the Arab. Her sire was the American-bred Len Rose."

Bob Mason by Echo and his dam Belle Mason, thoroughbred, by Williamsons' Belmont, there is a grand combination of the blood of the "patriarch" and that which has been so "propotent" in this country. Without further proof than Directum presents, sufficient to justify the highest encomiums, the double strain through the sire of his dam, Venture, and the sire of his great grandam, Langford, intensifying the argument, lending additional force to the value of "near infusions."

HYITA (2) BY DEXTER PRINCE—HELENA, 2.11 1-4.

And it is not out of place in this connection to call attention to the fact that though Director has stood in the East more seasons than he did in California and yet the two fastest of his get were bred here, and the second fastest, Direct, had also the near infusion, his grandam being by Jack Hawkins, thoroughbred son of Boston.

Hartford Trotting Association has determined to try the European method of handicapping harness horses. At least that system of placing them such a distance apart and all starting from the same signal.

Without having seen either tried I am well satisfied that the Australasian plan is preferable. So many seconds between them, and were the superiority measured by having each horse securing a moving start that would be better than the attempt to keep them standing on the mark waiting for the word.

Any innovation, however, from our old, old, customs is a move in the right direction, so long as it appears plausible, or gives promise of attractiveness. No matter if our methods of starting and handicapping are superior in many respects to either European or Australasian systems, it will add variety, "that spice of life which lends it all its flavor."

VALUE OF EXERCISE.—Notwithstanding young people may feel well, eat well and sleep well when little time is given to exercise, it is an imperative necessity that old folk and those who are fast approaching that sombre era of life should take all the exercise they can without fatigue, and the best of all to tone muscles and nerves is walking. Not sauntering. Not slower than a mile in twenty minutes after a little preliminary work has been got through with.

This week I have been trying an increase of work—work in the sense that trainers understand the word, and already find it beneficial.

In place of one trip to the office in the morning, lunching in the city and home in the evening, I cross on the 7 A. M. boat, return on the 11 A. M., to the city again on the 1 P. M. and home on the 5 P. M. Three-quarters of a mile from my house to the station, about the same distance from boat to the office, so that the two trips give walking exercise for six miles with occasionally an addition to the score. A far better appetite for lunch at 12 M. with time enough for a quiet smoke before starting for the 1 o'clock trip, and dinner is enjoyed with a heartier appetite, sounder sleep at night, awaking in the early morning thoroughly refreshed, in far better "order" for the work of the day.

A little soreness after the first two or three days, rushing to the work being done over the hard pavements, but that might be avoided by having rubber heels on our boots.

Practice is infinitely superior to theory, but there are sound reasons for the greater necessity of exercise by the old over the young or those of middle age, though these, too, would be benefited. I have called the later years of living the sombre side, but exercise will surely make them a "heap" brighter.

IN THE DARK. Partially so, at least, on the receipt of a letter of which the following is a copy:

MR. JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON:

2111 Adeline Street, Oakland, Cal.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find clipping taken from the official report of Board of Review Meeting held in Chicago May 10-12, 1898 showing decision in case 3210.

Yours very truly, W. H. Gocher, Secretary.

(Clipping)
3210—National Trotting Association, Hartford, Conn., exparte. Application for an investigation as to certain alleged fraude.

Transferred to Pacific District Board.

In a letter from Secretary Gocher dated April 14, 1898, there was enclosed an official notice of the next meeting of the Board of Review and also that a case I was concerned in would be submitted. Inasmuch as the titles are different, it cannot be said authoritatively that the last notice refers to the first, and until it comes before the Pacific District Board the puzzle cannot be solved.

The presumption is strong, however, that it is the same case, disguised, though the reasons for masquerading can only be surmised.

ILLUSTRATIONS.—The pictures on this page are representations of scenes on the California Jockey Club grounds, and small as they are will give a better understanding of the originals than several columns of "pen-painting." One a rear view of the northern part of the grand stand, the covered walk from the stand to the offices and saddling paddock, and a part of the building in which are offices, jockeys' room, saddling paddock &c. This was taken from the covered approach from entrance gate to stand and shows a part of the lawn on the northern side of that approach.

The other is a view of the lawn between the offices, the covered walk, the lane from the saddling paddock and the track. Very beautiful that "patch" of grass, shrubbery and flowers as shown in that picture, timing and judges' stands. The high wire fence that separates the esplanade from the lawn is also shown, and all together it may be called a pretty picture.

The third is Hyita in the foreground, the kindergarten where so many cracks of Palo Alto breeding have taken their preliminary work, their first instructions in the art of going fast at a partially artificial gait. Hyita brought $1,900 at the sale in Cleveland, and while in these times of depression that must be regarded a good price, if it does not prove a good investment it will be owing to a turn of very bad luck, in fact a succession of mishaps.

A DISPATCH from New York, under date of May 18th, says: "Charley Patterson to-day purchased five fairly good race horses. From John E. Madden he bought Great Bend, who is entered in the Suburban, and also Benares. From Phil Dwyer he purchased Passover and Rifle, and from the Oneck Stable he bought Deerslayer. These and all the horses in his stable Mr. Patterson shipped to the Oakley track this afternoon. It is his intention to confine his racing entirely to the West this season. His brother-in-law, Hiram Pierce, accompanies Mr. Patterson west."

W. M. MURRY's handsome young mare Wilda, by imp. Brutus, has a suckling chestnut colt marked just like its sire, Thornhill, and good judges pronounce it one of the best-looking youngsters ever seen in California. It was forty-three inches in height when foaled. The mare has been bred to St. Carlo, also imp. Elsie, Couchita by Friar Tuck and Jessie C. (dam of Corce and Michael III.).

W. L. STANFIELD has bought Toribio (by Apache—Marin) of G. Pacheco, and takes him to Montana, along with his recent purchase, Queen Nubia, and five others

The Unattractive Wee Stake Race and the Sensational 'Special.'

The announcement by President Williams that in future special races for named horses would take the place of the small and unattractive stake events at Oakland track will be noted with pleasure by those who like battles of the turf not of the sham order. Our understanding of the C. J. C. President's ideas regarding stake races is that the stakes ranging in value from $1,000 to $1,500 have enough original entries to make them look well—on paper—but when it comes to running for them the fields are comparatively small and the race generally as one-sided as the "go" of the Spanish against our brave Dewey's forces.

In our opinion the day of the small stake has gone and why shouldn't it be when a turfman with a good two or three-year-old can run several times a week for $400 and $500 purses and not have his charge penalized for winning one or more of these purses? If he wins a $1,000 stake (first money $700) his winner generally has to pick up a penalty of from three to five pounds in the next stake. And these small stakes are not worth saving a horse for either. No stake race should be worth less than $2,000 to the winner, in our opinion. A turfman can afford to train his horse "to the hour" and save it for months if at the end of that time he stands a chance of winning from $2,000 to $10,000, and we expect to see stake values materially increased by our jockey clubs and the number of stake events cut down about sixty per cent.

That there will be much more interest in racing under the proposed plan there can be no doubt. As we understand it, the specials for named horses at Oakland track will close for the two weeks' meeting on the Saturday the meeting ends at Ingleside. The probabilities are that there will be about two of these "specials" per week, worth $2,000 or more to the owner of the winner. Last winter and spring, on a Wednesday and Saturday, what vast crowds weight-for-age races at from seven furlongs to a mile and a quarter between the cracks assembled here would have brought out! What speculation would have been indulged in! What contests we would have been called upon to chronicle! Imagine a weight-for-age race at a mile and a furlong between Satsuma, Traverser, Fleur de Lis, Count of Flanders, Morellito, Briar Sweet, The Roman, Buckwa, 'Ostler Joe, Buck Massie, Napamax and Senator Bland, for instance! Or one at seven furlongs between Geyser, May W., Paul Griggs, Buckwa, Briar Sweet, Libertine, George Miller, Traverser, Satsuma, Napamax, Glorian and Fonsovanah! Such fields would bring out thousands where hundreds now attend and well repay the enterprising men that made the welcome change. Let us hope that these original plans may be carried out successfully and that racing here may be on a plane of excellence unequalled in all America.

WE wish to acknowledge the receipt of the excellent sale catalogues of Rancho del Paso and Belle Meade. This year's Rancho del Paso sale will consist of 129 head. The Haggin youngsters are by imp. Anchorite, imp. Artillery, imp. Bassettlaw (first lot), imp. Candlemas, imp. Cavalier, imp. Dandie Dinmont, imp. Darebin, Darriwell, Fitz James, Fresno, imp. Golden Garter, imp. Goldfinch, Hanover, imp. Islington, imp. July, imp. Kismet, imp. Midlothian, imp. Order, imp. Prestonpans, Roche, Rousseau, Salvator, imp. Sir Modred, imp. St. Andrew, imp. Star Ruby (first lot), Tenny, Tyrant, Uncle Jess (first lot) and imp. Watercress. There are more famous mares represented in this sale by youngsters than in any other that will take place this year. There are sixty-four from the Belle Meade establishment, and they are by Iroquois, Luke Blackburn, Longstreet, Clarendon, imp. Great Tom, Inspector B., Tremont, imp. Dandie Dinmont and imp. Loyalist. Many celebrated stud matrons have representatives in this lot soon to be disposed of at auction.

HAMBURG was probably the best-sold horse in the history of the American turf. While one swallow does not make a summer, the fact that Bowling Brook won the rich Belmont stakes last Thursday by six lengths, pulled up, with Hamburg third, ten lengths further away, run to a standstill by the winner, would go far to show that the colt is more of a sprinter than a "stayer" and indicate that at $10,000 he bears a close resemblance to a gold brick. The plucky purchaser, Marcus Daly, has our best wishes, and we would be willing that he should have the laugh on us and Hamburg turn out as good a three and four-year-old as Hindoo proved, but we begin to believe John Madden was a Solomon when he said to Mr. Daly's representative, with tears in his eyes presumably of joy, "Take him, take him [and mayhap, sotto voce, "you can't grab him too quickly or write the check too suddenly to suit me.]" And as the moons wax and wane that thought of Shakespeare's naturally arises in the minds of those recalling the sale that set the tongues of race-goers a-wagging: "There is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." Mr. Madden evidently knows this particular kind of tide when he sees it, and his tide bore a $40,000 check. It was a juicy and succulent Hamburg "stake" surely, though Mr. Daly may not just at this writing, like the flavor.

WILLIAM G. LAYNG announces in this issue that he is prepared to take consignments of thoroughbreds and dispose of them to the best advantage at the Occidental Horse Exchange, 225 Tehama street. His sales of last year were very successful. See the advertisement in this issue.

News From the Islands.

KAPIOLANI PARK, HONOLULU, May 14, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Quite a crowd visited the track this P. M. to witness the match race between Tom Hollinger's chestnut mare, Margaret H., sired by Harry J. Agnew's Boswell, Jr., 2 19, dam by Elmo, and Wm. Horton's roan mare, Directress, sired by Direct, dam Elma, by Elmo; the latter was piloted by Gibson and the former by Bagsby. The match was for $500 a side, mile heats, 3 in 5 and was won by the Boswell mare in three straight heats. Time, 2:26 1-5, 2:24 1-5, 2:24 2-5. The judges officiating were Capt. Chiny, Hoffman and Seely Shaw; the timers, Dr. Miner and Dickey Davis. One hour and twenty minutes finished the sport. The judges did their work promptly and satisfactorily.

Two weeks from to-day will witness another match between L. L. McCandles' bay mare, Irish Lassie, by St. Patrick, dam Aurelia, by Albert W., 2:20 (this filly was raised at Agnew Stock Farm and sold last year; she defeated this same mare, April 29th, and got a mark of 2:28), and Quinn's bay mare, "Violin" (full sister to Vidette). It will, no doubt, be a closely contested race and I predict heats very close to 2:20.

New stalls are being erected and it looks like business at the track. Our Boy, now known as "Wela Ka Hao," with his owner, Billy Cunningham, piloting him in his work last Friday, went to the half-mile pole in 1:07, and W. Wood, with Durfee up, worked a half mile yesterday in 1:07 also. The fastest full mile worked by either so far has been 2:22. Harry Agnew is working Loupe, but the fastest mile he has worked has been 2:35. It is amusing to see how many watches are pulled from behind fences and cracks in the stable when Loupe is taken out on the track.

Harry says that he don't think he can get Loupe into shape for the 11th to go a hard race, but that if nothing happens till the 4th of July, that he will give them a horse race. Harry has a nice looking brown mare that he defies them all with and offers to match anything on the Islands with, but he wants the privilege of naming the race after the money is up—he doesn't bar hot stuff (Wela Ka Hoa) or H. Wood, either. Mr. W. Cornwell has got W. Wood here. He has Durfee, from Los Angeles, engaged to pilot Wood and he seems to do his work well. Will let you have a memorandum of the horses in training at track as soon as time will permit.

Australasian Notes.

The Calcutta Racing Club charges bookmakers £10 a day for the privilege of plying their vocation at all meetings held under the auspices of the club.

The totalizator returns at the Feilding Club's Easter meeting were a record for the club—an increase of over £3,500 on the investments at last year's meeting.

The three days' autumn meeting of the Auckland Racing Club was a record one for the time of the year. The sum of £28,884 was passed through the totalizator, against £20,848 at the corresponding meeting last year.

Another big handicap achievement was that of Blazer, a three-year-old gelding son of St. Clair and Mountain Lily. He has frequently demonstrated his smartness, now he has shown that he can stay beyond four or five furlongs. His latest performance at Riccarton—five furlongs in 1min 13-5 sec. at the Midsummer Meeting, carrying 9st 11lb in the Flying Handicap from a barrier start, and his six furlongs in 1min 15 3-5 sec. in the Templeton Handicap, carrying 9st 7lb also from a barrier start—to say nothing of previous victories are such as to stamp him a very brilliant sprinter; indeed, up to five, and possibly up to six furlongs, at weight-for-age, I don't think we have anything young or old that can beat him. Exceptionally fast off the mark, it would be interesting to see him pitted against such horses as Goldspur and Vedette, two of the best sprinters we have seen for some time in handicap events.

The star performers at the A. J. C. Autumn Meeting were Amberite, Meerloolas and Bobadil. The last-named, in annexing both the races for which he was sent, takes his place indisputably at the head of Australian two-year olds, and his success pitted against all comers at a mile, suggests that, though brilliancy may be his forte, he stays as well. Bobadil, indeed, seems to be quite worthy to be classed with the other cracks sent forth from St. Albans, and the famous establishment has, since Mr. W. R. Wilson's regime, regularly housed "one of the best" of the season. Amberite, with three wins and a second, has well maintained, has in fact enhanced his reputation. The most profitable horse of the season, he has earned quite a little fortune in stakes alone. The Leger and his two weight-for-age successes were, it would appear, very simple tasks for Amberite, and his best effort was undoubtedly the Cup. In the light of after events we can imagine the task he was taking on in being asked to concede 18 pounds to a six-year-old like Meerloolas, who on Saturday carried 9st 2lb and ran a mile and a half in 2:36, beating a strong field. No wonder the Carbine colt was unequal to the big handicap, and in finishing in front of everything, bar the winner, he has re-established his title to be styled a colt of super-excellence. There is no doubt Amberite was not himself at the V. R. C. Autumn Meeting, else his long list of victories would be still longer.

WM. CECIL, the well known trainer, left for Denver this week, taking with him the pacing mare Irvington Belle, 2:18½, by Nutwood Wilkes, and the bay colt John A. McKerron, 2:24½, also by Nutwood Wilkes. From Denver Mr. Cecil will go East, probably following the same circuit that Mr. Van Bokkelen, Andy McDowell, Thos. Keating and other Californians decide to take.

INCORPORATED.—By a unanimous vote of the members present it was resolved to transfer "all stakes, memberships accounts, assets and all other business of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association to the new corporation having the same name." Thus ended the old association and an explanation of my vote in the affirmative will not be out of place, inasmuch as I have opposed incorporation strenuously.

There was no surrender of principle, merely a question of expediency, whether the association would be benefited or not by incorporation. I have stated, and reiterated the statement, in this department of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, that should the question be decided in accordance with the Constitution of the P. C. T. H. B. A., whatever the result I would do all in my power to advance the interests depending. To fulfill this agreement when the roll was called, my name being the last, every vote recorded in favor of the resolution, and cheerfully and heartily I coincided, so that there should not be a dissenting vote.

As it now stands that question is settled, it has been held expedient to incorporate, and it is the duty of every member to do all in his power to insure the success of the new association, and for my part it will be a pleasure, a welcome task, to aid in promoting the interests of the corporation, and, consequently, the interests of all connected with harness horses.

Before the votes were taken the By-Laws reported by the committee were read, subject to amendments, as thirty days are allowed to file a copy, though few changes will be found necessary. In many respects a transcript of the old Constitution, but, as a whole, superior to the former instrument.

Now that the nine-year-old society has surrendered its name and all other "appurtenances thereunto belonging," it will be well to secure a comprehensive statement of its affairs. Sufficient, perhaps, a financial review, showing receipts, expenditures for each year of its existence, and the amount of the assets turned over to the new association. A few years ago Mr. Frank H. Burke introduced a resolution that the books be expeted, and according to my recollection that was done, therefore, it will not be a "long job." It may be that "points" will be secured which will aid in the management of the business hereafter. At all events the satisfaction to all concerned will be abundant compensation for the outlay.

Wednesday next, June 1st, the entries will close for the first two weeks of the meeting, commencing June 25th, will close. If owners and trainers recognize the importance of this meeting, and realize the effect of a full list of entries on harness racing in the future, there will be no lack of horses in every one of the advertised "events." Should that be the case, there is scarcely a question that other meetings will follow, and that is not all the benefits that will follow. With good fields and the management satisfactory (and that is assured) the speculating division will be out in full force.

Enough of that fraternity in San Francisco to present a goodly array of attendants, and the novelty of the race will insure the presence of many spectators who take pleasure in watching the races without the stimulus of a wager. "Quick action," the cry of the first named; variety, close contests, short delays say the others.

On the track of the California Jockey Club there is plenty of room to start large fields, and while it is more satisfactory to a number of race-goers to watch a race in which not more than six horses contend the majority takes more enjoyment in a "mob" of starters. Then the "glorious uncertainty" is enhanced when there are so many disturbing influences, and this is heightened when dashes in place of heats are the conditions of the contests. When the start is so near the turn as it is when a mile, or miles is the distance, positions drawn are quite an element in the calculation. Drivers, many of them, at least, scarcely realize that every foot outside of another entails a loss of more than three feet on each turn, that is, when one of the contestants is driven outside of another nearly six feet will mark the position that can be taken with safety and, per consequence, the outhar has to go more than eighteen feet further than the one which is favored with a shorter radius.

Safe to say that a liberal response from owners and trainers in the way of entries, and the coming meeting will be more than fairly successful.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

JOCKEY SPENCER has received favorable criticism, in deed, at the hands of the New York critics. His management of Huguenot, whose temper is not the sweetest conceivable, and Reprisal, is given especial mention by one writer. Spencer showed in California that he was a rider above the ordinary, and it is not at all surprising to hear that he has caught on in the East.

Training Carriage Horses.

The question is now quite frequently asked, "How much does it cost to train and get a carriage horse ready for market?" Indeed, the idea seems to prevail in some quarters that a regular expensive course of training is required with the coach and carriage horse, as it is with the trotter. The belief quoted is entirely erroneous, no expensive system of training is necessary, no boots, hobbles or other costly paraphernalia; the horse must be well broken, well groomed and well conditioned, that is all. Of course, the better broken the horse is, and the more accustomed to the sights and sounds of urban life, the better he will sell; but even if he never saw an electric car, let alone passed under an L road with its trains thundering over his head, he will bring a long price, providing his action and conformation are all they should be. Wonderful stories are going the rounds about contrivances necessary to give a park horse the proper action, and various devices, ranging in scope from spectacles, with magnifying lenses, to complicated spring "contraptions" to fasten to the forelegs, and so educate the horse to double his knee; but all such are hollow mockeries; unless the horse has the right conformation, he will never acquire the action, and if he has the action his conformation, as a general rule, will be of the kind required. In short, type and action generally go together, both having been developed simultaneously, and the mating of the right sire and dam is the best "contraption" for the fixing of high action in the progeny.

There is no doubt that a horse with naturally high action may be made to go higher by proper treatment. For instance, when first taken up, he should never be driven to the point of great fatigue, and he should always be kept feeling well and in prime condition. Then he will delight to bound along, pulling up his knees and hocks, and proudly showing himself off to spectators. No amount of fixing will put action into a horse not properly formed, and it must never be forgotten that there is as much difference in high action as there is difference between proverbial chalk and cheese. The horse that doubles his knees up quickly and elams his feet down again hard, will not sell in the same class with the horse whose forefoot is picked up and put down as though following the circumference of a wheel, the pastern springing quickly when the foot touches, not strikes, the ground and is picked gracefully up again to perform its round circling motion once more. The horse with the latter way of going will outwear two or more of the others, and though any kind of high action will sell to advantage, the more graceful sort described is the kind that should be sought. It goes with the conformation of shoulder, head, neck, loin, quarter and hock, that is most desired, and is in all ways infinitely the most preferable.

Grow the sires and dams that will produce offspring with this action and conformation; all the training that will be found necessary is very slight. The horse must be taught to drive on a loose rein; a puller will never sell to any advantage. No gentleman will bother with one for a moment. When thoroughly broken on the farm to do all kinds of light work, the education of the colt should be continued as far as possible in the nearest village. He should be thoroughly accustomed to stand unmoved when express trains and electric cars dash by, and he should be accustomed to as much "town life" as possible.

He should never be made to draw a heavy load, for that spoils his mouth, stiffens his shoulders and sours his temper; none but light work should ever be demanded of him. He should, as noted, be kept as fat and feeling as gay as possible, and when the time comes to sell him he should be sleek as a seal, sound and cheerful, with his mane foretop and tail as nature made them, and all as clean and fresh-looking as hands can make him. This is all the training required for a carriage horse. It involves no expenditure of money, nothing but common sense, patience and the exercise of as much sense as the horse has himself. Stallions to beget such carriage horses must have the qualities required by right of inheritance, and the more of them the mares have the better; but no matter how the horses are produced, the profits in the business are large and the expenses small.

HOOF-BEATS.

H. H. HUNN, formerly with W. S. Hobart, has a small stable in the East. His Gala Day won a heavy-weight handicap recently.

BEN BRUSH has been shipped to Kentucky. The famous son of Bramble and Roseville has run his last race. He will stand as a sire at Mr. Keene's breeding establishment at Castleton, Ky.

THE big June meeting at Denver is attracting some of the best horses now racing here. Fred Edwards has decided to have a try for Colorado gold with the flying filly Magdalenas, the speediest piece of two-year-old racing furniture in California, the handy filly Lady Ashley and the good mare Etta H.

STARSHOT, the four-year-old mare that won the Dunedin Cup this year, cost but 12 guineas as a yearling. She is by Chainshot (son of Musket and Locket) out of Veno, by imp. Codogan (son of Cremorne); second dam Wave, by imp. Malton. She was tried as a two-year-old, but went amiss and was spelled, winning a race at Dunedin in the spring of 1897.

Jeddah Won the Epsom Derby—Odds, 100 to 1.

EPSOM, England, May 25.—The 218th renewal of the Deby Stakes (the classic Derby) of 6000 sovereigns, was run at Epsom Downs to-day and was won by Mr. J. W. Larnach's chestnut colt Jeddah, by Janissary, out of Pilgrimage.

The race is for three-year-old colts, by subscription of 50 sovereigns each, half forfeit, the nominator of the winner to receive 500 sovereigns; the owner of the second horse to receive 400 sovereigns and the owner of the third horse to receive 200 sovereigns of the stake. The course is about a mile and a half.

Derby Day opens fine and pleasantly cool. There were the usual scenes on road and rail and immense crowds of people gathered on the Downs. The remarkable number of runners, eighteen, unequalled in the last twenty-three years, coupled with the openness of the result, added greatly to their interest in the event.

The result, in detail was as follows:

J. W. Larnach's ch. c. Jeddah, by Janissary out of Pilgrimage..... 1
Duke of Westminster's b. c. Batt, by Shuen out of Vampire..... 2
Prince of Wales' b. c. Dunlop, by Ayreshire out of Fortuna..... 3

[BY EDITOR.—The winner is a half-brother to Canterbury Pilgrim, winner of The Oaks of 1896. Pilgrimage, their dam, won the One Thousand Guineas of 1878. Lady Audley, dam of Pilgrimage, was sent to France in 1881, and Tristan, sire of Canterbury Pilgrim, also went to France after his turf career came to an end. Janissary, the sire of Jeddah, was by the great Isonomy out of Jannette, winner of the Oaks and St. Leger of 1878.]

Sir Tatton Sykes' bay colt Disraeli, the favorite, led until passing Sherwood's, when Elfin drew to the front and led until descending the hill. Then Batt assumed the lead, but was joined by the Duke of Portland's bay colt Wantage and Jeddah, a quarter of a mile from home, Jeddah winning by three-quarters of a length. A length and a half separated second and third horses. The Duke of Devonshire's chestnut colt Dieudonne was fourth. The time was 2:37. The betting previous to the start was 100 to 1 against Jeddah, 100 to 1 against Dunlop, and 10 to 1 against Batt.

Previous to the race the chief interest appeared to centre in J. W. Rogers' American bay colt Archduke II, by Luke Blackburn out of Duchess by Kingfisher, a half brother to Clifford, a horse of which the public knew little except reports of trials, including a supposed phenomenal performance against History, the winner of the Great Metropolitan stakes. The Americans were said to be supporting Archduke II heavily and it was recalled that it is just a century since Archduke I won the Derby. The other American horses were the Lorillard-Beresford stable's entry Elfin, a bay colt by Sensation, out of Equality, and August Belmont's chestnut colt Bridegroom II.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by a large party, was present at the race.

Following is the pedigree of Jeddah, the winner.

It Never Failed to Cure.

WALCOTT, Ind., January 24, 1896.

I see you are still handling the Gombault Caustic Balsam. I wish to say, right now and here, that it is far the best liniment I ever used, and I have in years past used a great deal. I would rather have one bottle of it than a barrel of any other kind I ever used. It never failed to cure for me.

CHAS. E. ROSS.

THE New York Sun of Sunday says: "The noted handicap race horse Ben Brush, purchased last winter by James R. Keene from M. F. Dwyer for a big sum, is lame. The tendons of his front feet are slightly bowed and last year's Suburban winner is likely to be put on the shelf for some time. That he has permanently broken down is denied. Trainer Tom Green said last night that he is confident he can get a good race out of the sturdy son of Bramble—Roseville before the season is through. Ben Brush remained with "Hardy" Campbell and worked with M. F. Dwyer's string at Gravesend up to last Friday, when he pulled up lame despite the protection of strong bandages. He was then transferred to the headquarters of the Keene string at Sheepshead Bay. Ben Brush is slated to carry top weight in both the Brooklyn and Suburban handicaps."

DON'T forget that races will commence at the Alameda Driving Club Monday promptly at 1 o'clock.

NOTICE TO SECRETARIES.

If secretaries of gun clubs will send us the full scores of their regular monthly shoots we will be pleased to publish them; but we must receive the copy on Wednesday to insure its insertion that week.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:
Alpine—Deer, Sept. 2 to Oct. 15.
Alameda—Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 15.
Colusa—Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 15.
Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Contra Costa—Deer, July 20 to Sept. 2. (Use of dogs prohibited).
El Dorado—Doves, July 20 to Feb. 1.
Fresno—Market hunting and shipping game out of the county prohibited.

Humboldt—Grouse and Wilson snipe, Sept. 1 to Feb. 15. Killing of waterfowl prohibited between one-half hour after sunset and one-half hour before sunrise.

Kern—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.
Lake—Deer, Aug. 1 to Oct. 1.
Los Angeles—Shipping game to markets outside of the county prohibited.

Marin—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 15.
Madera—Market hunting prohibited.
Monterey—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1st.

Orange—Doves, Aug. 1 to Feb. 1. Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).
Riverside—Shipping game out of the county prohibited.

San Benito—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. (Market hunting prohibited).
Santa Barbara—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 14. Use of hounds prohibited. (Market hunting prohibited).

San Diego—Shipping quail out of the county prohibited.
San Luis Obispo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. Doves, July 15 to Dec. 1. (Use of hounds prohibited. Hunting for markets situated outside of the county prohibited).

San Mateo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. (Use of dogs prohibited).
Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. (Shooting from boat at high tide prohibited).

Shasta—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1.
Sierra—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Sutter—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Doves, July 15 to Jan. 1.

Trinity—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.
Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game out of the county prohibited.

Ventura—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).

The State Tournament.

A meeting of the Board of Governors of the California Inanimate Target Association will be held in the parlors of the Occidental Hotel this evening to make the final arrangements for the state tournament which will be held to-morrow and Monday.

Representatives of the various clubs taking part in the tournament must be present to formulate the proper systematizing of details, order of team shooting, etc., etc.

From present indications the attendance of shooters promises to be far better than anticipated, though in numbers not up to previous tournaments—the reason for this is obvious and not by any means owing to lack of interest or decadence of the sport.

A new arrangement of entrance money has resulted in an increase of purses, the pools in each event running from $60 to $100, thus providing a liberal return to the winners.

The grounds at Ingleside have been placed in first class condition and will be looked after by properly appointed committees. A large attendance of spectators is almost assured.

Live-Bird Shoot at San Bruno.

The South End Gun Club held a very successful and lively pigeon shoot at San Bruno last Sunday. The attendance was good. Five events were shot off when the supply of birds gave out. Thirty-eight dozen birds were used during the day. The members and their friends had a very pleasant time, the club dinner being a most enjoyable and convivial affair. The South Ends now have thirty-five active members on the roll and the club is in first-class condition.

The first race of the day was at twelve birds, $5 entrance, three moneys, high guns to win. The scores were:

P. McRae	2111121111-12	Taylor	00210101010-6
Chortland	122010121122-10	M. McDonald	100*0222212-6

McRae took first money on a straight string. Chortland's ten kills gave him second money, and the nine men, Igen, Peel and McDonald divided third money.

The second race at six birds, $1.00 entrance, three moneys high guns to win, shows the following results:

P. McRae	1*1111-5	Swarkee	211*02-4
Taylor	012122-5	J. Bickerstaff	002220-3

R. Igen	110022-4	Swarkee	01100*2
F. M. Berges	121003-3

*Dead out of bounds.

The fourth race at six birds shows the scores as follows:

P. McRae	121211-6	J. Schroder	020121-4
R. Igen	002111-4	J. Bickerstaff	001*20-2
J. McDonald	122010-1

The closing race of the day was a freeze-out, McRae and J. McDonald dividing the money, the day's sport was brought to a close on account of a shortage of birds. The scores were: P. McRae 3, J. McDonald 3, R. Igen 0, T. Lewis *.

Pete Murphy gave the boys an exhibition during the shoot. P. McRae shot in fine form, missing but one bird out of thirty-three, and using the second barrel but seven times. The birds were a rather hard lot.

AMERICAN SHOOTING ASSOCIATION.

Rules for Live-Bird Shooting.

[Revised January 1, 1893, by C. W. Dimick.]

Rule 1—Referee—A referee, whose decision shall be final, shall be appointed by the contestants, or management.

Rule 2—Duties of Referee—The referee shall see that the traps are properly set at the beginning of the match, and kept in order to the finish, and that they are properly filled. He may at any time, and must, when so requested by a contestant, select one or more cartridges from those of a shooter at the score, and publicly test same for proper loading. If the cartridge, or cartridges, are found to be improperly loaded, the shooter shall suffer the penalty as provided in Rule 15.

Rule 3—Scorer—A scorer shall be appointed by the contestants, or management, whose score shall be the official one. All scoring shall be done with ink or indelible pencil. The scoring of a lost bird shall be indicated by a "o," and of a dead bird by the figure "1."

Rule 4—Puller—A puller shall be appointed by the contestants, or management, and shall be placed at least six feet behind the shooter, and it shall be his duty to pull the traps evenly and fairly for each contestant, and instantly after the shooter calls "Pull." He must use a trap-shooting indicator, or other device that may be furnished by the management, so that the shooter will not know which trap is to be pulled. All traps must be filled before the shooter calls "Pull."

If more than one bird is liberated, the shooter may call "No bird;" but if he shoots, the result must be scored. Should the puller not pull in accordance with the indicator, he shall be removed and another puller substituted.

Rule 5—Arrangement of Traps—All matches shall be shot from five ground traps, placed 5 yards apart, in the segment of a circle. The radius of the circle shall be 30 yards from the shooter's score. The traps shall be numbered from No. 1 on the left to No. 5 on the right, consecutively (see Diagram).

NOTE—A ground trap is one that lies flat with the surface of the ground when open, and gives the bird its natural flight in starting.

Rule 6—The Rise—The rise shall be:
30 yards for 10-bore guns.
28 yards for 12-bore guns.
26 yards for 14 and 16-bore guns.
25 yards for 20-bore guns.

Rule 7—Boundary—The boundary for both single and double bird shooting shall be the segment of a 50-yards circle and a dead line. The circle shall be drawn from a point 10 yards beyond the center trap, on a line from the shooter's score, and it shall terminate where it joins the dead line, which shall be drawn at a distance of 30 yards from the center trap, and at right angles with a line drawn from the shooter's score to the center trap (see Diagram).

DIAGRAM

NOTE—This should give from center trap to boundary, to straight-away bird, 60 yards (a); to right quarterer, 58 yards (b); to bird at right angles, 48 yards (c); to junction of circle and dead line, 42 yards (d).

Rule 8—Birds Refusing to Fly—When a bird refuses to fly, such artificial means as have been provided by the management may be used to start it, by direction of the referee. A bird hit with a missile shall be declared "No bird." The shooter may declare a bird refusing to fly when the trap is pulled "No bird."

Rule 9—Gathering Birds—A bird to be scored dead must be gathered within bounds before another bird is shot at, and within three minutes' time, by a dog or shooter, or person appointed by the shooter for that purpose. No extraneous means shall be used, and no other person shall be allowed to assist in gathering. If the gatherer cannot locate the bird, he may appeal to the referee to locate it for him. All birds challenged must show flash-shot marks, to be scored "Dead birds."

Rule 10—Birds Killed on the Ground—A bird killed on the ground with the first barrel is "No bird." But it may be killed while the bird is on the wing. If a bird is shot at on the ground with the first barrel, and the shooter uses the second barrel, but fails to kill, it is "Lost bird." But if the bird is killed, it shall be "No bird."

Rule 11—Mutilating Birds—No mutilation of birds will be allowed, and if it is proved to the referee that any contestant has wilfully mutilated a bird or is a party thereto, the referee shall declare all his rights in the match forfeited.

Rule 12—Out of Bounds—A bird once out of bounds must be scored a "Lost bird."

Rule 13—Birds Shot at by Another Person—If a bird be shot at by any person other than the shooter at the score, the referee shall decide whether it shall be scored or another bird allowed.

Rule 14—Position of Gun—Any the shooter may adopt.

Rule 15—Loads—Charges of powder unlimited. Charge of shot not to exceed one and one-quarter ounces American Association, or Dixon's measure, struck. Any shooter using a larger quantity of shot shall forfeit his entrance money and rights in the match.

Rule 16—Caliber and Weight of Gun—No gun of larger calibre than a 10 bore shall be used, and the weight of all guns shall be unlimited.

Rule 17—Loading Guns—No gun shall be loaded except at the score. Cartridges must be removed from the gun before leaving the score.

Rule 18—Gun not Cocked—If a gun is not cocked, or the safety not properly adjusted, and the bird escapes, it shall be scored "Lost bird."

Rule 19—Miss-Fire with the First Barrel—If the shooter's gun miss fire with the first barrel, and he uses the second barrel and misses, the bird must be scored "Lost bird." But if killed with the second barrel, on the wing, it shall be scored "Dead bird."

Rule 20—Miss-Fire with the Second Barrel—If a miss-fire occur with the second barrel, the shooter shall have another bird, using a full charge of powder only in the first barrel. He must, however, put the gun to his shoulder and discharge the blank cartridge in the direction of the bird, and the bird must be on the wing when the first barrel is discharged.

Rule 21—Shooter at Score—In all contests the shooter must be at the score within three minutes after his name is called to shoot, or he forfeits his rights in the match.

Rule 22—Leaving the Score—A shooter having fired his first barrel and left the score, can not return to fire his second barrel.

Rule 23—Balk—If a contestant is balked or interfered with or there is other similar reason why it should be done, the referee may allow another bird.

Rule 24—Announcing the Score—The referee shall announce the result of each shot distinctly, and it shall be called back by the scorer, and at the close of each shooter's score the result must be announced, and if claimed to be wrong, the error, if any, must be corrected at once.

Rule 25—The Shooting—All ties shall be shot off at the original distance, and as soon after the match as practicable, at the following number of birds:

In matches of 10 birds or less, 3 birds.

In matches of 11 to 25 birds, inclusive, 5 birds.

In matches of 26 to 50 birds, inclusive, 10 birds.

In matches of 51 to 100 birds, inclusive, 25 birds.

If, in a series of matches, the result prove a tie, such tie shall be shot off at the original number of birds.

Rule 26—Class Shooting—All shooting shall be class shooting, unless otherwise stated.

Rule 27—Endangering Person or Property—If a bird shall fly so that to shoot at it would endanger any person or property, it shall not be shot at, and the referee shall allow another bird.

Rule 28—Forbidden Shooting—No shooting shall be permitted within the enclosure other than at the score, and in case there is no enclosure, no shooting within 200 yards of the score, except by those at the score, without the consent of the management.

DOUBLE BIRDS.

Rule 1.—The rules for single bird shooting shall govern double bird contests, when not conflicting with the following:

Rule 2.—Double Rises—The double rises shall be from two traps of any kind, 10 yards apart, pulled simultaneously. The rise shall be:

26 yards for 10-bore guns.

24 yards for 12-bore guns.

22 yards for 14 and 16 bore guns.

Rule 3—Allowing Another Pair—Both birds should be on the wing when shot at. Should only one bird fly, the shooter shall have another pair of birds if he does not shoot, or if he does shoot and kills the bird on the wing. But if he shoots and misses, the bird shall be scored lost, and in such event he shall shoot at another pair of birds, with a full charge of powder only in one barrel. The referee shall load the gun not allowing the shooter to know which barrel contains the full charge and which contains the powder charge only.

Rule 4—Miss-Fire With the First Barrel—If the shooter's gun miss-fire with the first barrel, he will be entitled to another pair of birds if he does not shoot his second barrel. But if he fires his second barrel the result must be scored, and the shooter shall shoot at another pair of birds with a full charge of powder only in one barrel, as provided for in Rule 3.

Rule 5—Miss-Fire With the Second Barrel—If the shooter's gun miss-fire with the second barrel, the result of the first barrel must be scored, and the shooter shall shoot at another pair of birds with a full charge of powder only in one barrel, as provided for in Rule 3.

Rule 6—Lost Bird—If a shooter fires both barrels at one bird intentionally, it shall be scored "Lost birds." But if the second barrel be discharged accidentally it shall be "No birds."

Rule 7—No Bird—If both birds are killed with one barrel, it shall be declared "No birds," and the shooter shall shoot at another pair of birds.

Rule 8—Ties—All ties must be decided in shooting off as follows:

In matches of 5 pairs or less, at 2 pairs.

In matches of 6 to 10 pairs, inclusive, at 3 pairs.

In matches of 11 to 20 pairs, inclusive, at 6 pairs.

In matches of 21 to 50 pairs, inclusive, at 10 pairs.

Hints on Conducting a Live Bird Tournament.

1. Ground level and large enough for a fifty yard boundary with an open sky to shoot against is most desirable. Flags or stakes should distinctly mark the boundary line; a low wire fence is far better, as it prevents a bird which lands just inside, from bounding out. Spectators and those not actually employed in running the tournament should be kept a good distance to the rear or side. The isolation of the shooter is imperative, loud talking, remarks pertaining to him, etc., while at the score should not be tolerated by the referee, who is empowered to act in such cases.

2. Traps and methods of trapping may be various. Ground traps, of which there are several different styles, give general satisfaction. The method of trapping in favor at a number of the principal shooting parks in the East is what is called the Elliott underground system. It is thought to work smoothly and expeditiously. The trappers and birds are located in an underground chamber or cellar. The trapper loads the traps from underneath through a hole in the bottom of the trap. The dead birds are retrieved by a dog or boy from the score.

Another method of trapping, and which is meeting with favor, is that recently introduced by E. D. Fulford. A pit is made three feet deep, five feet wide and about twelve feet long, and is situated between and just back of Nos. 2 and 3 traps. To prevent shot from striking downward into the pit a board a foot high can be placed back of the pit and banked up with earth in a sloping manner. Two boys or men with a crate of birds can lie in the pit and trap and retrieve from them. A bell or gong can be arranged near the edge of the pit with a rope leading back to the score, and trappers can be notified from there, by ringing same, when to load trap and when to retrieve. This system, with regulations carefully arranged is free from danger and is saving of time and labor.

Where a club cannot afford the first named system, or has not grounds suitable for the second, the old style can be used, the trapping and retrieving being done from the score. A good fast dog retriever is better than a boy or man; but when a dog is not available two good active boys are necessary, one to load and one to retrieve.

3. The handling of birds is an important matter. The birds should be kept in a large roomy place, with plenty of light. The place should be kept clean, and gravel should frequently be scattered on the floor. The birds should have plenty of water and food until about eighteen hours before the shoot takes place, when they should be deprived of food. They should be carried to the shooting grounds in good sized crates, and should be taken from crates to traps by the trapper, with the ends of both wings and the tail and feet held in his hands.

No mutilation of birds should be allowed, and all wounded birds should be immediately killed. The dead birds should be laid on their backs, and when the weather is warm a few feathers should be plucked near the tail. Dead birds should never be piled in a heap, even if placed in a cooler or refrigerator, until the animal heat has left their bodies.

4. In regard to methods of shooting, where there is a large number of entries, the event can be shot in squads, each squad shooting entirely out before the next squad begins. But this is generally considered unfair, as the weather conditions may change before the shoot is over, thus favoring some at the expense of others. The better way is, for each shooter to take his turn, and so on, through all the entries, until an event is finished.

No outside shooting at escaped birds should be allowed, except by permission of the referee or manager.

A blackboard is not necessary in live bird shooting; but scores should be manifolded, so that copies can be sent to the press.

5. In awarding prizes, high guns, or miss and out, are generally conceded the best, and are the most popular methods of dividing purses. The method of class dividing is not generally regarded with favor, as it cuts the money into too small portions.

The Olympic Gun Club has accepted the challenge of the Empire Gun Club. The details and time of holding the series of matches will probably be determined upon after the coming tournaments.

The semi-monthly shoot of the Stockton Gun Club at twenty-five blue-rocks was held last Sunday afternoon at Jackson's baths. The following are the scores made: C. Johnson 21, Lonjers 20, Barrett 18, Keyes 17, G. Dietz 17, W. Dietz 14, Connors 14, Rex 14, Jackson 13, Brown 12 and Sharkey 10.

A decade has wrought a great change in the hunting privileges over land in the more densely settled States of the Union. A few years ago a man with a gun and dog could go almost anywhere he wanted to, even without previously asking permission so to do. Now the same man finds it comparatively hard to get any hunting at all, unless he is personally acquainted with some land owners who grant him the privilege of hunting game on their territory.

The Fly-Casters.

The attendance at Stow Lake last Saturday of members of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club was limited by reason of the weather, the rain causing a postponement of the contests scheduled for that time. It is probable the postponed contests will be held to-day.

On Sunday the following scores were made:

Chicago Fly-Casters.

The Chicago Fly-Casting club held its regular scheduled contest last Saturday afternoon at the north lagoon in Garfield park. Owing to the strong wind which was blowing, the fly-casting contest had to be postponed, so the bait-casting contest was the only event. This was won by H. A. Newkirk, who made a percentage of 96 4-5. I. H. Bellows, with a percentage of 96 3-5, and R. B. Miller, with a percentage of 95 4-5, took second and third prizes respectively. The next contest will be held June 4th.

The club is making arrangements to enter in the "open to the world tournaments" which are to be held in Grand Rapids, Mich., June 8th and 9th.

Al Cumming has just received advices from Tom Fowler that fishing on the McCloud, near his place, is two weeks earlier this year, the water is in perfect condition and teeming with myriads of the finest trout. Fowler will meet the branch train from Sissons every day with his stage for the accommodation of anglers. The McCloud near his place has been rather brushy, but Fowler has cut out the brush in the worst places, thus making an improvement of this grand fishing place that will be appreciated by anglers.

Cumming is also informed that the sport on Webber lake is earlier also this season. He is arranging to make up a party of four and proposes to start for the lake the middle of next week. He will probably stay on this trip for a month.

The Hunter Gun Club, of Fulton, N. Y., have recently stocked the Oswego river with one million pike fry. J. Hunter Jr., and Harvey McMurphy evidently had a strong pull with Senator Stranahan, as the season for sending out fry from the state hatcheries had almost passed and it required a great deal of influence and energy to obtain the young fish for transplanting. The Hunter Gun Club is the representative sporting organization in Central New York and numbers among its members some well known Eastern sportsmen.

Among the fish introduced into the lakes of New Jersey are the silver bass, the fresh water cousins of the striped bass. These bass, while seldom exceeding three pounds in weight in small bodies of water, are as good and furious fighters as the black bass. For this reason they are much sought after, and promise to become just as popular as the small-mouth black bass, the renowned free lance of North American waters.

Anglers on the railroad wharves across the bay catch striped bass nearly every day. Fishing and trolling along the bay shore is productive of a few fish. The bass are there, as the net fishermen frequently draw their nets and get numbers of bass in water fished by the anglers without result. The water has been generally too muddy for the best results with the rod.

John Butler and John Lemmer were at Lagunitas lake Thursday of last week. They brought 40 nice trout back in their creels.

Lloyd Eaton, Frank Marcus and Mons. Lachaupe fished Lagunitas lake Friday a week ago, the catch was fair.

Otto Meuser and John Lemmer had fine sport on the Throckmorton Lagoon Wednesday last.

The San Francisco Bench Show.

Winners of trophies, medals and cash prizes at the recent bench show who have not yet received their awards can get the same from the secretary, Mr. H. H. Carlton, at 415 Sacramento street. The diplomas awarded are promised for delivery in about two weeks. The office at 224 Montgomery street closes today and all future closing business of the show will be attended to at the address first given above. Superintendent Oldham left for the East last Sunday and Judge Geo. Bell went yesterday. Mr. Bell intends to return in two weeks and will then have complete charge of the extensive kennels of E. V. Sullivan, Esq., located at Menlo Park. These kennels now contain nearly 200 dogs, a great many being greyhounds. Among the field dogs are the well known Dash Antonio, Peach Mark, Bummer W. and Lock, the two most recent additions. The fancy have been all agog since Wednesday over the change in the administration of the kennels. A continuation of the list of awards is as follows:

Union Coursing Park Notes.

The coursing at Union Park last Sunday attracted the usual large attendance of enthusiasts. The favorites had the best of it at the end of the day, but the short-handers had four good hard shots at the talent, which they made the most of. The hares were very strong, and many of them beat the dogs out. The course between Chiquita and Mission Boy was a phenomenally long one.

To-day at 1 P. M. will see the commencement of a coursing meet that breaks the records for entries. There being no less than 130 dogs in the Decoration Day stakes to be run to-day, to-morrow and Monday. All American entry records, for either open plain or enclosed meetings are beaten in this drawing. The entire gate receipts on Monday will be given to the ladies of the Red Cross Society.

The draws for the different stakes were as follows:

Sapling stake—J Anthony's Statesman vs W Healey's Iron Duke; J Kiernan's Yosemite vs F A McComb's Royal Flush; Calamity Kennels' Banner Bearer vs D J Healey's Sheridan; Pembroke Kennels' Petronious vs B & S Kennels' Butter Scotch; Pasha Kennels' Regular Army vs John Kerrigan's Lalla Rookh; D J Healey's Needham vs B Dougherty's Heather Dalt; F A McComb's Motto vs J H Lambert's Campanis; James O'Brien's Admiral Dewey (late Steam B) vs John Kerrigan's S Gertrude; M C Delano's Trinket vs J Shaw's Lucky Dogs F A McComb's Flush vs E V Sullivan's Joker.

The Padres as Farmers.

No better judges of the right locality than the founders of the Missions. None superior in the way of selecting soil and site, and every Mission from San Diego to Sonoma was just in the right place.

Even that of San Francisco embraced leagues and leagues of the very best land, and though the buildings were close to the barren sand dunes to the westward, the southern boundary was so far away "forty leagues in circumference," according to Rev. Walter Colton, and that must have embraced a good part of San Mateo County.

The padres sought beauty as well as utility, nearly all Mission buildings being located on the most attractive part of the lands.

San Francisco overlooked the bay from the western side, and residents of that part of San Francisco, where the Fathers formerly lived, claim that it is comparatively free from the fogs and cold winds which prevail to the North and Northwest of that locality, and it certainly gave a fine prospect, water, plains, slopes, foothills, and the Contra Costa range for a background to the picture.

The Mission San Jose was an ideal location. Where slopes and rolling hills came together, a sparkling mountain stream, large enough to run mill stones, grinding corn for tortillas, and wheat for bread.

Another grand view, superior even to that from the other side of the bay, as the Santa Clara Valley comes into the field of vision and a still more striking background in the junction of the Coast and Contra Costa ranges, Mount Hamilton crowning the circle. But to give the slightest sketch of the beauty of the sites of the Mission buildings, many chapters would be required, and it is sufficient to state, for the purpose of this article, that while the lands were "the pick of the basket" from San Diego to Sonoma, the church occupied the most attractive spot of the immense ranchos.

The greater part of the information in this article is obtained from Rev. Walter Colton's "Three Years in California" published in New York in 1850. The book contains a daily journal of the author from July 26th, 1846 to June 25th, 1849, and, consequently, is a partial record of by far the most important years in the history of the State. Appended to the journal are several chapters descriptive of matters of general interest, the last of which Chap. XXXIII has the caption: "The Mission establishments in California, their origin, objects, localities, lands, revenues, overthrow."

Relating the results of their secularization he writes:

"The consequence was the padres lost their power, and with that departed the enterprise and wealth of their establishments. The civil administration plundered them of their stock, the governors granted to favorites sections of their lands, till, with few exceptions, only the huge buildings remain. Their localities will serve as important guides to emigrants in quest of lands adapted to pasturage and agriculture, and their statistics will show, to some extent, the productive forces of the soil. These have been gathered, with some pains, from the archives of each Mission and are grouped for the first time in these pages."

From that it can be accepted that the statistics gathered by Mr. Colton are correct, and from being used by Mr. Cronise in his work, as long ago as 1868 that painstaking author was satisfied of their correctness.

In the table published last week, compiled from other sources than Mr. Colton's book, there was an error, 2000 in place of 200 hogs in the San Francisco missions in the year 1825.

In that year 18,000 bushels of wheat and barley were harvested, and the Fathers had $35,000 in merchandise and $25,000 in specie. Mr. Colton does not state how much grain was garnered on the Santa Clara Mission although he states: "It has still a fine vineyard where the grape reels and the pear mellow."

But the mission of San Jose is described:

This Mission was founded in 1797, fifteen miles from the town which bears its name, and at the terminus of a valley unrivalled in fertility. It supplied the Russian Company with grain, who sent yearly several large ships for stores for their northern settlements. It is stated, in the archives of this Mission, that the mayordomo gathered 8,600 bushels of wheat from 80 bushels sown; and the following year, from the grain which fell at the time of the first harvest, 5,200 bushels!

Twenty-four years ago the writer made a trip from San Francisco to San Jose on the western shore of the bay and from there back on the eastern side, in company with the late Charles Peters, who was thoroughly conversant with the people who occupied the country at the time of the gold discovery, their histories and that of the State. We stopped at Menlo Park, took lunch with the late Mr. Henry Seale and spent several hours on Mr. S—'s rancho, San Francisquita, taking its name from the stream which ran through it. Nearly directly opposite Mission San Jose, on the richest part of that section it is a fair representation of the land on the eastern side of the bay. The visit was about the first of May and being a favored year the grain fields were headed out. Thirty bushels to the acre was a good crop in Iowa and the inquiry of how many bushels could be expected? the reply was "sixty or more."

One hundred and twenty-five acres in the field, and when the wheat was sacked and weighed eighty bushels to the acre on the field of 125 acres.

On the northern journey from San Jose we stopped for a few hours at the Mission. An orange tree planted by the Fathers was close to the house of the then owner of the land, Captain Beard. A large, magnificent tree, laden with the golden fruit. Having poured over the pages of Colton and other writers on California, the brief description of the Missions so forcibly impressed my memory that it was not difficult to summon the eidolons of the past, restore the old church to its primitive condition and people the bright glades and plains with monks, visitors and Indians.

Nothing is recorded of grain or fruit growing in the short description of Mission San Juan Bautista, according to Mr. Colton, though that may be a typographical error, Cron se naming it Bautista, while Baptista is also the title, both of the last having the same meaning, Baptist. San Carlos Mission, Carmel valley, is thus described. "Through its ample lands flows a beautiful stream of water, which every governor of the country for the last thirty years, has proposed conducting to the Metropolis (Monterey). Its gardens supply the vegetable market of Monterey. Its pears are extremely rich in flavor. In its soil were raised, in 1826, the first potatoes cultivated in California. So little did the presiding padre think of this strange vegetable, he allowed the Indians to raise and sell them to the whalers that visited Monterey, without disturbing their profits."

Somewhat singular that fifty-seven years after the establishment of Mission San Diego, that now highly-prized tuber was first introduced.

Santa Cruz Mission archives did not furnish any agricultural information, but Soledad records tell:

"That the priest was an indefatigable agriculturalist. To obviate the summer drought, he constructed, through the labor of his Indians, an aqueduct extending fifteen miles, by which he could water twenty thousand acres of land. * * * In 1819 the mayordomo of this Mission gathered 3,800 bushels of wheat from 38 bushels sown. It has still standing about a thousand fruit trees which still bear their mellow harvests."

The Mission of San Antonio, however, must have done a good deal of farming. Its lands were forty-eight leagues in circumference, including seven farms, with a convenient house and chapel attached to each. The buildings were inclosed in a square, twelve hundred feet on each side, with adobe walls.

The stream Soledad river, was conducted in paved ditches twenty miles for the purpose of irrigation, and large crops were grown. San Miguel Mission had 2,000 mules, these being used for packing the products to Monterey, returning with dry goods, groceries and agricultural implements.

The Mission of San Luis Obispo was of so much importance that Mr. Cotton's account is copied in full

This Mission stands fourteen leagues southeast of San Miguel, and within three of the Coast. It has always been considered one of the richest Missions in California. The presiding priest, Luis Martinez, was a man of comprehensive purpose and indomitable force. His Mission grant covered an immense tract of the richest lands on the seaboard. Every mountain stream was made to subserve the purposes of irrigation. He planted the cotton-tree, the lime, and a grove of olives which still shower their abundant harvests on the tables of Californians. He built a launch that run to Santa Barbara, trained his Indians to kill the otter, and often received thirty and forty skins a week from his children of the bow. His storehouse at Santa Margarita, with its high adobe walls, was one hundred and ninety feet long, and well stowed with grain. His table was loaded with the choicest game and richest wines; his apartments for guests might have served the hospitable intentions of a prince. He had 87,000 head of grown cattle, 2,000 tame horses, 3,500 mares, 3,700 mules, eight sheep farms, averaging 9,000 sheep to each farm, and the broad Tulare valley, in which his Indians could capture any number of wild horses. The mayordomo of this Mission in 1827, scattered on the ground, without having first ploughed it, 120 bushels of wheat, and then scratched it in with things called harrows, and harvested from the same over 7,000 bushels. This was a lazy experiment, but shows what the land may yield when activity shall take the place of indolence. Father Martinez returned to Spain, taking with him $100,000 as the fruits of his Mission enterprise. On the secularization of the Mission in 1834, the property fell a prey to State exigency, and private rapacity. A gloomy wreck of grandeur only remains.

The table in the paper of last week only included the nine Missions above, and the next on the list, Mission of La Purisima, covered thirteen hundred square miles, and the wild cattle became so numerous that the governing priest granted permits to kill them for their hides and tallow. An immense number were slaughtered, and yet in 1830, 40,000 sufficiently domesticated to be corralled, 300 yoke of working oxen, 2,600 tame horses, 40,000 mares, 30,000 sheep, 5,000 swine, "which were raised for their lard—no one eating the meat."

We are also informed that "the horses in this Mission were celebrated for their beauty and speed; they performed feats under the saddle worthy of the most brilliant page in the history of the turf." Santa Inez was one of the smaller Missions and nothing reported of its agricultural or horticultural standing, though its chronicler states:

"The Mission being near the beautiful town of Santa Barbara, its profuse hospitality contributed largely to the social pleasure of the citizens. Its vintage never failed, and its friendly fires ever burnt bright; many a gay merrianda has kindled the eye of beauty in its soft shade. The main building is elaborately finished for California."

Mr. Colton made a true prophecy when he wrote, "Around this mission (Santa Barbara) emigrants will ere long settle in great numbers, and devote themselves to agriculture and the cultivation of grapes, olives, figs, for which the climate is peculiarly adapted." Mr. Elwood Cooper proved all the foregoing predictions were true vaticinations, especially in the production of olive oil, as that made by Mr. Cooper is recognized to be as good, if not superior, to that of any other part of the world.

San Buenaventura had a thrifty orchard and two rich vineyards, and San Fernando "has always been celebrated for the superior quality of brandy distilled from its grapes," Mr. Colton tells. San Gabriel is thus reported:

"Its lands cover one of the most charming intervals in California. In its gardens bloomed oranges, citrons, limes, apples, pears, peaches, pomegranates, figs and grapes in great abundance. From the latter were made annually from four to six hundred barrels of wine and two hundred of brandy."

San Juan Capistrano does not receive much notice further than to state that for many years it was one of the most opulent in the country, and that its lands extend for fifteen leagues along the seaboard, and back to the mountains, where they "swept over many ravines of fertile soil and sequestering shade." San Luis Rey gave a better opportunity for the eloquent divine to picture.

This mission, located near the sea, and twelve leagues south of San Juan, was founded in 1798 by padre Peyri, who had devoted himself for years to the improvement of the Indians. The buildings occupy a large square, in the center of which a fountain still plays; along the front runs a corridor, supported by thirty-two arches, ornamented with latticed railings; while the interior is divided into apartments suited to the domestic economy of a large establishment. Here the wool of the sheep which grazed on the hills around, were woven into blankets, and coarse apparel for the Indians, while the furrowed field waved for a mile under the golden grain. The reeling grape, the blushing peach, the yellow orange, the mellow pear, the luscious melon filled the garden, and loaded the wings of the zephyr with perfume. In 1826 it had three thousand Indians, 70,000 head of cattle, 2,000 horses, 140 yoke of tame oxen, 300 mules, 68,000 sheep, and a tract of land, around half of which you could not gallop between sun and sun. Its massive stone church still remains."

San Diego affords the groundwork for a brief sketch and as that completes the chapter the author's description is given in full.

"This mission, situated fourteen leagues south of San Luis Rey, and near the town that bears its name, was founded in 1769 by padre Junipero Serra, and was the first established in Alta California. Its possessions covered the whole tract of land which circles for leagues around the beautiful bay upon which its green hills look. Here the first cattle were corralled, the first sheep sheared, the first field furrowed, the first vineyard planted and the first church bell rung. The Indian heard in this strange sound the invoking voice of his God, and knelt reverently to the earth. The success of this mission paved the way for the establishment of others, till the whole coast was sprinkled with their churches, and every green glade filled with their wild converts and lowing herds. But the pardes and their neophytes are gone, and all the memorials that remain are a cumbrous ruin. Gigantic skeletons of things that were!

Peculiarly unfortunate that so small a part of the history of the Missions is available at the present day. An interesting story, but judging from the brief account that Mr. Colton gives, and that written only about fifteen years after the secularization of the Missions, whatever records were kept by the Fathers were destroyed or mutilated to such an extent as to practically destroy them.

Even a skeleton of a history, scarcely that, a few bones to prove that when in full life and activity the Missions and Mission Fathers were a great power and the entering wedge in civilizing the country, which is without a parallel in all the United States.

Clear-headed, enterprising men these wearers of gown and cowl. And good farmers as well. When the Soledad irrigating ditch was constructed it is safe to say that no work of like magnitude existed on the American continent. Twenty miles in length and paved with stones, to prevent loss of water through absorption, it must be conceded to have been a great work. If the Missions had not been so prosperous they would not have been secularized at the time the ruling powers decided to seize them. The Fathers proved the adaptability of the country, and the government reaped the harvest.

How Feeding Steers Should Be Selected.

A steer or beef animal of any kind to make a good growth and lay on fat rapidly, or, in a word, to be an economic feeder, must possess the indefinable something known as "quality." To portray all the word quality implies in this connection is decidedly a difficult matter. It is easier to point out what it is not, rather than what it is. The steer that lacks quality is unthrifty, unable to get the full benefit of the nourishment in his food. He is what is commonly known or called a "hard feeder." The outward indications of this are a tight hard hide, a coarse wiry coat, and a dull more or less sunken eye. In addition, he may or may not be coarse-boned and ill-shaped. Sometimes an animal of this description may be thrifty enough, although in most cases coarseness and slow growth go together. In like manner, a well-formed steer is usually thrifty, though there are exceptions to this also.

On the other hand a steer that is ill shaped from the butchers point of view, may possess many good feeding qualities and thrive well on the food consumed. We have many examples of such cases among the breed of Holstein-Friesians and Jersey steers, many of which have records of gains for food consumed which exceeds those of the beef-bred steers. The steers which possess feeding quality have, on the contrary, a mellow, pliable hide, loose enough so that one can gather a good handful of it over the ribs. The hair is soft and silky, the eye is prominent and clear, and the animal shows every indication of being in good health. These are essential features and may exist independently of the form of the animal as already noted. But it is nevertheless true that the feeder possessing high quality is usually also of the typical beef form. There are, moreover, degrees of quality, so that in a bunch of half a dozen steers, the poorest of which may be classed as good, they may surpass each other considerably in their ability to lay on flesh.

The most profitable feeder to handle is the one that not only can make rapid gains on the feed consumed, but one that is a hearty eater, and possesses the typical beef form. He should be of the low, blocky type, with straight back, well-filled loin, well-sprung ribs, low flank and full hind quarter. A steer built on this plan is more profitable than the steer built on the dairy plan, because he will undoubtedly sell for a higher price when marketed. He is worth more to the butcher and packer, because, for the same weight, there is less offal and greater weight of beef in those portions of the carcass which brings the highest price, viz., the ribs and loins. These facts account for the lower prices realized for dairy bred steers, and they account for the disrepute that the Holstein-Friesian and Jersey steers have fallen into with cattle buyers who usually pay forty to sixty cents less per 100 lbs. for them than they do for steers of the beefy type. The essential point in selecting feeding steers are, then, first to select animals of good feeding quality, and second, to secure steers which in addition to quality also have the approved beef form.

But in the endless variation which one finds in these two features between the Arizona long horn, and the sharp back, slab-sided dairy bred steer on the one hand, and the big grade or pure bred model of the beef type, such as may be found at our State Fair, on the other hand, only experienced stockmen can be expected to put a just estimate, in money value, on each particular shade in quality. In most cases, the man that lacks experience will pay too high a price for his feeders. He should bear in mind that under average conditions it costs at least as much, and in many cases more to lay on a hundred pounds gain than that gain will sell for in the market. The man, therefore, that makes a business of buying cattle to feed, must look for his profit from the increased value of the beef the steer carries when he is put in the feed lot. To illustrate this latter, if he can buy steers weighing a thousand pounds for 3¼ cents per pound, put on three hundred pounds gain, and sell those steers, now weighing 1300 lbs., for 4¼ cents a pound, the feeder will make money, not because the gain has cost 4¼ cents a pound, for in average cases the gain will have cost him more than that, but because he has raised the value of the thousand pounds he started with one cent per pound. In seasons like the present, where owing to the severe drought in the southern portion of the State, and high price of feed, it behooves feeders to select with great care in order to get animals that will not only thrive well, but will sell well on the market after they are fattened.

Good Cattle Will Sell.

Under the suggestive heading, "Suckers are Scarce," the Denver Stockman publishes the following article, which measurably confirms all that we say in another column of the BREEDER relative to "How feeding steers should be selected:"

"Common range cattle, the kind known as dogies, are having hard sledding this year. Never have cattlemen discriminated as close as now in buying for the feed lots and the range. They want good cattle—cattle with quality and capabilities for putting on flesh. Those who were amateurs last season, and there were plenty of them, have bought their experience and have learned that the cheapest cattle in the end are those that cost the most money. The result is that good cattle are hardly unloaded on this market before there is a rush for them, while the common kinds have plenty of time to rest and feed before they get an offer, and even then the offer is so much lower than the owner expects that many of them hold on for days and weeks hoping to "catch a sucker," but the crop of suckers seems about exhausted. Cattle feeders in the corn States secured a vast amount of experience during the past two years, and in many cases the experience was costly, but while there is as good a demand for feeders as ever, the demand is for good quality, rather than quantity. The man who fed 200 head of dogies last year and lost money, will feed 100 head of good cattle this year and recover what he lost, with a little profit for his trouble. It all means that the day when the common steer will do for the feed lot is past, and that the well-bred graded animal is coming to the front. The dogies will go to the canner for what they will bring, and within the next three years there will be less and less of this class of cattle on the market."

Our Cattle May Be Quarantined.

Dr. Charles Gresswell, State Veterinarian of Colorado, is in daily communication with the boards of inspection of Kansas, Nebraska and other western states in regard to the movement of cattle from the Pacific Coast eastward, says the Denver Stockman. The prolonged drought in Southern California has brought disaster to cattlemen, and they are making every effort to save their stock by shipping eastward. The ranges of Kansas and Nebraska are especially promising this spring, and it is estimated that California men will send 100,000 head of cattle to these ranges if simple rules in regard to inspection can be made. The general government has two inspectors in California, and a shipment of twenty cars of cattle arrived at Grand Junction last week, but the inspection is not as thorough as state boards require, and the movement is not being encouraged to any great extent, except by the railroads. Owing to the rigid requirements of different states the cattle will have to pass through several inspections before reaching pastures, and California men do not care to run the risk of loss and possible detention at any point along the route.

"I do not know how it will be finally settled," said Dr. Gresswell, "but it is possible that arrangements may be made by which one inspection on the coast will be acceptable. If this is decided upon, I shall go to the coast and assist in starting the inspection. Each State has a different set of rules, and no general concession has yet been made. The loss on the coast is enormous, and if anything can be done which will not lead to the introduction of disease in this state I will heartily concur."

The doctor says that if a single tick is found in a herd of cattle it would require the entire herd to be quarantined.

Notes.

Seventeen carloads of cattle were shipped on the 22d inst. from Santa Barbara county to Southern Oregon for pasture. The cattle were very thin and in poor condition.

Hardly within the remembrance of the oldest residents of northeastern Humboldt has live stock been in nearly as good condition in the second week of May as the present year. Stockmen are highly elated and anticipate big prices this fall for their cattle.

Our Eureka, Humboldt county, correspondent writes us: Wm. Malone, of Del Norte county, is still here purchasing cattle to be transferred to Eastern markets. About 1,000 head are now in pasture on the Gross-Sinclair reclamation tract beyond Freshwater, nearly 200 head of which were furnished by Frank Hurlbutt from the herd of his absent father. Mr. Malone will drive from 1,200 to 1,500 head from this county to Grant's Pass on the present trip, for which from $20,000 to $25,000 will be distributed among Humboldt cattlegrowers.

The price of pasture in this valley, says the Phoenix, (Ariz.) Herald, has jumped from 50 cents a head per month a year ago to $2 and $2.50 per head at the present time. If it goes much higher it will jump over the pasture fence.

Sixty-five car-loads of cattle were shipped on the 23d inst. from Reno, Nevada, to Eastern points.

The Wheatland, (Cal.) Four Corners says: A stockman named Burns, of Los Alamos, Santa Barbara county, who has been pasturing his cattle in Inyo county recently, lost 149 head of cattle on the way down, not from the scarcity of feed, but from drinking water, while crossing the desert, which had been rendered poisonous by the decaying carcasses of thousands of sheep.

During the months of March and April 686 cars of cattle, 13,615 head; 374 cars of sheep, 38,410 head; 2 cars of horses, 34 head, and 2 cars of hogs, 137 head, were shipped from Reno, Nevada. The bulk of this stock was from Oregon.

The protest of the stockmen of the west against the offer of medals as awards in the live-stock department of the Trans-Mississippi Exposition to be held at Omaha, has resulted in a unanimous decision of the Board of Directors to substitute cash for medals. Stockmen declare that this change will result in making the live-stock section of the Exposition the greatest show of live stock ever held in the United States. The value of the cash prizes will amount to close upon $40,000.

Sam Mathews and H. E. Abbott shipped this week over 1,000 head of cattle from Gilroy to Mendocino county, where they will be put on good pasture.

In order to induce a restocking of the ranges the Northern Pacific Railway Co. has made a reduction of 25 per cent. in rates on stock cattle from the Twin Cities to the live stock stations in Western Dakota and Montana.

Humphrey Brothers brought a band of about 500 cattle into the Sierraville on the 23d inst. from Truckee. They were purchased in the lower country and were in good condition.

We want all sorts of items about cattle from every part of the Coast. Let us hear from every reader of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Our Red Bluff correspondent informs us that Douglas S. Cone, returned last Monday from Placer county where he has secured a range of 65,000 acres, which he will stock with probably 2,000 cattle and several thousand sheep from Southern California. While absent this time he received a trainload of cattle, sheep and horses which were placed on the range. There were 200 head of cattle, 1800 sheep and 25 fine saddle horses, all from Santa Barbara county.

Mr. Cone expects to go south in a few days and purchase another large lot of cattle and sheep for his Placer county range. Individually and with his partner Maj. Ward, they sent about 60,000 sheep to the mountains this year from their home ranges in Tehama county, so it will be seen that with the scarcity of beef and mutton this fall these gentlemen are certain to make a small fortune out of their stock when he begins to sell.

DAIRYING.

A Wonderful Cow.

The following noteworthy information setting forth the performance of the very remarkable Holstein cow, Belle Sarcastic, owned by the Michigan Agricultural Society, under whose management she made her records will be read by dairy men with much interest. It is a grand illustration of the tremendous possibilities of a good dairy cow well handled:

"She was born in January, 1890, descended in the third generation from imported stock, and was a beefy heifer, gradually changing as she approached maturity into the typical dairy form. In 1896 in eleven months she gave 9,255.5 lbs. of milk, with no record of the fat. In 1894-5 her milking period was 577 days long, in which time she gave 30,937.5 lbs. of milk or an average of 53.6 lbs. per days. Her yield of fat was in twelve months 632.78 or 738 pounds of butter; in 577 days, 725.46 lbs. of fat, or 1,079.7 lbs. of butter.

"Her milking period in 1896-97 was eighteen months long. She gave in the year 23,189.0 lbs. of milk and 721.6 lbs. of fat; in the eighteen months, 29,544.8 lbs.

of milk and 941.31 lbs. of fat, an equivalent of 1,098.19 lbs. of butter. This brings her record up to the close of her last milking period in August, 1897.

"During the winter months of early 1897 her ration consisted of 60 lbs. of silage, 30 lbs. of mongolds, 6 lbs. of mixed hay and 18 lbs. of grain; the latter consisting of one part oil cake meal, two parts corn meal, three parts oats and four parts bran. Of digestible nutrients this ration contained per 1,000 lbs. live weight 23.8 lbs. of dry matter, 2.05 lbs. of protein, 13.1 lbs. of carbohydrates and .79 lbs. of fat. You will note that this is way below the German standard.

"Her weight remained nearly constant at about 1,500. In three years and three months the cow produced 60,000 lbs. of milk and 2,166 lbs. of butter, certainly a marvelous performance. Her form shows that she is developed in those organs that are concerned in the manufacture of milk. Her udder is elastic and large without being meaty. Her immense abdomen provides place for an abundant nourishment, and the emaciated muscular and fatty tissues elsewhere indicate no waste of food on self support.

Notes

One thousand head of dairy cows was shipped early this week from San Luis Obispo, to Wheatland, where the milkers will be pastured for the balance of the year, the product of which will find its way to neighboring creameries.

The plant of the Browns Valley Creamery located at Marysville was sold early this week to J. M. Berry for $450. Original cost of the plant was $3120.

Owing to the severe drought and lack of green feed throughout San Luis Obispo, the creameries are being compelled temporarily to suspend business. The Union closed down on Monday last.

We want all sorts of items about dairying from every part of the Coast. Let us hear from every reader of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Sweet corn, drilled or sown broadcast, makes a capital food for the cows.

If all the buttermilk has not been washed out of the butter, it is certain that the attempt to work it out will result in breaking the grain of the butter; and if one does not understand the granular system of churning it will pay him to look into the matter at once.

He runs a dairy with most profit who gives most attention to making the farm produce large crops of grain and grass to be fed to the cows; there is not so much profit when the feed is bought outside. The business of the dairyman does not begin and end with the care of the cows, but reaches into every detail of farm management.

Testing cows is a good, desirable thing to do, but testing the milker is quite as important. A poor milker will make an unprofitable cow.

Some cows will be better than their progenitors, some poorer. Sometimes the dairy becomes inferior after breeding for butter. The secret lies in selection.

Permitting a cow to fail in her milk for want of a suitable food is bad management; even if she can be restored to her full flow, which is doubtful, it takes more feed to do it than would have been required to keep her in good milking trim from first to last.

Let those who are pleading for more exercise for the cows watch them in the pasture next summer and see how little they take. They will feed far enough to satisfy appetite, and then find some favorite spot in which to lie down and ruminate; they will go no further, save for drink.

There should be no foolishness about the business of milking. Make the cow glad to have you come to her relief. If you can not do this, you are not the one to milk. Let there be neither jerking, dawdling nor fussing, and especially no harshness. Neither can you milk and tell yarns at the same time.

In case of trouble in milking young or vicious cows pass a strap or rope around the body in front of the bag, behind the right hip and front of the left. Draw it rather tightly and fasten. The strap exerts pressure upon the muscles and tends to restrain the animal. At the same time care and gentleness are necessary to cure a vicious or nervous cow.

The Hollister Creamery has commenced an action in the Superior Court against Ira A. Lytle and W. A. Maxwell to recover the sum of $365.93 for butter sold and delivered to said Lytle, and for the payment of which said Maxwell was surety.

The Hollister Creamery Directors have fixed the price of four per cent milk for the first two weeks in May at 75c per hundred pounds.

A large proportion of the veal calves that come to market are from the dairy districts, and their breeding usually leaves a good deal to be desired. With the average dairyman all that is required in the way of a sire is one that is a sure breeder, and as a rule the most inferior scrubs are used for the purpose or else grades of the dairy breeds, which are worse than scrubs from a beef-grower's point of view. During the past two years of strong demand for young breeding cattle dairymen would have gotten better prices for their calves if they had been using good beef bulls.

The effects of the late rain in the neighborhood of Anaheim are everywhere visible. An abundance of feed is now assured. Many farmers who, scared at the prospect of a dry year, sold off their cows at about half price, are now scouring the country to buy more, and cows have gone up considerably in price.

SHEEP.

War and Wool Prices.

During the past few weeks we have received letters from wool men throughout the State requesting us to give them our opinion as to what cause the complete stagnation in the wool business is due, and at the same time if wools should be disposed of at present ruling prices. Whilst we cannot enter minutely into the details of a man's business or is it our business to ask if some of our correspondents are financially in need, we can, with safety, reply that wool at present prices is good property and it would be unwise in our judgment to sell; our answer therefore is, better hold a while than to dispose of wools to-day. If there is anything in the logic of events, we are on the eve of a decided advance in wool values. War prices for wool have always been good. We are now fully entered upon a war whose magnitude and duration no one can foresee. It is safe to say at the present writing over 150,000 fighting Americans are now marshalled on land and sea. Hundreds of millions of money must be rapidly expended in equipment and support of the great force of combatants and every dollar of it will go into circulation. That it must stimulate industry, traffic, commerce and values to a remarkable degree, no level-headed man can doubt. Wool will be needed early and in large quantities for clothing the boys in blue and otherwise ministering to their comfort. Present stocks now in the East will be depleted before the season is half over, and if war history repeats itself in the great struggle upon which we have now entered, there will be a strong speculative demand for wool long before the summer is over that will send wool up, up, a good many points above the best figures of the past six months.

We do not mean to say that wool will go to a dollar a pound, as during the Civil War, but it will go up strongly, because it is one of the staple products always affected by war conditions. Present holders of wool, whether on the sheep's back, in store or in transit, may as well have the benefit of the advance in value as give it to cash buyers intent on large speculative margins. That government demand during war will stimulate many industries, the wool industry among them, may be admitted without taking so hopeful a view as the above. It ought not to be expected that the conditions of the business of the country during the Civil War will throw much light upon the conditions that await us in the war upon which we are now engaged, and it is certainly to be hoped that prices during the former war history will not repeat itself, and it is not probable that it will. The high values that ruled then were due in a great measure to a depreciation of the currency of the country and to the resultant weakness and wide fluctuations of credits. These are factors which will not enter into the conditions before us. Nevertheless, it may be expected that prime staple products, of which wool is one, will be advanced in price, and that quotations will remain firm as long as war exists. But it must not be overlooked, that the same causes that lift the prices of wool will raise all the expenses of the wool-grower proportionately.

Types of Mutton Sheep.

Of the mutton breeds the Southdowns are preferred by many, it being claimed by those who prefer them that no other mutton equals in flavor that of the Southdown which has been properly fed. They have a close-set fleece of fine wool, with dark legs and faces. Their legs are short, bodies broad and compact. They do fairly well on almost any pasturage, but like all other animals they repay good feeding. They are early maturing sheep, hardy and prolific, often dropping two lambs at a birth. They are invaluable for the production of early lambs. Shropshires resemble the Southdowns in many of their characteristics; they are said to be even more prolific, have heavier bodies and heavier fleeces.

The Hampshiredowns have much resemblance to the Southdowns; they are considerably larger. They are vigorous in constitution and thrive better on slender feed than any other breed. They, too, mature early. Their fleeces are heavy and they do better in large flocks than the other long-wooled breeds. Many breeders prefer them for grading up inferior or scrub stock as the results have proved highly satisfactory.

Sheep and Wool Notes.

There is a famous Persian sheep at Butte City, which cost $500. It is an object of much curiosity and has excited considerable comment among the neighbors.

Good mutton is reported as selling for fifty cents a pound in Havana and five dollars for a good mutton chop at Dawson City. Considering the trouble of getting to either of these markets, prices quoted are probably not too high.

Montana sheep men are jubilant over the outlook of their ranges. The late rain fall will insure good pasturage throughout the summer season.

Contrary to expectation the local wool market this spring is in a very unsatisfactory condition. Owing to scarce money East, the large wool houses are not sending buyers to this Coast, at least for the present. Wool, however, is good property, and flock masters should have no trouble to get advances from their local banks to carry them over the next sixty days.

The statistics of the wool production of the state since 1854 shows a total production of 1,105,816,007 pounds. The smallest year was the first when the production amounted to only 175,000 pounds and the largest 1876, when there were produced 56,555,973 pounds. The average yearly production for the first 22 years of this period was 12,500,000 pounds and for the last 22 years 37,500,000 pounds. The production for 1897 is given as 34,882,325 pounds.

Several car loads of sheep were shipped this week from Woodland to this city by George Stephens of Madison.

Insurance Commissioner Clunie jointly, with Judge E. H. Bridgeford own a large band of sheep which have been pastured up the river near Knights landing. These sheep were recently shipped from Hanford.

Our Gridley, Cal., correspondent writes us, J. A. Evans of the Ord ranch has about sixty men employed in haying. He is running six mowers, four two-horse rakes and twelve wagons. About 1500 head of cattle are now on the ranch and are in fine condition. On the 24th inst., 170 head were taken to the Butte creek pasture west of here.

W. R. Rhinehart, of the Pugh place, in the Buttes, passed through town on the 23d bound for Plumas county with a band of 2,300 sheep.

A large amount of wool will be shipped from Adams County, Oregon, this spring. There are about 20,000 sheep grazing on the scab land ten miles east of Ritzville, and shearing has already commenced. This is the first wool to be shipped from Ritzville for a number of years, and recalls the time, ten years ago, when long strings of eight and ten-horse teams, heavily laden with wool, could be seen on the streets at all times of the day.

F. Kohn & Co. of Los Angeles, are authority for the statement that the sheep business of Southern California is killed for the present by the long-continued drought. Buyers from New Mexico and Arizona have visited this section, taking all, or nearly all the sheep, shipping them by carloads to those states. Kohn & Co. will practically abandon their wool scouring plant, known as the Pacific Wool Scouring Co., until there is a change in conditions of wool growing.

One hundred and sixty carloads of sheep passed through Sacramento recently. Of the number, forty cars were bound for Delano, forty to Salinas and eighty were en route to Chicago to replenish the supply of mutton in that city.

SWINE.

An Armour Buyer on Bacon Pigs.

In reference to the bacon pig I will gladly give you any information that I am possessed of.

1. With regard to its conformation. The pig, like the poet, is born, not made. It should have a lengthy body with larger hams and smaller shoulders than are usually seen on the hogs that come to our Chicago market. A small head set on the body with a light neck, a good, deep side and a back that is not too heavy complete its frame.

2. As to breed. The best breeds are Yorkshire, Berkshire, Tamworth and Improved Chester White and all the crosses of these breeds. During my trip through the Province of Ontario for the purpose of finding out all I could learn with regard to the breeding and feeding of pigs for the export bacon trade, I could find no other kind of hogs than the above mentioned and their crosses, and as far as my experience goes I feel sure that the cross of the Tamworth boar and the Yorkshire sow produces a bacon hog that cannot be excelled. The great majority of hogs raised in the West have a large percentage of Poland-China in them, and the light hogs of this breed are too short and chunky to ever make a good bacon pig. We do, however, get some light hogs from Missouri that if properly fed would be as near the right shape as can be made.

3. Does the difference between the bacon pig and the ordinary hog lie in the breed or feed? It is necessary to have breed and feed to make good bacon pigs. Bacon pigs have been bred for years past to have a larger percentage of lean meat in the carcass than the average hog—a fact that may be seen at once when the side of meat is cut.

4. Will corn make the desired quality of bacon when fed to any sort of swine? Most undoubtedly, no. Corn contains a far greater proportion of oil than other small grains, which the hog assimilates more rapidly than any other animal, and the fat so produced is far softer and contains more oil than the fat of a hog fed in the proper manner to produce the right kind of bacon.

5. Will bacon pigs command a premium on the market over the ordinary corn-fed type sufficient to justify the farmers in growing them? That is a very difficult question to give an answer to. There is absolutely no means of knowing how a hog has been fed while he is alive; the only test is when he is killed and chilled. There is as much difference between the fat of a good bacon hog and that of one fed on corn as there is between the fat of a corn-fed hog and that of a long-nosed Texas hog fed on mast. There is no doubt in my mind that if our packers could have any guarantee that hogs were fed in the proper manner they would be willing to pay a premium for them. The best bacon hogs in Canada, Denmark and the British Isles are fed in connection with dairy farming, and if that branch of hog-raising is to be tried in the United States it must be in conjunction with the dairy industry to become successful.—Charles Lennan, Head Buyer Armour Packing House, Chicago, in "Breeder's Gazette."

Forage Crops for Hogs.

One of the best forage crops you can sow for hogs is oats and peas, one and a half bushel of oats and one bushel of peas per acre. Fit the ground well and as early in the spring as possible. Sow the peas broadcast and cover with a cultivator. The oats may then be drilled in or sown broadcast and harrowed in. For twenty-five hogs you should have at least six acres of land that can be devoted to the raising of forage. The accompanying will explain how the succession of green forage may be secured. In the second sowing barley is substituted for the oats, because it is less likely to be injured by rust. At the Cornell experiment station the past season plots of barley and peas remained in good condition for feeding until December 1. The following shows three plots of two acres each and the time of sowing and pasturing each plot. A third seeding may be made and the same three plots be made to furnish forage until the middle of November or the 1st of December:

Plot 1—First sowing, April 15th, to oats and peas; feed from May 15th to June 1st. Second sowing, June 1st, to barley and peas; feed from July 1st to July 15th.

Plot 2—First sowing, May 1st, to oats and peas; feed from June 1st to June 15th. Second sowing, June 15th, to barley and peas; feed from July 15th to August 1st.

Plot 3—First sowing, May 15th, to oats and peas; feed from June 15th to July 1st. Second sowing, July 1st, to barley and peas; feed from August 1st to August 15th.

Notes.

The effect of good breeding will show more quickly in swine than in any other kind of live stock. Hence the farmer can well afford to pay for good brood sows and a pure bred boar. With a vigorous sire and dam the offspring, properly cared for, will make the money invested bring early and profitable returns.

There are several good breeds of hogs. Select the breed you prefer and stick to that in breeding up. Few good results are obtained by cross breeding.

Select a boar with a good chest, feet, back, loins and ham, and one of a pedigree that traces back through families that have the same characteristics and that have the faculty of transmitting them.

Corn is such a rich, heavy feed that fattening pigs sometimes digest it badly. In such cases they will eat charcoal freely and it aids the digestion of food and improves their appetite. Charred corn on the cob is an excellent feed in such cases.

Don't keep the hog too fat in the summer and give him plenty of shade and pure water. The feeding should be done on a clean place. Regularity of feeding is important, but if there is good pasturage there is little need of feeding.

What the English call a "bacon pig" is lighter than the most marketable hogs in this country, as the weight of the "bacon pig" is 160 to 200 pounds. They are said to bring the best prices. The feed recommended consists of rye, peas, barley and shorts. It produces the lean meat preferred in this country as well as in England.

Pigs require pasturage when only a few days old and will not do well without it. Hence it is important to provide it by some of the cultivated grasses or forage crops if the native grasses do not give enough grazing. Nothing will do so well as alfalfa, and the farmer who can raise it on his land will probably find it the most valuable crop he produces even if it is raised for hogs alone. If that is the pasturage the pigs will need no feeding. If other pasturage is depended on and feeding is necessary, milk and some soft foods will be beneficial. Sorghum or Red Kafir corn can be raised so as to supply grazing enough and will grow in any of the farming portions of Texas and in many portions too dry for ordinary farming. Somehow manage to keep them growing right along, with never a single interruption, if you wish to make them pay, and you can have them in six to nine months weighing from 200 to 250 pounds, the weight that brings the best prices in any of the markets.

The bedding for the pigs ought not to be such as is close, moist and liable to heat, nor such as draws and retains moisture. Such bedding causes changes in temperature that are certain to be unfavorable to the health of the pig. Good, clean straw may be used, but it should be changed often enough for the bed to be always dry and clean.

POULTRY.

Start on the Right Road.

Fowls, like hogs, are as rapid money makers as can be found around the barn yard. They reach early maturity, an advantage that should be appreciated and one which enables the poultryman to arrive at a paying basis sooner than by any other method. When one has but a small capital, therefore, the desire to make a profit from poultry in a year should not be entertained. A small investment will lead to the establishment of any industry which, with proper care, should yield very satisfactory results in a few years, provided the poultryman has the patience to wait until he can get established by the increase of his flock rather than by capital. Every additional fowl to the flock gained by increase is so much gain of capital, and what cannot be accomplished at once may be done in a longer time. "The beginner who desires to enter the poultry business," says a writer in a poultry journal, "must start at it with a view of building himself up, and he must not expect any returns until he has reached a point at which he can derive a sufficient profit to afford him a comfortable living." Many men who have gone into the poultry business and made no profit the first year have given up and ceased operations, when, in fact, they had merely undergone a year's experience and should have continued. The main object should be to take plenty of time, get ready and increase only to the extent of the capital, then success will be practically ensured.

Notes.

Leg weakness in chicks is caused from overfeeding and insufficient exercise. The little fellows as well as the old ones should hustle for their living.

Do not set hens to hatch later than June 20th. The chicks will be sickly and be more likely to contract some of the many diseases peculiar to them.

Young chickens should not be fed for twenty-four hours after they are hatched. They should be kept in a warm place, say a temperature of 95 degrees.

In Two Rock valley the members of the Purvine family are engaged in poultry raising as follows, says the Petaluma Argus. J. C. Purvine has 700 hens and 100 pullets of the Leghorn variety. W. B. Purvine handles about 1500 hens for their eggs. T. B. Purvine has 4000 hens and about 6000 chicks. T. C. Purvine has about 200 hens and 1000 chicks.

Chicks that run with the hen in the spring have exercise, and they do not eat too much at once, as happens when confined in winter, says Farm and Fireside. It is better to feed millet-seed scattered in litter and compel them to scratch and gradually secure their food, than to fill them at once. It is lack of exercise that causes leg weakness and other difficulties. Turning out the chickens from a warm brooder to a cold room in winter is like taking them from the hens and exposing them in a cold room without protection or the feathers of their dams. If each reader would keep in view the fact that young chicks are very tender there would be more success with them.

When an attempt is made to grade the flock up to a higher standard such work should be done by judicious selection of pure bred males. It is better to use pure-bred males and females, but farmers prefer to procure males and cross on their hens. If farmers will use the best males, however, crossing would not be objectionable, but they will exchange males with some neighbor, or accept as pure-bred fowls some that are but grades, which can effect no improvement. The best to be had is not too good when the stock is to be improved.

The supposition that common fowls are hardier than pure breeds is not borne out by the facts. Those to hatch mongrel chicks lose a large number of them, only the strongest surviving, and every year they are more and more inbred. The pure breeds suffer from being pampered, in many instances, by their owners, in which case they do not compare favorably with common fowls; but the latter are of but little value compared with the pure breeds, which have been found to be more profitable in every respect.

When a fancier asks you $25 for a pen of thoroughbreds, don't imagine he is robbing you. That pen could raise you a flock in one year that will pay you back the money invested and leave a balance many times larger.

Don't think that thoroughbred fowls lack utility for it is not so. The best layers we have are those bred by our poultry fanciers and they can furnish you fowls for layers, fowls for market and fowls that are adapted to both uses.

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climatic and crop conditions is based upon reports received from nine Weather Bureau Stations, fifty-two telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company and many reports scattered throughout the State received from correspondents in their districts.

Rain fell in generous amounts over the northern portion of the State on the 22d, and light showers occurred on other dates in the northern and extreme southern parts of the State. From San Francisco northward the rainfall was much above the normal; from San Francisco southward to the Tehachapi, below the normal. The week has been unseasonably cold, the average temperature with one exception, being from three to nine degrees below the normal. The cold weather and rain interrupted haying and some damage was done to cut hay, but the benefit to wheat, feed and fruit more than compensates for damage to hay and cherries. Some grain that would have been cut for hay will now be saved for grain. Summer fallow will yield a fair crop in some sections but winter sown is generally a failure. Alfalfa is doing well.

Shasta County—Heavy rain was of great benefit to late grain and fruit trees.

Tehama County—Hay damaged by rain. Cool and damp weather good for fruit and late grain, also garden truck. Rain greatly helped range feed on high lands.

Butte County—Light rainfall was of little benefit. Temperature fifteen degrees colder than this time last year. Feather river rose six inches. Haying about over. A large acreage of grain that was to have been cut for hay will now be saved for grain.

Yuba County—Showers and cool weather have greatly benefitted cereal and fruit crops. Better reports cause more hopeful feeling. Haying season interrupted without damage. Thrifty condition of hops indicates full yield and early ripening.

Yolo County—Damage to cut hay not so heavy as reported. Grapes doing well.

Sacramento County—Crops look well. Cool weather beneficial. Fair crop of barley on bottom lands. Hop vines show improvement.

Solano County—Rain and cold weather have been beneficial to all fruit crops. Rain did little damage to cherries or hay. Shipping cherries. Wheat maturing well. Summer fallow will yield fair crop.

Placer County—Rain was helpful to fruit and a large yield is now promised. Apricots and berries retarded some; bulk of cherry crop shipped; blackberries and raspberries coming in slowly.

El Dorado County—All crops look well. Prospect of big crop of wine grapes.

San Joaquin County—Rain damaged cut hay, but benefit to wheat will offset the damage to those having hay and wheat. Onions coming on.

Stanislaus County—Light shower Saturday night; no damage to hay. Growing crops look well inside canal limits.

Merced County—What grain there is, is filling well. Rain last Saturday night will do grain no particular good. Summer fallow will produce fair crop. Making hay. Fruit doing well.

Fresno County—Grain doing well; fair crop in irrigated district. Haying last week, light crop. Light yield apricots and quinces. Grape vines looking well.

Kings County—Heavy rain on 15th in southern part of county of great benefit to some wheat on the border of Tulare Lake, but most of grain in county beyond help. Much grain hay will be saved and alfalfa doing well. Prunes falling.

Tulare County—Plenty of water for irrigation; ditches running full. Vines look well and promise a good crop. Grain light but doing well. Orchards in good condition. Harvesting on a small scale in the foot-hills.

Kern County—Light showers in foot-hills Sunday.

Lake County—Rain has delayed hay cutting for a time, otherwise has done good. Ground in good condition; many doing their spring plowing. Vines and fruit trees doing well; promise of a good grape year.

Sonoma County—Rain greatly helped all late crops, especially hops and corn. Prunes unusually fine. County will have the largest crop of hay and grain on record; cherry crop short and ripening slowly; berries ripening slowly but greatly improved; corn and hops making good progress.

Napa County—Rain benefited fruit and grain; cherries but little injured; good crop of grain, hay and fruit.

Alameda County—Vegetables doing nicely. Fruit doing well; fair crops, except apricots. Grain and hay show improvement. Grapes and beets doing well.

Santa Cruz County—Rain benefited grain, beets, vegetables and grain; no damage to hay. First car of cherries shipped.

San Mateo County—Fruit trees look well. No apricots or almonds. Haying at full blast. No damage by rain.

Monterey County—Prospect for some hay, and with more showers, some grain. Cool and cloudy.

San Benito County—Larger peach crop than anticipated; apricots a failure; prunes fair. Rain benefited fruit and hay.

San Luis Obispo County—Rain has assured summer crops; apricot and peach crop will be light; late sown grain will make hay and probably some grain will be threshed.

Ventura County—Heavy rain of great benefit to fruit and nut trees. Estimated that over 500 acres will be planted to beets. Beans, corn and pumpkins will be planted. Rain helped beets already.

Los Angeles County—New crop of oranges promises to be very good, especially navel. Deciduous fruits better than expected; fair crop of peaches and apricots. Considerable hay harvested. Light crop of corn looking well.

San Bernardino County—Rains revived feed and late sown grain, and benefitted trees. Since last rain some grain and hay expected.

Orange County—Enough hay for home use. Walnut trees looking well; fruit crop promising.

Riverside County—Cool and damp. Grain crops very light, almost too far along to be helped much.

San Diego County—Oranges, peaches and apples promise well, while apricots are a failure except in scattered localities. Rain was remarkably heavy in mountains and foot-hills, varying from 3.00 inches on Cuyamaca to 0.30 inch on coast. Before this rain many ranches had no hope of making hay, and now a good yield of grain from the same fields is assured. Season's rain deficiency is 5.31 inches. Near Otay haying is in full blast; rain is said to have done as much harm to hay as it has done good to other things.

Eureka Summary—Pastures looking well and growing crops of all kinds making vigorous growth under the influence of warm weather and abundant rains.

Los Angeles Summary—Late rain put ground in shape for beans and will materially increase beet crop; freshened late grain and pasture; early grain past help.

ROYALLY BRED YEARLINGS.

A Visit to Belle Meade Farm, Nashville, the Home of Iroquois, Luke Blackburn and Longstreet—Five Thousand Acres of Blue Grass—Gallops of Yearlings in Their Paddocks, &c.

NEW YORK, May 21st.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: Some three weeks ago I left Chicago by the favorite Monon route to Louisville. At Louisville I stopped over a half day to take a look at the horses at Churchill Downs, and witnessed such a work-out by Plaudit, the Derby colt, as to at once cause me to form a very decided opinion of his proving a victor in the great race so soon to be decided.

From Louisville to Nashville is an easy run of less than six hours, that great trunk line of railway, the Louisville and Nashville, taking one along in rapid fashion.

At Nashville, which I reached in the gloaming of a charming Sunday evening, I found turf matters very quiet, as the spring meeting had closed, and most of the visiting stables had left town. I understand that in spite of this spring meeting having been a loss, financially, dates have already been announced for a year hence. The Nashville Country Club, headed by Gen. W. H. Jackson, will take an active part in trying to restore the prestige of the city as a racing resort.

Who that has ever been to Belle Meade has ever failed to rhapsodize over its many charms of natural scenery and broad acres of blue grass meadows? While as to the quality of the horses on the place, their fame is widespread, for Belle Meade, as the home of Bonnie Scotland, Enquirer, Great Tom, Iroquois, Bramble, Luke Blackburn, &c., has been prominently before the world as the senior stock farm of America, and the famous farm never looked more beautiful than it did the morning I rode out from Nashville to its historic gates.

Covering in all 5,300 acres of the finest land in all Kentucky and Tennessee, this blue-grass home of the highly-bred thoroughbred horse is at any time of the year a pleasant place to visit. And in the early spring, when tree, shrub and flower is in the fresh exuberance of a new birth, when the velvety grass, wild violets and and sweet mint crush odorously under your feet, when the tap of the wood pecker, whistle of the mocking bird and scream of the blue jay from patriarchal trees tells of the wild birds back to their summer home and the "white flags" of the deer in the park hard by looking like vanishing beacons through the tree trunks and aisles of their forest home. These are a few of the grateful pleasures to sight and sense that greet the visitor to Belle Meade in the Spring. While to me it is more or less of an old story, the grand old place never looked more like an earthly paradise than it did not bright spring morning a few weeks ago. As I reached the mansion Gen. Jackson greeted me in his cordial Southern fashion and I found myself quite willing to enjoy a chat on the porch with my host before we started off to the stables. One of his fifty-odd colored retainers had died and the funeral was passing through the grounds as we sat on the veranda. And a solemn cavalcade it made, with "Uncle Bob" on horseback and a body guard bringing up the rear.

Turning from the sober to the more joyous side of life, an adjournment to the stables was in order, and first of all the stallions were inspected. In the first paddock my old acquaintance Longstreet was found, looking for all the world like a horse in racing condition. And the same can be said of the great Iroquois, Inspector B, Luke Blackburn, Tremont, Loyalist, Clarendon and his other famous fellows, while the new importations, imp. Tithonus, six years by St. Simon, and imp. Madison, three years, by Hampton, show further evidence of the benefit of daily exercise. Imp. Tithonus is a grand individual, much like Iroquois, and was a good race horse in England. He should make his mark at the stud, as many of the best mares at Belle Meade were bred to him this spring. I bespeak for this high-bred horse a most successful stud career.

There are now 188 mares at Belle Meade, and Gen. Jackson is constantly adding to this number. All have spacious, roomy paddocks to roam in, from thirty to fifty acres in extent. And it was a sight worth going a long distance to see to observe two day-old foals and their dams let loose from the barns for the first time since the birth of the youngster. The long-legged, gangling colt or filly, as soon as they would strike the velvety grass, would break into a gallop as naturally as if the world was not an entirely new place for them. And after a few minutes spent at this sort of thing, down would go the youngster in the emerald grass, and after a roll or two lie and bask in the sun, for all the world as if he had been on earth a long time instead of only forty-eight hours. It was a pretty sight to see.

As to the yearlings a recapitulation of them in toto would take up too much of your space. They are the finest lot of individuals, however, I have seen at Belle Meade for many a year, and could you really have seen them as I did, shoot out of their barns, when loosed, like pigeons let loose from a trap, race up the 50-acre paddock, one by one, and then group up together at the far end (40 of them) and come thundering down together at a racing pace, they would realize that it is as natural for the high class thoroughbred to race as it is for a duck to swim. And all the yearlings at Belle Meade show by their present hard, firm condition the benefits of this constant daily exercise, entirely of their own volition.

Where there were so many grand youngsters it would be perhaps invidious for me to particularize as to the merits of this one or that, but without giving away entirely my opinion as to the capabilities of the youngsters formed from the field races that I witnessed I will mention one youngster that impressed me greatly.

Out of the famous California mare Fairy, by Argyle, the great victress of many race for L. J. Rose, a chestnut filly by Iroquois, showed great speed in her paddock gallops. Time and again she would start behind, pick up her fallows one by one and beat them out, and I predict, bar accident, a great future for this young miss.

For further information about these yearlings that are to be sold by William Easton the last three days in June at the Sheephead Bay, N. Y., race course, I refer your readers to the catalogues which can be had at your office. But I will say that they are at present in better physical condition than I ever saw youngsters anywhere. None of them have missed a day's exercise in their paddocks, except in very bad weather, since they were weaned, and all are firm, hard and as well conditioned as race horses in training.

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed and superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, salting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm. Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 63,816.

Suzie M. Lewiston, plaintiff vs. Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, send greeting to Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or at served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's failure to provide for more than two years last past for plaintiff the common necessities of life, said failure to so provide being caused by the idleness of defendant. Plaintiff also asks for the custody of the minor child, the issue of the marriage, also for general relief, as with more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which, and more fully appear in the Complaint on file hereto, to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

TROTTING TRACK PICNIC GROUNDS RUNNING TRACK

The beautiful, convenient and popular grounds known as AGRICULTURAL PARK, San Jose, has been leased by

C. F. BUNCH and A. HABLES,

Who are putting the same in suitable condition for the accommodation of picnics and other attractions. The attention of horsemen is called to the fact that both the trotting and running tracks will be kept in first-class order. The numerous box stalls are roomy and well ventilated. The San Jose Race Track must soon become a popular resort for horsemen, if good treatment, moderate charges and first-class accommodations are appreciated. Address,

BECOME A MAN

This will interest those who have desisted with "medical companies" and "free prescriptions" fakes and electro-bells, and they are thoroughly disgusted. I am a well known physician of Chicago and have made nervous disorders and all diseases peculiar to men a special study for 20 years. I have a remedy that will do wonders in a few days, but with patience and the correct use of my treatment I will guarantee to MAKE A MAN OF YOU IN TIME. For a short time I will send a full medical treatment of my "NEURV-SEKIDIS" with some valuable instructions, for $1.00, or 5 boxes, full course for $5.00. I HAVE CURED THOUSANDS AND CAN CURE YOU. If suffering from a chronic disease of any nature write me in confidence at once. All medicines sent in plain wrappers.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

Alameda, at $100 the Season.

(WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGES.)

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities. In having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a pacing-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electioneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Prince. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONT'S.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

Note—Besie Rankin, by Altamont, sold November, 1897, brought the highest price obtained for a harness horse at public auction in California during the year. Address

THE BIG WINNERS IN CALIFORNIA.

Our Opinion as to the Ability of the Fleet Ones —Statistics of Interest.

Below will be found a list of horses that won $2,000 or over at the C. J. C. and P. C. J. C. meetings from November 1, 1897, to May 21, 1898, inclusive. After looking over the list carefully, we are of the opinion that Satsuma was the best of the older division, taking ability to go a long or short distance into account. He ran six furlongs in 1:12½, a mile in 1:39½ and 1:40 and 1½ miles in 2:07½. In sixteen starts he was out of the money but once, and was then left at the post. While The Roman did not win $2,000, his mile and a quarter over Ingleside track in 2:07½ with 119 lbs. up stamps him nearly first-class. Fleur de Lis ran some grand races, one of a mile in 1:40½ at Ingleside being especially good. Geyser started nine times and won on every occasion. He must be accounted the best horse here of any age up to and including seven furlongs. He ran the latter distance in 1:26½ at Ingleside with 115 lbs. in the saddle, a track record, and the best seven-furlong race from every standpoint ever run there. Paul Griggs did not win $2,000, but was just nosed out by Flashlight a mile in 1:40, and ran five furlongs at Ingleside in 1:00½. The best three-year-old colt of the season, to our minds was Count of Flanders, who, we hear, has gone wrong. He was very fast, game and consistent. The best three-year-old filly was Briar Sweet, who ran seven races, winning five and running second twice. She is credited with going five furlongs in 1:00½ at Ingleside, 102 pounds up; seven furlongs in 1:26½, 97 pounds up, and a mile in 1:40½, 107 pounds. Her seven-furlong race tied the track record, and considering she was a year younger than Geyser, it was fully as good as his. May W. was, "out of the money" but twice in nineteen starts, and the first time out was clearly not fit. The champion two-year-old shown, in our opinion, was Formero, W. B. Sink Jr.'s Conveth—Formosa youngster. He won seven of his twelve races and beat the much-louted Olinthus and gave him weight every time they hitched up. Formero's half-miles in 0:48½, 106 pounds up, and 0:48½, 112 pounds up, are good performances, and his five furlongs in 1:01½, 113 pounds up, Ingleside track, defeating Olinthus with 112, is not to be sneezed at. It is hard to decide between Sombre and Toluca, but the former has carried the most weight and run faster than the Nomad filly, hence we would award her first place among the two year old fillies racing in California with Humidity, Canace and Magdalenas well up:

Satsuma—Ch b, 6, by Macduff—Albertha; bred by Milt. Young, McGrathiana Stud, Ky.; owned by Dr. H. E. Rowell; trained by James Coffey; won the McLaughlin, Burns and Opening Day Handicaps. Started 16 times, won 9, second 3, third 3, unplaced 1. Actually won $11,015.

Olinthus—Ch c, 2, by Red Iron—Lily Wright; bred by J. P. Diggs at Woodland, Cal.; won the Corrigan, Waterhouse, Schreiber and Gen. Arthur Cigar Stakes. Started 13 times, won 5, second 3, third 2, unplaced 4. Won $4,115.

Torsida—Ch f, 3, by Torsu—Judith; bred by J. B. Haggin at Rancho del Paso; owned and trained by E. F. Smith of California. Won the Oakland Prize Handicap. Started 18 times, won 8, second 5, third 4, unplaced 1. Won $3,870.

Count of Flanders, b c, 3, by St. Carlo—Imp. Countess Langden; bred by W. O'B. Macdonough at Menlo Stock Farm; won the Crocker Stakes and Balboa Handicap. Started 12 times, won 7, second 5, third 0, unplaced 0. Won $3,425.

Joe Ullman—Ch g, 4, by Riley—Hattie Harris; bred owned and trained by E. Corrigan; bred at Midway, Ky. Won the Crocker-Woolworth Stakes. Started 13 times, won 7, second 3, third 0, unplaced 3. Winnings, $3,215.

Shasta Water—B m, 4, by imp. Maxim—Tyranny; bred by J. B. Haggin at Rancho del Paso, Sacramento, Cal.; owned by Burns & Waterhouse; trained by James McCormick. Won the Naglee and Presidio Stakes. Started 13 times, won 6, second 2, third 0, unplaced 5. Winnings, $2,830.

Humidity—Br f, 2, by Hindoo—imp. Calphurnis; bred by Clay & Woodford, Rannymede Stud, Paris, Ky.; owned by Burns & Waterhouse; trained by James McCormick. Won the Gebhard Stakes. Started 15 times, won 5, second 4, third 5, unplaced 1. Winnings, $3,080.

Marquise—B m, 5, by Miser—Monte Koss; bred by E. S. Gardner Jr. at Avondale Stud, Saundersville, Tenn.; won the New Year's Handicap and Golden West Stakes. Started 12 times, won 4, second 3, third 3, unplaced 2. Winnings, $2,925.

St. Calatine—Ch f, 3, by St. Carlo—Callatine; bred by W. O'B. Macdonough at Menlo Stock Farm, San Mateo County, Cal.; owned by E. McSweeney; trained by J. Raffi. Won the San Francisco Stakes. Started 23 times, won 7, second 4, third 3, unplaced 9. Winnings, $2,830.

Montgomery—Ch g, 5, by Harover—Blessing; bred by Milton Young at McGrathiana; trained and owned by W. P. Magrane. Started 18 times, won 8, second 4, third 1, unplaced 5. Winnings, $2,495.

Collins—Br g, 5, by Inspector B.—Piazza; bred by E. H. Douglas at Grand View Farm, Franklin, Tenn.; owned by Dr. H. E. Rowell; trained by James Coffey. Won the Lakeside Stakes. Started 20 times, won 6, second 4, third 4 unplaced 6. Winnings, $2,625.

Morellito—Br c, 3, by Morello—Miss Cromwell; bred by Willmans Bros at Newman, Stanislaus Co., Cal. Won the Racine Stakes. Started 23 times, won 6, second 7, third 3, unplaced 7. Winnings, $3,345.

May W.—B f, 4, by imp. Eagle's Plume—Froila; bred in N. W. Territory; owned and trained by D. Cameron. Won no stakes. Started 19 times, won 8, second 7, third 2, unplaced 2. Winnings, $2,850.

Geyser—B c, 4, by Ben Ali—Hot Springs; bred by J. B. Haggin, at Rancho del Paso, Sacramento, Cal.; owned and trained by Ed Corrigan. Started 9 times, won 9 times. Winnings, $2,950.

Briar Sweet—Ch f, 3, by imp. Sir Modred—Sweetbriar; bred by J. B. Haggin at Rancho del Paso, Sacramento, Cal.; owned and trained by W. B. Jennings; won the California Oaks. Started 7 times, won 5, second 2, third 0, unplaced 0. Winnings, $2,815.

Garland Barr—B g, 5, by imp. Deceiver—Billette; bred by Samuel Smith & Co., at Meadow Brook Farm, Lexington, Ky.; owned and trained by J. F. Fogg. Won San Rafael Stakes. Started 12 times, won 6, second 3 third 1, unplaced 2. Winnings, $2,540.

Linstock—Br g, 3, by Logic—Blue Stocking; bred by Mrs. J. M. Clay, at Ashland Stud, Lexington, Ky. Won the Pacific Union Stakes. Started 12 times, won 4, second 3, third 1, unplaced 4. Winnings, $2,345.

Personne—B g, 4, by Leonatus—Countess Gisela; bred by Woodford Bros., at Paris, Ky.; owned and trained by Louis H. Ezell. Won the Flood Handicap. Winnings, $2,400.

Buck Massie—Br h, 6, by Hanover—Triana; bred by M. Walker & Son, Lexington, Ky.; owned and trained by J. M. Murphy; won the Emeryville Handicap. Started 11 times, won 3, second 5, third 1, unplaced 2. Winnings, $2,015.

Ace—B g, 6, by Fabulous—Pannier; bred by W. A. Dun, Oak Forest Stud, Ohio; owned and trained by Tom Ryan; won the J. F. Ullman Stakes. Started 7 times, won 3, second 2, unplaced 2. Won $2,660.

Formero—Ch c, 2, by imp. Conveth—Formosa; bred by E. J. Baldwin at Santa Anita Stud, Los Angeles Co., Cal.; owned and trained by W. B. Sink Jr.; won no stakes. Started 12 times, won 7, second 1, third 2, unplaced 2. Won $2,105.

The Breeding of Jeddah on the Lowe System

The breeding of this year's winner of England's blue ribbon event is a strong plea in favor of the Bruce Lowe plan—the strongest possible—for both the sire and dam of Jeddah are of the No. 1 family, the Tregonwell Barb mare. This is the best "running" family known, basing figures upon victories in the three classic English events—Epsom Derby, The Oaks and the Doncaster St. Leger. In the second generation we find Isonomy (19), sire of Isinglass, the heaviest winner in English turf history; Jannette (1), winner of the Oaks and St. Leger of 1878; The Palmer (5), winner of the Liverpool Cup and sire of Jenny Howlett, winner of the Oaks of 1880; then Lady Audley, Jeddah's second dam, mother of Pilgrim, age, winner of the 1,000 and 2,000 Guineas of 1878 and second to Jannette for The Oaks. In the third generation we find Sterling (12) and Macaroni (14), both great sires and from good sire lines; Isola Bella (19) by Stockwell (3); Lord Clifden (2), winner of the St. Leger and sire of four St. Leger winners; Chevisance (1), by Stockwell (3), winner of the Derby and sire of Blue Gown, winner of the Derby; Madam Maglantine (5), dam of Rosierucian, the sire of Geheimnisse, winner of the Oaks, and Secret (1), by Melbourne (1). In the fourth generation is Oxford (12), then comes Stockwell (3) twice; Isoline by Ethelbert, son of Faught-a-Ballagh (11), the sire of imp. Leamington (14) Newminster (8), winner of the St. Leger and sire of Hermit, winner of the Derby; The Slave (3), by Melbourne (1); Paradigm (1), by Paragon; Weatherbit (12), Mendicant (13) Cow (2), Diversion (5), Sweetmeat (21), Jocose (14), Melbourne (1) and Mystery (1).

It will be noted that in the first four generations there are more members of the No. 1 family represented than one often comes across in a pedigree. Jeddah's sire and dam are not only members of this, the greatest of all "racing" families, but Secret, third dam of Jeddah, is by Melbourne (1) out of Mystery (1). It is a peculiar fact that Isonomy (19) is the only horse that ever got two winners of the "triple crown" (Derby, 2,000 Guineas and St. Leger), so that numbers as far down as 19 must not be despised, neither must Sweetmeat (No. 21), because he sired the great Macaroni, winner of the Derby, 2,000 Guineas and Doncaster Cup and sire of Macgregor (who begot imp. Brutus), Lily Agnes, dam of the unbeaten Ormonde, and imp. Macaroon, sire of Cerise, mother of the peerless Morello.

Jeddah's breeding would lead one to believe that if you wanted to get a runner of the first class you should mate a stallion of the No. 1 family with a mare of the No. 1 family, but there must be some good "sire blood" in the first four generations. In Jeddah's pedigree we note that in the first and second generations there are no members of the 3, 8, 11, 12 or 14 families, and in the third will be found only Sterling (12) and Macaroni (14), but in the fourth Oxford (12), Stockwell (3) twice, Newminster (8) and Weatherbit (12)—plenty of "sire blood," truly—so that, on the Bruce Lowe theory, Jeddah is bred to be a runner of the very highest class, but should not make a great sire, unless mated with mares having lots of 3, 8, 11, 12 and 14 blood in their veins. We note that Janissary, sire of Jeddah, got lots of "sire blood" at the third remove, such as Oxford (12), Stockwell (3) twice, besides Newminster (8), while in the fourth remove there is Birdcatcher (11), Flatcatcher (3), Ethelbert (12) and Touchstone (14). For the following pedigree we are indebted to Capt. T. B. Merry ("Hidalgo"), of Los Angeles:

Saddle Notes.

T. BURNS is riding winners at St. Louis.

DICK CLAWSON is riding well at Harlem.

THE Montana racing season opens up at Butte on July 2d.

GOOD boys must be scarce at Harlem when Van Kuren can win.

MONTGOMERY won a six-furlong race in the mud at St. Louis last Saturday.

JOCKEY J. HILL, Cash Sloan and Caywood seem to be the star horse pilots at Harlem.

E. F. ("DAGGIE") SMITH has a royal chance to win the Montana Derby with Torsida.

CONLEY rode three winners at Oakley on May 25th and was second in another race.

ARAGNOL, the three-year-old brother at Heliobas (recently sold for $10,000) won at Toronto May 26th.

CHALLENGER, who is now winning over the jumps in the East, is a California-bred horse by the dead Martenhurst.

BARNEY SCHREIBER'S Sorrow captured her first start at St. Louis. This filly never showed her true form in California.

SUISUN has been retired. Eugene Leigh has sold her to Clay & Woodford, and Friday she will be shipped to Kentucky.

LONGSHOT CONLEY rode three winners at Oakley May 25th—Nervura, 5 to 1; Sister Mamie, 3 to 1, and Henry Laut, even money.

C. FLEISCHMAN SONS bought Dr. Eichberg for $15,000 from Turney Bros. He is a good colt by Candlemas—Nell Swift.—N. Y. dispatch, May 25th.

ESTACA, son of Emperor of Norfolk and La Cienega, won the York Purse, one mile, at Toronto, May 27th, beating a good field. George Murphy now owns the colt.

BUCKWA, Rey del Tierra and several others, who have been in the training of W. M. Murry, are to be given a start and may possibly be prepared for the State Fair meeting.

RIFLE, brother to Napamax (by the dead Maxim out of Napa) won a mile race at Oakley May 27th. He is owned by Charley Patterson, former owner and trainer of Ornament.

ED CORRIGAN'S Sir Andrew, by imp. Sir Andrew—Gypsy, won a two and a half steeplechase (the Woodbine) at Toronto May 24th, with Red Pat second—a case of California finishing one-two.

AT Sheepshead Bay track Sunday the well-known racer, Lake Shore, while at exercise, broke both fore legs at the ankle and was at once shot. He was in training for the Brooklyn Handicap.

JIMMY MCCORMICK, the clever trainer of the Burns & Waterhouse stable, will only take East the following six horses: Bliss Rucker, Eddie Jones, First Tenor, Gauntlet, Excursion and Oddson.

TWO California-bred horses won at Toronto May 26th—Laurentian, by Salvator—Lady Cardigan, and Sir Lawrence, by imy. Sir Modred—Pandora. The latter's win was in the Tally-Ho Steeplechase.

PAT DUNNE and Galen Brown have their stables at Hawthorne. It is probable they will remain there, and horses from either stable having engagements at Harlem will be walked there to fill them.

H. D. BROWN ("CURLY") left last night for Toronto. Next week he will begin starting at Hamilton, Ont., and thereafter will handle the flag at the meeting of the northern circuit.—Racing Form, May 24th.

BARNEY SCHREIBER has lost his filly Sorrow by the selling race route. She was entered to be sold for $300 in a race she won Tuesday and was run up to $800, at which price Barney let her go.—Racing Form, May 26.

UARDA, a bay filly by Strathmore—Zuhlan, owned by Baker & Gentry and ridden by Lonnie Clayton, won the Cincinnati Oaks (value $4,240) last Saturday. Martha II., Conley up, ran second, Komurasaki, Overton up, third.

SHIPMATE, dam of First Mate, dropped a full brother to First Mate at Neponset stud farm, Massachusetts, recently, but the colt unfortunately died. Mr. Forbes paid a large sum for Shipmate last fall. She will be mated with Meddler.

BELLE HOLMDEL, a recent winner at Morris Park, is by His Highness out of Wishing Well. Mr. Clay, who also on the 25th of May, is by imp. Darebin—Miss Clay. Ornamental, another victorious one, is by imp. Order, out of Glendaga.

GLASNERIN, winner of the first race at Oakley May 23d, is the first of the get of the young St. Blaise horse, St. Leonards, that we have noticed running. She carried 110 pounds and won easily in 0:56½ for four and a half furlongs. Conley rode her.

HORSES that ran in California last winter and spring were very much in evidence at Harlem last Saturday. Primavera ran third to King Barleycorn and McCarren, Bonita won at a mile; Santello at half a mile, while Don't Skip Me ran second at six furlongs.

JULIUS BAUER is beginning to show a good hand at Morris Park as trainer of the Bromley & Co. stable. He has during the past won respectively with Onondaga's Pride, Semper Ego and Kenmore Queen, each carrying a large stable commission. Several of his horses have also been placed.

AT GRAVESSEND, last Monday, Ben Eder won a mile and an eighth race, with Howard Mann second and Alvarado third. Dr. Sharp (young Sink's colt) ran second to the speedy Irish Reel and Capt. Piersal (Andy Blakely's) finished up second to Sir Vassar in the mile and three quarters hurdle race.

ABUSE, with 127 pounds up, won the Memorial Handicap at St. Louis last Monday in 1:07½ for the five and a half furlongs, Timemaker second, The Elector third. Foxey and Oric, well-known in California, won races the same day at four furlongs and at a mile and a furlong. It is Oric's first win at St. Louis since he changed hands, we believe.

IT is quite evident that Zalinski is regarded as a coming sire, and after the performance of Cordite it is not surprising to find a demand for the ex-New Zealand's progeny. There is no doubt that he will prove a worthy successor to Newminster. At the Newminster Park Sale on Monday Mr. Gray, of West Australia, paid 610 guineas for a Zalinski—Nemesis gelding. At the same sale 270 guineas was paid for a Vengeance—Primrose filly.—New Zealand Sporting Review.

SAM HILDRETH, Jockey Clawson and Dr. H. E. Rowell arrived yesterday from San Francisco. The horses are all in good condition. Although inclined to be friky, Satsuma looked all over the good horse that he is. There were ten in Dr. Rowell's lot—Satsuma, Collins, Bernardillo, Tom Cromwell, Sybaris, Abina, St. Kristine, Tenebrae, Cloisonne and an unnamed two-year-old colt, by MacDuff. Bernardillo is the property of Trainer James Coffey, who purchased him from E. J. Baldwin. Sam Hildreth's lot were Caesarian, Judge Denny, Cash Day, All Over, Bellicoso, Fonsovannah, Hurly Burly, St. Callatine and Toluca.—Daily Racing Form, May 27th.

"THERE is the hardest horse in the country to train," said B. J. Johnson, as he looked at Paul Griggs, big and strong and apparently ready to race for a princely stake. "He will not work by himself and any way you work him in order to do him any good he must be sent along nearly as fast as he can go. If you work him with another horse the other horse will soon be in need of a rest. The only way you can keep him in racing order is to keep him racing him, and it is not often the programs furnish the spots for him. At that, I never will believe he ought to have been beaten in California in any race excepting the first time he started."—Chicago Racing Form.

HERE'S the way they figure down South: Plaudit has already won $16,000, and has $32,000, the combined American and St. Louis Derby stakes, clinched. After the Kentucky, Dwyer offered $25,000, with a string, attached, for the colt. It is said Fleischman stands ready to give $25,000 for him. That deal which was reported to have hung on the colt's winning the Kentucky and Clark stakes has fallen through, and the chances are Madden will hang on to his stake winner. It is thought that $25,000 will not buy the son of Himyar at any time this season, unless Bannockburn manages to shove a nose in front in one of the coming Derbies, and not one horseman in a hundred will admit this possible unless something unusual turns up.

HELIOBAS, the two-year-old son of Farandole—Bowden Lass, and the best colt in the West, is now the property of Bromley & Co., the big Chicago owners, who are now campaigning a string of horses in the East. At Oakley, H. Eugene Leigh, acting for Bromley & Co., purchased Heliobas from George Whitney for $1,000. The sale was closed by Frank Jones, of Lexington—Heliobas' trainer—acting for Mr. Whitney. Heliobas will remain at Oakley in charge of Jones until next Thursday, when he will run in the Emerald Stakes for two-year-olds. After this race Heliobas will be shipped to Chicago, where he has stake engagements at Harlem and Washington Park. Heliobas has defeated the best two-year-olds yet uncovered in the West, and so far nothing has been found that could take his measure.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

THE New Zealand representative, Vedette, made his mark all right, but it was not until the very last event that his winning turn came, though to be sure he gave a taste of his quality when he got into second place on the second day. That Vedette was far from being himself for his big engagement on the first day there is every reasonable ground to assume; as a matter of fact he did no sharpening-up work to fit him for such a contest as the Doncaster Handicap. The running, however, would bring him on, and he was thus able to do himself justice in his Saturday's task. Before the Doncaster, word was received in New Zealand that his owner did not expect Vedette to prevail; it was otherwise for the Final Handicap, and he was extensively backed at starting prices at the different centres. The New Zealand ring were, in fact, raked fore and aft. Although then Vedette missed the race, he ostensibly was sent to Sydney to try to secure, the trip must have been a profitable one for his owner. It will be seen that Vedette does not return to the colony. If it is correct the destination of the son of Vanguard be India, he should prove an excellent representative for this colony in a country which absorbs a great number of racehorses, but which has, as yet, not drawn on New Zealand for supplies.—Sydney Mail.

HIGH DEGREE, by His Highness, won the Clover Stake at Gravesend track last Monday, Lady Meddler second and Loiterer third. His Highness, with the best two-year-old colt of the year to his credit (Jean Berand) and one of the best fillies in High Degree, is likely to be a much-sought-after sire. Gideon & Daly have a new plan. They will train and develop His Highness' get, selling them off when they are two year-olds. Of course, after the horse has proved his worth as a sire there will be no need for keeping them so long.

JOHN J. CARTER, who was associated with Joseph A. Murphy in the judges' stand at Ingleside and Oakland, and recently acted as presiding judge at both places; J. B. Ferguson, who handled the flag at Oakland, and Bookmaker Frank Eckert were among a party of turfmen who arrived yesterday morning from San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson went to Lexington, Mr. Eckert goes to New York, and Judge Carter will remain here several days before assuming the duties of presiding official at the Northern Circuit meeting. Speaking of the winter's racing on the Pacific Coast, Judge Carter said: "We had successful meetings at both tracks. The last day at Oakland there were fourteen ring and two field books. During the winter there were days when thirty books did business. About the best horse that raced there was Geyser. Next to him were The Roman and Fleur de Lis. The best 3-year-old colt that ran out there was Traverser. Count of Flanders, owned by Tom Ryan, is also a good little horse. The best 3-year-old filly was Briar Sweet. Of the two-year-olds I consider Olinthus, now in Galen Brown's stable at Hawthorne, the best colt, and Formero next. Toluca, owned by Sam Hildreth, was probably the best filly. A maiden 3-year-old of considerable class will start in the American Derby. He is the colt Borgia, owned by Boots & Son. Charley Boots is now at Sacramento, and will ship him here in a few days."—Daily Racing Form, May 26th.

J. M. MURPHY has Buck Massie, Carnero and a slashing two-year-old named Streamer quartered near the half-post. Yesterday afternoon Buck Massie walked over from Washington Park, where he has been since his return from California. He is high in flesh and will not be trained until fall. It is doubtful if he will stand training. In any event he will be retired after this year. Carnero looks lusty and fit to be an interesting factor in handicaps and other all-aged events. Streamer, by Topgallant—Kittie Gunn, has never started, but, if appearances are not deceptive, is a colt of much quality. Speaking about California horses Mr. Murphy said: "They beat Buck out there and they can beat almost any horse that may be taken there from the East. The trouble with Eastern horses in California is they don't sweat. Here Buck would come out of a race almost white and often got into a lather at the post. There he would scarcely wet a hair. Still they beat him when I did not think they could. Fleur de Lis is one of the fastest mares I have ever seen. She could take up her weight and run a mile in 1:40. When I left there she was troubled with gravel in her foot. The Roman is a good, yes, a very good horse. His foot spread, but he was all right and nearly ready to race when I left. If the Brooklyn or Suburban would be run at 'Frisco, Fleur de Lis and The Roman would be one-two. I believe The Roman will start in the Brooklyn. Mr. Boots told me he intended to ship to New York and return to Chicago."—Racing Form, May 24th.

THAT only two horses should start for such an important race as the Champion Stakes shows that its popularity is waning. Owners do not care for the distance, and during the history of the race it very frequently has happened that the pace at the beginning has been so slow that the event has resolved itself into a four or six-furlong contest. The race was inaugurated in 1859, when Flying Buck, owned by Mr. Yuille, father of Mr. Archie Yuille, the well known Melbourne salesman, was the hero. The table of the results of the race brings up a host of memories of the past. Among the names of the winners not a single duffer can be pointed out. Carbine appears as a winner twice, but that feat was also accomplished by that splendid racehorse First King, also by Commotion and Zee so far back as 1860 and 1861. The latter was the property of that famous sportsman, honest John Tait, and was ridden by Jimmy Ashworth. Owner and jockey are now mouldering with the dust, but they were great men in their day, and their memories are still green in Australia. Titled in five champions in his time, including Fireworks and The Barb. Among the jockeys, Hales has the distinction of having ridden seven winners, namely, Richmond, First King (twice), Grand Flaneur, Matchlock, Trident and Abercorn. Much better cattle than that lot could not be wished for by a jockey. The fastest time for the race was that of Quiver and Wallace, 5 min 23½ sec, they running a dead heat in 1896. Portsea's time was just a quarter of a second longer, and the slowest time was that of the brilliant Strathmore, 6 min 53½ sec, in 1892.—New Zealand Sporting Review.

AN old timer fell in at Oakley yesterday. Frank Ireland, one of the firm of Ireland Bros., whose colors for years were so well known to local race-goers, and likewise very popular, was at the hilltop track. Mr. Ireland was on his way home from California, where he had been since last fall, and having missed a train out from the city, went out to Oakley to put in the afternoon with old friends. He is now almost out of the racing business, though he still has Grannan out on the Coast. The old two-miler, who broke down at Oakley the year before last, and has been in California ever since, will not, in the judgment of his owner, ever be in condition to race again, though Sam Hildreth, who has the horse, is confident that he will bring him around all right yet. While the racing game is good on the Coast, Mr. Ireland hopes to make a ten-strike in another direction. He and Will Applegate have a "claim" about sixty-five miles northeast of Sacramento, which they are now engaged in developing. The tract is 1,500 feet long and 300 feet wide, and a shaft has been sunk on it to the depth of 112 feet. Thus far there has been nothing but an outlay of money, but the prospects are of the brightest. If the good wishes of the many friends of Mr. Ireland should half way be realized the claim of himself and his associate in the mining venture will prove to be a veritable bonanza. Mr. Ireland left for his home last night. In a few days he will go to New York to see his "miner" partner and in about six weeks will return to California. He brought with him from the Coast Will Applegate's good colt, Linstock, who was something of a crack on the Coast, and left him at Chicago in charge of Tom Ryan.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MEMORIAL DAY MATINEE.

Golden Gate Park Driving Association Holds a Successful Meeting.

The Golden Gate Park Driving Association by a little judicious advertising and earnest effort has demonstrated the fact that trotting and pacing races are popular in this locality. At the matinee given by this association last Monday at the Oakland track fully 3,000 people were in attendance, the grand stand was filled with ladies and their escorts, and there was a crowd in the betting ring that kept the book-makers busy from 2 o'clock until 6:15, during which time fourteen heats were trotted and paced. Every heat was a contest, and although in some of them the leader won easily, the others were all trying, and the interest never lagged. While the Golden Gate Park Driving Association is composed almost entirely of amateurs, and the officers have had but little experience in giving public meetings, they went at the business end of the affair with a vim and a desire to accomplish results that would do credit to more experienced officials. The races were called promptly on time, and lagging drivers were fined from the start for delaying heats, much to their chagrin at first, but to the amusement and satisfaction of the spectators and greatly to the good of the cause, as the fourteen heats were reeled off in four hours and everybody reached home before dark.

The officers of the association are certainly entitled to much praise for the manner in which the meeting was conducted. This club was organized according to its published statement "To assist in properly maintaining the speed track of Golden Gate Park, for the improvement of our streets and roads, and to promote acquaintance and good fellowship amongst horsemen," and there can be no question but it is doing a great deal to accomplish those ends. Its members are the owners of some of the fastest and best road horses in the State, and had it not been for the life and enthusiasm manifest in this club during the past two years, good road horses would not be worth as much in California as they are to-day.

The starters in the races held last Monday at Oakland are all used by their owners as road horses, and although many of them have race records and track experience, there are a large number of green roadsters among them.

The day set for the meeting was a beautiful one, barring the wind which was not disagreeable although it made the occasion inopportune for fast time. The California Jockey Club grounds never looked prettier, and though the attraction of the troops and the processions on this side of the bay kept some from crossing the ferry, there were fully 3,000 people in holiday attire on the grounds when the first race was called.

The officers of the association, J. C. Kirkpatrick, President, E. H. Aigeltinger, Vice President, Frank J. O'Kane, Treasurer, and F. W. Thompson, Secretary, are entitled to praise for their efforts, while Dr. Dalzell, Messrs. Hamerton, Vetter, Kapp, Gallagher, and others were ubiquitous and indefatigable in looking after the various details and seeing that everything moved smoothly.

One of the features of the day was the introduction on a trotting track of the annunciators and other devices patented by Capt. B. E. Harris of this city and used by both the jockey clubs here. The celerity with which the names of the starters and winners were hoisted was a source of great satisfaction to the crowd in the grand stand and a feature that has been missed from trotting meetings heretofore.

The officers of the day were: Judges W. C. Hamerton, I. R. Dalziel; Timers, L. E. Clawson and Fred Vetter, with T. J. Crowley as starter and F. W. Thompson as clerk of the course.

NOTES.

In the first race Bishop Hero finished in front in the second heat, but was set back to last position by the judges for repeatedly breaking.

The horse called Ray Tamious by Antamious, who won the fourth race, doubtless bears that name and pedigree by a misunderstanding of sounds. The owner gave in the name that way and it is so recorded on the entry blank and in the judges' book. We think, however, it should be Reatinous by Antinous.

Marguerite K., Chas. Kapp's handsome little mare, was lame when started. She had more speed than any other horse in the race, but became so lame that Mr. Kapp asked permission to withdraw her after the second heat. She could hardly walk to her stall.

Algregor, 2:11, looks better this year than he ever did in his life, and Geo. Berry, who has been training him for his new owner, H. Dutard, is certainly entitled to much credit. Algregor won his race with the greatest ease, being pulled almost to a walk the last hundred yards in both heats. It is said that he was reliably timed on the speed track at the park a few mornings ago a quarter in 29½ seconds. He should be able to pace a mile below 2:10 this year.

Palermo, James Chesley's handsome bay gelding, is surely a "natural born" trotter, and a good prospect for the free for all brigade. He is ready to go a mile in 2:15 at any time. His record of 2:16½, made at Stockton last year, will be considerably reduced before the summer is over if Palermo is started at any of the meetings.

The starting which was done by T. J. Crowley was very good, barring one or two occasions. He got the horses off well together and there was very little scoring.

The track was in excellent condition—it could have been faster, but it was smooth and safe.

Hijo del Diablo reared and fell just as they were getting ready for the first heat of his race. His driver, J. M. Nelson, jumped from the sulky unhurt, and with the assistance of some of the bystanders got the sulky free from his colt. It was thought by many that the son of Diablo had injured himself in the fall as he did not make a very good showing in the race.

Trotters and Pacers at Santa Rosa.

The race track at Santa Rosa is a lively place this year, there being at least forty horses in training there and on work-out days all are given a chance to show their paces.

The largest string on the track is that of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm of Pierce Bros., which is under the care of that well-known knight of the sulky, Ed Lafferty. The only horse with a record in the string is Beau Brummel 2:19½, a black pacer by Wildnut, that was seen on the circuit last year but did not do very much. He is now going along very nicely, and should lower his record if right. Lafferty has eleven others, all green ones, by Guy Wilkes, Stamboul and Direct, two youngsters by the latter being exceptionally good ones.

Dr. Finlan, proprietor of the Rosedale Farm, has a string of eight in training, the most of them by Daly 2:15. All these are green trotters, exceptionally fine lookers and the majority showing considerable speed.

Matt Rollins has three youngsters at work—one a green pacer by Philosopher that has the making of a cracker-jack.

P. W. Quinn of Humboldt county has Eureka 2:15½, Arthur W. 2:15½, Forrest W. by Wayland W., Brice McNeill, by Dudley, and John A., a two-year-old by Wayland W. This should be a money-winning stable this year.

Geo. Campion has five horses in his stable, and among them is the horse that all the rail birds and horsemen at Santa Rosa who have seen him go refer to as the champion trotter for 1898. This is Lynwood, by Guy Wilkes, with a record of 2:20½ as a two-year-old. It has always been known that this horse was very fast, but an injury to his feet prevented him being worked after his record was made, as he invariably went lame. He was blistered last fall, however, and has grown new feet and shows no sign of lameness as yet. Lynwood served 42 mares this spring and last week, after just three weeks' track work, trotted a half mile at Santa Rosa in 1:06, the last quarter in 29½ seconds. He did this so easily that the horsemen who were holding on him could not believe their own time pieces, but comparisons were made and the watches agreed. Those who have seen Lynwood working on the track say that he is undoubtedly as fast as any of the get of Guy Wilkes, and if his feet do not bother him he should be able to trot below 2:10 this year.

Joe Costello has a string of six, Bessie Rankin 2:16½, the pacing mare by Altamont, being the fastest of the lot. The five others are green horses, two or three of them being good prospects.

Santa Rosa should organize a club and give a meeting this summer. It would undoubtedly be a success if rightly conducted.

A Matinee at Salinas.

James Dwain, the well-known horseman who is the lessee of the racetrack at Salinas, arranged a matinee for the local admirers of trotters and pacers in that locality last Sunday, which furnished some excellent sport and rather surprised the horsemen themselves, as in spite of a heavy wind five heats were gone in better than 2:30. The pacers Lindo and Sleepy Charley and the trotter Patrick were the contestants. Sleepy Charley driven by his owner, A. N. Jessen, took the first heat, and although there were no timers, the watches held in the crowd made the time 2:25. Lindo, driven by James Dwain, took the second heat in 2:22. Patrick, driven by Gus Kasling got in first in the third heat in 2:28, and then Lindo captured the next two in 2:25 and 2:27. Each of these heats was a contest from start to finish, and though Lindo was the speediest of the lot he was a little uncertain and lost two heats through breaking. There are quite a number of horses in training at Salinas, and the horsemen are unanimous in their praise of Mr. Dwain for the excellent condition in which he keeps the track. Since the rains Salinas hay has taken quite a drop as there will be at least 10,000 tons for export from that locality.

Portland's Meetings.

One week from Monday next the entries for the spring meeting of the Portland Racing Association will close. Those Oregonians are going to have a good meeting this year and are using every endeavor to make it a notable one in the history of Northwest racing. The classes and purses given are advertised in the columns of this paper, and we ask horsemen to make a careful perusal of the same. Besides the trotting and pacing races there will be twenty-three purses offered the runners. There will range from $150 to $400 and will mostly be at short distances. At the fall meeting of the Portland Association, which begins September 5th, there will be four stake races for harness horses of $1,000 each and four stakes for runners of $800 each. Write now to G. Dammeier, the Secretary, and get programs and full particulars of all these events.

THE last equine survivor of the civil war, Old Ned, died at North East, Pa., May 3, aged forty-three years. In the raid on Washington by General Jubal A. Early in 1864 Ned's rider was shot from his back and the horse fell to Sergeant B. F. Crawford, who rode him to the end of the war and then took him home with him, where he was tenderly cared for till his death.

The Corbitt Sale.

The dispersal sale of the San Mateo Stock Farm was held Thursday last at the farm, and attracted a crowd of about three hundred people, the great majority of whom went down to visit the great brood farm, take a look at the mares and colts, but not to bid on them: The sale was, of course, a slaughter. Under the circumstances it could hardly have resulted otherwise. Californians are not horse-buyers this year, especially of brood mares and young colts. Good pasturage is obtainable in but few localities in the State and the price asked is almost prohibitory to any but capitalists. The grand old brood mares should have been sold East, but as they nearly all had colts at foot the trip could not well be made.

The sale began at 10:30 and bidding was so slow that it was 6:15 before the last one was knocked down. The average of the 78 head was but $80 and the highest price brought by an individual was $300, which was paid by J. Coffin of this city for a two-year-old gelding by Sable Wilkes out of Mamie Kohl by Steinway. This colt showed as much speed to halter as was ever shown by a two-year-old. He was led by "Shorty" and could trot as fast as the saddle horse could run "Better than a .30 gait" was the expressed opinion of nearly all who saw the untrained youngster stick out his nose and trot like a champion.

Many of the mares were old but none looked their years, and all had foals at foot or were heavy with foal to either Oro Wilkes or Prince Airlie. The last-named horse, a large and typical Guy Wilkes, with open gait and lots of knee and hock action went to the bid of Mr. Gardner Williams, of Kimberly, South Africa, for the very low price of $270. He will ship the horse there immediately and breed him to thoroughbred mares with the idea of raising road horses.

Superintendent F. W. Covey of Palo Alto Stock Farm was present at the sale and did everything possible toward arousing the spectators to a realization of the value of the animals being so unmercifully slaughtered, but the crowd would not bid. A number of fine mares went to the nod of Mr. Covey and they will gain new honors among the matrons of Palo Alto.

Mr. Corbitt treated the vast crowd much better than they treated him. He provided a fine lunch of eatables and drinkables and at noon all were invited to partake, which invitation was the only one made during the day that received a quick response.

The sale was held by Killip & Co., the well-known live stock auctioneers of this city. Following is a complete list of the animals sold, the names of the purchasers and the prices paid:

Alameda Driving Association.

The Alameda Driving Association held last Monday the first race meet of the series of the three that are to take place at the Alameda track.

The first event was a mixed pacing and trotting race. The first heat was won by Comb's gray mare Anita. Time, 2:33. Dr. Bull's bay mare Much Better took the second and third heats in 2:31½ and 2:33½.

The second race was for the 2:30 class, the only entries being Professor Heald's chestnut gelding Pilot McClellan and H. Wichman's bay mare Wild Piney. Pilot McClellan took both heats. Time, 2:28½ and 2:33.

The final event was a mixed trotting and pacing race for the 2:50 class, the entries being Bert Comb's grey mare Operetta, I. L. Borden's gray mare Lady L. and Thomas Moran's bay mare Lizzie Moore. Operetta won the first and second heats. Time, 2:39½ and 2:43.

The judges were Dr. H. Latham of Oakland, J. W. Thomas of Alameda, and O. Marchand of San Pablo.

Horsemen at Independence.

The Independence, Oregon, race track presents a lively appearance these fine mornings, when a dozen or more horses are taking their morning exercise. The track always good, is now kept in perfect condition, and the surface has the appearance of a billiard table—perfectly smooth and level.

There are several horses here of more than a local reputation, among them being the black stallion Del Norte, 2:08, and Cœur d'Alene, 2:19½. Each of these horses are well represented by their get, and some of them are very promising.

Mr. Mosher is working Coral, a four-year-old by Cœur d'Alene, that is taking kindly to his work and promises to be a good horse in his class. He will be entered throughout the Northwest.

A three-year-old by the same sire and out of Dix is taking her first lessons at the pace.

A two-year-old by the same horse, and out of the dam of Coral, seems to be Mr. Mosher's delight. He is certainly a promising colt, and if all goes well he will be a factor in the two-year-old stakes.

Mr. Barrows is working all the get of Del Norte—one trotter and ten pacers—and seems to have every confidence in their ability to earn their winter oats.

J. E. Kirkland has a select stable there. Ben Bolt, by Alizes, dam sister to Rosie C. This fellow, while not large, is a horse of a good deal of substance, and seems to have the requisites of a race horse. Another three-year-old by Planter, dam the grand old race mare, Kitty Ham. These two are owned by Congressman Thomas Tongue. The third one is Miss Crescent, by Del Norte—Babe Flarity. This is a three-year-old pacer and is owned by Dr. E. J. Young.

J. M. Statte is also here and is working Lady Dell, by Del Norte, a four-year-old pacer and a two-year-old trotter by Cœur d'Alene, dam by Altamont. These colts are all in fine condition and working well.

George Bryan also has a stable of trotters and pacers. The people in and around Independence are taking an interest in the race meeting to come off there this fall, and if good weather could be assured, one of the best meetings of the season will be pulled off at that place.

The two-year-old stake in the Independence program is for trotters instead of pacers. These stake races have already been closed and the payment is due June 1st.—Rural Spirit.

Secretarial Work

It is still apparent that some Secretaries of associations believe that it is enough to advertise a racing program in a certain number of turf and other papers, and the entries will come in response to that sort of a call. This is a mistake and events have proved that none fraught with the danger of more disastrous consequences can be made by a Secretary. Once on a time it was quite well known that a certain association arranged its program of valuable races, advertised it liberally and sent to each horseman on its list an entry blank enclosed in an envelope, mailed unclosed, and carried by a one-cent stamp. It was predicted by a hard-working Secretary at that time, in "The Horseman's" editorial rooms, that these races would not fill, and as a matter of fact they did not fill, at least for the association offering them, and they were declared off. This association has since then had a somewhat varied experience with reference to its stakes filling, and it may be set down as a fact that the oftener an association declares off stakes or purposes the harder work it will have to obtain a sufficient number of entries thereafter. For this reason it is the duty of every Secretary to the association he serves to do his level best to secure long entry lists. These do not necessarily mean large fields of starters, for instances have been known where hundreds of entries dwindled down until the day of the race only one horse responded to the starter's call, but to have a large field of starters a long list of entries must first be procured. The point is that Secretaries can do more, by personal solicitation, than they can in any other way to obtain nominations to races in which they are interested. To advertise the program and possibly to mail entry blanks to great numbers of horsemen are necessary items in the campaign, but if that is all the work done the results will never be as satisfactory as they could have been made. It stands to reason that if the merits of a certain meeting are brought prominently before a horseman by letter, succinctly setting them forth, he will pay far more attention to the claims made than he would if an entry blank contained all the information furnished him. People have a bad habit of throwing one-cent mail matter in the waste basket, without reading it or bothering with it; consequently it was not hard to see why the association referred first above did not have better success—probably two-thirds of the blanks it sent out were thrown aside unlooked at, perhaps unopened. Secretaries frequently seek advice of The Horseman as to points essential to success in securing entries. In that connection, the statement must be made again that personal solicitation, and solicitation by friendly letter, will do more to further the attainment of the desired end than anything else. The first step is to advertise the program and dates and conditions as liberally as the funds on hand will allow or experience suggest. Then the Secretary must take his coat off and find some means whereby he may solicit an entry from every horseman at all likely to be sufficiently interested in the meeting or circuit to make one.—The Horseman.

Sulky Notes.

PLENTY of entries.

LOOK for the entire list next week.

THE Breeders meeting will be a success.

PRINCE ANSEL, 2:19½, is now in James Sullivan's string at Willows.

IAGO, 2:11, will be a stable companion of Elloree, 2:09½, this season.

FLYING JIB, 2:04, was all out of shape at Cleveland and was not sold.

PEKO, 2:11½, will be used this summer for matinee racing, in Cleveland.

READ the program of the Portland meeting and send to the Secretary for entry blanks.

IF you want a good horse cheap go to Pierce's sale at Killip & Co.'s yard next Tuesday.

APT TO, a brown mare, by Elos from Appoline by Sidney sold for $130 at the Blue Ribbon sale.

LENA N's mile in 2:12½ at Pleasanton, April 23d, is still the fastest heat made in a race this year.

THERE are twenty-three entries to the $2,000 purse for 2:10 trotters offered at Fort Wayne, Ind.

THE pacing mare Clara H., belonging to W. S. Harkey, is going well in her work at Sacramento.

WHEN a green two-year-old colt will sell for $4,700 the horse business is certainly on the improve.

RED WILKES, report says, was weighed a few days ago and brought down the scales to the tune of 1,340.

GEORGE SAUNDERS, the Cleveland trainer will campaign the Palo Alto mare Pasonte, 2:13, this season.

JAVELIN 2:08½, will eventually be used by W J White as a brood-mare, but this year she will be raced.

BETONICA, 2:10½, will be campaigned by Tom Marsh, who trains for Hon. Frank Jones, who now owns the fast pacer.

J. C. SIMPSON, 2:18½, a brother to Anteco, Antevolo, etc., will be raced in the East this fall after a season in the stud.

ROBERT STEEL intends to race Una Wilkes, 2:15, and Ruby Wilkes, 2:17½, as a team at the Belmont Park matinees at Philadelphia.

GOOD road horses at your own price by attending the Pierce sale at corner of Van Ness avenue and Market street, on Tuesday next.

MORRIS J. JONES offered F. C. Salves $2,000 for Alix's first foal, if Mr. Salves would allow him to name the sire to which the queen should be bred.

ELLA T., 2:03½, by Altamont, is pacing miles in 2:20 in her work and her trainer John Tilden, thinks she will be better than ever this year.

CAROLITA, by Dexter Prince, dam by Electioneer, a member of James Golden's stable, at Boston, is regarded as material for a very fast trotter.

THE pacer, F. W., 2:11½, is reported to have all his speed with him this year. This son of Nephew, Jr., won twenty-one heats inside of 2:20 last year.

PASONTE and Stam B. are both entered in the 2:12 trot at Columbus, Ohio, the first week in August. Nordeau is entered in the 2:17 class at the same meeting.

KING PATCHEN, by Mambrino King, is now owned in Vancouver, B. C. He is one of the most showy horses ever on the Pacific Coast and has considerable speed.

HANFORD MEDIUM, 2:11½, who has been in Sam Hoy's string at Winters for some time past has been returned to his owners Weisbaum Bros., of Hanford, Tulare county.

HAPPY JACK, the pacer by Albert W. from a mare by Echo, started in the 2:40 class at Norfolk, Virginia, last week and won in straight heats, reducing his record to 2:22½.

IT is now stated that Joe Patchen, 2:01½, pacing, will be trained this year by Johnnie Dickerson. There seems to be much doubt who will really have this sensational pacer.

WALTER HOBART has sent Tuna, 2:12½, She, 2:12½, Pattie D., 2:12½, and Hazel Wilkes, 2:11½, to be bred to the great stallion Directum, 2:05½, the champion of all the champion trotting stallions.

A HACKNEY trotting competition is to take place at the Crystal Palace horse show, London, this spring. The time limit will be extended to 10:30, for three miles. There will be more style than speed there.

THERE is one attraction that California is shy on—and that is the guideless pacer. These educated horses are a drawing card in the East and it is a wonder some of our California trainers have not educated one by this time.

DR. H. S. LATHAM, of Oakland, and O. Marchand, of San Pablo, will campaign a small string on the new circuit in the Mississippi river known as the Great Western. They will take Lady O, 2:15, by T. O., and three or four green ones.

GET one of those beautiful little Hungarian ponies at your own price at the sale next Tuesday, June 7th, at Killip & Co.'s salesyard, corner Van Ness avenue and Market street.

JOHNNY HUMPHREYS, who made a book for Corbett & Co. at the matinee races at Oakland last Monday, cleaned up $800 on the day. So pleased was he that he raised his bid for the privilege of booking by adding $25 to the original price.

SUPT. F. W. COVEY had made an estimate on the prices which the Palo Alto consignment, sold at Cleveland last week, would bring, and his figures totalized at $21,300. The lot realized just $21,565, which makes him about the premier guesser so far on record.—Chicago Horse Review.

H. M. MOSIER of Modesto has gone to Oregon and will campaign his horses on the Northern circuit this year. His string consists of Lillian M., a pacer by Steinway, Lottery T., trotter, by Lottery Ticket, a three-year-old gelding called Klamathon, by Lottery Ticket, and a horse called Partisan, by McKinney.

LADY GRACE, 2:15½, and Ottinger, 2:09½, the California pair that were sold by C. A. Winship, of Los Angeles, to Thos. Henry, Jr., of Philadelphia, for $3,000, have been resold, this time at auction with all of Mr. Henry's horses. Ottinger brought $600 and Lady Grace $650 and they were purchased by different parties.

CAVALRY horses are in good demand just now. Those with a good dash of thoroughbred as a rule will prove best adapted to this use, provided they have deep, well-ribbed barrels, strong loins, powerful quarters and stout, sound limbs. Leggy animals with sharp withers, small waists and long backs will not make good campaigners.

L. CLEARLY, who formerly trained the trotters on Mr. Spreckels Aptos ranch has resigned his position and gone into business at Aptos. There are now about 200 trotting bred horses on the ranch, and the stallions used are Cupid 2:18, Aptos Wilkes and Dexter Prince, though the latter is leased to Palo Alto this year.

HERE is an item that has gone the rounds of the Eastern turf papers: "In California, the general opinion is that Carlye Carne, 2:11½ will be the champion trotter of the future." J. C. Simpson expresses himself as certain that this horse will beat the present record of Alix." Mr. Simpson never expressed any such sentiment and furthermore never entertained the idea.

THE entries for the races at Overland Park, Denver, June 11th to 25th, make one of the largest lists ever seen in the West, some of the slow classes having as high as twenty-three entries. The free-for-all trot has Klamath, Carlye Carne, Diane, The Corporal, Wayland W. and Aloka. The free-for-all pace will see Kate Medium, Carbonate, Lena N, Search Light, Anaconda, Chehalis and W. W. P.

THE Kellogg sale of trotting bred carriage horses and roadsters at Durland's Riding Academy last week conclusively proved that the native bred article need fear no competition from the equine foreigner. It also again demonstrated that with intelligent breeding for size and beauty the horses which are not fast enough for the trotting race track can find a lucrative market for carriage and park purposes.—Trotter and Pacer.

AT the Blue Ribbon sale the consignment of C. L. Griffith, of Pleasanton, Cal., consisting of five head were sold as follows: Miss Margaret (3), 2:11½, by Direct, to Joe Suavey, of Baltimore, $550; Erastus C., 2:22, by Palo Alto, to M. A. Evans, of Toledo, $230; Rosita A., 2:14½, by Adrian, to F. B. Bizanty, Marietta, Ohio, $230; Alto Vela, by Palo Alto, to Ed Dunn, of Cleveland, $105; Miss Creighton, by Direct, to J. W. Whitten, of Cleveland, $210.

CHAS. A. DUFFEE shipped his stallion, McKinney, to Portland, Oregon, last Wednesday. Fifty mares have been booked to this great horse by Oregon owners, and they are a choicely bred lot. Mr. Duffee will go to Portland himself in a few days. It would not surprise us to hear that he is driving a small string of McKinneys this year up in the web-foot country, though we think it more likely that he will conclude that there is a pretty good chance for a few good ones down here.

THOMAS HENRY JR.'s famous California team, Ottinger, 2:09½, and Lady Grace, 2:15½, was taken to Point Breeze course yesterday afternoon and given three speed trials to pole. William McFarland gave them a mile in about three minutes. Henry then drove the pair in 2:36, going to the half in 1:09½, Ottinger breaking badly in the last half owing to "scalping" himself. Stote Clark then got up and drove the pair in 2:34, best quarter in 0:36½.—Philadelphia Record, May 18th.

SEVERAL gentlemen of Hanford have interested themselves in organizing a Race Track Association and have succeeded in securing a liberal subscription of money, and everything is in readiness to go ahead and prepare an interesting race meet for July 4th, if grounds for a track can be secured. As one of the organizers expresses it, "We have the money and the men, and now we want to secure the old race grounds if a reasonable rental will do it. We are willing to pay a good fair rental, and if we can get the old ground we can get it in shape right away for some good sport."

HURRAH! A big list of entries have been made for the Breeders meeting at Oakland. Owing to the conditions requiring eight entries to fill, a few of the races have not the required number, but they have from five to seven entries, and by getting the consent of the owners even these can be put on the programme. Owing to the fact that all the entries have not been received at the time of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN going to press, the list cannot be published this week, but will be printed in full in our next. Meantime the horsemen can be assured that the entries in all classes are numerous and that the outlook for the largest attended meeting held for some time in California is very bright. The dash system has received the endorsement of the owners so far, and it will be further endorsed by the public and all concerned if given a fair and honest trial. Up to Friday morning Secretary Kelley had received sufficient entries to make the number average about ten entries to each race, and some races have as high as fourteen horses named.

THE great broodmare Tecora, by Cassius M. Clay, dam of Chehalis, 2:07½, Del Norte, 2:08, Touchet, 2:15, Tenino, 2:19½ and Coquette, 2:30, and granddam of Vinmont, 2:21 and Athasia, 2:27½, is dead. She was chloroformed some weeks ago by order of her owner, Jay Beach, as she was so weak from sickness and old age that it was deemed advisable to end her suffering. Tecora was foaled in 1877 and was one of the greatest broodmares in the United States.

THE great Jubilee Prize of 5,000 kreutzers trotted at Vienna May 5th, was won in straight heats by Col. Kuser, in 2:15½ and 2:17, Athanio second in each heat, Bismarck third and Azmon fourth. Robbie P., Countess Eve, McVera and Bellwood were unplaced. Athanio was a very close second, being but a small fraction of a second behind the winner in each heat. Other races of the same day were won by Elegy, who beat Le Simmons, Lola Montez, etc., and Golden Belle, who beat Charming Chimes, Belle Pilot, Lord Caffrey, Princtta, Corinne, Quarter Cousin and others.

FOR THE first time in many years there has been organized in the West a summer circuit of mile tracks. The organization is to be known as the Great Western Circuit, and it is an important addition to the large trotting and pacing circuits of the country. The circuit will open with the meeting at Hedrick, August 9th to 12th; Joliet will follow, August 16th to 19th, and then will come Dubuque, Independence, Hamline and Milwaukee. The circuit has six members which are financially strong, and which give high-class racing, and it will make a splendid circuit, especially for Western horsemen, who do not want to come down the Grand Circuit line.

THEY say that the best way to rig a nervous trotter that is afraid to go up in the bunch when the dirt is flying, and keeps throwing his nose up every time a piece of dust touches his face, is to fix him out with a face veil made of a piece of mosquito netting. This device has been tried with success by several trainers, and they say that most of the breaks that horses make in races "without any cause whatever" when they are sailing along all right can be attributed to the sting caused by small particles of dirt and gravel thrown back by other horses in front. George Spear used a mosquito net veil on Pearl Onward, 2:06½, last year, and Ben Walker used one on the extremely nervous little mare, Tuna, 2:12½. Ben said the first one he remembered of seeing was worn by Fred Kohl in 1895.—Yarrum.

PAT McEVoy has a fine string of horses now at Denver that are showing up in fine shape. Ruby Messenger (2:14½) is showing up well and is receiving some stiff work. Bud L., (2:29), trotting, is now doing the shuffle act and paces in magnificent style without straps or rigging. He is in fine form and is one of the best of the lot. Gammon, by Prodigal, and Querist, by Mascot, are two handsome members of the McEvoy stable that are looking well and doing better. Gertie R., F. W. R., Ralph and Dr. Spelman, all well known Anaconda horses, are receiving preliminary work that is getting them into good condition, and with warmer weather they will be in the fast list. McEvoy has also Sheridan, a fine, strong trotter, and Julia Shake, a handsome mare, both owned by Archie Hinemann of Sheridan. Both of these animals are well along in their work and the horse is stepping off some fast quarters.

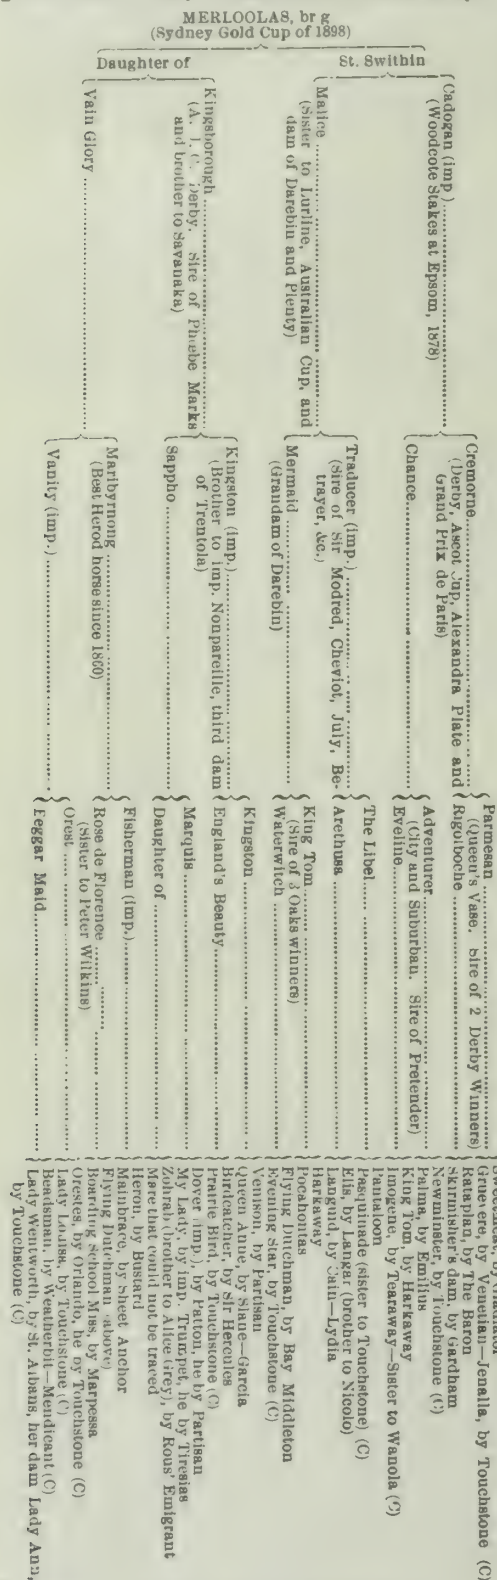

One reason why horses bring so small an amount to the grower is that they are sold in the rough. Everywhere it is the same. The finished product brings the dollars. A horse five years old, simply broken to harness, and taught to "gee" or "haw" and back is an undeveloped animal, nothing more. The possibilities may be there for a great horse, but nobody feels sure of it and nobody will pay for possibilities to-day. They used to gamble on these but not now. Men pay for what they see, not for prospects; therefore, the lesson is to educate and develop. Finish your horses before offering for sale. Put in the spare moments which otherwise would go to the bench or stool at the store or shop, in training for style, carriage and pleasing action. Those who are doubtful of the value of trotting-bred horses for carriage or park use may have their doubts dispelled by reading the report of the sale of carriage horses held in New York, at the American Horse Exchange, says the Horse World. The highest price brought by a pair was $2,100, for the trotting bred horses Shot, by Baron Russell and Cannon, by Canonicus. They were brown geldings, 15½ hands high, and had lots of action, combined with quite a bit of speed. The highest price paid for a single driver was $1,750, paid for Pioneer, a son of Ah Deck, son of Blue Bull. He is a bay gelding, 15½ hands high, and had excellent qualifications for park use. There comes from some quarters a continual complaint that trotting-bred horses lack in size, beauty and action, but the lesson of the auction teaches that the complaint has no foundation in fact, and that in some instances it is made in a spirit of downright falsehood.

"My only regret," remarked a breeder that had recently fallen by the wayside, "is that I did not have more horses to begin with. Like thousands of enthusiasts, I was carried away by the extravagant sales of certain ill-shaped, but fast trotters; by the extortionate stud fees asked, and received, by owners of stallions that to-day would not be considered worthy of patronage; by the fictitious valuation placed upon broodmares and young stock, and by the general air of recklessness that pervaded every avenue connected with the light harness horse industry. My first purchase was a stallion bred in so-called approved blood lines, but lacking in those essential qualifications that recommend the typical good-selling horse of the present day. My stallion was long on non-essentials and short on essentials. His pedigree traced to every noted sire of the day, and to half a score of broodmares that occupied reserved seats at the table established by Premier Wallace and continued by his successor in office. The artistically arranged tabulation which accompanied the horse never once mentioned the fact that his sire was small, ill shaped and unsound; that his dam would not have sold at public venue on her personal merit for one-hundredth part of the valuation placed by her owner; that not one of his ancestors, so far as proven, had even attracted the attention of buyers looking for serviceable carriage or road horses; in short, the tabulation spoke of nothing that would recommend the stallion, his ancestors or probable descendants to the kindly consideration of a critical public who insist upon buying a horse, and not a tabulated pedigree, with something in the shape of a horse attached."

Merloolas, the Latest Racing "Phenom" of the Colonies.

Following is the pedigree of this year's winner of the Sydney Gold Cup and other excellent races (Merloolas), a "new one" to race-goers in New South Wales. Capt. Thomas B. Merry ("Hidalgo"), one of the greatest enthusiasts on breeding in the world, kindly furnished us with the tabulation:

On a good course with a long straight like Randwick something brilliant may be expected from the big fellow, as he strikes one as irresistible when he is in full swing. Merloolas is by St. Swithin from a mare by Kingsbrough, from Vain Glory, by Marbyron or Beauclerc from Vanity (imp.), by Orest. Neither his sire nor dam was worth a row of pins for racing purposes, which, combined with the fact that he was bred by a "scientific" breeder, is a rude shock to those who believe in the like beget-like-make-and-shape theory."

The Hawkesbury race naturally brought Merloolas into favor for his important A. J. C. engagement, and to run second for the Doncaster Handicap, go one better in the Cup, then chase Bobadil home at a mile, and wind up with such a clipping performance as that he achieved in the Place Handicap, shows how well he deserved to find favor, for the son of the once-despised St. Swithin must now rank as one of the best handicap performers on the continent. New Zealand will have to look to her laurels if Queensland continues to send forth such champions as the Sydney Cup winner. Merloolas was supposed to be better suited for long than short distances, and such opinion has received confirmation. Discussing his Cup chance, the Mail said: "Battalion will have to give him 32lb, which an enthusiastic Towers man declares to be impossible, as, in his opinion, Merloolas could beat Battalion at level weights. If the enthusiastic admirers of the Hawkesbury Handicap winner are only half right, then the Cup is all over." The judgment thus expressed cannot be far out.

Washington Park Racing Officials, 1898.

As soon as it was definitely known that racing was to be resumed at Washington Park this year, quite a number of writers showed wonderful alacrity in providing the club with racing officials, says Daily Racing Form.

In former days when racing at Washington Park was one of the important annual Chicago features the club's affairs were very strictly run by the club's officers and directors and from the list of appointments for the coming meeting, which Daily Racing Form here lays before its readers, it is manifest that the old habit of attending to its own business without consulting outsiders still clings to the club. It is well that it is so.

C. H. Pettingill is to be presiding judge. This will be a surprise because of Mr. Pettingill's long identification with the starter's position. But he is well qualified to discharge the duties of his new position. He has been in the judge's stand before, and because of his many years of association with racing as owner, starter and judge should be thoroughly competent. Mr. Pettingill is well known in Chicago, and his appointment will be received with approbation.

His associates will be John W. Kelsey and John F. Morse. Mr. Kelsey is the assistant secretary of the club and has the advantage of experience gained in several years' service as judge in the stands at the Indiana tracks, Ingalls Park and Harlem. Mr. Morse is manager of the Board of Trade firm of Robert Pringle & Co. He is a new-comer in the judges stand, but is a profound student of horse lore and in Mr. Howard's opinion sure to make an efficient racing judge.

Richard Dwyer will do the starting. No more popular selection could have been made.

As to the minor positions, Harry Kuhl is to be clerk of the scales and Hugh E. Keogh patrol judge.

Red Cross Day at Oakland Track.

FRIDAY, MAY 28, 1898.

There were fully 2,200 of the faithful followers of the flyers on hand at Oakland track this afternoon. The Red Cross Society for whose benefit the racing was given, must have benefited to the extent of at least $1,500, and considering the rain god's liver was not working well and that he kept up his tirade all the afternoon, this was pretty good. Twelve books did a land office business. The only real hard fall taken out of "the talent" was in the first race, where Spry Lark won at the odds of 15 to 1, the 1 to 2 favorite, Fig Leaf finishing up a poor sort of second. Rey Hooker, winner of the second race with ease by four lengths, was at 8 to 1, Rey del Tierra 4 to 1, San Mateo 5 to 1 and Major Cook 3 to 1—all the winners at good, though not astonishingly long odds. Thomas H. Williams Jr., acted as presiding judge, with Jt

W. Brooks for an associate, while Dick Havey was the scribe. All did their work to the satisfaction of the assemblage.

First Race—Five and one-half furlongs, selling; purse $300.
Mrs. M. Quinn's ch m Spry Lark, by Fitzjames—Fabiola, 110, 15 to 1

Second Race—Two-year-olds, five furlongs, purse $300.
T. Latta's ch c Rey Hooker, by El Rio Rey—Ogalena, 113, 5 to 1
The Fretter, 113, 8 to 5
Jennie Reid, 100, 5 to 1
Time—1:03 3/4

Won easily by four lengths. Sir Urian 110 (Powell), Stone L. 100 (O'Neill), Practice 100 (Howitt), Crossmolias 100 (C. Cole), and Dunpraise 108 (Kearin) also ran.

Third Race—Six furlongs, selling, purse $300.
H. L. Frank's ch c Imp. Missioner, by Gaillard—Miserere, 110, even money
Plng. 117, 12 to 1
Saticoy, 117, 10 to 1
Time—1:17

Won easily by three lengths. Emma Ray 112 (Mooney), Oahu 112 (Golden), Kitty Blake 100 (Bennett), Estro 110 (Wilson), Carbineer 117 (Shepherd), Nora Richards 100 (Wainright), Formello 112 (Macklin), Miss Rensen 105 (Huller), Magnus 114 (Powell), Uncle True 107 (Stufflet), Scatillate 102 (O'Neill), Tenrica 110 (Garrigan) and Little T. G. 105 (Kearin) also ran.

Fourth Race—One and one-sixteenth miles, purse $300.
Cambridge Stable's b h Rey del Tierra, by Prince of Norfolk—Haldee 112, 4 to 1
Imp. Blitter Root, 96, 7 to 1
Los Prietos, 93, 13 to 5
Time—1:52

Won cleverly by two lengths. Rosomonde 91 (Powell), St. Dietrich 99 (Wainright), Rapido 113 (Shepherd), Rose Maid 91 (J. Woods), Metaire 116 (Tuberville) and Ma-oero 113 (T. Williams) also ran.

Fifth Race—Six furlongs, selling, purse $300.
Miller & Blazer's ch c San Mateo, by Salvador—Iris, 113, 5 to 1
Lady Ashley, 100, 10 to 1
Sly, 108, 4 to 1
Time—1:16 3/4

Won easily by three lengths. Negligence 105 (Piggott), La France 108 (A. Powell), Cromwell 213 (Kiley), Trappean 113 (I. Powell), Earl Cochran 110 (G. Wilson), Lost Girl 108 (Tuberville), Jim Bozeman 110 (Golden), Polish 113 (Frawley), Olive 103 (Rakeman) and Soscol 102 (Cole), also ran.

Sixth Race—Five and one-half furlongs, selling, purse $300.
G. T. Bertolacci's b g Major Cook, by Bulwark—slater to Violet, 117 5 to 1
Howard, 117, 7 to 1
The Dragon, 115, 25 to 1
Time—4:10

Won handily. Fort Augustus 117 (Piggott), Florimel 107 (Kearin), Roy Caruthers 102 (A. Powell), Talbot Clifton 112 (Cole), Santa Paula 107 (Rulz, February 107 (Frawley) and Grandezila 107 (Macklin) also ran.

Airs and Graces Won the Oaks.

LONDON, May 27.—The Duke of Portland's brown filly, Airs and Graces, by Ayreshire, out of Lady Alwyne, won the Oaks Stakes of 4,500 sovereigns at Epsom to-day. The betting previous to the start was 100 to 8 against Airs and Graces, even money against Nun Nicer, second, and 33 to 1 against Cauliflower, third. Fourteen horses ran, the distance being about a mile and a half.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 24, '95.
I had a mare in training as a four-year-old. She sprained her tendon in front so bad that we blisted her and turned her out. The same thing happened the following year. This spring she broke down again; laid her up; used two bottles of ABSORBINE which removed the fever and the swelling. Won a number of races with her and she never made a lame step since. Your liniment does all you claim for it. No horseman can afford to be without it. It acts so sure and swift.

Yours respectfully,
L. B. KNICKMAN, 725 Tenth av.

Used Successfully.

WEST POINT, Tenn, April 14, 1897.

I bought a bottle of Gombault's Caustic Balsam two years ago, for a spavined horse. I cured him without any trouble. Have since cured a horse of poll evil.

E. W. GRAVER.

ABUEE, winner of the Memorial Handicap at St. Louis, has an American sire and an imported dam, while Bowling Brook, winner of the Belmont, is by Ayreshire (the Derby-winner of England and still there) out of Vacation, an American-bred mare taken to England by the Messrs. Morris.

KINGDON, the Kingston colt that won the $5,000 Expectation Stakes at Brooklyn May 28th, is, in our opinion, the second best two-year-old shown in the far East this season, Jean Beraud being the best.

GREEN B. MORRIS' California-bred filly, Tyr Shena, won the first day at Brooklyn.

QUINN'S OINTMENT FOR HORSES

stands at the head of all veterinary remedies. Such troubles as Spavins, Curbs, Windpuffs, Splints, Bunches have no terrors for a horse if the master keeps and applies Quinn's Ointment. All well-known horsemen speak of it in the highest terms:

Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., owners of St. Bel, brother of late Bell Boy, write, "We have used Quinn's Ointment with great success and believe it fulfills all claimed for it. We cheerfully recommend it to our friends." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins or Bunches, it has no equal.

Price $1.50.

Sold by all druggists or sent by mail.

RANCHO DEL PASO—Very many times has the name of this famous breeding farm appeared in print. As the largest establishment of the kind in the world, its magnitude would give it prominence, and while the area—over forty thousand acres—will strike Eastern people with surprise, that is overshadowed by the number of thoroughbred horses that are kept there. Away up in the hundreds, tipping the scale toward the thousand mark, and yet that immense body of blue-bloods is not the most striking feature. Easily accomplished the gathering hundreds of "strictly" thoroughbred horses when there are plenty of dollars to acquire the ownership, but when the intention is to obtain the very best that judgment, "brains," knowledge, determination, a combination of qualities, many of them rarely found in one individual, must be united to capital to insure success.

The proprietor of Rancho del Paso is eminently endowed with executive ability, and from the date of organization until the present time there has been constant progress. His agents, selected with a view to their fitness for the position occupied, have filled these places admirably, especially the one whose duty it was to select stallions. Some other lines of blood were wanted and whether in England, Australia or America a trusted and qualified man was empowered to make the selection.

The array of fine stallions at Rancho del Paso bewilders one who is not perfectly familiar with the families to which they belong, and, in fact, a person who has an intimate knowledge of the thoroughbreds of all the countries mentioned will be compelled to pass many hours in his examination before arriving at a conclusion. Form, breeding, size, action, performances of the horses and their near kin, temperament, constitutional vigor, etc., all to be taken into consideration, and after the closest scrutiny, the puzzle will be to pick the best.

I have not the least hesitation in stating that were one to make selections of several, say ten, of the best stallions on all the other stud farms of the United States, the same number from Rancho del Paso would gain by the comparison.

High as that classification may appear, when form, breeding and size are the standards to fix the award, the animals themselves will furnish indisputable evidence of the correctness of the claim.

One of the main qualifications of a stallion can be shown on paper, viz., blood lines:

Taking them as they appear in the sale catalogue—that is the stallions which will be represented by yearlings at the sale in New York, June 19th—in alphabetical order, and tracing a few generations on the side of the sire, the first one is:

Imp. Anchorite—Hermit—Newminster—Touchstone.
Imp. Artillery—Musket—Toxophilite—Longbow.
Imp. Bassetlaw—St. Simon—Galopin—Vedette.

No one with the least pretention to knowledge of race horse breeding will question the value of such blood as is carried by a large majority of those sires. Nearly all mentioned the property of Mr. Haggin, and those outside brought in strains that are useful. Little is required, further than the above list, to show that the breeding of the most fashionable kind on the side of the sire, and were the pedigree of the dams of the stallions appended that would be found to be in keeping.

For instance, the dam of Order is a sister to St. Simon—who was never beaten and he was dux of his class for many years, and that class held all the winning sires in England. The other horse by Bend Or, Golden Garter, is from Sanda by Wenlock—Sandal by Stockwell, so that while the sire is the same, there are distinct strains in the dams, and that gives opportunities for a different blending. Order, perhaps, being superior to Golden Garter for one mare, while another would be better adapted for Golden Garter.

One of the greatest advantages that Rancho del Paso has over other breeding farms is the great range for selection. Breeding and forms of the highest type, and yet with differences, to choose from. Should the mare have one weak point in an otherwise nearly faultless conformation, then by mating with a horse that is superior where she is lacking, the defect is likely to be remedied. "Blood lines" the best adapted to "nick" are at the command of the stud master, and should the blending of strains that give promise of resulting in great excellence fail to come up to expectations, the actual result is accepted as the true solution, and thereafter a change.

Everything that can be done to keep the sires and dams in the best order for procreation is attended to; feed and exercise regulated so as to insure the right condition to bring healthy offspring. The surroundings could not be improved from a hygienic point of view. A large area of bottom lands where alfalfa can be grown in perfection. Rolling land with native grasses, the very best of all pasturage for horses, and pure water in every field, paddock and stable.

A pure atmosphere, albeit somewhat warm in the months of summer, but that brings the foals forward, as sunshine is the grand panacea, the great promoter of vitality when that is not accompanied by sultriness, and the air is buoyant.

Notwithstanding that in some of the interior valleys of California the thermometer may register one hundred or more degrees Fahrenheit, the heat is not nearly as oppressive as when the mark is twenty degrees lower on the other side of the mountains. Sunstrokes are practically unknown here, and rarely, indeed, when the nights are uncomfortably hot.

Healthy, strong foals are the right foundation to build good horses upon. "Half the horse goes down his throat" is the old Yorkshire motto, and the "tykes" knew as much as any other people about breeding and rearing race horses.

Liberal feeding and a chance for plenty of exercise are the requirements at Rancho del Paso, and from the time the foal takes its first gallop around the dam until it is put on the car preparatory to journeying to New York, never a day, that was at all favorable, without a chance to exercise. Those who have attended the annual sales of Rancho del Paso yearlings do not require to be informed that size and substance are always present. From the first exhibition of the youngsters to the last a large proportion were well grown, and the consignment which will commence the journey from Ben Ali to-morrow will compare favorably with any that have preceded them.

GOLDEN GARTER—BANDURA.

But there are points which change with every consignment. However superior the animals heretofore offered according to all precedents there should be improvements.

It may be that the appearance of the colts are similar to those of former years, and still be better. Every succeeding year adds to the knowledge of those who are in charge of the establishment. The past is the best guide for the future and experience gained from actual trials is a valuable aid in the way of improvement. Needless to say that the lessons have been carefully, closely studied, not a hint, however trivial, that is not given due consideration, and whether in mating or after care all the knowledge obtained in these years of practice is brought into use.

The colts I saw on a late visit to "The Grant" was so uniformly good that were a detailed description given it would seem a mere rehearsal of praise. Midlothians, Goldfinders, Golden Garters, Sir Modreds, Watercresses, Bassetlaws, Julys, Artilleries, Star Rubys, in fact the get of nearly every stallion having representations in the sale catalogue so good that it was troublesome to choose a decided favorite.

ASHLAND now is the scene of warlike preparations. Twelve hundred soldiers are quartered near its boundaries and every day can be seen drilling, marching and counter-marching over its rich blue grass. It is befitting that the former home of the great statesman, Henry Clay, should now be the drill ground of loyal boys and men who are to go out in their country's defense. It is certainly a stirring sight, and the broodmares and fillies in adjoining pastures look on with wonder and some fear at the lines of men and galloping horsemen that fill the fields near them.—Stock Farm.

The Horse-Racing Outlook and the Prospect for Horse-Raisers.

It was decided this week by the California Jockey Club managers to give a two weeks' meeting for gallopers at Sacramento in September after the State Agricultural Society's mixed meeting of two weeks comes to an end, and the same club will give two weeks of racing at Los Angeles after the fair association's great mixed meet of ten days is over. This will carry things along until November 1st, when the racing begins at Oakland. In the meantime the lovers of harness sports will have a month at Oakland track, beginning June 25th. The Stockton Driving Club has been talking strongly of giving a mixed meeting of a week, but the California Jockey Club Sacramento meeting may cause them to forego it.

With six months and three weeks' racing in San Francisco and her sister city, Oakland, a month for the trotters and pacers to show their prowess at Oakland track, two weeks at Sacramento and ten days at Los Angeles, with two weeks of running at Sacramento, and the same number at Los Angeles, the devotees of racing and light harness sports will have nearly nine months and three weeks in which to gratify their tastes in this direction, leaving a breathing spell of two months and one week. Perhaps the P. C. T. & H. B. A. will give a fall meeting of two weeks' duration, then there will not be even a rest for that period, but we rather think one week will be the length of that meeting. This will give the owners of trotters and pacers nearly nine weeks in which to campaign their horses as against fourteen last year, but the conditions will probably be more liberal this season, so that as much money can be earned as in former seasons. The carrying on of meetings in the small cities of California would appear to have been given up, for, without aid from the State, those held since the veto of the district fair appropriation bill have generally been financial failures. The principal loss seems to have fallen upon the breeders of trotters and pacers. The price for horses of this description has dropped fearfully in five years, but it was not due to the withdrawal of State aid to fairs entirely, but to overproduction and indiscriminate breeding and the craze for bicycling which beset our inhabitants some four years ago. The livery-stable keeper's interests were hurt, to a great degree, by the bicycle-riding fad, but the building of electric railroads and the cutting up of streets therefor which were formerly used as driveways also had the effect of killing interest in the trotter or pacer. The indiscriminate breeding of horses with delightful pedigrees and weak, flawed underpinning was stopped after horseflesh had depreciated about 90 cents on the dollar, and now, with splendid markets opened up for light harness horses in Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Italy and Austria, prices for good individuals that can "go some" will soon be good. Trotting horses are wanted that can "stay the route" and go "a fast clip," and that is the kind we are sending to foreign countries in large numbers. Recently we printed statistics which showed that during 1897 39,532 American horses were exported of a value of $4,769,265, and many were sent to countries new to our breeders, such as Cuba, Mexico, Central American States, British Honduras, Hawaii, Venezuela, and Japan. In 1894 the total value of the horses exported amounted to $350,195, so that in three years it had increased $4,419,070. In 1894 but 1,355 horses were sent to Great Britain, in 1897, 19,350. While the average value was placed at $123.20, it is safe to say that the animals brought nearly if not quite twice that sum, on an average. But even at that figure, the market was not a very bad one. The tendency is toward better prices all over America for light harness horses.

The long-continued race meetings here and elsewhere have made a grand market for thoroughbreds in California and at the far East. When it is known that the average for thoroughbred yearlings sold here last winter was $320, it can be seen that there is money in raising gallopers, especially when it was stated that in 1896 the average was about $190 per head. If our breeders would breed more scientifically there is no reason to be advanced why we could not reach the average attained in England. This was $1,400 last season, if memory serves us well. As far back as 1889 the average in Great Britain was over $1,500 (300 guineas), in 1890 351 guineas; in 1891, 275 guineas; 1892, 221 guineas; 1893, 248 guineas. Since that time it has ranged from 250 to 300 guineas, showing that race horses are highly valued in the tight little isle. If our breeders will breed on scientific principles there is a possibility that within the next five years they would be receiving on an average $1,000 for their yearlings instead of from $190 to $320. W. O. B. Macdonough has proven one of the most successful of our breeders, and while it is not generally known, this gentleman took up the subject of breeding race horses scientifically as far back as 1891, and has been a close student ever since. He was a friend of the late C. Bruce Lowe, the great writer on breeding by "the figure system"—a plan evolved by Mr. Lowe and Frank Reynolds, of Australia, and which is now attracting the attention of breeders all over the world. That the average for the yearlings bred by Mr. Macdonough at his Menlo Stock Farm should be $980 in 1897 is certainly most encouraging to owners of thoroughbred horses and stock farms in California, for it shows that breeding these youngsters on certain theories laid down by men that had given the matter of horse breeding much thought gives good racing results, and good racers bring excellent prices the world over. In combining the theories of Count Lehnndorff, Lord Falmouth and C. Bruce Lowe, a breeder could not go far wrong in his operations, and the chances are that the era of breeders operating on the principles laid down by these three gentlemen is at hand. Lord Falmouth was a believer in brood mares that had raced and won and been retired at the end of their five-years-old form, at the latest. He was also a believer in the theory that it was wise not to mate a mare two years in succession to a particular horse. Count Lehnndorff was a great believer in the usefulness and superiority of certain strains of blood and is a great judge of a horse. The late Bruce Lowe's figures prove the worth of particular families of racers, and his deductions will lead breeders from the road of Chaos and Uncertainty into the path of Fact and Certainty. There is no doubt in our mind that Mr. Lowe's theories anent the No. 3, 8, 11, 12 and 14 families are correct—in other words, that those stallions having in the first three generations a large proportion of the blood of members of these families, traced in the line of female descent and themselves going on the mother's side to the dam of the two True Blues, the Bustler mare, Sedbury Royal Mare, Royal mare (third dam of the Old Montague Mare) and the Oldfield Mare are more likely to prove successful at the stud than stallions tracing to other "tap-root" mares. It has, at least, been proven that the very best sires of Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and America traced in the line of female descent to the above-mentioned stud matrons. As to the other theories of our late highly-esteemed friend there is a diversity of opinion, but discussion will probably have the effect of threshing out the chaff and leaving the good and useful.

The war with Spain is creating a demand for horses suited for the cavalry service. The Government is at present paying $125 and $135 for horses meeting their requirements as to height, weight and soundness. One well-known horseman of California told us the other day that he had an order for 300 from the Government, and that it was no such an easy matter to secure them. Only this week we had a call from a gentleman of Modoc County who intends to breed carriage horses on a large scale, his idea being that Cleveland Bay or French coach mares weighing from 1,300 to 1,400 pounds, mated with a thoroughbred stallion of a good size, finish and substance would produce the desired result. We shall watch the experiment with no little interest. First-class draught horses command prices in San Francisco ranging from $150 to $350.

Looking over the entire field of horse-breeding operations, one cannot but be imbued with the belief that the market for thoroughbreds, carriage, draught and cavalry horses is good and will be much better, and as for trotting-bred animals, recent sales go to show that fast goods bring excellent sums and that the prices have an upward tendency, all of which is pleasing to the breeders of this, the greatest all-around horse-breeding country on the globe.

WILLIAM VANNING, a fiendish English milkman of San Rafael, tied a piece of bale rope to the tongue of one his horses (which he had asked to pull an overloaded wagon out of a gutter), tearing the animal's tongue out by the roots. Then he drove the poor beast into a marsh, where he let it bleed to death. Capt. H. A. Gorley swore to a warrant charging Vanning with this inhuman crime, and the brute is at large on $500 bail. A person who would do a deed of such dastardly description to a dumb brute deserves to be placed behind the bars for life after being branded "fiend" across the forehead. As he is a person of means, there is all the more reason for punishing him properly.

WE note this week with sorrow the death of Mrs. Winters, wife of our old and much-esteemed friend, Theodore Winters, of Washoe, Nevada. The lady had been ill for years, consequently her death was not unexpected. To Mr. Winters and his family we tender our sympathy in his bereavement, for the deceased lady was a good wife and mother and will be greatly missed.

Colorado Springs Races.

Monday last, May 30th, was the opening day of the Colorado Springs Driving Association meeting at Roswell track, which is to continue four days. Five mixed races are held each day. On the opening day there was a large attendance, the grand stand being crowded, while about 2,000 others preferred standing on the ground. The day's sport opened with a trotting race, 2:40 class. There were three heats trotted, the fastest being the third, which was made in 2:19½. Shamrock won, with Hooper second and Teller third.

Second race, pacing, 2:15 class—Raymond M. won, E. S. second and Louise M. third. It took five heats to decide this race. Fastest heat, 2:19.

Third race, running, five furlongs, purse $150—Melody won, King Hazel second and Artless third. Time, 1:03½.

Fourth race, Alta Vista Hotel Handicap, seven furlongs, purse $250—Zaraida, 95, won; Sallie Lamar, 104, second, and Devil's Dream, 112, third. Time, 1:33. Just after the horses passed the wire, Jockey Ed. Tompkins, rider of Devil's Dream, was thrown under the horse's feet, as the result of a stirrup breaking. He was picked up unconscious, but quickly recovered and was able to ride the last race.

Fifth race, Decoration Day Maiden Race, one-half mile, purse $150. Gertrude won, La Fontera second, Sanamander third. Time, :51½.

The judges were W. T. Handy of Cynthia, Ky.; O. L. Godfrey and Dr. William Jones of Colorado.

PRINCE HOOKER, by Prince of Norfolk out of Princess Hooker, at Agricultural Park, Los Angeles, May 28th, and driven to sulky by Bob Hackney, beat the sextuplet three miles in 6:00, the big wheel being manned by Messrs. Brotherton, Stamps, Furman, Block, Hamlin and Florentine. The first mile was gone in 2:00, the second in 2:03 (the wheelmen leading), the last mile in 1:57. The Prince won by two and a half lengths, and the performance is a pretty good one.

EDDIE JONES had his first mount at Morris Park on Wednesday. He was up on Formero and finished outside the money. The boy was reinstated at the close of the C. J. C. meeting, though little was said about it at the time. Let us hope that Jones will break away from the people that came within an ace of having him disbarred forever. His late enforced idleness and the attendant scare he received should be a lesson lasting for all time.

JOCKEY AL SHAW has been reinstated and will, therefore be able to ride for Farrar & Tuberville on the Montana circuit.

MISS ROWENA is to be campaigned in Montana by W. Randall for Burns & Waterhouse.

Special Department.

I was greatly disappointed over the outcome of the snap-shots. All of them poor, as will be learned from the cuts, those which I was the most anxious to obtain "flat failures." The Midlothian—Miss Woodford colt two trials were made, the first was a very good representation, excepting he was shorn of his fair proportions by being placed too close to the camera. The second being useless it was determined to give the razed cut a place, inasmuch as it displays his shoulders, middle piece, a part of his quarters and his legs, and the most careless observer cannot fail to see that so much of the racing machinery as the cut shows is of a very high class. Not at all anxious to prophesy, but if this brother to Sombre does not prove to be at the top, or very near the top, I shall lose some faith in form and breeding. His sister is rated, by those who paid close attention to the racing here the past season, and who are fully competent to judge, as the best filly of the California year.

Not one of those so poorly represented by the cuts, in fact, among all those I saw few, indeed, which did not justify the most rosy predictions. Good size—from 14½ hands to 15½—muscular and sinewy, if they are not the making of race horses, real race horses, I will be forced to the conclusion that breeding, form, size and the other characteristics, heretofore taken as indications of speed and endurance, are, at the best, of small importance in determining the future of racing colts.

The frontispiece, Goldfinch, while giving a fair idea of the form of this celebrated stallion, is far from being a "striking likeness." In the endeavor to make it better by cutting out a portion of the photograph, the picture is not so pleasing as the original, though there is enough to show that high as his breeding is—and the most captious of critics must admit that his blood is of the true cerulean hue—his form can scarcely be improved.

And color, too, that cannot fail to please, chestnut of just the right shade, his face brightened up by a star and narrow white strip, coat smooth, mane and tail silky and full.

A muscular, strong horse and with lots of quality, plenty of length, the best kind of legs, to make the description brief, and yet embody the main points, so nearly a model that only minor "outs" are apparent.

The stallions of Rancho del Paso are so numerous, however, and of such high character that it would appear somewhat invidious to describe one or two, or even half a dozen, and leave the others unpictured. A wonderfully interesting chapter, a great addition to the horse history of California, if full portraits were presented. In addition to photos, height, weight and critical description of their points, and among other good results enlighten a great many people about what thoroughbreds really are.

MONROE SALISBURY'S ADVICE.—Lecturing a friend who was a staunch advocate of "near infusions," in fast and lasting harness-horse racers, and who was prone to "air his views" on every occasion, the veteran expert thus accosted him:

"Do not teach people to beat you. Let them alone, and as long as they are determined to mate animals that cannot gallop a mile in 2:05, with the expectation of raising the two-minute trotter, if oftentimes repeated failures do not convince them of the futility of their plans, you could not drive a bit of sense into their heads with a maul or sledgehammer.

"Quite ready to follow the advice of people who cannot tell a racker from a square trotter or a single-footer from a galloper, and at the same time ignore the testimony everywhere presented of the value of thoroughbred blood in the fastest trotters and pacers.

"You are fond of telling them," Mr. S— continued, "that Directum, the champion stallion, had two near strains of thoroughbred, the champion gelding Azote, one of his grandams thoroughbred, that Alix does not go far until there comes in a half-bred son, General Hatch, and the next remove a thoroughbred son of imported Glencoe, Iowa. Should you convert any one you are putting obstacles in in your own way, therefore let them work out the problem for themselves."

This friend of the successful manager of champions retold the conversation to me a few days ago, and I promised to put it on record.

ALIX.—Mr. Salisbury in his lecture to the friend could, with great propriety, instance the champion of the world, Alix, as an exemplar of the value of near infusions in fast trotters. On both sides of the house, the maternal side, however, carrying the most of the blueblood. Her dam, Atlanta, by Attorney, and as the grandsire of Attorney was by Robert Bruce, within a shade of thoroughbred and the sire of Attorney, Harold, was full of thoroughbred blood, a good deal of it derived from his sire, Hambletonian, 10, his dam by the half-bred horse, Abdallah 1.

Flirt, the grandam of Alix, by Gen. Hatch, by Cassius M. Clay 22, and his dam a thoroughbred mare by imp. Envoy. Cassius M. Clay 22, by the first to bear the name; his dam by the half bred Abdallah, his grandam by Lawrence's Eclipse, a son of American Elipse, and his third dam the Charles Hadley mare by imp. Messenger.

The third dam of Alix was Dolly, by Iowa, Iowa a thoroughbred son of imp. Glencoe. "Old Dolly" the fourth dam of Alix, the pet of her owner, Mr. Hershey, I knew very well, and also Iowa and Gen. Hatch. She was a good looking mare and so far as could be told from her looks, a fairly well bred one.

Patronage, the sire of Alix, a grandson of Woodford Mambrino, the dam of which was by the thoroughbred Woodford. There is another cross of Harold on the side of the sire, and one of Mambrino Patchen, whose dam was by thoroughbred Gano, and were the pedigree of Alix carried out to its limit, few known strains other than thoroughbred with the exception of Bellfounder.

In the Horse Review of May 17th it is stated that Mr. Morris Jones said: "She was a tremendously long striding trotter when at speed, as she covered twenty-two feet at every step."

I am firm in the belief that the extremely long strides reported are due to careless measurements. That it was claimed some time ago that Joe Patchen "went on" some 26 feet and Star Pointer over 24 feet, when it is almost a certainty that five "spaces" were included in place of four.

When Alix trotted on the Oakland track I measured her strides and also those of Azote. Nineteen feet four inches for Azote, nineteen feet three inches for Alix. This was at the finish of the mile, and the track was heavy. One-half of her stride, however, was ten feet, so that under more favorable circumstances accomplished a stride eighteen inches longer than the longest I ever "taped." Mr. Alden Goldsmith, when he had Gloster in Chicago, took him out to show me a stride which would be twenty-three feet, but after several trials twenty feet six inches was the result. The Pilot, Jr. mare, Queen of the West, covered the same distance, and as she had hauled an old fashioned skeleton wagon half a mile in 1:03, the "straight quarter of it in 31 seconds, she had speed enough to give length of stride.

There was a marked difference in the strides of Azote and Alix. Thus

AZOTE.
Fore foot.	Hind foot.	Fore foot.
x 5ft. 3in.	x 4ft. 5in.	x
ALIX.
Fore foot.	Hind foot.	Fore foot.
x 7ft.	x 3ft.	x

Azote "spaced" his "tracks" nearly even; Alix threw so much energy into her work that in the air flights the hind foot was thrown seven feet in advance of where the fore foot rested.

Mr. Jones says: "Many of the Electioneer family are gaited that way (keeping their feet up where they belong) and Alix ought to throw a world-beater if she was bred to a stallion gaited like Azote. If he was only a stallion I would pick him in preference to all others."

A modification of the gait of Alix, a closer resemblance to that of Azote, would surely be an improvement by lessening the strain on the hind legs.

GOOD PROSPECTS.—I learn just as the paper is going to press that there is a good list of entries for the summer meeting. There have been several inquiries when the California Jockey Club track would be allowed for training purposes before the opening of the meeting. I have it from good authority that whenever the P. C. T. H. B. A. takes charge the use of the track will be granted, and that a week, perhaps ten days, previous to the commencement will be conceded.

This should be satisfactory to those making engagements.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

CAPT. CHARLES SHILLABER, Cordelia, says:—I would as soon be without flour in my house as to be without Wellington's Improved Egg Food for my poultry. I have had my experience with sickness in my flock, and among my young chickens, but this Egg Food just fills the bill, and now my flock is both a pleasure and a profit to me. I recommend this Egg Food most highly. It is for sale by Grocers, Seedmen and Druggists. Try it.

Remember—It costs only 25 cts. per week for each 100 fowls.

SATURDAY'S Cincinnati Enquirer says: "Presiding Judge Rees was called from the city on a sad mission yesterday. He received a message in the morning conveying the intelligence that his youngest sister had died, and he left last evening for Pittsburg, the home of his parents. In his absence Associate Judge Price will fill his place at Oakley."

THE recent victories of the two-year-old sons and daughters of St. Leonards, St. Florian and Potomac, all by imp. St. Blaise, as well as the continued successes of the St. Carlos, makes one think that $10,000 was not too much to pay for Prince Monaco, who is a brother to the latter. Not long since a close student of breeding in this State, who intends to breed scientifically, paid $5,000 for Magnet, who is by St. Blaise out of Magnetic, by imp. The Ill Used. The average for St. Carlo yearlings in 1897 was $980, showing that turmen value them very highly. Mr. A. B. Spreckels, realizing the worth of St. Carlo as a sire, leased his services for the season of 1898, and should have a grand lot of St. Carlos to sell or race in 1901. This week the five-year old son of St. Blaise and Round Dance (San Marco) was put in the hands of the racing editor of this paper for immediate sale, as the owners desire to go East at once. The price fixed upon was $1,200 if sold immediately, and as the owners refused $2,500 for him last winter (since which time he has won six good races), he is the greatest bargain in horseflesh we have seen in some time. In San Marco's last twenty races he has been "in the money" eighteen times, and among his wins was a mile and a quarter race in 2:10 over a slow track; one and one-eighth miles in 1:55½, 113 pounds, Ingleside track; one and one-eighth miles in 1:55½, 110 pounds, with ease, Oakland track, while he was timed separately a mile over Ingleside course in 1:40½. San Marco was one of the St. Blaises that "liked a route." His sire won the classic Epsom Derby in England and sold for $100,000 at auction. The get of St. Blaise have won over $800,000 in America (Potomac alone $108,000). Round Dance (dam of San Marco), by War Dance (sire of Modesty, L'Argentine, Bullion, Brademante [dam of The Bard], Blue Grass Belle, Geneva [dam of Riley], Buff and Blue [dam of Bright Pegasus, &c.], All Hands Around, &c.) was a winner herself and dam of Hornpipe (winner of the Brooklyn Handicap and over $29,000 in stakes alone), Don Alonzo (winner of over $28,000 in stakes, victorious in America and England), the record-breaker Irish Reel (winner of about $10,000), and Terpsichore II., a winner in England last season. The second dam of San Marco, Sue Dougherty by imp. Mickey Free (son of Irish Birdcatcher), was also a great producer, as was the third, fourth and fifth dam. San Marco is a chestnut horse of great substance, yet showing a lot of quality. He is about 16.1 hands in height, weighs about 1,100 pounds in training, is but five years of age, and is a sure foal-getter. Among the mares he was mated with this season were Ed Purser's Scarf Pin, Burns & Waterhouse's Shasta Water and "Daggie" Smith's La Mascote, and all have gone well. With youth, royal breeding, superb individuality and close relationship to world-renowned stake-winners to recommend him, San Marco should be "snapped up" in a jiffy by some breeder knowing a good thing when he sees it.

AMANDA L., by Shannon—Eva Ashton, by Ashland, foaled 1880, was shot the other day at Stockton to put her out of her misery. She was owned by Messrs. George and Arthur Harrison, and besides being a winner of a heat in a mile-heat race at Stockton in 1884, and second in good races at Fresno, was a good brood mare, being the mother of Mayetta (dam of Howard and Kylee), by Joe Daniels, and the excellent race mare Mabel M., by Wildidle. Howard holds the circular track record of the world for five and a half furlongs (1.06, with 118 lbs., up), and we never knew his breeding on the dam's side. We are indebted to Reel B. Terry for the information, and it is valuable because neither Amanda L. or Mayetta are registered in the American Stud Book.

J. COCHRAN will take in the Oregon-Washington-Idaho circuit with Earl Cochran, Bonnie Ione and the other members of the good sized string. Earl Cochran, son of the veteran trainer, will in all likelihood be reinstated by the American Turf Congress shortly, for Ed Corrigan, Capt. Rees and others whose consent was necessary have expressed themselves in favor of the boy, who has been on the ground for eighteen months or more. Earl Cochran is one of the best lightweights in all America and is so regarded by most racing men of this country.

W. B. SANBORN, a well-known Sonoma County horseman, has leased the large recreation park in this city known as Cycling Park, and will commence at once the construction of a track. The first race meet will probably take place July 4.—Santa Rosa dispatch, June 2.

LAST Wednesday Ned Lanigan received a dispatch stating that his recently acquired purchase, San Ramon, by Morello—Viola, had died an Ogden. Lanigan was offered $2,000 for the colt a few days before he was shipped.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 64,430

Annie A. Ackerman, plaintiff, vs. Charles E. Ackerman, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA send greeting to Charles E. Ackerman, defendant.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's desertion of plaintiff, said desertion having continued for more than two years last past and having been without the consent or connivance of plaintiff; also, for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 3d day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

Superior Court C. F. CURRY,
Clerk.

SEAL By JOSEPH RIORDAN,
Deputy Clerk.

San Francisco County, Cal.
Reel B. Terry, Attorney for Plaintiff, 401 California Street, San Francisco.

NOTICE TO SECRETARIES.

If secretaries of gun clubs will send us the full scores of their regular monthly shoots we will be pleased to publish them; but we must receive the copy on Wednesday to insure its insertion that week.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The State Tournament

At the Ingleside grounds on Sunday and Monday last, May 29th and 30th, the sixth tournament of the California Inanimate Target Association was held and is now part of the trap-shooting history of the Coast. The attendance, although not up to that of former tournaments, was, under existing circumstances, excellent. The management was all that could be desired and under the system carried out, shooters found every want carefully and promptly attended to. M. C. Allen officiated as manager, Messrs. Ad. Gunzen-dorfer, Chas. R. Few and Frank Voschell looked after the clerical work and Mr. H. H. White officiated as treasurer. The prize money were promptly posted and paid on demand.

The shooting commenced early Sunday morning, each event was shot out in order and quickly, the program for both days being followed without a hitch. The attendance of sportsmen from other parts of the State was good. A heavy wind prevailing each day during the shoot handicapped several of the talent and without doubt made a material difference in the score sheets and money division. Otto Feudner was the star performer of the first day, winning the E. T. Allen Cup (third event) with a straight score of twenty targets and the Gold Dust medal (fifth event) with a string of nineteen breaks out of twenty birds. The Olympic Gun Club medal was won by O. M. Judy, of Visalia, Tulare county, with a straight score of twenty breaks. The last event of the first day, the contest for the Roos three-man-team trophy, was won by Olympic team No. 1, composed of O. Feudner, C. Nauman and A. J. Webb.

The division of purses for the first day's shooting was as follows:

First Event—1st money, Haight, J. P. Taylor and F. Merrill, $13.35 each. 2d money, Hartley, W. J. Golcher, Vaughan, H. C. Golcher, R. L. King, W. Sixth Event—1st money, W. Sears, $30.75. 2d money, Nauman, Haight, Webb, F. Feudner, Robertson, and Varian, $2.65 each. 3d money, Leighton, Bekeart, "Heidelberg," Debenham, and H. Leon, $1.65 each.

Seventh Event—The association six-man-team trophy was won by the Olympic Gun Club team with a score of 110. The Empire Gun Club team won second money, $21, with a score of 97. The Lincolns won third money, $15, with a score of 96.

The special prize, an elegant L. C. Smith hammerless gun, donated by the Hunter Arms Co. under sealed conditions, was won by the veteran and well known trap-shooter, who shot under the name of "Chestnut." The conditions were "that the shooter making the highest average, in all events for both days, and not getting in the moneys" was to secure the gun. "Chestnut's" average was 60 per cent. C. Nauman won $10 on high average 87.7-19 per cent. O. N.

Feudner took second high average money $7.00 with 85.15-19 per cent and C. A. Haight 85.5-19, took third high average prize a case of shells donated by the E. C. Powder Company. The next five high averages were: W. Sears, 84.4-19; A. J. Webb, 83.18-19; "Trombone," 83.13-19; Fred Feudner, 82.2-19; Flickinger, 81.1-19.

The averages were computed on a total of 180 targets shot at in all the events excepting the Gold Dust Medal shoot (fifth event first day) and the team shoots (seventh events of each day.)

The scores of the individual matches were as follows:

Live Bird Tournament.

The pigeon shooting tournament of the Olympic Gun Club commencing yesterday and continuing to-day and to-morrow, promised from all indications, at the time of our going to press, to be a success in every feature. A large entry list was anticipated; quite a number of the shooters who attended the blue-rock tournament will stay over and enter the live-bird matches. A full report of the shoot will appear next week.

Target Association Election.

The annual election of officers of the California Inanimate Target Association was held last Sunday night, May 29th, at the Occidental Hotel and resulted as follows: President, Dr. W. S. George, Antioch; Vice-Presidents, Dr. A. M. Barker, San Jose; O. M. Judy, Visalia; D. Daniels, San Francisco; Dr. A. T. Hyde, Merced; and Frank Merrill, Stockton; Secretary, A. Gunzendorfer (re-elected). It was decided that the next shoot of the association would be held at Antioch on May 29 and 30, 1899.

Alert Gun Club.

The club shoot at Bird's Point was held last Sunday, a number of practice and pool events took place. The attendance of members, from week to week, is noticeably on the increase. The club has secured 540 acres of fine shooting grounds near Woodside, which has the reputation of affording good deer and quail hunting. A fine trout stream runs through the tract. A club house and other accommodations for the club members is on the preserve.

Santa Cruz Gun Club.

The Santa Cruz Gun Club held a shoot on Sunday, May 22d. The scores made in a race at twenty-five targets were,

Enright.....	15	Bartlet.....	15
Dutton.....	14	A. D. Pena.....	8
Cassin.....	13	Geo. Pena.....	8

Trap Shoot at Antioch.

A delegation of Martinez shooters visited the Antioch Gun Club at Antioch recently. The following scores were made in four blue-rock races:

A Wonderful Deer.

Historians and scribes have assiduously from the days of '49 exhausted fact, fiction and every other old thing in exploiting the various wonders and resources of California, the latest aspirant for a blast with the trump of fame is the engineer of the flying squadron on the Fort Bragg Advocate, who notes that on "Saturday a man by the name of Fitzgerald, living on a claim near Blue Lakes, was seriously injured by being shot through both legs by a man named Hurst, who claims he did it by accident, taking Fitzgerald for a deer, who was digging at the time."

The scribe, however, fails to state whether the shootee (or the deer), was digging a well or spude.

AMERICAN SHOOTING ASSOCIATION.

Rules for Inanimate Target Shooting.

REVISED JANUARY 1, 1893, BY C. W. DIMICK.

RULE 1—Judges and Referee—Two judges and a referee or a referee alone, shall be selected by the management, or the contestants, whose decision shall be final.

Rule 2—Duties of the Referee—The referee shall see that the traps are perfectly set at the beginning of the match, and kept in order to the finish. He shall endeavor to make the targets conform to the flight and direction indicated in Rule No. 7. He shall test any trap upon application of the shooter at any time by throwing a trial target therefrom. He may at any time, and must when so requested by a contestant, select one or more cartridges from those of a shooter at the score, and publicly test the same for proper loading. If the cartridge, or cartridges, are found to be improperly loaded, the shooter shall suffer the penalty as provided for in Rule No. 11.

Rule 3—Scorer—A scorer shall be appointed, by the management, whose score shall be the official one. All scoring shall be done with ink, or indelible pencil. The scoring of a lost target shall be indicated by a "o," and a broken target by the figure "1."

Rule 4—Puller—A puller, or pullers, shall be appointed by the management, whose duty it shall be to see that the trap or traps shall be instantly sprung when the shooter calls "pull," and shall be placed in such a position that the shooter will have no means of knowing by his actions which trap is to be pulled. In single target shooting he shall pull the traps as decided by a trap-pulling indicator, or other means that may have been provided by the management, so that the shooter will have no means of knowing which trap the target is to be thrown from.

Rule 5—Pulling the Traps—Section 1—Traps may be pulled in regular order from 1 to 3, or 1 to 5, or vice versa, if so decided by the management.

Sec. 2—If the shooting is from traps to be pulled in regular order, the shooter may refuse the target from the trap not so pulled; but if he shoots, the result must be scored.

Sec. 3—If the trap is sprung before, or at any noticeable interval after, the shooter calls "pull," he can accept or refuse the target; but if he shoots, the result must be scored.

Sec. 4—If the puller, or pullers, do not pull in accordance to the indicator, or other means provided, they shall be removed and others substituted.

DIAGRAM A.

(See Rules 6 and 7.)

NOTE—To get angles for birds thrown from traps 1 and 3, measure six yards from trap No. 2 on line to shooter's score to point marked "A"; lines drawn from this point across traps 1 and 3 will give proper direction of flight.

Rule 6—Arrangement of Traps—All matches shall be shot from three or five traps, set level, three or five yards apart, in the segment of a circle (see diagrams A and B), or in a straight line (see diagram C). When in the segment of a circle, the radius of the circle shall be eighteen yards. In all cases the shooter's position shall not be less from each trap than the rises provided for in Rule 7. The traps shall be numbered from 1, on the left, to No. 3 or No. 5, on the right, consecutively, according to the number used, as shown in the diagram.

Rule 7—Adjusting Traps—Section 1—All traps must be adjusted to throw the targets a distance of not less than 40 yards, nor more than 60 yards. If any trap be found to be too weak to throw the required distance, a new trap or spring that will, must be substituted.

Sec. 2—The lever or projecting arm of the trap shall be so adjusted that the elevation of the target in its flight at a distance of 10 yards from the trap shall not be more than 12 feet, nor less than 6 feet, and the angles of flight shall be as follows:

If three traps are used (see diagram A)—

No. 1 trap shall be set to throw a left quartering target.

No. 2 trap shall be set to throw a straightaway target.

No. 3 trap shall be set to throw a right quartering target.

If five traps are used (see diagrams B and C)—

No. 1 trap shall be set to throw a right quartering target.

No. 2 trap shall be set to throw a left quartering target.

No. 3 trap shall be set to throw a straightaway target.

No. 4 trap shall be set to throw a right quartering target.

No. 5 trap shall be set to throw a left quartering target.

Traps Nos. 1 and 5 shall be set to throw the targets so that the line of flight shall cross that of the straightaway target at a point not less than 10 yards nor more than 20 yards from trap No. 3.

Sec. 3—After the traps are set for these angles, if the target for any reason shall take a different course, it shall be considered a fair target, provided the trap has not been changed.

DIAGRAM B.

(See Rules 6 and 7.)

NOTE—To get angles for birds thrown from traps 2 and 4, measure six yards from trap No. 3 on line to shooter's score to point marked "A"; lines drawn from this point across traps 2 and 4 will give the proper direction of flight. The birds from traps 1 and 5 should cross the line of flight of the straightaway bird not more than twenty nor less than ten yards from trap No. 3.

DIAGRAM C.

(See Rules 6 and 7.)

NOTE—To get angles for birds thrown from traps 2 and 4, measure six yards from trap No. 3 on line to shooter's score to point marked "A"; lines drawn from this point across traps 2 and 4 will give the proper direction of flight. The birds from traps 1 and 5 should cross the line of flight of the straightaway bird not more than twenty nor less than ten yards from trap No. 3.

Rule 8—Screens—Either pits or screens, or both, may be used, but the screens must not be higher than is actually necessary to fully protect the trapper.

Rule 9—The Rise—In single target shooting the rise shall be:

- 18 yards for 10-bore guns.
- 16 yards for 12-bore guns.
- 14 yards for 14 and 16-bore guns.
- 13 yards for 20-bore guns.

In double target shooting the rise shall be:

- 16 yards for 10-bore guns.
- 14 yards for 12-bore guns.
- 12 yards for 14 and 16-bore guns.
- 11 yards for 20-bore guns.

All distances mentioned in these rules must be accurate measurements.

Rule 10—Caliber and Weight of Guns—No gun of larger caliber than 10-bore shall be used, and the weight of all guns shall be unlimited.

Rule 11—Loads—Charge of powder unlimited. Charge of shot not to exceed one and one-quarter ounces American Association, or Dixon's measure, struck. Any shooter using a larger quantity of shot shall forfeit his entrance money and rights in the match.

NOTE—If, in the opinion of the management, with the unanimous consent of the contestants, a shooter has not willfully violated this rule, his entrance money shall be returned to him.

Rule 12—Loading Guns—In single target shooting only one barrel shall be loaded at a time, and the cartridge shall not be placed in the barrel until after the shooter has taken his position at the score.

In double target shooting both barrels shall be loaded at the score. Cartridges must be removed from the gun before leaving the score.

Rule 13—Position of Gun—Any the shooter may adopt.

Rule 14—Single Target Shooting—When the traps are set in the segment of a circle, each contestant shall shoot at three or more targets before leaving the score. If two targets are sprung at the same time and the contestant does not shoot, it shall be declared "No targets;" but if he shoots, the result must be scored.

Rule 15—Double Target Shooting—Both traps must be pulled simultaneously, and each contestant shall shoot at three or five pairs, consecutively, thrown as follows: If three traps are used, the first pair shall be thrown from 1 and 2, the second pair from 2 and 3, the third pair from 1 and 3, the fourth pair from 1 and 2, and the fifth pair from 2 and 3.

If five traps are used, the first pair shall be thrown from 2 and 3, the second pair from 3 and 4, the third pair from 2 and 4, the fourth pair from 2 and 3, and the fifth pair from 3 and 4.

If only one target is thrown, it shall be declared "No targets."

If a target be lost for reasons stated in Rule 19, Sec. 1, it shall be declared "No targets." If one be a fair and the other an imperfect target, it shall be declared "No targets." But if the shooter accepts an imperfect target, or targets, the result must be scored.

If both targets are broken by one barrel, it shall be declared "No targets." If the shooter fires both barrels at one target intentionally, it shall be scored "Lost targets." But if the second barrel be discharged accidentally, it shall be "No targets."

Rule 16—Rapid Firing System—When the traps are set in a straight line and the rapid firing system is to be used, there shall be a screen before each trap on which shall appear the number of the trap, from No. 1 on the left, and each shooter shall stand at score opposite the trap from which the target is to be thrown for him to shoot at. After he has shot at his first target he shall pass to the next score to the right, and so continue until he reaches the end of the score, when he shall return to the score opposite No. 1, and continue as before until his score is finished. If shooters are annoyed, or there is delay in shooting by the smoke of previous shots, the traps may be pulled in reverse order, commencing with the trap on the right.

Rule 17—Class Shooting—All shooting shall be class shooting, unless otherwise stated by the management.

Rule 18—Broken Targets—A target to be scored "broken," must have a perceptible piece broken from it while in the air. A "dusted" target is not a broken target. No target shall be retrieved for shot marks.

If a target be broken by a trap, the shooter may claim another target, as provided for in Rule 19; but if he shoots, the result must be scored.

Rule 19—Allowing Another Target—Section 1—The shooter shall be allowed another target for the following reasons:

- For a target broken by the trap.
- For any defect in the gun or load, causing a miss-fire.

(c) If the contestant is interfered with, or balked, or there is other similar reason why it should be done, the referee may allow another target.

Sec. 2—When the shooting is at known angles he shall have another target from the same trap; but if the shooting is at unknown angles he shall have another target from an unknown trap, to be decided by the indicator, except it be the last trap, when the shooter has the right to know which trap is to be sprung. In this case he shall have another target from the same trap.

Note—When a shooter, in breaking his gun to put in the shells, fails to break it far enough to cock the gun, it is considered his own carelessness, and not sufficient excuse for the allowance of another target.

Rule 20—Lost Targets—Targets shall be scored lost if the shooter fails to load, cock, adjust safety on gun, or pulls the wrong trigger.

Rule 21—Tie Shooting—Section 1.—All ties shall be shot off at the original distance, and as soon after the match as practicable, at the following number of birds:

Ties on Single Targets—In single target matches of 25 targets or less, on three traps, 3 targets; five traps, five targets. In matches of 26 targets to 50 inclusive, on three traps, 6 targets; five traps, 10 targets. In matches of over 50, on three traps, 15 targets; five traps, 25 targets.

Ties on Double Targets—In double target matches of 10 pairs or less, on three traps, 3 pairs. In matches of more than 10 pairs, 5 pairs, thrown from traps 1 and 3. If five traps are used, the same number shall be thrown in each case, from traps 2 and 4 (unless otherwise arranged by the management, and so stated or understood previous to the beginning of the match.)

Sec. 2—If, in a series of matches, the result prove a tie, such tie shall be shot off at the original number of targets.

Rule 22—Announcing the Score—Section 1.—When two judges and a referee are serving, one of the judges shall announce the result of each shot distinctly, and it shall be called back by the scorer.

(The call for a broken target shall be "Broke," and the call for a missed target shall be "Lost.")

If the second judge disagrees with the decision of the judge calling, he shall announce it at once before another target is thrown, and the referee shall decide it. In case of another target being thrown before the referee's decision, the target so thrown shall be "No target."

Sec. 2—At the close of each shooter's score the result must be announced. If claimed to be wrong, the error, if any, must be corrected at once.

Rule 23—Shooter at the Score—In all contests the shooter must be at the score within three minutes after his name is called to shoot, or he forfeits his right in the match.

Rule 24—Forbidden Shooting—No shooting will be permitted in the enclosure other than at the score; and in case there is no enclosure, no shooting within 200 yards of the score, without the consent of the management.

Dove Shooting Season.

Although the season for dove shooting will not be in for several weeks yet, we note in several exchanges that the coming sport will not be overlooked; in fact, in some sections the natives are already anticipating the visits of city sportsmen by indulging in illegal shooting and getting what they consider the first pick of the crop. The Wheatland Four Corners has the following to say in regard to doves in that section:

"We were out in the country one day this week and were pleased to see besides a promising grain crop signs of a large 'dove crop.' Bordering the grain fields the fences were lined with doves. The birds were more plentiful than ever before at this season. Speculating upon this we have come to the conclusion that the drouth in the lower part of the State has driven the birds to this section for feed. If such is the case, the sportsmen of this section of the Sacramento valley between Sacramento and Chico will have dove shooting such as they never had before."

The Sacramento Record notes a different state of affairs: "It is learned that several parties have been violating the game law by shooting doves during the close season. The open season does not commence until July 15th, six weeks from now, and many of the birds are now nesting and should not be destroyed. Game Warden Helms is on the lookout for violators of the law, but has a very large territory to cover. It is probable, however, that he will before long make a capture, and as the penalty is a heavy one, the cases now coming before the Superior Court, some one will pay dearly for the fun of slaughtering the birds and leaving the young ones to starve. It is to be hoped that members of the various sportsmen's clubs will lend their aid in the detection of those who show their contempt of the law."

NOTICE TO ANGLERS.

Every angler is invited to drop us a line occasionally, telling us of the condition of the streams they have visited, the killing lure, the number and size of the fish caught, or any other item of interest to anglers.

Coming Events.

June 4-5.—San Francisco Fly-Casting Club. Eighth series of Saturday and Sunday contests. Stow Lake, Golden Gate Park.
June 8-9.—West Michigan Fly-Casting Association. First Angling Tournament. Grand Rapids, Mich.

Fly Casting Club.

The eighth series of the season's contests by members of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club will commence to-day at 2 P. M., at Stow Lake and be continued to-morrow at 10 A. M.

At the last regular business meeting of the club held Tuesday evening, May 24th, the rules governing club contests were modified for the purpose of enabling re-entries of members so that back scores in the various events could be cast, thus allowing a showing to be made by the fly-casters in the season's averages.

Trout Protection in Arizona.

Judge E. M. Doe of Flagstaff, Ar., territorial fish and game commission, has appointed Lewis H. Thomas assistant commissioner. Mr. Thomas lives on Oak Creek, the famous trout fishing grounds of Northern Arizona. During the past three years large numbers of trout have been ruthlessly killed by persons who set traps and used dynamite for the purpose of making large catches, the trout being sold for their own special benefit.

By this means of fishing thousands of young fish were killed and the stream depleted of trout. The legislature passed a law protecting the fish from this kind of vandalism, and only allowing them to be caught from June 1st to October 1st of each year. The fish and game commissioners intend to prosecute all offenders against the law and if caught fishing out of season, a fine will be imposed that will put a stop to any repetition of the act.

There is another useful tool which goes with me in my fly-book, which is not on the market. It is a small three-inch ivory "marlin-spike," as a sailor would call it, it was made and given to me by the late Ira Wood. I had picked at knots in lines and in leaders with the sharp point of a pen-knife time and again to the detriment of lines and leaders, when Ira gave me this delicate, round-pointed bit of ivory, and now I never go fishing without it. It will work into a knot without hurting the most delicate gut. Every time I use it, the memory of Ira Wood comes up and I can hear him say: "Stop picking your leader into rags and use this. There now the knot is untangled and your leader is as good as ever". Among the things which an angler may add to his kit is one of Ira Wood's marlin-spikes.—Fred Mather in Forest and Stream.

There is considerable difference in the fighting qualities of various fish. Black bass have always held the reputation for gameness, and fairly divide with the muscalonge and trout the chief honors in that line. Tarpon and salmon are also in the same category, while bluefish and striped bass have their admirers by the thousands. The United States is, in fact, extremely rich in fish that are not only good to eat, but very good to catch.

No one but an angler knows the thrill that runs through his nerve centres when he hears the reel singing and sees the rod bending under the fierce rushes of a large fish, well hooked and fighting for his freedom. The boy who hauls a tomcod from the waters of the North River feels this thrill in only slighter degree than his more fortunate brother angler who is fast on a big trout in one of the Rangeley lakes, the pride of the State of Maine.

A number of striped bass have been caught recently on the other side of the bay, on a Golcher spoon. The best fishing has been found in water of a depth of four feet or less, on an incoming tide, not too clear nor yet too muddy. In clear water the fish are wary and keep away except when the angler is trolling from a boat, when the water is very muddy the bait cannot be seen by the fish.

Fred Johnson, F. W. S. Van Slyke and John Butler fished San Gregorio and Pescadero lagoons on Sunday and Monday last. They had very good luck. The fly-fishing being excellent, a number of half-pounders were caught in San Gregorio lagoon with a spoon. The party took quite a lot of fingerlings which were returned to the water, much to the amazement of the natives.

"Del" Cooper and F. Ireland have returned from a several weeks trip to the McCloud. They caught many fine fish. The sport is first-class in the McCloud at present. The brown hackle with a red tail, cow-dung, royal coachman and grey hackle are the best killers.

Henry Laugenour writes to the Woodland Mail that fishing at Allen Springs, Lake County, is "all right." He says a man who cannot catch from fifty to seventy-five fine trout in two hours is "n. g." We know the ex-assemblyman and agree with him in his statement.

Fish Commissioner Vogelsang returned from the McCloud last Monday. He reports fly-fishing good in the river at present. He caught 20 fine fish, averaging from one to one and a half pounds each.

According to an English sporting exchange, there seems to be a sentiment growing in favor among English anglers in favor of taxing rods.

Frank Dolliver, Andy and several others have been catching a few striped bass on the wharves across the bay during the week.

Since the late rains good catches have been made in Boulder Creek, the upper Lagunitas and Santa Rosa creek.

R. E. A. Isenbruck fished the Lagunitas down to Paper Mill last Sunday. He had very fine luck.

W. A. Keliehor has had grand sport with the salmon in Monterey bay recently.

Bay fishing is most excellent at present.

American Kennel Club Notes.

The regular quarterly meeting of the American Kennel Club was held in New York, on May 19th, 1898. H. H. Hunnewell, president of the associate members, presiding. Present: Associate members, A. C. Wilmerding and G. W. H. Ritchie. American Fox Terrier Club, H. H. Hunnewell, Jr.; American Dachshund Club, Dr. C. Motshenbacher; Gordon Setter Club, James B. Blossom; Great Dane Club, G. Muss Arnoldt; Milwaukee Kennel and Pet Stock Association, James Mortimer; National Beagle Club, H. F. Schell; Pointer Club of America, George Jarvis; Rhode Island Kennel Club, W. C. Codman; San Francisco Kennel Club, C. B. Knocker; Irish Terrier Club, S. Van Schaick; Pet Dog Club, S. C. Hodge; Metropolitan Kennel Club, Dr. H. T. Foote; American Spaniel Club, M. A. Viti; Collie Club, J. Watson.

Delegates representing the following named clubs were elected upon recommendation of the membership committee: Metropolitan Kennel Club, Dr. H. T. Foote; Oakland Kennel Club, A. D. Lewis; American Pet Dog Club, S. C. Hodge; Irish Terrier Club, S. Van Schaick; National Greyhound Club, L. C. Whiton; Central Beagle Club, Theodore Bollje.

The membership committee refused to approve the credentials of the American Pug Club's delegate, Mr. T. A. Howard, for cause.

On the 24th day of March the following-named clubs were in arrears of dues for 1898, and were dropped from the roll of membership, viz: American Bedlington Terrier Club, Binghamton Industrial Exhibition, Cocker Spaniel Club of California, Des Moines Kennel Club, Kentucky Kennel Club, Mohawk Kennel Club, New Jersey Kennel League, Southern California Kennel Club, Stockton Kennel Club, Victoria Kennel Club, and Washington City Kennel Club.

On the question being raised as to the recognition of certain wins at the late San Jose show, viz: "The Santa Clara Poultry and Kennel Club issued its premium list providing for a full classification in all breeds. Owing however, to a large number of said classes failing to fill, it appears from the certified catalogue that in several instances but one dog of a breed had been entered, and in several instances but one class in a breed had filled; notwithstanding this, winners' classes had in every case been opened and awards given. The intent of the rule was that competition must be had to make a dog eligible in the winners' class, so that walkovers in qualifying for a championship would be obviated." It being shown that the club had complied with the rules of the A. K. C., all awards were allowed to stand with the exception of those given to the miscellaneous class and to the classes of a breed of dogs called "California bulldogs." This latter breed being unknown and unrecognized. It is probable that action will be taken at the September meeting tending to remedy the rules in relation to the winners' class, etc.

Charges dated May 12th, 1898, were submitted to the Secretary: San Francisco Kennel Club vs. J. B. Martin. Remisconduct in connection with dog shows. The disposition made of these charges was not stated in the published account of the proceedings of the board. Martin has, however filed his answer in the case.

In the matter of the application of Webster Jones of San Francisco for the reinstatement of the English setter Count Harold, the executive board submitted the following opinion which was accepted, viz: "It is the sense of this board that it can find no good reason to depart from precedents already established, that a dog owned by a suspended or disqualified person cannot be exhibited by any subsequent purchaser until the person under discipline shall have been reinstated. The application is therefore denied."

Count Harold is listed on page 63 of the marked catalogue of the late bench show, as No. 248, in "Class 74, English setters, Open Dogs" Entered by Webster Jones and "not for competition."

In the matter of reinstatement of Wade Collins of San Francisco, the executive board reported as follows: "By virtue of the recommendation of the St. Bernard Club of California, and four members of the Pacific Advisory Committee it is therefore ordered that Wade Collins be, and is hereby reinstated." Under the circumstances and in view of the stand taken by Mr. Collins heretofore, this decision will no doubt meet with the approval of the coast fanciers.

The executive board reported as follows in reference to the case of the American Kennel Club vs. the Pacific Mastiff Club. "Ordered, that the action of President Belmont in suspending the Pacific Mastiff Club and its officers for the adoption of a resolution prejudicial to the interests of the parent body, and his subsequent reinstatement of said club and officers, upon receipt of notice of the rescinding of said resolution, be, and hereby is, approved and confirmed."

The Padres and their Successors — Horse Breeders in the Early Days.

That the Missions were so overstocked with horses, that in one or two dry seasons, before their possessions were wrested from them, horses were killed to make room for the cattle, is a matter of history, and that did not prove that the horses were of no value, but that the surplus was of less worth than even the hides and tallow of the horned animals.

Great horses among them, and were it necessary at this day to go so far back for evidence of the great advantages possessed by horse-breeders here, over those of any other part of the United States, the testimony furnished by the horses of these early days would establish the adaptability of the soil and climate of California to promote, not only physical temperament, but also tend to increasing the nerve force. So eminent an authority as the Duke of Newcastle, recognized to be the best horseman of his time, was enthusiastic over Spanish horses, and there is little question that when he wrote his English work on horses, published in 1667, he eulogizes them over all other breeds for the "Mannage" or many other purposes, and while giving preference to the Barb as the progenitor of racehorses, cites several instances when the get of Spanish horses or from Spanish mares excelled on the turf. In the chapter, "What stallion is the best for Mannage," he states: "Why not breed to a Neapolitan? They are too gross horses; and we breed too big horses in England, by reason both of moisture of the air and ground. Why not breed of a Barb? They are too slender and too lady-like for the Mannage, though themselves the best in the world for it; but their offspring are commonly loose and weak horses, fitter for running horses than the Mannage, so the Spanish horse is in the middle (where virtues) neither too gross, nor too slender, and the finest shaped horse in the world. And therefore, have no other stallion."

Unquestionably the exportation of horses to the American colonies of Spain embraced a good selection of stallions and mares, and when the Mission Fathers made their choice, the very best obtainable would be selected.

Mark the difference. When the same stock were left in Mexico and Texas it deteriorated into unruly, vicious mustangs; in California, even under the lax system of breeding that prevailed, very many of them that would justify the encomiums bestowed by the titled author.

In one respect superior to any other breed of horses in the world; capacity to gallop almost incredible distances between "sun and sun," and keep it up for days, even weeks, with small additional sustenance save that obtained at the end of a lariat. This will be fully proved by a quotation from Colton in which is described the journey of Colonel Fremont from Los Angeles to Monterey and back, and the graphic description of the Reverend author will, without doubt, be a revelation to many of our readers.

The ride of Col. Fremont in March, 1847, from the ciudad de los Angeles to Monterey in Alta California—a distance of four hundred and twenty miles—and back, exhibits in a strong light the iron nerve of the rider, and the capacities of the California horse. The party on this occasion, consisted of the colonel, his friend Don Jesus Pico, and his servant Jacob Dodson. Each had three horses, nine in all, to take their turn under the saddle, and relieve each other every twenty miles; while the six loose horses galloped ahead, required constant vigilance and action to keep them on the path. The relays were brought under the saddle by the lasso, thrown by Don Jesus or Jacob, who, though born and raised in Washington, in his long expeditions with Col. Fremont, had become expert as a Mexican with the lasso, sure as a mountaineer with the rifle, equal to either on horse or foot, and always a lad of courage and fidelity.

The party left Los Angeles on the morning of the 22, at daybreak, though the call which took the colonel to Monterey, had reached him only the evening before. Their path lay through the wild mountains of San Fernando, where the steep ridge and precipitous glen follow each other like the deep hollows and crested waves of ocean, under the driving force of the storm. It was a relief when a rough ravine opened its winding gallery on the line of their path. They reached at length the maritime defile of El Rincon, or Punto Gordo, where a mountain bluff shoulders its way boldly to the sea, leaving for fifteen miles only a narrow line of broken coast, lashed at high tide, and in the gale, by the foaming surf. The sun was on the wave of the Pacific, when they issued from the Rincon; and twilight still lingered when they reached the hospitable rancho of Don Thomas Robbins—one hundred and twenty-five miles from Los Angeles. The only limb in the company which seemed to complain of fatigue was the right arm of Jacob, incessantly exercised in lashing the loose horses to the track, and lassoing the relays. None of the horses were shod—an iron contrivance unknown here, except among a few Americans. The gait through the day had been a hand-gallop, relieved at short intervals by a light trot. Here the party rested for the night, while the horses gathered their food from the young grass which spread its tender verdure on the field.

Another morning had thrown its splendors on the forest when the party waved their adieu to their hospitable host, and were under way. Their path lay over the spurs of the Santa Barbara mountains; and close to that steep ridge, where the California battalion, under Col. Fremont, encountered on the 25th Dec., 1846, a blinding storm, which still throws its sleet and hail through the dreams of those hardy men. Such was its overpowering force, that more than a hundred of their horses dropped down under their saddles. Their bleaching bones still glimmering in the gorges, add hanging on the cliffs, are the ghastly memorial of its terrific violence. None but they, who were of their number, can tell what that battalion suffered. The object of that campaign accomplished, and the conquest of California secured, the colonel, with his friend and servant, was now on his brief return. Their path continued over the flukes and around the bluffs of the coast mountains, relieved at intervals by the less rugged slopes and more level of the canada. The hand-gallop and light trot of their spirited animals brought them, at set of sun, to the rancho of their friend, Capt. Dana, where they supped, and then proceeding on to San Luis Obispo, reached the house of Don Jesus, the colonel's companion, at nine o'clock in the evening—one hundred and thirty-five miles from the place where they broke camp in the morning!

The arrival of Col. Fremont having got wind, the rancheros of San Luis were on an early stir, determined to detain him. All crowded to his quarters with their congratulations, and the tender of a splendid entertainment, but his time was too pressing; still escape was impossible, till a sumptuous breakfast had been served, and popular enthusiasm had expressed its warm regard. This gratitude and esteem were the result of that humane construction of military law, which had spared the forfeited lives of the leaders in the recent insurrectionary war. It was eleven o'clock in the morning before the colonel and his attendants were in the saddle. Their tired horses had been left, and eight fresh ones taken in their places, while their party had been increased by the addition of a California boy, in the capacity of vaquero. Their path still lay through a wild broken country, where primeval forests frowned, and the mountain torrent dashed the tide of its strength. At eight in the evening they reached the gloomy base of the steep range which guards the head waters of the Salinas or Buena-ventura, seventy miles from San Luis. Here Don Jesus, who had been up the greater part of the night previous, with his family and friends, proposed a few hours rest. As the place was the favorite haunt of marauding Indians, the party for safety during their repose, turned off the track, which ran nearer the coast, than the usual route, and issuing through a canada into a thick wood, rolled down in their serapes, with their saddles for their pillows, while their horses were put to grass at a short distance, with the Spanish boy in the saddle to keep watch. Sleep once commenced, was too sweet to be easily given up; midnight had passed when the party were roused from their slumbers by an estampado among their horses, and the loud calls of the watch boy. The cause of the alarm proved not to be Indians, but gray bears, which infest this wild pass. It was here that Col. Fremont with thirty-five of his men, in the summer preceding, fell in with several large bands of these ferocious fellows, who appeared to have posted themselves here to dispute the path. An attack was ordered and thirteen of their grim file were left dead on the field. Such is their acknowledged strength and towering rage, when assaulted, the bravest hunters, when outnumbered, generally giving them a wide berth. When it was discovered that they had occasioned this midnight stampede, the first attempt was to attack them; but Don Jesus, who understood their habits and weak points, discouraged the idea, stating that "people gente can scare bears," and with that gave a succession of loud halloos, at which the bears commenced their retreat. The horses by good fortune were recovered, a fire kindled, and by break of day, the party had finished their breakfast, and were again in the saddle. Their path, issuing from the gloomy forests of the Soledad, skirted the coast range, and crossed the plain of the Salinas to Monterey, where they arrived three hours to set of sun, and ninety miles from their last camping-tree.

The principal citizens of Monterey, as soon as the arrival of Col. Fremont was announced, assembled at the office of the alcalde, and passed resolutions inviting him to a public dinner; but the urgency of his immediate return obliged him to forego the proffered honor. At four o'clock in the afternoon of the day succeeding that of their arrival, the party were ready to start on their return. The two horses rode by the colonel from San Luis Obispo, were a present to him from Don Jesus, who now desired him to make an experiment with the abilities of one of them. They were brothers, one a year younger than the other, both the same color—cinnamon—and hence called el canelo, or los canelos. The elder was taken for the trial, and led off gallantly as the party struck the plain which stretches toward the Salinas. A more graceful horse, or one more deftly mounted, I have never seen. The eyes of the gathered crowd followed them till they disappeared in the shadows of the distant hills. Forty miles on the hand-gallop, and they camped for the night. Another day dawned, and the elder canelo was again under the saddle of Col. Fremont, and for ninety miles carried him without change, and without apparent fatigue. It was still thirty miles to San Luis, where they were to pass the night, and Don Jesus insisted that canelo could easily perform it, and so said the horse in his spirited look and action. But the colonel would not put him to the trial; and shifting the saddle to the younger brother, the elder was turned loose to run the remaining thirty miles without a rider. He immediately took the lead, and kept it the whole distance, entering San Luis on a sweeping gallop, and neighing with exultation on his return to his native pastures. His younger brother, with equal spirit, kept the lead of the horses under the saddle, bearing on his bit, and requiring the constant check of his rider. The whole eight horses made their one hundred and twenty miles each in this day's ride, after having performed forty the evening before. The elder cinnamon, who had taken his rider through the forty, carried him ninety miles further to-day, and would undoubtedly have taken him through the remaining thirty miles had Col. Fremont continued him under the saddle.

After a detention of half a day at San Luis Obispo by a rain-storm, the party resumed the horses they had left there, and which took them back to Los Angeles in the same time they had brought them up. Thus making their five hundred miles each in four days, with the interval of repose occupied in the ride from San Luis to Monterey and back—making eight hundred and forty miles—the party had actually but one relay of fresh horses; the time on the road was about seventy-six hours. The path through the entire route lies through a wild broken country, over ridges, down gorges, around bluffs, and through gloomy defiles, where a traveller, unused to these mountains, would often deem even the slow trot impracticable. The only food which the horses had, except a few quarts of barley at Monterey, was the grass on the road; though the trained and domesticated horses, like the canelos, will eat or drink almost everything which their master uses. They will take from his hand bread, fruits, sugar, coffee; and, like the Persian horse, will not refuse a bumper of wine. They obey with gentlest docility his slightest intimation; a swing of his hand, or a tap of his whip on the saddle, will spring them into instant action, while the check of a thread-rein on the Spanish bit will bring them to a dead stand; and yet in these sudden stops, when rushing at the top of their speed, they manage not to jostle their rider, or throw them forward. They go where their master directs, whether it be a leap on the foe, up a flight of stairs, or over a chasm. But this is true only of the conduct and behavior of those horses trained like the canelos, who vindicate, in the mountain glens of California, their Arabian origin. They are all grace, fleetness, muscle and fire; gentle as the lamb, lively as the antelope, and fearless as the lion.

A great many well authenticated feats of endurance could be added to the above, and as to form and good looks some of the best specimens of the native horses would take premiums in a show ring. Twenty-three years ago the writer attended the races at Los Angeles. In the infield were congregated a large number of saddle horses, and according to the information obtained from a person who was thoroughly posted in regard to the horses of the southern country a large proportion of them of pure Spanish blood. A native of that section, his mother a sister of Governor Pico, the owner of many horses, and an ardent admirer of the "noble animal," old enough to take an active part in the life of the halcyon days before the discovery of gold, was familiar with everything pertaining to the history of his native land, he was a delightful cicerone to one who was seeking for information about the "wonderland."

He pointed out horses that were entirely of native blood, and those which had a dash of thoroughbred. Selecting the best of each, full native blood, and thoroughbred on native, and there was little difference. The first thoroughbred used in that country were under medium size, was the information we obtained, and hence there was little difference in size and weight in the two classes. Some of them as truly made as one could wish, showing the right form to make such journeys as that of Col. Fremont, and nearly a perfect type of light cavalry horses. The successors of the Mission Fathers were "hidalgos" to whom the Mexican government granted large bodies of land. Ranchos covering many square leagues, and in these primitive days their herds and flocks produced enough to gratify all their longings. Widely separated, distance was overcome by the spirit and endurance of their horses, and a journey of a few hundred miles to attend a fete or party lightly regarded. An easy, steady gallop, scarcely more fatiguing than sitting in an easy chair, in fact less so, as the changing scenes, and the inspiration of swift motion overcame weariness, and though the best part of a hundred miles—perhaps fully that distance, had been covered after the rising of the sun, that evening when guitars were tuned and merry notes sprung from the strings, pulses vibrated in unison and señoritas and seniors went “on with the dance, and their joy was unconfined” till the returning sun warned the still merry folk that it was time for an intermission.

And there is small hazard in stating that not another race of horses in the world would have been so well adapted for the wants of the people in those days as the descendants of those imported by the padres.

In 1865. The California Agricultural Society offered premiums of $50 to the best and $25 to the second, to the assessors of the counties, requesting concise statements of the general resources and advant ges of the county, whether agricultural, mineral or manufacturing. There were other inducements, and the first premium was awarded to Mr. W. P. McGarvey, assessor of Monterey county.

The report was an admirable illustration of the resources of that county at the time, embracing crops, pasture, fruit trees, timber, mining, telegraph, live stock, fisheries, meteorology and assessed values.

In connection with this article the paragraphs on horses will be quoted, though a sentence in the cattle department can be copied to give an idea of the situation at that time.

“Often it has happened that cattle has died off at such a rate that in order to save some of them it was necessary to kill most al of the horses; and on such occasions thousands of horses were slaughtered or driven down the cliffs into the sea. Fortunately this did not happen at short intervals.”

The author evidently alluded to practices previous to the dry season of 1864, though he states : “That two successive years of drought have almost swept the country clean of cattle, horses and sheep.” But he also states that the Fathers made some provisions for dry years,of grain, at least, keeping an extra supply on hand and renewing it each year. Then the irrigating plants, on some of the Missions, were safeguards.

“Horses,” he says, “held out better than cattle. Most of those surprised in the mountains by inclement weather and snow have perished, but on an average there is no comparison between the loss of horses and other stock.

The number of horses assessed this year (1865) is three thousand one hundred and fifty-eight classed as follows:

American horses.....	89
American stallions.....	26
American mares.....	108
Spanish horses.....	1,274
Spanish mares.....	1,296
Half-bred horses.....	227
Half-bred mares.....	228
Total.....	3,158
Colts : American.....	88
Spanish.....	364
Half-bred.....	246
Total.....	697

Twenty-one years after the secularization of the Missions, and sixteen years from the time of the big discovery of gold (long before that on the lands of one of the Missions, San Fernando, $30,000 was mined at the foot of the hills on which the Mission stood) there were only 311 American horses and colts in that county and by far the largest proportion of these were brought across the plains, it is not at all surprising that the natives preponderated.

The following table will show the number of horses of all kinds, and mules on fifteen of the missions in the twenties.

The table published two weeks ago embraced nine and this six, the others not reported, so that there is no risk in estimating the number of horses on the missions in 1825, or thereabouts, at $75,000:

	Farm Horses.	Other Horses.	Mules.
Nine Missions, a total.....	17,740	22,105	8,265
La Purisima.....	2,600	4,000

Tule Grass for Hay, and Tul-s for Bedd ng.

The employment of tules for bedding for horses has been advocated at various timss in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, and in this dry year it might be a money-making scheme to utilize these and another production of the marshes when it is evident that the prices of hay and straw will be very high.

In a chapter of the “Natural Wealth of California,” on the grasses of this State is this paragraph “Natural meadows of great extent are found interspersed among the watery tule lands. They are very wet in winter, and their grass, though a sure crop and heavy, is wiry, coarse, and of inferior nourishment, yet at times, it is of priceless value. The year 1864 was one of famine to cattle in this State; the rains were scant, and the usual feeding grounds were barren. Some enterprising men cut fifty thousand tons of this coarse grass in that year, and it proved the salvation of a large number of cattle, and a source of great profit to the adventurers. Among the recuperative resources of this State, this may be counted on hereafter as of great value.”

That was written shortly after that year of drouth, and did it require confirmation there are living witnesses who add their testimony to that printed. Quite true that in 1864 and 1865, the only transportation from a distance was by water, but now the railway haul from the nearest point of supply adds immensely to the cost. A train load of hay from Oregon was side-tracked at Ben Ali last week, several hundreds of tons to be used at Rancho del Paso. It cost $17 per ton on the switch at Ben Ali and then there is the expense of hauling to the Bottom. But Mr. Mackey in estimating that hay is likely to be double that price before another harvest, I am afraid, is justified by the present prospects.

As nearly as I can learn the supply of this coarse grass is so abundant that hundreds of thousands of tons could be harvested without trouble, and people who live near the locality where it grows could cut and bale it for a small percentage of what it will bring in the market

Straw when pressed as firmly as possible in bales is still so light that shipment by rail will be far more expensive than the transportation of hay. And yet, however, there is an assurance of a still greater scarcity of that, and some substitute must be provided.

An easy test can be made by cutting a few bundles of tules, and using them in the stalls, and should the experiment be successful, plenty of time to lay in a supply to meet the demands of fall and winter. The racecourses in the vicinity of San Francisco and Oakland will require a large amount of bedding when the racing season opens this fall, and joined with the demand from all the various kinds of domiciles for horses on both sides of the bay, should tules meet the want fairly well a good price for them is assured.

CATTLE.

Live Stock Statistics.

The recent report of the Department of Agriculture, showing the number of head of cattle, hogs and sheep in the country, January 1, 1898, is a very bullish document. Cattle and hog supplies are smaller than last year, while there has been a comparatively small increase in the number of sheep. The real force of these statistics becomes more apparent, however, when the figures of 1898 are compared with the figures of 1892-94, and their approximate correctness can hardly be questioned.

During the last five years of industrial and commercial inactivity and financial depression, this shortage in the meat supply in the country was not severely felt, and certainly not fully appreciated; but with the dawn of a better day, and the improvement in the demand for meat, the great reduction in the available supply begins to be felt, and will become more apparent as the demand increases and the supply diminishes.

According to the government's figures given below, there has been a decrease during the past five years of over 7,000,000 cattle, 6,500,000 hogs, and 8,500,000 sheep. Such a radical reduction in supplies ought to, and certainly will, mean more satisfactory prices for those who are now engaged in producing the live stock of the country.

The number of cattle, hogs and sheep reported by the government for the past twenty years is as follows:

Yr.	Cattle.	Hogs.	Sheep.
1878 .....	30,523,400	32,740,500	32,262,500

Inspection of Live stock for Slaughter.

It will undoubtedly be interesting at this time when California stockmen are shipping live stock in large quantities to the markets of the Middle West, to give some information concerning the inspection of cattle and sheep together with the requirements of the inspectors. The loss entailed to shippers could be averted by a closer examination and more care in sorting their stock before shipping.

An ante-mortem examination of all animals arriving at the stock yards for slaughter, when weighed, or if not weighed, this inspection is made in the pens. Any animal found to be diseased or unfit for human food is marked by placing a metal tag in the ear, bearing “U. S. Condemned,” and a serial number. Such animals are placed in pens set apart for this service, and removed only by a numbered permit, signed by an inspector, to an abattoir or rendering works, where they are killed under the supervision of a U. S. inspector, and rendered in such a manner that the products will be unfit for human food. Animals rejected on account of their pregnant or parturient condition are held in pens during gestation, and for ten days thereafter, unless removed by permit, either for stockers or for rendering in the manner above specified. All animals are condemned and the carcasses disposed of in the manner above mentioned, which are found on either ante-mortem or post-mortem examinations to be affected as follows: (1) Hog Cholera. (2) Swine plague. (3) Chorb-on or Anthox. (4) Bobies. (5) Malignant, epizootic, cataarrh. (6) Mange or scab in advanced stages. (7) Advanced stages of octinomycosis or lump-jaw. (8) Inflammation of the lungs, the intestines, or the peritoneum. (9) Texas fever. (10) Extensive or generalized tuberculosis. (11) Animals in an advanced stage of pregnancy, or which have recently given birth to young. (12) Any disease or injury causing elevation of temperature or affecting the system of the animal to a degree that would make the flesh unfit for human food.

These inspections are made by veterinary surgeons and practical stockmen, who have passed a rigid examination to show their competency in the performance of their official duties, and rendering justice to the public at large.

Sheep or cattle which are hurt in transit are thrown out as being unfit for food, while many are taken sick in transit and are in too bad shape to pass inspection when th y come to the scales. This sickness is often due to their being overfed just before loading, and shippers of sheep should realize that they are very likely to loose sheep by such means. A common practice is to feed salt to sheep just before shipping, where the distance is short, causing them to drink a large quantity of water, but there is very little to be gained by such methods, as the quick eye of the buyers in the market can always detect them.

Oregon Does Not Want California Cattle.

Our Lakeview, Oregon, correspondent writes us that the cattlemen of Lake and Klamath counties, are fearful of California cattle being driven into their districts, a petition is now being circulated and will be immediately presented to the Governor for action. The following practically covers the petition in brief:

The cattlemen of Lake and Klamath counties should see that cattle from southern California are not permitted to enter Oregon. They are from a section where Texas fever is prevalent and unless some action is taken our cattle will be inoculated with this dread disease. The law of 1889, known as the Tongue law, is adequate to prevent this disaster and the attention of the state veterinarian should be called to it at once. An attempt was made to take these cattle to Nevada, but the governor, under laws similar to ours, put a stop to it. They are only allowed to pass through the state on the cars and cannot stop except at designated places, and no other stock is permitted to mingle with them. It is understood that Henry Miller of Miller & Lux, intends to drive 15,000 head of these cattle into Lake and Klamath counties. A petition is now being circulated among our cattlemen and will be sent to Governor Lord.

Live Stock Outlook Serious.

Southern California is almost entirely denuded of cattle and sheep. From Santa Rosa Island, in Santa Barbara channel, where large supplies have been coming for years, 3,000 cattle and 20,000 sheep have been withdrawn. It is estimated on good authority that not less than 300,000 sheep have been taken from all parts of that section of the State and experts figures that fully 90 per cent of the stock has been removed from the ranges of California to date. These animals have been shipped to Arizona, New Mexico, Nebraska, Wyoming, and as far East as Kansas. Long before the rains of next season are at hand and feed is up on the ranges, these animals will have found their way to Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha abattoirs. Hogs also are extremely scarce throughout that section. The question with which we are confronted is a most serious one, where is the stock to come from for these ranges when feed is again plentiful? The task of collecting 300,000 sheep, 10,000 cattle and 30,000 hogs will not be a light one. Stock is scarce as our statistics show, and as compared with the past three years on all the ranges of the country, and at ruling prices, there is no likelihood of any speedy increase.

Notes.

Harry S. Wells, of Yreka, has just returned from a trip through Southern California; he purchased 450 head of mixed cattle will be taken to his ranch in Squaw Valley.

The San Benito County hay crop this year is estimated at 5,000 tons, compared with 30,000 tons last year. Results are reported as being very disastrous to farmers.

The Hollister Bees says: C. F. Storm has moved his cattle from the Alvarado district to Santa Cruz county.

Jas. Taylor of Salinas has returned to that city from a purchasing trip of cattle through San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties. Mr. Taylor reports pasture extremely short and cattle are suffering.

The Santa Barbara News says: It is estimated that about 90 per cent. of the live stock in that and other Southern counties have been shipped away for pasturage during the drying season. A large part of this stock will never return, as it has been sent to Omaha to be converted into prime beef and mutton. We doubt if the ranges when feed reappears will show more than 25 per cent. of the stock that grazed there last spring.

Farmers can find an opportunity in beef cattle. There is no larger supply than the demand, but choice cattle are scarce. By raising cattle from the beef-producing breeds the animals not only mature a year earlier, but bring higher prices in market owing to superior quality.

Geo. Lingo of Birds Landing is driving considerable cattle for pasture to the tules on the river. This band of stock came in from Glenn county.

An eminent authority in feeding says that there are few perfect foods, such foods as have each in itself all the constituents of a good feeding ration. Of these, grass is one. "An animal can be fattened perfectly on grass if the grass is firm enough, and so succulent at the same time that the animal will take all it should have, and if the season of such pasturage can be sufficiently prolonged."

The man who has high grade yearling cattle need have no fear that money will be lost in feeding them. It pays to keep them growing every hour and always in good flesh and vigorous condition. Such a course of handling is the one that reaches the fancy prices and brings the most profits to the feeder. You can always make a high priced beef out of either a young steer or heifer that has plenty of breeding in it.

Our Vancouver correspondent informs us that a Mr. Thebo, of Seattle, is preparing to send 1,000 head of beef cattle to Dawson City. The first shipment of 500 head left this week and will be driven over the Dalton trail.

Hollister hay owners who refused $23 per ton a few weeks ago have been selling their supply as low as $18 per ton in San Francisco since the rain.

Cattle freight cars are being disinfected at San Luis Obispo, in which live stock are to be shipped East and other points. A shipment of over 100 car loads was made this week by the Newhall Bros. from the Sully Rancho to Omaha. The stock has all been inspected and left with a clean bill of health. Two more train loads will follow.

The feed on the San Julian is holding up better than any point in Santa Barbara county. As a wise precaution, therefore, the proprietors are now removing their great herds of cattle that they may be enabled to carry through some 30,000 sheep and a reasonable amount of young cattle with which to restock hereafter.

Castle & Co. of Hollister, we understand, are about shipping 1,000 head of cattle to Nebraska. Negotiations have been arranged for good pasture at $1.50 per head for the season.

Mr. Ragbetti of Wheatland shipped two car-loads of beef cattle to San Francisco on the 30th inst.

A Mr. Mullins, buyer for Swift & Co., of Chicago was recently in San Benito county seeking to purchase stock cattle. He was negotiating with I. N. Castle for a train-load. Good beef cattle is averaging there $21 per head.

The Castroville Enterprise says: The dry year has been rather hard on the man of small means, but the man of wealth, as usual turns the misfortunes of others to his pecuniary advantage. A case in point is that of Jesse D. Carr, who is purchasing thousands of cattle for little or nothing and sending them to Modoc county, where they will be pastured, and in a short time can be sold at an advance of fully 500 per cent.

Klamath Falls Express says: The county court abolished the office of stock inspector because it wanted to appear to be so very economical—penny wise and pound foolish—and save that $150 a year. Recently 200 head of diseased cattle were driven into Barnes valley, being affected with pink eye, a contagious disease. They may be the source of great injury to the stock interests here.

The Fall River Tidings says: J. F. Bowman, of Glenbun, has been down in Santa Barbara county for the past three weeks where he bought 400 head of cattle. They have been shipped up to Sisson and are now being driven from there to this valley. Among the cattle purchased are 80 head of fat steers which Mr. Bowman bought to enable him to fill his contract for furnishing the Sissons market with beef. The others are thin cattle which will be turned on the range and fattened in time for market next winter. We understand that he paid from $12 to $15 a head for the thin cattle, but did not learn what he paid for the others.

Personal

Leroy Hough, the general manager of the Western Meat Company, returned this week from Chicago. Mr. Hough, left a month since to take a long needed vacation, having been constantly in harness for the last five years. Mr. Hough, has devoted his entire time in bringing the Western Meat Company to a dividend paying corporation and his most sanguine expectations have been realized. The many hundred employees under Mr. Hough's direction warmly hailed back their chief whose presence during his absence was much missed.

DAIRYING.

Thoroughbred vs. Graded Bulls.

A Texas man wrote to the Editor of the Southern Farm Gazette, asking him why he continually recommended the use of registered bulls, when grade animals were so much cheaper and easy to procure. It is, of course, easy to see how little the Texas man understood of the science of breeding. It is the easiest thing in the world for a farmer to be short sighted right here in the interest of a wrong idea of economy. The editor answered him so well, and we print his reply in full. The answer was given in regard to breeding for beef, but the principle is the same whether bred for improvements in beef or milk.

The editor of the Southern Farm Gazette has probably given this matter as much thought as the writer of the above, and, after weighing all the arguments given in favor of the "grade bull," he has no hesitation in saying that he would rather have a "very poor thoroughbred than a good grade" for breeding purposes. When a grade bull is bred to a native cow, the poor blood is in a minority, as it were, and cannot assert itself in perpetuating the good qualities of the pure bred beef animal. The amount of pure blood of the progeny is never more than the sum of that in sire and dam divided by two; hence, improvement is slow when neither parent is a full blood. In fact, the scrub or native blood will assert itself to such an extent that improvement is not only slow, but extremely uncertain.

In breeding, "the old maxim of the half loaf, etc.," won't apply. A (half a) steer that will lose money for its owner and feeder is not better than none at all. No, the Southern Farm Gazette stands unequivocally for the thoroughbred male, in all cases and does not believe that it is doing harm by the advocacy of thoroughbred bulls in preference to grades, that are likely to be scrubs, if not more so. Better a grade than a scrub, but better none at all, unless he is a fairly good thoroughbred. Of course this applies only to males, or animals used for the purpose of improving the herd. Life is too short and competition too sharp, to either try to grade up a herd without a pure-bred male, or feed scrubs when the value of good (well-bred) stock is apparent, and they are so easy to acquire. No neighborhood is so poor that it cannot afford a pure-bred beef bull.

Notes

D. G. Whiting, the well known San Bernardino breeder of Jerseys, has just added a valuable addition to his herd in the way of a thoroughbred bull. He was imported from Philadelphia direct from T. C. Coopers stock farm. He is down in the American Herd Book as "Pedro Prince Primrose" No. 50,714. He is six months of age, and with all the marks of the Jersey, the fawn color, dark nose and ears. His sire was "Pedro Royal Marjoram," No. 28,560, while his dam was "Rioter Lorne Primrose," No. 88,583, and both sire and dam carried away blue ribbons at Chicago in 1893. Stockmen who have seen the new arrival unite in agreeing that he is the best animal which has been brought into Southern California. Mr. Whiting intends to place him at the head of the herd.

An old farmer said once that every cow should be fed and cared for according to what she earns. An Old German who heard him said: "Vell, der cow she understand dot game yoost so vell as you. She gif yoost 'cordin' to what she git."

Victor Piezzi, a prominent dairyman of Santa Rosa, writes as regarding the condition of feed in his locality as follows: "Pasture is not as good as last year. The late rains, however, have done more good to feed than at first was anticipated. Grain looks well and the crops are at this writing undoubtedly promising. Most of the butter made here is disposed of in our local market and brings the same price to the creamery as we could obtain in San Francisco, besides saving freight and commission. Our skim milk is all fed to hogs and calves."

Many farmers think if they only had the money to buy better cows they would then have no trouble in making money. But if the farmers stock is not constantly growing better it shows that is as good as the care it gets. If he had cows that would yield much more than those he has now they would deteriorate until they reached his present standard. Care and feeding of the cow while bearing her young, and persistent milking of her during this period, have as much to do with making the calf a good milker as has the animal's pedigree. Scrub treatment of stock soon reduces it to the condition of scrubs. On the other hand better care of the present stock will increase its capacity for producing milk and butter.

Summer feeding of dairy cows is a subject well worthy of consideration at this time of the year. As a rule, dairymen will do best, in my way of thinking, to have cows come fresh in milk only a few days or weeks before going to grass. The udder is then relieved of its soreness if any, before they are forced to their greatest capacity. A cow fed sufficiently with a balanced ration composed of coarse foods nearly entirely, if not wholly, while dry, then put upon grain and soon going to pasture will reach her limit, then strive to hold her there by succulent feeds, offering such before the pastures begin to show much efforts of close grazing. Watch the yield and make changes by having a little land devoted to some kinds of crops which they will relish. Strive to satisfy by plentifully feeding and the cow suitable for the dairy will very liberally respond.

POULTRY.

Pure Breeds in Poultry.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In your issue of May 21st, in the Poultry Department, we find much of interest and many valuable suggestions, and at the same time some statements which, to persons having actual experience, seem difficult to reconcile with actual facts. In your article under the heading "Why First Crosses are desirable," you say, "When crossing is followed, it is wise to use pure bred birds on both sides. Except in case where one seeks by continual crossing to develop a new fancy or standard breed, what advantage can be obtained from crossing 'pure-bred birds on both sides?' Do you think that by mating a white-faced Black Spanish male bird with Brown Leghorn hens you could obtain either better egg producers or table birds? Would the mating of either the Spanish or Leghorn male bird with Brahma hens produce either better egg producers or table birds? We think not. As a matter of fact, the Spanish and Leghorns are the best of egg producers, both non-setting, and by crossing the two varieties both are depreciated and you get a half-breed which will not lay as well as either of the pure-breds, and will also have the habit of setting, perhaps as much as the common barnyard fowl. By crossing any of the great egg-producing varieties, such as the Spanish, Leghorns, Hamburgs, Polands and Houdans (all non setting) with each other you certainly get an inferior fowl, as in the case of the Spanish and Leghorns. If the cross is made by representatives of any of such fowls with the larger table fowls, such as the Plymouth Rocks, Brahmas or Cochins (all setting varieties), you do not increase the egg-producing quality, but positively get an inferior table bird. With the experience of such results, why should any person ever cross pure-bred fowls? Why should any person enter into the practice of crossing at all—except to mate the pure-bred male with the common fowls for the purpose of breeding up and improving the flock? After all, would it not be better for all persons engaged in the business of raising eggs and fowls for market, to select the pure-bred variety preferred and stick strictly to that, occasionally obtaining new male birds for the purpose of giving new life and vigor to the flock? Do with fowls as you advise with hogs: "Select the breed you prefer and stick to that in breeding up." Your statement in relation to hogs—"Few good results are obtained by cross-breeding"—coincides with my views upon cross-breeding fowls. Stick to the variety which pleases you most, culling out all individuals that fail to come up to the standard, and as you advise in relation to sheep: "Keep the flock uniform," and you will have both more profit and pleasure with your stock.

The Coming Fowl.

For both meat and eggs the Cochin is a most valuable fowl and may be destined in California to supersede the Leghorn and Plymouth, if all we hear about them is correct. They are the ideal fowl for farmers, but little care is bother being necessary to prepare them for market, and above all they are very hardy and will thrive almost anywhere. They are fine layers, their eggs are large and delicately brown shaded and are prolific during the months of October to June. The four varieties of this breed give a selection which will meet the requirements of the most fastidious poultry fancier. The grand, golden buff color of the Buff Cochin, the black sheen with a beetle green effect of the black Cochin, the beautiful pearly white of the white Cochin and the penciled Mahogany brown of the Partridge Cochin gives an array of the most beautiful colors.

A large number of California poultry raisers have been content with the "dung hills" and have never taken the trouble to visit our State Fair, where an opportunity is offered them to learn things about poultry that will set them thinking. To those who have neglected these chances we strongly advise them to give some consideration to the matter, as they will be working to their own interests by following our advice in the premises.

Mr. T. F. McNeir, a leading Cochin expert, writing on the subject for the County Gentleman says:

"The value of a Cochin should be divided into three parts, viz: shape, length and profusion of feather and color. Don't lay too much stress on the color, even to penciling on the Partridge, for remember, a superb penciled pullet is not a Cochin when she lacks size, feather and Cochin form. All Cochins can and should be bred to as good form as the Buffs, but this will never be as long as their admirers ask to be favored in form and size and judges score birds that lack Cochin qualities above the 90 mark.

"Size must be considered next to Cochin form. The Standard weights are eleven pounds for cock, nine pounds for cockerel, eight and one-half pounds for hens and seven pounds for pullet. Only two excuses can be given for under size. It is either poor attention and not enough food, or too close breeding. This can be overcome in a measure by selecting the largest hen to breed from. Hatch the chicks not later than May and push them from the egg to maturity.

"As a general purpose fowl I maintain that the Cochin has no superior; others may decry them, but I have kept a record of their laying qualities from their first egg to the end of a full year, have had pullets, hatched in March, begin to lay in September and lay for three months without exhibiting any signs of setting, have had pullets lay from 135 to 150 eggs from September to May. They must be handled with care to get these results, and if proper care is exercised they will lay more dollars' worth of eggs in a year than any other fowl, the Brahma excepted.

The Cochon family is made more of in the show room than any other class. The Buffs and Whites are given the preference, though there is no reason for this except the color, as the others are fully as useful."

I believe that they are the ideal fowl for California and shall continue to breed them.

Some of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN's readers will no doubt be astonished to learn of the enormous prices paid for cochins. At the last exhibit at the Crystal Palace, London, England, several Cochins, males and females, were catalogued at $1,000 each, and any buyer wanting one of these birds had to pay that sum for it or go without. The breeders and owners of these birds were not millionaires but men who bred and sold chickens for a living. Model, the great Poland China boar sold for $5,100. Hundreds of fine Durhams and Herefords are selling every day from $300 to $5,000. Why then should not thoroughbred poultry bring as much in proportion to their worth in the live stock market. Surely, no one who knows his business would begrudge $10 to $25 for a good Cockrel.

Notes.

Charles Packard of Solano, captured the prize medal on Tuesday for the largest hen's egg so far reported. In that section at least. On that day he brought up to town a Black Langshan hen's egg that measured nine inches around the ends, and seven and a half inches around the middle and weighed strong six ounces, perfectly formed and having a hard shell. The inner egg was surrounded by a yolk and white of the ordinary size.

The grower can usually tell in May by simply lifting a hen whether she is laying or not. If she is heavy, and seems to be putting on fat at this season, it is a pretty sure sign that she is a poor layer.

Tests at the Utah station showed profits one and one-half times greater from April hatched Leghorn pullets than from those hatched in May. This conclusion illustrates the mistakes very commonly made by farmers who wait until May or June before setting their hens and then wonder why they fail to get winter eggs and plenty of them.

A very common question is, "How much shall we feed hens?" The amount varies according to the size of the hens and the time of the year. The only rule is to give them less than they want. Give them about half the soft food that they would like in the morning. Make them scratch for what grain they get during the day, and give them all they want at night.

SHEEP.

Notes.

Phil Steffan of Vallejo has several thousand good sheep grazing along the banks of the Sacramento river. Mr. Steffan is holding these sheep partly for his own trade and an advance market.

Our correspondent informs us that there are about 10,000 sheep left over on the Ventura division and 5,000 on Santa Rosa Island. When these will have been shipped about all the starving stock in that section will have been sent to green fields and pastures new. The Southern Pacific and Union Pacific have secured the moving of these remnants of the flocks and herds of Southern California by making a rate of $170 per double-deck car, which carries nearly 240 sheep or hogs each. Next week sixty-five cars will go in one bunch, which is nearly the whole lot. By arrangement with the Union Pacific the stock may be put off the cars in Wyoming and pastured there for six months or less, and then be reloaded for Kansas City, the one fare paying for transportation to Kansas City, or other Missouri River points.

The Lake County, Oregon, Examiner says: Andrew Nelson, of Nelson & Duborg, Reno, was in from Juniper mountain on the 30th ult., after supplies. He has 3,000 head of sheep out there which he bought last fall.

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is on the lookout for all that may be of interest to breeders of live stock, to farmers, agriculturists, dairymen and poultrymen.

Mr. Dave Seawell, the well known Santa Rosa breeder of thoroughbred Spanish merinos, shipped this week thirty-five head of very choice breeds to San Francisco, where they were transhipped to a Mr. Doyle, an Oregon sheep breeder.

A heavy sale of spring wool, consisting of 700 bales, was effected at Red Bluff on Monday last by Douglas Cone to a San Francisco buyer, John Lee; the price was 14 cents, not as high as was looked for, but fairly satisfactory.

I. H. Brockman of Yuba City shipped several cars of sheep to San Francisco on the 30th ult. They are reported as being in good condition.

Sheep shearing in Mendocino county is now in full swing, and stockmen have put to work all the hands they could find. The fleece is reported as being in first-class condition.

The Merced Board of Supervisors at their meeting last week rescinded the act, enacted two months ago, allowing a bounty of $2.50 on coyote scalps, to take effect June 1, 1898.

E. N. Houghton, writing to the Porterville Enterprise, says: Within the last two weeks there has been from 13,000 to 15,000 sheep driven up the Fraser mill road into the government reservation in direct and willful contempt of law. All these parties, with the exception of C. Brown, are aliens and non residents; they own no land and pay no taxes, and are in every respect an unmitigable curse to the country, worse than the Egyptian plague of locusts. There is now a strip of land as wide as the settlers will permit as destitute of feed as the main road, and every future band of sheep that comes up must either starve or encroach more and more on private property. This will inevitably end in people taking the law in their own hands.

The preference for lambs all over the country has grown so strong that a 75 or 80 pound lamb will bring as much or more than a 100 pound sheep, making it more profitable to the feeder to handle the younger animal.

A writer in the American Sheep Breeder controverts emphatically the popular belief that cows and sheep do not thrive together on the same pasture. He declares he has for more than 30 years run sheep and cows together on one pasture. In the same field he puts 200 sheep and 25 cattle. He says the steers get fat and the cows do fine, while the sheep thrive all the better for having the long grass cut down ahead of them by the cattle. He is careful, however, always to have in his pasture plenty of grass for both. The cows protect the sheep from dogs.

Shearing time is the time to learn the deficiencies in the herd and to cull all the defective sheep. This should be done rigorously, and if pure bred rams are employed in the herd—and there should be no other—every ewe lamb that is not a decided improvement on its dam or on the average of the ewes of the former season should be taken from the herd, so that only the choice will become breeders and the herd may steadily advance in quality and value. It is only by weeding out the inferior animals that the standard of the herd can be improved and uniformity of grade be established and maintained.

In starting into the sheep business, unless you have already had considerable experience in it, don't try to make your start at the top. It is better that your expectancies should be gained with a small flock of fairly well bred sheep, and then if you make mistakes and the bottom gives way you will not have such a hard fall. But use the best rams you can buy. They cannot be too good. You will really learn more about sheep with a small number, and be less liable to blunder than if you had a large, unwieldy flock. It will pay, too, to secure the services of the best herder and sheepmen you can hire. He can teach you much and save you much and you can save money by paying good wages to such a hand. Don't give up at the first blunder. Sheep raising is a good business, none better—but it must be learned—and when learned, you will not have to be persuaded to stick to it.

The Cloverdale Reveille says: The spring clip of wool is already being brought to town for storage; so far several hundred bales have arrived. Mr. E. M. Hiatt's clip consists of forty-five bales. Mr. Hiatt is the largest wool grower in this section and his product this year is considerably larger than last season. The clip generally is exceptionally clean and long fleeces, and the output is considered much ahead of last year.

The Butte City Enterprise says: The largest train-load of stock to be brought to Chico from the southern counties arrived to-day. The train consisted of twenty-one cars, shipped from Someo, Santa Clara county, and the sheep are to be taken to Big Meadows for summer pasture. The animals were crowded into the cars, there being from 130 to 140 in each car. They are very poor and some of them were trampled to death before arriving.

SWINE.

Selection of the Boar.

To the breeder of hogs, the selection of a male is the subject of prime importance and must be the paramount object in order to make a success of the business. It is important not only that the animal selected should be of good pedigree and a good individual, but he should have decided characteristics of his breed and his sex. The breed preferred is preferred because of qualities which the buyer believes are superior to those of other breeds, and therefore he should have an animal that is typical, showing in form, color, etc., all that characterizes the breed chosen. The animal should also have a strong masculine character, proud, alert, vigorous and with an air that indicates nervous force and stamina. Without these his progeny may lack the vitality and physical vigor necessary for the development of strong and early maturity.

Notes.

The Denver Field and Farm, says that many hogs died this year in Colorado and adjoining States from a comparatively new disease called rouget. It is an eruptive disease and said to be more fatal than cholera. After two days of very high fever the skins assumes a vivid red and resembles the human epidemic with the smallpox. The bristles soon fall out and within a few days after the attack the animal dies. One man is mentioned as having lost 60 head by the disease. No treatment is suggested.

Among some females of pure blood or highly bred hogs there are sows not prolific enough to make them profitable as breeders. It is not a fault of any particular breed, for among all of them are found sows that will bring small and others that will bring large litters. The trouble is in the breeding instead of the breed, and in the method of feeding. Many of the pure-bred sows are or have been kept too fat to become brood sows, and this is especially apt to be the condition of sows that are prepared as show animals, and that will sell for a higher price than others of the same breed that would be worth much more to the farmer. Prolificacy is, or by care in breeding may be made, a veritable characteristic. The trouble with those who have been disappointed in buying pedigree animals is that they do not examine enough into the pedigree, or rather do not inform themselves sufficiently as to what they may expect as inherited characteristics essential to the value of the animal they select. It is important that the brood sow bring a large litter of healthy pigs and that she suckle them abundantly. How many buyers inquire as to whether these qualities essential as they are to the value of the animal purchased, were found back in the line of its progenitors and may therefore reasonably be expected as family characteristics of the selected individual? That the animal carries the blood and has the characteristics as to form of an ancestry of show animals and prize winners is assuredly worth very much, but it certainly is as important to know that the dams of the family have been in the habit at each littering of bringing a numerous offspring and caring for them well.

Five hundred and fifty hogs were sold this week by a San Luis Obispo farmer at 50 cents per head. It was a case of root hog or die, and as there was nothing left for the poor animals but the latter, the merciful owner sold them to a San Joaquin buyer at the above figure. This is fair indication of the pastoral condition of that southern end of the State.

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climatic and crop conditions is based upon reports received from nine Weather Bureau Stations, fifty-two telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company and many reports scattered throughout the State received from correspondents in their districts.

Shasta County—Haying in full blast. Rain damaged hay slightly.

Butte County—Favorable for growing grain and many acres intended only for hay will now give a fair yield of plump grain. Orange trees are doing well and still retain a good setting. Olives not setting as well as expected. River about stationary.

Glenn County—Haying about over. Harvesting barley will commence soon. Wheat crop is better than expected.

Yuba County—Crop prospects changed and now fairly abundant yield of grain, hops, and fruit expected. Canning and drying peaches will be short.

Sutter County—Favorable for growing crops. Haying nearly over; most of hay in field. Little damage.

Yolo County—Cool weather with light rains beneficial. Haying still on; crop better than expected. Grain crop light.

Sacramento County—Sufficient rains for irrigating purposes. Steady rain without wind very beneficial. It did not damage the hay crop and came too late to injure strawberries.

Solano County—Rain of Friday will improve all grains and did not hurt hay to any extent; helped the quality of fruit. Shipping Royal Ann cherries. Good yield of vegetables expected. Summer fallow will make 15 sacks per acre; very little winter sown will pay for harvesting.

Placer County—Rain and cool weather have assured a full crop of grain and late hay; some damage to cut hay. Thinning peaches. Grapes and garden truck doing well.

San Joaquin County—Excellent weather for growing grain; in many places will have wheat, considered a failure one month ago. Strawberries about over; onion shipments heavy.

Stanislaus County—Crops still doing well below canal limits. First crop of hay secured; no damage by rain. Grapes promise good yield.

Merced County—Haying progressing slowly on account of cool weather. Grain maturing fast and what there is will be of good quality.

Fresno County—Grapes doing nicely. No damage from Thrips, and crop promises to be large. Pear crop will also be fine. Peaches, small crop but good quality. Cutting alfalfa and wheat hay. Weather favorable for growing grain. Wheat and barley a failure on dry lands but on irrigated lands there will be some grain.

Kings County—Loss of fruit almost total, except Bartlett pears, which will be about one-fourth of a crop. Planting corn and pumpkins extensively on land where other crops failed. Ditches full of water. Vineyards promise large yield.

Tulare County—Shipping hay, and much hay cut. Grapes setting well. Some water in ditches but not enough to do much good.

Kern County—Cool weather helps grain to fill. Second crop of alfalfa ready to cut. Grain hay being harvested.

Lake County—Many farmers hauled in their hay while wet, fearing a heavy rain. Vines and fruit trees are looking fine.

Sonoma County—All crops looking well. Hops making fine growth. Cherries ripening fast. Large crop of prunes.

Napa County—Cherries injured by rain. Good hay and fruit crop; more hay than local demand. Pasture for local use only.

Alameda County—Continued damp, cool weather beneficial to crops; fruit, vines and beets.

Santa Clara County—Large crop of cherries. Haying continues; light crop. Beets and vegetables doing well.

San Mateo County—Picking cherries. Fruit of all kinds small in size. Enough hay for home use and some grain.

Santa Cruz County—Good average crop of hay and grain.

Monterey County—Favorable weather for crops. Considerable hay and a little grain will be grown. Beet fields looking well.

San Luis Obispo County—Bean planting in progress. Fruit doing well. Cattle are being shipped to pasture.

Santa Barbara County—Early or first setting apricots will be a fair crop but second setting probably small. Walnuts set heavy, but yield will demand on weather; lemons fair. No bean planting.

Ventura County—Rain was of greater benefit than at first anticipated. Barley sown on bean land has come out wonderfully and will make grain where a short time ago farmers expected only hay. More hay than anticipated. Apricots of good size.

Los Angeles County—All fruits doing finely except almonds and prunes. Big crop of apricots and peaches. Deciduous fruits and hay better than expected. Corn looks well. New crop of oranges looking well, especially navals which promise big yield.

San Bernardino County—Continued cool weather helping grain and fruit. Peaches better than expected.

Orange County—Orange crop very promising. Good crop of peaches and apricots. More hay than expected. Some grain.

Riverside County—Enough hay and grain to carry stock through. Some grain being cut in back country but yield is of little consequence.

San Diego County—Cooler and partly cloudy. All fruit growing well. Peaches were not thinned dropping some. Apricots better than expected; fruit large.

Eureka Summary—Weather favorable. Soil generally in fine condition. Crops making rapid growth; small fruits especially will be abundant. In some cases hay crop promises to be unusually heavy.

Los Angeles Summary—Effect of cool weather fully appreciable on orchards and growing crops; trees leafing; grain fields supposed to be dead turning green but not likely to make hay.

THE MARKETS.

Reports of Butchertown, Western Meat Company Refrigerated Meats, Local Wool, Hides, Tallow, Butter and Cheese, and Eastern Cattle Markets by Telegraph.

EASTERN LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

CHICAGO, June 3.—The supply of Cattle today was so limited that prices averaged higher. Dressed Beef Steers $1.00; choice Steers, $1.05; medium, $1.00; Stockers and feeders, $1.00; Cows and Heifers, $1.00; calves, $1.00; Texas Steers, $1.00.

There is an active demand for Hogs, and weak, light receipts. Prices moved a trifle higher. Fair to choice, $1.00; packers, $1.05; light, $1.10; mixed, $1.15; heavy, $1.20; hogs, $1.25; pigs, $1.30.

The demand for Sheep was active, and prices advanced. Common to choice Sheep, $1.00; Western Sheep, $1.05; Rams, $1.25; Texas Sheep, $1.30; clipped Lambs, $1.50; woolled Lambs, $1.60; Spring Lambs, $1.70.

Receipts—Cattle, 11,500; Hogs, 21,000; Sheep, 14,000.

SOUTH OMAHA, June 3.—Cattle—Receipts, 7,700. Market $1.00 higher. Native Beef Steers, $1.00; Western Steers, $1.05; Cows and Heifers, $1.00; Stockers and Feeders, $1.00; Bulls and Stags, $1.20.

HOGS—Receipts, 5,600. Market $1.00 higher. Heavy, $1.20; light, $1.10; mixed, $1.15; choice, $1.25; packers, $1.10; do, Westerns, $1.30; Lambs, $1.25.

KANSAS CITY, June 3.—Cattle—Receipts, 6,000. Market steady to strong. Native Steers, $1.00; native Cows and Heifers, $1.00; Stockers and feeders, $1.00; Bulls, $1.20; Hogs, $1.25; mixed, $1.15; light, $1.10; heavy, $1.20; packers, $1.10; do, Westerns, $1.30; Lambs, $1.25.

DENVER, June 3.—Cattle—Receipts, 2,000. Market steady. Beef Steers, $1.00; Cows, $1.00; feeders, freight paid to river, $1.40; packers, freight paid, $1.50; Bulls, Stags, etc., $1.25.

HOGS—Receipts 10,000. Market strong. Light packers, $1.20; mixed, $1.15; heavy, $1.20.

SHEEP—Receipts none. Market unchanged.

BUTCHERTOWN.

The market during the week has been fairly well supplied with all grades of live stock and prices have a tendency toward hardening. There is a good demand for choice handy steers, of which the market has been noticeably bare this week, and prices for this grade readily bring our full outside quotations.

CALVES—Are slightly advanced under a good demand with light receipts.

MUTTON—Sheep—Wethers and ewes are in plentiful supply and the market has shown no signs of firmness throughout the week and figures are a good indication of transactions.

LAMB—Owing to the poor quality of the supply on hand, lambs are somewhat neglected, and in consequence prices are anything but firm.

HOGS are in good demand, and all desirable stock readily brings full figures, as quoted. The market is not oversupplied, but only good hard fed stock will bring good returns to the farmer.

STEERS—First quality, very choice, $1.00; Steers, No. 1, $1.00; Steers, No. 2, $1.00; Steers, No. 3, $1.00; Extra Choice Cows and Heifers $1.00; Good to Fair, $1.00; Bulls, stags and old Cows, $1.00; Calves, choice range, large, $1.00; Dairy, $1.00; Wethers, first quality, $1.00; Wethers, second quality, $1.00; Ewes, first quality, $1.00; Ewes, second quality, $1.00; Lamb, yearlings, $1.00; Lamb (this Spring), $1.00; Hogs, dressed hard, $1.00; Hogs, live, hard, medium, $1.00; Hogs, live, hard, heavy, $1.00.

REFRIGERATED DRESSED MEATS.

The volume of business in refrigerated dressed meats during the past month has been exceptionally good. From figures just at hand we find that over 2,000 head of cattle have been slaughtered, making a weekly average of over 750 head. There is an absence at the company's yards at Baden, of choice light steers, animals that will dress from 550 lbs. to 625 lbs. Prices are improving and are working upwards. Calves are coming in fairly plentiful and are slightly advanced this week.

MUTTON—Arrivals of sheep are fully equal to the demand and the market is steady a quotation.

LAMB—The demand is not over good for spring lamb, the quality now coming to market being scrappy and poor. Prices are governed in proportion.

HOGS are firm, and good, medium hard grain stock are bringing full figures at the Company's yards.

Beef carcasses, prime, $1.00; beef carcasses, second quality, $1.00; No. 1, Cows and Heifers, $1.00; No. 2 Cows and Heifers, $1.00; Mutton, Wethers, carcasses, $1.00; Mutton, Wethers, carcasses, No. 2, $1.00; Mutton, Ewes, carcasses, No. 1, $1.00; Mutton, Ewes, carcasses, No. 2, $1.00; Lamb (this year's Spring) $1.00; Veal, light, $1.00; Veal, heavy, $1.00; Pork, carcasses, $1.00.

HIDES AND SKINS.

The hide market throughout the week has shown considerable activity, especially for light and medium hides for harness, which are held very firm. The Eastern market is reported as being strong, with an upward tendency. Dealers are paying our advanced figures for all desirable skins.

WET SALTED HIDES—Heavy Steers, over 65 lbs, $1.00; culls, $1.00; Medium, 45 to 65 lbs, $1.00; culls, $1.00; Light Steer, under 45 lbs, $1.00; culls, $1.00; Heavy Cows, over 50 lbs, $1.00; culls, $1.00; Light Cows, 30 to 50 lbs, $1.00; culls, $1.00; Stags, $1.00; culls, $1.00; Kips, $1.00; culls, $1.00; Veal, $1.00; culls, $1.00; Dry Hides, 16 to 18 c, culls, $1.00; Dry Kip and Veal, 16c. culls, 13c; Dry Calf, 18c, culls, 14c. Horses' Hides, large prime, $2.50 each; medium, $2.00; small $1.50.

TAILS—Large size 35 cents per dozen.

WOOL REPORT.

The local wool market continues to drag along uneventful and particularly slow; no sales of Spring clip to amount to anything have so far been made and dealers appear to be waiting on one another to see who will speak first. No prices have so far been established and the condition of the market is decidedly a "waiting one." A dispatch from Boston, under date June 3d, in response to the condition of the market there says: "The situation is dominated by the West. Growers and dealers are now at loggerheads over the new clip, and while they are fighting it out Wool is being shipped here on consignment. Wool is held very firmly in the West, but there are not a few buyers who expect to see Western holders weaken in their prices eventually and they are deferring action in anticipation of this. The sales of the week in Western amount to 1,640,000 pounds domestic and 164,000 pounds foreign, making a total of 2,155,000, against 2,400,000 for the previous week and 4,782,000 for the corresponding week last year. Sales since January 1, 1898, amount to 30,481,310 pounds against 21,147,286 last year.

CALIFORNIA FALL CLIP—Plains, $1.00; Mountains, $1.00; Northern, $1.00; and Northern defective $1.00; Mendocino and Humboldt, $1.00.

NEVADA SPRING—Light and choice, $1.00; Eastern poor, $1.00; Valley choice, $1.00; Valley low grade, $1.00.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

BUTTER—The local butter market throughout the week has been tapewary and prices have ruled from a half to a cent less than last reported. Supplies of creamery have been largely in excess of the demand, and at the close of the week a large quantity remained unsold in the hands of commission men. Our outside quotations are extreme for the general run of offerings, although some dealers report getting far extra special brands a shade above our quotation. Dairy butter has sold slowly, though prices have been fairly sustained. We quote: Creamery extras per lb, 19c; firsts, 19c; seconds, 18c; Dairies select, 18c; seconds, 17c; Dairies soft and weedy, 16c; Mixed store, 16c; Creamery in tubs, 19c; Pickled roll, 16c; Dairy in tubs, 16c; Firkin, Cal. choice to select, 19c; Firkin, common to fair, 17c.

CHEESE—The Cheese market has somewhat revived from the lethargy it underwent last week. A better tone is noticeable with a stronger demand. We quote: California per lb, Cheddars, 10c; Flats, mild, new, 8c; fair to good, 8c; Young American, 10c; Eastern, New York Cream Cheddars and Flats 1c; Western, 11c; 12c.

EGGS—Very little change has taken place as regards values since our last report. California store eggs have declined half a cent and Eastern advanced in proportion. Ranch are steady in good demand and are readily bringing our figures. We quote: California Ranch, 15c; California Store, 14c; Eastern, 14c; Duck eggs, 16c.

POULTRY this week has materially stiffened up in price under an excellent demand with short supplies. This is no assurance that our present quotations will be maintained, the only way that poultry men can be assured of a favorable market is by using discretion in shipping their products. This is the only way that steady prices can be kept up and satisfactory results obtained.

We quote: Old Roosters, per doz, $3.50; young, $7.50; Fryers, $5.50; Broilers, large, $4.50; small, $2.50; Hens, $3.50; Ducks, old, doz, $3.25; young, $3.50; Turkeys, live, Hens, per lb, 11c; Gobblers, 11c; dressed, per lb, 14c; Geese, pair, $1.25; Geese, single, $1.25; Pigeons, young, $1.25; old, $1.25; Eastern Poultry—Old Roosters, per doz, $1.75; Hens, $5.50; Fryers, $5.50; Broilers, $4.50; Young Roosters, $4.50; Ducks, $4; Turkeys, per lb, 12c; Geese, pair, $1.

THERE will be plenty of racing in California before November 1, 1898. Last Tuesday Secretary Milroy, of the California Jockey Club, announced that the California Jockey Club would give a two-weeks' meeting at Sacramento, beginning September 19th. This will follow the State Fair meeting, consequently Sacramento will have a month's racing in September. On Wednesday last the California Jockey Club decided to give two weeks' racing at the conclusion of the regular Los Angeles Fair Association meeting. The Fair meeting, beginning October 5th, lasts ten days. This will make twenty-two days of racing in Los Angeles next October, running it close to the opening in San Francisco, November 1, 1898.

MR. DAMMIER, Secretary of the Portland, Or., Racing Association says that he will race under the American Trotting Association and has applied for membership. He wishes to say to the horsemen that the rule pertaining to wearing colors will be strictly enforced, and that no rider or driver be allowed to ride or drive in a race without distinctive colors. This will be done for the benefit of the public who are not familiar with the horses and rely on the program to distinguish one horse from another.

THE Portland, Or., Racing Association has decided to offer four stakes of $1,000 each for harness events and four stakes of $600 for runners, to be contested for at their fall meeting in September. The classes will be decided on, and the stakes will be advertised at an early day. It is the intention of the management to make a low nomination fee for these stakes and if they are liberally patronized, they will be a feature of future racing in Portland.

SIR ANDREW, Ed Corrigan's gelding by imp. St. Andrew—Gypsy, won the Street Railway Steeplechase at Toronto May 28th with 147 lbs. up, distance two and a half miles.

LOS ANGELES IN LINE

The Sixth District Agricultural Association of Los Angeles opens to the world the following five fixed events for the great ten days' meeting beginning OCTOBER 5, 1898.

	Purse.		Purse.
No. 1—Trotting, 2:12 Class .....	$1,000	No. 4—Pacing, 2:12 Class .....	$1,000
No. 2—Trotting, 2:17 Class .....	1,000	No. 5—Pacing, 2:25 Class .....	1,000
No. 3—Trotting, 2:27 Class .....	1,000

ENTRIES CLOSE JUNE 25, 1898.

In order to make the coming Los Angeles meeting the most successful ever held in the West it has been decided to only charge three per cent. entrance for the above fixed events, but five per cent additional is to be deducted from money-winners. In a nutshell, it only costs thirty dollars to trot or pace in any one of the events.

Los Angeles Will Announce a Complete Harness Program in July.

CONDITIONS

American Association rules to govern. Mile heats, three in five to harness. Entrance fee three per cent., with five per cent additional from money-winners. Entries close on June 25th, and records made that day will not constitute a bar.

Study of Heredity on the Trotting Horse Record Basis.

The English statistician and biologist, Francis Galton, contributes to the Revue Scientifique (Paris, March 5th) a preliminary study of the speed-records of American trotting horses, which he thinks offer a particularly attractive and promising field for students of heredity. A translation from the French appears in the Literary Digest, May number. Prof. Galton claims there is nowhere in the world such a collection of valuable facts bearing on the subject of heredity of such force and value as that made by the trotting horse in the United States. First, let us quote a paragraph from Prof. Galton's valuable opinions:

"It is strange that, notwithstanding the large sums spent on the training of horses, catle and other animals, there has never been made systematic publication of authentic facts on this subject, so arranged as to allow of a scientific investigation into their bearings on the laws of heredity. Almost the sole exception to this indifference on the part of breeders and owners to the importance of exact measurements exists in the United States, where the speed of trotters and pacers has long been under definite conditions."

From the recorded race records of trotting horses in the United States, running through a period of twenty-five years, Prof. Galton proceeds to estimate the force and value of inherited speed, and also to measure the velocity of inherited speed upon the offspring. For instance, suppose that one ancestor of a certain horse had a record of 2:30, and that another ancestor of the same degree had one of 2:10, how shall we estimate their respective influences? Should their combined influence be the same on the average as that of two horses having each a record of 2:20, or should it be different?

Prof. Galton's conclusion is that it is a safe rule to take the average. Before writing his essay, Prof. Galton took up the records and speed inheritance of 5,705 horses with fast records, all made from 1892 to 1896. He finds that these records prove that speed is a true inheritance, that in a great majority of cases can be depended upon with reasonable certainty to reproduce itself, and make speed breeding a thoroughly scientific achievement. —American Sportsman.

An Advance in Values.

Whatever may be said of the advance in prices, there is no denying the fact that the recent sale at Cleveland proved conclusively that speed is at a high premium. Star Pointer, a little over two years ago, brought $5,500, and he had already proved himself a great race horse, one that was generally considered the peer of any in America. Now we see a stallion bring $7,800 that has little besides a fast trial to commend him. True he must be a very fast horse, for his well authenticated trial of 2:06½ proved that; but that he is as great as Star Pointer was when sold is yet to be proven. He won one race last season in good time, to be sure, but he was beaten in every other start he made, and had it not been for his somewhat phenomenal trial late in the season he would not have attracted much attention. This is said with no view to disparage Betonica, but merely to show how much more value is put upon speed, or rather how much more interest is being shown in fast horses, than was the case two years ago.

The price brought by Betonica would not have seemed extraordinary five or six years ago, but since the depression they have not been very prevalent. It all goes to show that affairs on the trotting turf are getting back to a healthy condition. That a man will pay $7,800 for a pacer and $4,700 for a two-year-old speaks volumes for the future. The earning capacity of a colt like Idolita is, of course, enormous, should he prove himself to be a race horse, as his speed is of a high order and his engagements numerous and rich. Palo Alto, in the height of its fame during the life of Senator Stanford, could not have found a much better average than the one obtained at the recent Cleveland sale. Mr. Jones is to be congratulated on his fearlessness in buying, and it is to be hoped that he is to be congratulated on the quality of the horses he bought.

It will be interesting to watch the meeting between Betonica and Searchlight this season, and although both were great three year-olds, the latter accomplished much more than the Palo Alto horse, as he was invariably victorious, while the son of Azmoor did not come to his best form until late in the season.

The summer of 1898 promises to be a brilliant one for the trotting turf, as on all sides reports come of sensational youngsters and matured horses of great ability —American Stock Farm.

Benefiting by Advertisements.

Every business man ought to read the advertisements in his trade journal, and read them carefully, with the view of not missing any useful hint. The advertisements contain little fragments of knowledge that are of business value, or else they point out the means of acquiring useful information by corresponding with the advertisers, or sending for catalogues. No business man can afford to neglect the study of the advertising columns. It is true that this requires some time, and it is also true that every "novelty" advertised is not particularly new, and that every "improvement" is not a genuine advance. Inventors and manufacturers are often too enthusiastic in their valuation of their own efforts; that is human nature. But it pays to investigate the claims, and separate the wheat from the chaff. And, aside from the novelties and improvements, the advertising columns contain other profitable information. Judiciously studied, they are as useful as bills of fare to diners at restaurants; as maps and charts to marines, soldiers, bicyclists, and travelers in general; as directories to strangers in cities. They are fields that yield abundant knowledge which can be exchanged for money. —Harness Review.

BECOME A MAN

This will interest those who have doctored with "medical companies" and "free prescription" fakes and electric belts, until they are thoroughly disgusted. I am a well known physician of Chicago and have made nervous disorders and all diseases peculiar to men a special study for 20 years. I have a remedy that will do wonders in a few days, but with patience and the correct use of my treatment I will guarantee to MAKE A MAN OF YOU IN TIME. For a short time I will send a full month's treatment of my "NERVE-SEEDS" with some valuable instructions, for $1.00, or 6 boxes (a full course) for $5.00. I HAVE CURED THOUSANDS AND CAN CURE YOU. If suffering from a chronic disease of any nature write me in confidence at once. All medicines sent in plain wrappers. DOCTOR GRAHAM, 114 Dearborn St., Room 1109, Chicago, Ill.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 63,816.

Susie M. Lewiston, plaintiff vs. Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, send greeting to Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's failure to provide for more than two years last past for plaintiff the common necessities of life, said failure to so provide being caused by the idleness of defendant. Plaintiff also asks for the custody of the minor child, the issue of the marriage, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 14th day of April, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety eight.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

Alameda, at $100 the Season.

(WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGES.)

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities, in having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a pacing-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electioneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Prince. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONT'S.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

NOTE—Beside Rankin, by Altamont, sold November, 1897, brought the highest price obtained for a harness horse at public auction in California during the year. Address

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any reliance for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."

Mt. McGregor II. has had few superiors as a race horse—at least as far as this Coast is concerned. He did not start winning until he was three years of age, but made up for lost time by capturing thirteen races in 1896 in the very best of company. As a four-year-old he had won two races up to the time he went amiss, which was January 23, 1897. Following are his best performances:

Five and one-half furlongs in 1:07½, 96 pounds, over Ingleside track, as a three-year-old.

Six furlongs in 1:13½, 97 pounds, Bay District track, as a three-year-old.

Six and one-half furlongs in 1:22½, 112 pounds, Ingleside track (then slow), as a three-year-old.

Seven furlongs in 1:28½, 93 pounds, Ingleside track, as a three-year-old.

Seven and one-half furlongs in 1:34½, 109 pounds, beaten a head by Yankee Doodle, same age (3), with 99 pounds, Oakland track.

One mile in 1:39½, 105 lbs. as a four-year-old, beaten half a length by Buckwa, 6, 100 lbs., over Oakland track.

One mile in 1:40½, 102 lbs., Oakland track.

One mile and a sixteenth in 1:47½, 109 lbs., Oakland track.

To show the caliber of Mt. McGregor II. it is only necessary to mention that he defeated, amongst others, such real "clinkers" as Ruinart, David, Wheel of Fortune, Lucky Dog, Lobengula, Sir Play, Rey del Bandidos, Grady, McLight, Yankee Doodle, St. Lee, Flashlight, Schiller, Charreusse II and Captive.

We predict a great career at the stud for Mt. McGregor if, as stated before, he is mated judiciously.

Australasian Notes.

In the A. J. C. Plate, three miles, 500 sovereigns added, Amberite, by Carbine (son of Musket) won, Mirella, by Nordenfeldt (son of Musket), second, and Ronda, by Trenton (son of Musket), third. Amberite ran the last mile in 1:40½, the three miles in 5:39, showing that the first two miles were gone at little better than an exercise gallop.

Sinner, by Foulshot (now owned by Barney Schreiber), won the Handicap Hurdle Race, one and one-half miles at the Egmont (N. Z.) meeting May 4th, and on the following day captured the Second Handicap Hurdle race, same distance, with 153 lbs. up.

A cable from Sydney says: Mr. Sam Hordern has decided to relinquish racing, and, with the exception of a number of fillies intended for stud purposes, all his horses in training will be auctioned on the 2d instant. It is understood that he will still carry on his stud farm.

Australian Peer has been sold to go to America and no doubt he will soon see the land of the Stars and Stripes if he does not get foul of a Spanish gunboat. Although unquestionably he was a great race horse, he has not been a success at the stud. So far, Nobleman is the best of his progeny.—New Zealand Sporting Review.

The Dunedin Cup winner, Starshot, has been sold by Mr Reay to Mr. M. Hobbs, and the filly was on Thursday transferred to the Racecourse Hotel stables. The purchase price was 350gs.

According to cable advice the racehorse Survivor, lately owned by Mr. W. Kelso, has been purchased in England by Lady Meux for 2000gs. A more than half brother was sold at the yearling sales recently for 135gs, and may be considered a bargain.

The sale of the Duckenfield Park stud was conducted April 20th, at the homestead by Mrs. H. Chisholm and Co. There was a large attendance, but prices were not very high. The stallions went cheaply, Mr. T. Lamond securing Russley for a South Coast breeder for 195 guineas, and Mr. John Eales The Australian Peer for 120 guineas, while New Holland was sold to Mr. W. Foote for 15 guineas. The 37 brood mares realized 3,086 guineas, or an average of 73 1/3 guineas, the principal buyer being New South Wales residents. Trifler (Grandmaster—Frisolous) was bought by Mr J. A. Campbell for 50 guineas; Queen of Denmark (Grand-master—Ophelia), Mr. T. Lamond, 55 guineas; Fine Lady (Darebin—Fine Lady), Mr. Jas. Thompson, 85 guineas; Hamamelis (Grandmaster—Hazeley Lea), Mr. John Thompson, 100 guineas; First Love (Vespasian—First Lady) Mr. T. Lamond, 150 guineas; Red and Black, imp. (Exminster—Wildfire), Mr. J. McDonald 205 guineas; Goldmine (Grandmaster—Crystal) Mr. Foy, 155 guineas; Paradox, Mr. T. Lamond, 115 guineas; Naomi (Henchman—Wildfire), Mr. J. McDonald, 240 guineas; Absolution (The Australian Peer—Penitent), Mr. George Woods, 75 guineas; Chrysophrase (Rapid Bay—Chrysolite), with filly foal at foot, by Russley, Mr. A. Thompson, 60 guineas; Crown Jewel (Henchman—Queen's Head) with foal at foot by Russley, Mr. T. Lamond 85 guineas; Gonarlee (Gemma di Vergy—The Fly filly), with foal at foot by The Australian Peer, Mr. J. A. Campbell, 50 guineas; Scorch Mary, (Clan Stuart—Ave Maria) with a colt foal at foot by Russley, Mr. T. Payten, 75 guineas; Solstico (Grandmaster—Sunray), with colt foal at foot by The Australian Peer, Mr. James Thompson, 85 guineas; Kearro (Grandmaster—Cameo), with colt foal at foot by Russley, Messrs. J. Leeds and Co., 55 guineas; Colous (Grandmaster—Red and Black), with colt at foot, Mr. F. Foy, 85 guineas; Legacy (Epigram—Legend), with colt at foot by Russley, Mr. T. Lamond, 75 guineas; Crystal (Mari-byrnoog—Chrysolite), with filly foal at foot by Rueley, Mr. T. Lamond, 102 guineas; Wildfire imp. (Wild Oats—Dynamite), with colt foal at foot by Medallion, Mr. J. McDonald, 350 guineas.

A total of £12,728 was distributed in stake money at the recent A. J. C. meeting. Mr. R. J. Blacklock, owner of Merloolas, heads the list with £2,670, of which £2,060 represented the Sydney Cup victory of the Queenslander. Mr. W. Duggan's cheque for Amberite's wins amounts to £1,597, and Syerle's win in the Doncaster Handicap represented a cheque of £1,465 to Mr. H. Oxenham. With his select team Mr. W. R. Wilson won £1,114.

Gunbearer (Nordenfeldt—Hebe) goes to West Australia, P. Bolger having purchased him, the price reported being 300 guineas, says the Referee, of Sydney. Gunbearer has not done much racing, but what he has suggests that he is the making of a good horse, and next season he will probably do his owner many a good turn.

Pilatus (Chester—Etna) dropped dead at Flemington recently. As a yearling he cost Mr. W. Wilson 1000gs, but he was not a good investment, only winning two races in that gentleman's colors, namely, a Trial Stakes at Williamstown, and the High-Weight Handicap at Randwick last autumn. He also ran third in Maluma's Newmarket Handicap. Pilatus was a brother to Stromboli, sire of Banewor, &c.

The crack Queensland two year-old, Coronation, by Little Bernie (son of Cheviot), from Trentrose, by Trenton, was shipped to England in the same steamer as Aurum.

On April 13th the autumn sales of yearlings were continued at T. Payten's Newmarket stables, Lower Randwick, Messrs. H. Chisholm & Co. submitting the lots from Oakleigh, Woolgorang, Kirkham, Clydesdale, Duckenfield Park, Turee, Wilton Park, Merton and Nandillyan Heights. The prices realized were satisfactory, although nothing reached four figures. The highest-priced youngster during the afternoon was a brother to Toreador, for whom Mr. G. Hordern gave 400 guineas. The same buyer also paid 340 guineas for a colt by Grandmaster from First Love and 305 guineas for a filly by Gossoon from Cinnamon. A colt by Lochiel, from Dona went to Mr. T. Head at 300 guineas, and the next highest price was 240 guineas for a colt by Splendor, from Ellerdale, Mr. R. Craven being the purchaser.

St. Swithin was well represented on Monday, as in addition to Merloolas winning at Randwick, Gnullo won the Onkaparinga Cup. Gnullo was recently purchased by Mr. John Crozier from Mr. R. Howie for 300 guineas.—Sydney Referee.

Frisco won the high jump at the Agricultural show, Sydney, doing 6ft 2in. Castlebar secured the Hunters' Plate.

Bobadil stood out from the other two-year-olds at the recent meeting, and Mr. W. R. Wilson is lucky in possessing a colt who promises to equal, if not surpass, Aurum's three-year-old deeds. When Bobadil swerved in some of his Melbourne races it was attributed by many to want of gameiness, but there was nothing faint-hearted about the way in which he struggled home in the All-aged Stakes last week, after being hustled along for all he was worth over the last three furlongs. He will be a strong winter favorite for the V. R. C. Derby, and is already backed for Derby and Cup doubles. Luckily for some of our owners, he is not engaged in the A. J. C. Derby, though he figures in the Leger.—Sydney Referee

At the recent A. J. C. meeting the most successful sires were Carbine and Gozo, with three winners each, while next to these two come The Tester, Bill of Portland, St. Swithin, and Lochiel, whose representatives credited them with a couple of winners each. Other sires represented by one winner were Battalious, The Dauphin, Antæus, Hilltop, Sweet William, Metal, Nordenfeldt, Vanguard, Clan Stuart and Splendor.

From Perth comes news of the death of the stallion Iscomy, who was by Winterlake from Ruby, and was bred in 1882. He was a brilliant horse when on the turf, included in his wins being the Caulfield Stakes (when Malua, The Nun, Grace Darling and Sheet Anchor were amongst those which finished behind him), Moonee Valley Cup and Melbourne Stakes, the latter race after a dead heat with Boolka. Consequent on his Melbourne Stakes form, he was backed down to 6 to 1 for the Melbourne Cup at the same meeting, but was one of the last to get home, though owing to the colors he carried being very similar to those of Arsenal, some of his backers flattered themselves they had landed their money, but were undeceived when the numbers went up.

On Monday last the Onkaparinga Racing Club had glorious weather for their annual meeting at Oakbank. There was a large attendance, as there must have been 16,000 people who saw the Steeplechase decided. The Totalizator was splendidly patronized, £21,435 going through the machine. Although falling short by £400 of the total received last year, the amount is a very good one. Mr. John Crozier, who was fortunate enough to carry off three events during the afternoon, has promised a £25 trophy to the rider of the Amateur Steeplechase next year.—Adelaide Cor. Sydney Referee.

It is reported that Essex, who was recently purchased by a West Australian sportsman, has again changed hands, and is now the property of Mr. W. R. Wilson. If such is the case, that gentleman will, after all, have an excellent A. J. C. Derby representative, as Boabdil unfortunately is not engaged in that race.

A number of pretty good horses have changed hands since the A. J. C. meeting opened, some by public auction and others privately. Essex is to go to West Australia, Cherry and Fassifern to Melbourne, and Jack Hanwell (the hurdleracer) to Brisbane. Cherry and Fassifern are probably destined for India ultimately, but meanwhile might pick up a race or two about Melbourne. Gunbearer has been sold to a racing man at Perth, and the New Zealand Vedette found a new owner in Mr. R. McKenna, who generally buys for India. Vedette's price was 500gs, and 450gs was paid for Essex. On Monday Mr. T. S. Clibborn got an offer of 400gs for Loch Marie, but she will not change hands. Messrs. Chisholm & Co. held a very well attended sale at Randwick on Monday, when, among others, the Cup winner, Merloolas, was offered. There was a genuine offer of 1,400gs to begin with, and after the bidding had reached 1,800gs the gelding was passed in. I hear that £2,000 was wanted, but if so Merloolas is likely to remain in his present ownership. The Chief, who won one race, and narrowly escaped winning another, was bought on behalf of a well-known local sportsman for 700gs, and will go into the Warwick Farm stable. Hempie, Nor-East and others were passed in, but it was made clear at the sale that there were buyers for anything high-class. The price paid for Survivor, when he was sold by Mr. W. Kelso, was, it turns out, 900gs. After bearing the expenses of shipping him to England Mr. W. T. Jones has sold him for 2,000gs. The cable informs us that the Lochiel gelding's new owner is Lady Meux, who is the wife of a wealthy English brewer. Australian horses of good class are finding great favor in England, and if Newhaven and others now in training there should command success this season, every good horse that proves his quality and is sound will be sure of a good buyer.—Sydney Referee.

"Better than Aurum" was the general opinion concerning Bobadil after the latter's Champagne Stakes victory, and certainly his performance was one of the most remarkable ever seen at Randwick, as he beat an excellent field in a canter by eight lengths, and ran six furlongs in 1 min 13½ sec with 9 st 6 lb on his back. It surprised a good many people on this side when he ran Amiable to a standstill at the end of five furlongs in the All-aged Stakes at the V. R. C. Meeting, but his display on Monday caused even greater astonishment, and although New Haven and Aurum were exceptionally smart two-year-olds, this descendant of St. Simon surpasses even those two colts. There is no certainty as to how Bobadil would have fared had he remained in the Doncaster, but that he would have given that race a great shaking there can be no doubt.

Yesterday afternoon (April 12) at Randwick racecourse, Mr. T. S. Clibborn (with Mr. George Rowe as sale secretary) commenced the usual yearling sales, says the Sydney Referee. There was a large attendance of Colonial and Inter-colonial racing men, but competition was far from keen, and there was a difficulty in securing 100 gs for animals which a few years ago would have easily brought 1000 gs. It rained at the outset, too, which served to damp the proceedings. However, the auctioneer got through the catalogue, having sold almost every lot, though often at prices ruinous to breeders. Taken altogether, the catalogue was a superior one, the scrubbers being left at home in view of the experience of late years. Buyers as a rule are very fanciful, and only go for the families which have got recent winners. There was only one Lochiel, a rough specimen, but because of the sire's record he fetched more than double what several much finer looking and more promising youngsters realized.

Saddle Notes.

GEORGE ROSE is booking at Chicago.

STARTER FERGUSON is visiting his farm in Kentucky.

J. E. MADDEN reports the death of the two-year-old chestnut colt Artisan, by Spendthrift, dam imp. Gold Coil.

J. M. CAPPS and Quincey Anderson left for Montana, June 2d, with Ricardo, Rapido, Lolo and a few others.

HUESTON, the champion pilot of timber toppers here last winter, rode Red Pat, the Californian, to easy victory at Hamilton, Ont., June 3d.

WHEEL OF FORTUNE, Stepabout, Fashion Plate, Plan, Roulette Wheel and several two-year-olds belonging to Joe Harvey are turned out at Ruinat Stock Farm.

THE first starter of the Burns & Waterhouse string at Harlem was First Tenor—last Wednesday. The colt did not appear at either Ingleside or Oakland last spring.

JOCKEY J. MORGAN has been engaged to ride for Marcus Daly for a term of six months, beginning June 20th. He will start for Montana within a few days.—Racing Form.

BARON DE ROTHSCHILD, on account of his victory in a race for the Grand Prix de Paris with Le Roi Soleil at Longchamps June 6th, has given his winnings, 200,000 francs, to the poor of Paris.

ABOUT the first thing Dr. Eichberg did after he had been added to the Fleischman string at high cost was to develop a case of partial paralysis of the loins. He is now under treatment and is expected to recover shortly.

DR. H. E. ROWELL's great horse Satsuma in crossing a bridge at Chicago the other day, injured a leg, and is laid up for repairs, while most of the other members of the string are, according to Daily Racing Form, suffering from sore mouths.

THREE of the progeny of Order won stakes races for their fortunate owners week before last, Ornament taking in the Brooklyn Handicap, Ornamental the Gaiety Stakes at Morris Park and Orderlette the Sapphire Stakes at Oakley.—Racing Form.

DAMIEN has been sold to Sydney Paget, subject to Dr. Sheppard's examination as to soundness. The intention is to school and race him over hurdles. Should he take kindly to the game, he has got speed enough to hold his own with the best in training over the sticks.

GREATLAND, the speedy brother of Marsian, Roslyn, etc., of which great things were expected at the outset of the season, has been very sick at Lexington since the close of the Louisville meeting. Reports from Lexington are to the effect that he is now rounding to again.

ED CORRIGAN and his former trainer, Howard Williams, have "split up." Mr. Corrigan, it is said, will himself train the three which he has here. Williams will devote his entire time and attention to four or five which he himself has, including Bon Jour.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

AT the first day's racing of the Manchester (England) Whitsuntide, June 1st, Lord Dunraven's black colt, Desmond, by St. Simon out of L'Abbesse de Jouarre, won the Summer Breeders' Foal Plate of 1,000 sovereigns for two-year-old colts. Five horses ran. The distance was five furlongs.

MR. GEORGE H. WHITNEY, who recently sold Heliobas for $10,000, also owns his sire dam, both of which are now at his Melrose Stud. Heliobas gets his name from a character in one of Marie Corelli's works. He was a Greek nobleman, noted for his beauty. Heliobas was coughing, and for that reason did not start in the Emerald Stakes.

THE redoubtable handicap horse, Ben Brush, arrived at Castleton on Monday, where he will be retired to the stud, as it is extremely doubtful that he will ever face the starter again. On the day of his arrival Ben Brush weighed 995 pounds, and measured 15:1½ inches. He weighed 50 pounds more than Handspring, who measured 16:2.—The Thoroughbred Record.

MILTON YOUNG has sold to Barney Schreiber, St. Louis, Mo., the bay mare imp. Astolat (dam of imp. Asben and Miss Marion), foaled 1882, by Kisher, out of Bellicent, by Cremorne, and her suckling filly by Himyar. Astolat and three mares, purchased from E. Corrigan last winter, were shipped to Mr. Schreiber's farm, near St. Louis, on Saturday.—Thoroughbred Record.

IT may prove of interest to our readers to know that the English or Epsom Derby has been decided upon 118 occasions, and out of these chestnuts have won 29 events, and 12 of these have been scored since 1860. Out of the same number of St. Leger events chestnuts have won 24 times, bays have won 66, browns 25, whilst one event each has been scored by blacks, greys, and roans.

IDA PICKWICK has foaled a bay filly by imp. Quicklime and been bred back to Himyar, sire of Domino, Plaudit, etc. Bracelet, dam of Bingle, has foaled a bay filly by imp. Quicklime and been bred back to Himyar. Frogmore, a three-year-old filly by Quicklime out of Forever, by Forester, has been stunted to Himyar. French Gray, also by Quicklime, has been bred to Masetto.

FORMERO, which we think was the best two-year-old colt shown in California last spring, won a good race at Gravenend last Saturday, ridden by the Californian, Spencer. Formero was at odds of 4 to 1 and was never heard of until near the finish. Cormorant, the favorite, set the pace, but wound up outside the money, Mr. Clay, another Californian (by imp. Darebin—Miss Clay), finishing second, Kirkwood third.

THE track privileges and franchises for the race meetings in Anaconda and Butte were let yesterday afternoon. Bids were asked for the privileges let to the highest bidder. Alderman James Johnson, of this city, secured the entire thing for the Anaconda races for the lump sum of $7,525. Miles Finlen got everything in Butte for $10,000. The amounts paid are not quite as high as they were last year.—Anaconda Record, May 31st.

HANDSPRING will be prepared for fall racing by Charles T. Patterson at the Cincinnati tracks, and if he stands training—as it is generally believed he will—he will be shipped East in the summer to take part in the fall handicaps. Major Dangerfield has worked wonders with Handspring since his sojourn at Castleton, and it would not be at all surprising to see this grand horse yet show the best form of his turf career.—Thoroughbred Record.

AT the first day's racing of the Brighton spring meeting (June 6th) Richard Croker's bay filly, Wantage Belle, by Loyalist, out of Wands, beat Mr. Barrow's brown gelding, London, in the race for the Hass. chs Plate. This race is of 200 sovereigns for two-year-olds, distance about five furlongs. Wantage Belle was objected to for crossing the track, but the objection was afterwards withdrawn. London fell during the race, yet only a head separated the two horses at the finish.

THE English Stud Book shows that Flora, by Regulus, bred until she was 31 years old; Miss Vixen, by Fox Cub, until she was 28 years; an old English mare bred foals up to her twenty-eighth year, while Molly Long Legs, a mare by Greyhound, a sister to Regulus, and a sister to Slippery were fruitful in their twenty-seventh year. Diomed, who was foaled in 1777, lived for 40 years, Matchem until he was 33, Sampson until he was 32, Ranthos 31, Ruler 31, Blank, Young Marske and Jalap 29.

THE London Sporting Times aptly says: "Has it ever occurred before, we wonder, that a horse has run in a race on Saturday and on the following Tuesday one of his sons was returned a winner? This was the case with Dobbins, of whose stock we made very favorable mention when we saw them at Boro Green last spring. Dobbins, with his flowing mane, and tail reaching to the ground, was a sight. The old fellow, however, showed a lot of speed, and his son Knickerbocker is evidently smarter."—Spirit of the Times.

W. LE LIEVRE, of this city, left yesterday for Victoria, B. C., with Whitestone and Rosa. Whitestone, a superb individual, will be used at the stud in British Columbia, and on his breeding (he is by Macduff—Becky Sharpe, by Luke Blackburn) should prove a great success. This horse won eighteen races during his turf career, doing seven furlongs in 1:27 flat and a mile in 1:40½. Rosa is a three-year-old filly by Apache (son of imp. Mortemer and The Banshee), out of Rosabella, by King Alfonso. She is quite a speedy mare, but nothing like the racer that Whitestone was.

ANDY BLAKELEY made a desperate attempt to get possession of Sir Vassar at Gravesend last week. The crack jumper was in a selling affair and won as he pleased. Blakeley had Captain Pierreal in the same event and was second. When Sir Vassar was put up to be sold for $500, the owner's price, Blakeley started to boost him, and never let up until he reached $2,000. The owner retained him with a proverbial $5. It will be remembered that Tommy Griffin raced Sir Vassar in California a couple of seasons ago. Whenever they could get him away from the post he was a hard horse to beat. Griffin lost him after he got back home, and the new owner schooled him over the sticks. He has developed into a clever hurdler, beating the best talent in the East.

NICK HALL's two-year-olds Canace and Sevens and the jumper Gov. Budd arrived at Harlem yesterday morning from San Francisco. The horses left Oakland last Wednesday evening. The horses of Dan Honig and Frank Phillips came on the same train. They are quartered at Hawthorne. In Honig's lot were Zimar II., Elmore, Zicatosa, Oraibee, Ed Garland, Salisbury II and Amoltopec. Frank Phillips brought Judge Stouffer and Osceola. Bookmaker Bob Smith arrived from the Pacific Coast yesterday. His horses are turned out in California. He stopped a day at Sacramento. W. B. Jennings will leave Sacramento June 5th with a selected string, which will include that good three-year-old filly Brier Sweet, Sombre, Tripping, Maxello and Maximo.—Racing Form.

FOLLOWING is a list of the long shots that won the Epsom Derby, England's blue-ribbon racing event. 1828, Frederick, 40 to 1; 1837, Phosphorus, 40 to 1; 1838, Amato, 50 to 1; 1839, Bloomsbury, 40 to 1; 1840, Little Wozder, 40 to 1; 1852, Dan'l O'Rourke, 30 to 1; 1856, Ellington, 25 to 1; 1857, Blink Bonny, 20 to 1; 1861, Kethledrum, 16 to 1; 1862, Caractacus, * 40 to 1; 1864, Blair Athol, 15 to 1; 1870, Kingcroft, 20 to 1; 1873, Doncaster, * 5 to 1; 1879, Sir Benys, 20 to 1; 1898, Jeddah, 100 to 1. *The late Mr. Ten Broeck assured me that, in the best of his belief, The Marquis was at least eighteen inches in front of Caractacus. Mr. Snelling did not even go out to see the race. The Marquis, who won the 2,000 Guineas and St. Leger, sired Loyalist and Chesterfield, now in the country, also Newminster, sire of Newhaven and Tarcoola, winners of the Melbourne Cup.

W. P. MAGRANE, now in St. Louis, entertains a high opinion of Briar Sweet. In a recent conversation he said of the filly: "She was campaigned on the coast last winter, and there wasn't another filly of her age out there that could make Briar Sweet extend herself. Briar Sweet is a full sister to Dr. Hasbrouck. She ran a mile and an eighth in 1:53, a mile in 1:40 flat and five-eighths of a mile in 1:00 flat. She could run any kind of a race and run any horse's eye clean out any part of the route. Montgomery beat her once, but I didn't care to run him against her again. The day the gelding beat her Briar Sweet and Caesarian raced themselves into the ground making the pace. Willie Martin, the master mechanic of them all in the saddle, was riding my horse, and he sneaked through on the rail and he beat Briar Sweet by a whisker. My horse has had too much of it. He won nine or ten races on the coast and deserves a rest. In fact, all of my horses are in poor shape. It doesn't do to run them winter and summer. They can't stand it."—Daily Racing Form. Mr. Magrane is in error regarding the time Briar Sweet made. She did not run quite so fast.

STREMER, the much-touted Top Gallant—Kitty Gun colt in J. M. Murphy's stable, won Tuesday at Harlem in the mud. It was his initial start. A Chicago Exchange of last week said of the colt, before he had faced the starter: "Of the Western two-year-olds that are still under cover, and by common consent are destined to cut some figure in the pending stakes for youngsters, none is the object of so much concern as James M. Murphy's Streamer, by Topgallant—Kitty Gunn. Mr. Murphy modestly admits having been offered $10,000 for Streamer early in the season, and as the colt stands in the stall at Harlem, he looks every inch a $10,000 animal. He is a rich bay, stands a shade over 16 hands, and is big all over, looking more like a 4-year-old than a 2-year-old. His barrel is of exceptional length, but his quarters are accordingly big and powerful and his chest deep. A grandly-poised, sensible-looking head completes the picture of a real race horse."

MANAGER H. J. UNRUH, of E. J. Baldwin's Santa Anita ranch, was seen on the streets last Tuesday. He has just returned from the famous breeding establishment. Speaking about ranch matters, he said: "We have bred about eighty mares this season, and we think we have made good crosses. The sires we have used most are Emperor Norfolk, Santa Anita, Amigo, Gano and Santiago. We laid imp. Chesterfield, Cerito II. and another one off. I think they made a mistake not breeding to Cerito, for to me he has all the points of a good producer. He is a young horse and was never raced, going wrong before we could get him up to a race. Of course, we could not expect much from his first colts, but he ought to improve. Cerito is by imp. The Hook, out of the great race mare, Miss Ford, by Enquirer. We bred Rey El Santa Anita to fifteen mares and Santiago to equally as many. Both are comparatively untried, but I hardly see how they can fail making great reputations for themselves. Surely, the first colt the former got is a good one. The horses we had in training here are all turned out down there and we won't do anything with them until fall. We will probably have a stable at Los Angeles."

"WHAT do I think of the American Derby candidates that raced on the Pacific Coast?" answered Harry Kuhl, who has been acting as clerk of the scales at the California tracks for several seasons and who has returned here for the purpose of filling the same place at Washington Park during the coming race meeting. "Why, I think that Borgia, the Brutus colt, entered by W. T. Boots & Son, is the best one that has shown there. He ran second to Traverser in the Pacific Derby the very first time out of the box, and lots of people who saw the race think he might have won that day had the stable wanted to. He is of little account in the mud, and his second time out on a heavy track he ran third to Eddie Jones in a mile and an eighth. That was his last start, and it was rumored that he was kept in the stable for fear that he might win and so not get the maiden allowance he is now entitled to in the American Derby. I do not think that either Traverser or Count of Flanders is of Derby class. The first named likes neither distance nor weight, and the second, besides being underized, has legs that are under suspicion. Fonsovannah is a fair colt, but whether he is up to stake weights is the question. If any of the coast horses carry off the Derby it will be Borgia." This is also the opinion of W. H. Cheppie, one of the best bookmakers in the country.—Chicago Record.

ONE of the prominent links between the past and present on the Australian turf is Mr. Ettie De Mestre. Honest John Tait and many others have passed away, but the venerable owner of Tim Whiffler still remains, and the following concerning him (from the pen of "Milroy" in the Sydney Mail) will be read with interest: "Mr. Ettie De Mestre tells me that he intends to start training horses again at Randwick when he can get suitable stabling. It will be like old times to see the popular owner of the black jacket and cap directing a 'hooded team' on Randwick heath, though it is improbable that he will ever handle such a string as he did in 1877, or, later, when Navigator was king of the Tierra lot. Though over thirty-seven years have gone since Mr. De Mestre won the first Melbourne Cup that was run, he is still hale and active and looks good for a few decades to come. The Melbourne Cup fell to him on five occasions—in 1861-2 with Archer, in 1867 with Tim Whiffler, and in 1877-8 with Chester and Calamia. It would be really too much trouble to go through half the important races that Mr. De Mestre won in his time with such horses as Archer, Tim Whiffler, Stumpy, Navigator, Gudarr, Guinea, Chesterfield, Chester, Calamia, Timothy and scores of others, but let us hope this grand old sportsman will soon get hold of something as good as any of those named, and should one win a race at Randwick carrying the 'black and all-black,' a mighty cheer will go up from all the 'old hands' present."

DISCUSSING the recent sale of Galtee More for £21,000, the London Sportsman says: "The sale of Galtee More calls to mind other instances in which celebrated thoroughbreds have changed hands for extraordinarily big amounts. The record is held by Ormonde, who after being disposed of by the Duke of Westminster to Senor Boucan for £12,000, passed into the possession of the American gentleman, Mr. Macdonough, for no less than $150,000 (£31,250). The late Baron de Hirsch gave Sir Frederic Johnstone £15,000 for Matchbox (with contingencies) and the horse was subsequently sold to the Austrian Government for £18,000. Common after his victory in the St. Leger, was purchased for £15,000 by Sir J. Blundell Maple; the celebrated stallion Blair Athol was sold for 12,500 guineas in 1872, and another historic deal was that in connection with Doncaster, who after winning the Alexandra Plate at Ascot in 1875, was parted with by Mr. James Merry for £10,000 to Mr. R. Peck, who subsequently resold the horse for £14,000 to the Duke of Westminster. This was an unprecedented sum in those days, but later years have familiarized us with transactions of much greater magnitude, though it will probably be a long time ere the sum paid in connection with Ormonde will be equalled or surpassed. These, of course, were all private deals, but taking the instances where horses have been disposed of by public auction, it may be mentioned that St. Blaise (the Derby winner of 1883) was sold for £20,000 at the disposal of Mr. A. Belmont's stud, in New York, toward the end of 1891, and another notable case is that of Meddler, who as a three-year-old went for 14,500 guineas at Newmarket in 1893. Galtee More was sold with his engagements, and it is intended for him to fill them if he goes on well before being retired to the stud in Russia."

Two weeks from to-day the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will begin its summer meeting for 1898 at the Oakland track. The outlook for a good meeting is first-class. As will be seen by reference to the list of entries there are two weeks of good racing provided for with six races per day. The horses are well matched, and while a large majority are not new to California tracks there are enough "green ones" in to arouse a feeling of curiosity among the horsemen who will anxiously wait the opening of the meeting to see what they can do. The meeting which opens on the 25th will inaugurate a new departure in harness racing in the United States. The program differs materially from any heretofore given by an association. The horsemen are all inclined to think it is the very thing to awaken interest in harness racing in California, and each and every one seems ready to put his shoulder to the wheel and push. The only thing remaining now is to arouse the public. There is evidently more interest manifested at the present time than there was last year, but there cannot be any too much vim and energy and spirit put into their work by the officers and members of the association, as by giving evidence of their own faith and enthusiasm they will arouse the latent love for the sport in the people and draw them to the track on the opening day. If two or three thousand spectators are on the grounds the first day, and good honest clean sport is had, free from suspicion or taint of fraud, they will be so pleased that they will come again and bring their friends with them, and by the close of the following week harness racing will once more be one of the greatest popular sports of California. It lies within the combined power of the horse men and the officers of the association to bring about such a happy state of affairs, and from present appearances we believe they will do it. The published list of entries assures some very close and exciting contests and the signs of the times are that the dawn of a new and glorious era in trotting horse affairs is at hand. Let every hand be put forth to assist in the good work.

STARTING horses is very much like keeping hotel—nearly every one who has had no actual experience in the matter entertains a well-settled conviction in his own mind that he could do it to perfection if he only had an opportunity to try his hand. Far be it from the writer's intention to set himself up as an instructor in the art or science of starting harness horses, but a few ideas that occur at this time may not be out of place. Did you ever go out to a track in the morning, reader, when the trotters were being put through their paces by the trainers on a work-out day. If you have, you have often noticed three or four, or perhaps a half dozen, drivers agree to work their horses a mile together. Without any delay or wrangling they would go up the stretch, turn round and come down together like a company of drilled soldiers, and get away together head and head, always getting away on even terms at the very first attempt. But let these same drivers meet in an actual race in the afternoon and mark the difference. Scoring until the horses and the crowd were both tired out, the starter bereft of his patience and all except the drivers themselves disgusted with the whole proceeding. And why this difference? Simply because in the morning work-out they were all trying to get off together, while in the actual race each wanted the best of the start. Now, it does seem as though a starter who had a knowledge of horses and their gaits, a quick eye and a determination to fairly, but firmly, enforce the rules, could get horses away without tedious scoring and long delays. Suppose a starting judge should call all the drivers up before the race and quietly tell them just what he desired them to do—to come up to the wire evenly, not too fast, as far as possible neither ahead nor behind the pole horse, and admonish them that $25 fine would be the invariable punishment for an infraction of this rule. Having given these instructions he should stand by them. A few fines that should not be remitted except by a sustained appeal to the Board of Review, would work a wonderful change, and long-continued scoring might soon be the exception instead of the rule.

Twenty-four years old is Sable, that grand old brood mare by The Moor out of Gretchen (dam of Romero 2:19½, Del Sur 2:24, Inca 2:22 and Neluska 2:30½), by Mambrino Pilot. When she was led onto the track at the Corbitt sale last week with a handsome colt by her side by Prince Airle, she had the appearance of a mare that had probably foaled her last colt. Her twenty-four years do not rest lightly upon her, but with care she may live to produce two or three more great ones. Sable is truly a great brood mare. She is the dam of Sable Wilkes 2:18 as a three-year-old and a great sire of speed, Burlingame 2:18½ at four, Ulee Wilkes 2:23 at four and Leo Wilkes 2:29½, and sire of Lionel Wilkes 2:17½. Sable trotted in 2:25 in her four year-old form, and her produce has brought thousands of dollars to the San Mateo Stock Farm. With the handsome colt by Prince Airle at foot, it did seem a pity that the grand old mare should be sold for $70, but that was the price at which Mr. J. Galeagos of Mission San Jose secured her.

MR. A. W. FOSTER'S first sale of Hungarian ponies, which came off last Tuesday at Killip & Co.'s salesyard, corner Van Ness avenue and Market street, was quite successful. Eighteen head were disposed of for a total of about $1,200, an average of about $66. The highest price was $160, paid by Mr. John I. Sabin for Tack, a handsome little chestnut gelding with silver mane and tail. Tack was a prize winner at the last horse show. The chestnut team, Bill and Ben, 11 hands high, full brothers and nicely matched, brought $300. The lowest price of the sale was $30. The ponies were all sired by imp. Carlisle, from graded and small native mares and were a very handsome lot.

Racing at Lemoore.

At Lemoore, Kings County, May 20th and 21st, two days racing was successfully held. There was a large crowd present on both days, and all who attended got their money's worth in good racing. The Association may well feel proud of its first efforts, which augurs well for the future racing events which will be held on the local track under its auspices.

FIRST DAY'S RACES.

The first race on the program was a saddle horse race, three-eighths of a mile and repeat. The horses entered were Jack, owned by A. Caneau; Violet, owned by the Burris Bros.; and Frank, owned by H. Cahill. The first heat was won by Jack; time, 37 seconds. The second and third heats were won by Violet; time, first heat, 37 seconds; second, 37½. Violet took first money and Jack second.

The second was a buggy horse race, trot or pace, best two in three. The following horses were entered: Alto, owned by G. E. Shore; Lucy Gee, owned by W. H. Grider; Little Billy, owned by F. L. Howard, and John, owned by L. Morris. The first and second heats were won by Little Billy; time, first heat, 2:48½; second heat, 2:47. G. E. Shore's horse, Alto, took second money.

The ladies' race failed to fill and the next race on the program was called.

The novelty race, running, 1 mile—pay at each quarter—then took place, with the following horses entered: Long John, owned by the Hanford stables; Venus K., owned by J. C. Kester; Maggie R. Smith, owned by Geo. A. Burger; Sam Mount, owned by H. Cahill; Bummer, owned by John Hays, Chris Evans, owned by Burris Bros., and Durango, owned by B. F. Hobart. The first quarter and a half was won by Chris Evans, and the three-fourths and the mile was won by Durango. Durango made the mile in 1:49. The time for the quarter mile was not kept.

The judges were J. R. Alberton, W. D. Madden and Sam Harrow.

SECOND DAY'S RACES.

There was a large crowd in attendance, though not quite as large as on the first day. The Lemoore brass band was on hand and enlivened the occasion with music.

The first race was a trot or pace race, 2:40 class, best two in three. There were two starters—Little Billy, owned by Howard Bros. of Lakeside, and Avalon, owned by B. Williams of Traver. Billy won the race in two straight heats, time 2:41½ and 2:40½.

In the free-for-all running race, one-half mile and repeat, the starters were Venus K., owned by J. C. Kester; Chris Evans, owned by Burris Bros., and Durango, owned by B. F. Hobart, or Delano. In the first heat Venus came in first, Durango second and Evans third. In the second heat Venus K. came in first, Evans second and Durango third. Time, 49½. The judges awarded first money to Venus K. and second to Durango.

In the free-for-all race, trot or pace, one mile, best two in three, the entries were E. Erlanger's Roy, B. Williams' Kiteley and Dr. J. C. Moore's Sontag. Kiteley took both heats, with Roy second. Time of the first heat, 2:42½, and about the same time on the second heat.

The most exciting race of the day was the ten-mile race, in which two strings of horses were entered—five by H. Cahill and J. Hays, and five by Thos. Smalley. There were only two riders, one for each string, and they changed horses at the grand stand each time around the mile track. It was a long, speedy ride. Much depended upon the rapidity with which the rider, assisted by his helpers, could transfer himself from one horse to another. Wm. Williams rode for Cahill & Hays and Lee Chism rode for Smalley. Cahill & Hays' horses won; the time, however, was not kept.

The judges were M. Nidifer, S. McLaughlin and J. K. Alberton.

Los Angeles in Line.

Thousand dollar purses with but three per cent. entrance, is the choice morsel which the Sixth District Agricultural Association of Los Angeles places before the owners of trotters and pacers this year. The meeting opens October 6th, and the following fixed events are already advertised, the purses being $1,000 in every instance: 2:12, 2:17 and 2:27 class trotting and 2:12 and 2:25 class pacing. In July a complete programme of harness events will be announced in which all classes will be provided for and liberal purses given. It is the intention of the directors of the Sixth District to make the Los Angeles meeting the most successful ever held on this western slope, and knowing as we do the amount of energy and vim those Los Angeles can put into their work, we feel assured that they will come very near doing just as they propose. The fact that but three per cent entrance is to be charged for $1,000 shows that the directors are not of that class who want the long end of every proposition. They are willing to take a few chances themselves, and look to the privileges and the gate receipts for reimbursement. When a horse can be started in a thousand dollar purse for $30, a big entry list is sure to result, and we predict that when entries close Secretary Lewis Thorne will find that the three per cent proposition has been a paying one. The races will be under American Association rules. Entries close on the 25th inst., which is the opening day of the Breeders meeting at Oakland. Records made that day will not constitute a bar to these Los Angeles events. Send to Secretary Thorne at Los Angeles for entry blanks, and don't fail to enter your horses for these, the biggest purses offered in California for harness horses this year.

Performances Against Time.

A request has come to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN from parties who desire to give records to brood mares and horses that will not be raced, that the rules governing such performances be published. We therefore give below the rules of the National Trotting Association, by which it will be seen that quite a number of details must be taken into consideration and attended to strictly in order to give a horse a mark that will entitle him to a place in the record books:

Performances against time must be at a regular meeting of a society in membership with The National Trotting Association, or American Trotting Association; said performance to be conducted by the regularly appointed Judges and Timers for the day, strictly in accordance with the rules of said National or American Trotting Association adopted by the member.

No animal shall be permitted to start against time pending a heat or trial by another animal, nor until the result of such heat or trial shall have been duly announced.

Time shall be taken by three Timers engaged in the stand during the performance.

There shall be three Judges in the stand during such performance.

No performance against time shall be earlier than 10 o'clock A. M.

There shall be no performance against time at a postponed or continued meeting, unless such postponement or continuance is made in accordance with the rules of The National or American Trotting Association to which the member belongs.

In performances against time the animal must start to equal or beat a specified time, and a losing performance shall not constitute a record, or a bar.

A regular meeting is hereby construed to mean a meeting advertised in at least one newspaper not less than one week before the commencement of said meeting, and at which meeting no less than two regular events (purse or stake) are advertised for each day.

"Matches against time" will not be allowed.

Entries to "performances against time" must be made with the Secretary not later than 7 P. M. the day before the performance, and must appear in the published program of the day, or, if there is no printed program, then a written copy shall be posted conspicuously at the Judges' stand, and it shall be publicly announced by the Judges before the start.

Pending the investigation of a reported record by either The National or American Trotting Association, the reported record shall operate as a bar until the matter is adjusted.

If it should appear to the Board of Review, upon investigation, that any record was fraudulently obtained, it shall be declared not a record, but a bar.

Denver Meeting Opens To-Day.

Overland Park, at Denver, Colorado, opens its gates to-day for one of the best programs of racing ever seen in the West. The meeting will continue until June 25th. At Overland Park the California strings do their first racing of note since leaving their native State, and interest in the meeting, therefore, is keen all over the country. According to a recent statement of Manager O. P. Updegraff of the Overland Park Association, there are now over 500 horses at the track, and the entry list is the largest ever flouted at Denver. Every one of the twenty-six classes advertised filled, except the one for two-year-old trotters, and the entries for the twenty-five races number about 300. The lists include horses from the Pacific Coast, Kentucky, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, Tennessee, Texas, Oregon and neighboring States. Among those who have gone from California and who are now at the Overland track, are B. O. Van Bokkelen, San Francisco; Tom Keating and Andy McDowell, Pleasanton; Matt Karl, W. P. Hodges, W. P. Robinson, San Bernardino; G. H. Judd, Santa Ana, and Henry Edelman, Los Angeles. Keating has the most formidable stable. It includes Searchlight, 2:09; Anaconda, 2:08; Stam B, 2:14; Dione, 2:14, and the three-year-old Clatawa. Andy McDowell has Lena M., 2:14, and Caryle Carne and others.

Hanford Racing Association.

The Horsemen in Hanford, Kings County, are not asleep. They have organized themselves into an association and are ready for business. G. B. McCord has been elected President and F. L. Howard Secretary.

The association has rented the Hanford race track, and will put the same in good condition. The first meeting will be a two days' racing, July 4th and 5th. Five hundred dollars will be hung up in prizes, and the full program will soon be published. Every effort will be put forth to make the forthcoming races a success in every way.

The race committee selected is composed of Daniel Finn, Harvey Wilson, Wm. Abbott and T. Vance Biddle.

Advertising and expense committee R. C. Ijen, T. V. Biddle Jr., Amos Elliott and Wm. Thomas.

All the above are stockholders in the association, and the following are also stockholders: W. H. Wilson, J. O. Hickman, D. L. Newman, Thos. Cunningham and Frank Johnson.

Range Horses Sell Well.

The first range horses that have been on the St. Louis market in some months—it might be said the first of the summer range horse season—were offered this week, and from the way they sold it can be said that the demand for western horses is good. Considering their quality, and it was of the poorest, they brought fair prices. One carload from Texas were thin, common and scratched up more or less and in the bunch were many mares in foal. Some of them were sold privately at $13.50 to $25 a head, most of them around $17.50. Another consignment of western horses went through the auction, a number of which were guaranteed as broken but few were worked. These had a little more flesh and the tops sold higher. The range of prices was $15 to $32.50 for the commonest to the best of them and the entire seventeen head averaged a fraction over $19.—St. Louis Republican.

Get Ready for the Breeders' Meeting.

The Oakland race track will be open for the trotters and pacers on Saturday next, June 18th. It will be in fine condition for working horses, as Superintendent Fieldwick knows just how to work it for the harness brigade. It is thought that there will be over two hundred horses stabled there by the time the meeting opens.

ENTRIES for the Minnesota State Fair trotting and pacing events, which are to take place at Hamline, September 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, will close July 2d. American trotting rules are to govern. Several of our California horsemen who have gone East this year will enter their horses at this meeting. It will certainly be one of the best on the new Western circuit. The purses are $1,000 each, with a special purse of $5,000 for 2:23 trotters, and one of the same amount for 2:13 pacers. There is also a two-mile dash for trotters of the 2:28 class, the purse being $2,000. The purses and conditions will be found in our advertising columns.

THE California horse Athanio, 2:10, son of Junio and Athalie by Harkaway, bred by Geo. Warlow of Fresno, and sold for export to Europe this year won the Rom Purse at Vienna, Austria, May 12th. The distance was one mile and five furlongs and was covered in 3:46 1/5, a 2:20 gait, Athanio having Bellwood, McVera, Robbie P., Que Allen and Maud Wright behind him. Col. Kuser started in the race, but was distanced.

PLEASANTON STOCK FARM, Pleasanton, Cal.

MR. B. H. DE HUY—Dear Sir: When the Salsbury—Griffith stable of horses were at Denver race meeting last June, we got from you some heel-salve called "Balmoline" which we found to be good. Please ship me by express C. O. D. a half dozen boxes of "Balmoline" at once and oblige, Feb. 2, 1898. C. L. GRIFFITHS.

Sulky Notes.

The Cavalry Recruit.

They gave him a horse
And supposed that of course
Both glory and fame he would gain;
But the horse whirled around
And he fell to the ground—
He had failed to remember the mane.

THE Denver, Colorado, meeting opens to-day.

PORTLAND, Oregon, entries close Monday next, June 13th.

ADMISSION to the Breeders meeting will be 50 cents. Grand stand seats free.

THE betting at the Portland, Or., meeting will be wholly by the Paris-mutuel system.

HARNESS horse trainers will be permitted to use the Oakland track beginning June 18th.

TWENTY-SIX of twenty-eight nominators made good the third payment in Charter Oak's $10,000 purse.

TWENTY-FIVE thousand people attended the matinee trotting races at Garfield Park, Chicago, on Memorial Day.

TOGGLES, 2:12½, will be dangerous horse in his class this year. His great speed should land him a winner in the dash races.

GEERS thinks The Abbot, 2:11½, faster than Tommy Britton. It is reported that the pair lately worked a quarter in 30 seconds.

$1,000 purses with 3 per cent. entrance is what Los Angeles offers this year. Horsemen will appreciate this liberality.

THERE will probably be three or four books on at the Breeders' meeting. The dash system of racing will make the betting lively.

IN a race at Lexington, Ky., June 3d, Annie Lee, a bay filly by the California-bred horse Alfred G., 2:19½, son of Anteo, paced to a record of 2:18½.

BY the way, the army seems to have use for a good many horses these days, but we have not heard of any orders for bicycles being issued by the departments.

A DOZEN head of road and express horses from the Yerba Buena ranch were sold by Killip & Co., the live stock auctioneers this week. They averaged about $65.

THE side pole, now in such common use with trainers, is said to have been first invented by Ras Eckers, when he was in partnership with Charles Marvin in Kansas.

DON'T think that every horse that trots or paces a quarter in 30 seconds can do the mile in two minutes. Little Direct paced quarters in 28 seconds, but he was never able to pace lower than 2:05½.

THE export movement in horses from Chicago has of late been stimulated by the presence of several foreign buyers. The weekly totals of shipments to foreign markets have materially increased.

MANY bicycle riders have been rejected for enlistment. Had they indulged in horseback riding no contracted chests would have resulted; and the examining surgeons would not have "seen that hump."

RACING will begin at 1:30 each day at the Breeders' meeting and should be finished before six o'clock. Quick and prompt action, with no delays, will please the crowd and make them come again.

IN the State of New York 105 harness meetings have already been announced to take place between May 30 and October 1, with purses ranging from $300 to $1,000, and there are many more yet to announce.

THE management of the Overland park, Denver, Col., trotting and pacing meeting has decided to add to the program a show of Denver's fine horses. The west is in line with the east and not behind the times.

ALTHOUGH Lena N., 2:12½, is a very fast mare, she will probably not do when it comes to hot heats below 2:10. She can go the first half of the mile fast enough, but the last half may bother her if she is hard pressed.

THE Vancouver Jockey Club's meeting begins July 14th and lasts three days. There will be purses for trotters, pacers and runners, ranging from $75 to $200. Entries close July 10th. All harness races will be two in three.

ONE of the greatest sale-ring bargains of the season was Alta Belle, by Electioneer, dam Beautiful Bells, who sold for $225 at the Cleveland sale. She is seventeen, but has one in the list, can trot fast herself and is a good looker.

GUINETTE, 2:05, is dead. This is a great loss to that sterling sportsman, Jas. A. Murphy, and to the sporting world, as he was matched with John R. Gentry for three races of $2,500 each, with a side bet of $2,500 on the result.

ALTHOUGH Idolita, the two-year-old colt by Monaco from Edith by George Wilkes, sold for $4,700 at the Palo Alto Cleveland sale, Daniel Mahoney had not been his owner an hour before he received an offer of $5,000 for the colt.

TWENTY-TWO horses and fifteen mules were purchased at Marysville last week for the army. The highest price paid for any of the lot was $100, which was given for three of the horses and two of the mules. The lowest price was $80.

W. B. SANBORN, a well-known Sonoma county horseman, has leased the large recreation park in Santa Rosa known as Cycling Park, and will commence at once the construction of a track. The first race meet will probably take place July 4th.

THE rumored match between the Philadelphia trotters, Ottinger, 2:09½, and George G., 2:12½, may yet go through, if Jacob Justice, who recently bought Ottinger at auction, is willing to resell him to Thomas Henry, Jr., who is anxious to have the affair come off.

WHEN examining a horse with a view to purchase, have him led down a slope at the end of a halter with no whip near him. This will show any defect in his forequarters, and running him back will develop any weakness in his hind legs.—Newark, N. J. Call.

THE forty-fifth annual State Fair of the State Agricultural Society will be held at Sacramento, Sept. 5th to 17th, 1898. Premium Lists will be ready for distribution June 15th. Address the Secretary for them, as well as for information of any character pertaining to the Fair.

GEN. FITZHUGH LEE owed his cadetship to West Point to direct appointment by President Millard Fillmore. He was when at the Academy, low in point of scholarship, but stood high in tactics and the practical branches of military science and was easily the first in horsemanship.

MORE than half of the mistakes made in the judges' stand occur through ignorance. The new rules of the N. T. A. are out, and every man that is interested in harness racing should get a copy and study them, so that all will be familiar with the changes, as well as with the unamended rules.

THE Government mule is again becoming popular and numerous. Several hundred head have recently been purchased in this State by Uncle Sam's agents and there is a lively demand for the hybrids of the proper qualifications. From $80 to $125 per head are the prices paid.

A DRIVING club has been organized at Freestone, Sonoma county, and a meeting will be given every month or so. A very fine strip of county road will be the course. The officers of the club are G. W. Mayfield, President, George O'Grady, Secretary, and Robert Richie, Treasurer.

AZOTE, 2:04½, the champion gelding of the world, has been entered in the free-for-alls at the Breeders' meeting, and it is asserted that the owners of the other horses entered in the same class are not afraid to start against him. A friend remarks that Azote can beat some horses if he has but three legs to go on.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Association will probably decide to give trotting and pacing matinees once a month during the summer season. The Association is in a most flourishing condition. Matinee racing is becoming popular all over the United States, and driving clubs are springing up all over the country.

WM. CRITT & Co., of Liverpool, England, cabled their Canadian representative, W. G. Elliott, Montreal, that the market for best grade of horses is extra good. Four hundred and eighty were sold at a recent auction at prices ranging from $135 to $238, and one shipment of twenty American horses were sold as high as $337.50.

IT has been definitely established that, as the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN suggested, the horse started at the Golden Gate Park Driving Association meeting as Rey Tamias is Reatinous by Antinous. It is not charged that the horse was a ringer, but simply that the spelling of the name was not understood by the party making the entry.

FEW realize how many horses are required in the United States army. Each battery of artillery requires about one hundred horses, infantry regiments about twenty each, and cavalry regiments about 1,200 to 1,300. One hundred horses are required for General Miles' headquarters alone. Each field officer is entitled to two horses.

IN the Salisbury string in 1895 was a bay mare bred by J. H. Strobbridge of Haywards, in this State, called Lulu F. She took a record of 2:20½ at Lincoln, Nebraska, in October, 1895, after foaling a colt in June the same year. This colt was by Direct, 2:05½. It is now a three-year-old, is "a little brown butter ball of a pacer," and has pulled a road cart a quarter in 36 seconds.

JIMMY MACK has gone East with the "gray ghost of Southern California," Waldo J., 2:09, and will probably make his first start with him at Omaha on the 23d of June. He worked Waldo J. a mile in 2:12 a few days before shipping him, the last half in 1:04. It is the opinion of many here in California that the horse that defeats Bob Mason's son this year will have to pace below his record.

AMONG the horses recently shipped from California to Hawaii were three consigned by Richard Sweasy of Humboldt county. They were the horse Hoops, by Ira out of Myrtle T. The others were a handsome pair of Grand Moor mares that will doubtless attract attention in the Islands, as they are about the best looking matched team that has ever been sent out from here to the Kanaka country.

THE International Horse Show, to be held at the Crystal Palace, London, England, May 28-31, will have forty-five classes, including three confined to American horses, as follows: Single horses in harness under 15 hands, single horses in harness 15 hands and over, and pairs under 15 hands. Horses eligible to these classes must have been foaled in the United States of America, Canada or on the continent of South America.

MR. LOUIS SCHAEFFER, of Oakland, will ship his two fast pacers, Arthur L., 2:15, and Toots east in a few days, where they will probably follow the new Western circuit. Both horses have made a season at the stud this year in Yolo county. Dave Herspring has had them in charge and will train and drive them in their races. Toots is by Monbars, out of the dam of Arthur L. and is going nicely for the little work he has had.

PERMISSION has been granted several citizens to use the Stockton race track on the condition that they keep it in good shape. The Agricultural Society has no money to have the track worked and it was thought best to allow those who have driving horses to use it. Several citizens have organized a club and elected an executive committee, which issues tickets to those who contribute towards the funds for keeping the track in first-class condition.—Stockton Mail.

BRAD DUBOIS will race a stable in the East this summer. It will be made up of W. W. P., 2:05½; Beulah, 2:15½; Success, 4, trotter, and Progress, a green pacer, by Superior, 2:17½. Trainer Weaver will do the driving, and James Wallace may accompany them with Carbonate, 2, 2:09.

THE trotting and pacing events to come off at Honolulu to day will all be two in three, the horsemen of the Islands having agreed that long-drawn contests, such as often result from three in five races, are not popular nor desirable. The Honolulu people are getting up to date ideas in racing matters.

THE great success which American trainers have with trotters and pacers is attributed to their knowledge of foot balancing or shoeing in such a way as to bring out the best speed of which a horse is capable. Great stress is laid upon the matter of shoeing. A very slight deviation in foot balancing may prevent a horse from doing its very best. Instances are given where a colt which had never beaten 2:10 was made to pace its mile in 2:07½ by having the shoes removed and the angle of the foot changed very slightly by a rasp.

A. T. Van de Vanter, of Tacoma, Washington, has five harness horses in training which he will take to the Portland, Oregon meeting. They are Royal Jib, 2:17½, by Algona; Knoxmore, a bay colt, by Hugo, bred at Palo Alto; William B., a full brother to Doc Sperry, 2:09; Fred C., a pacer, sired by Direct, and a three-year-old trotter called J. R. This is Mr. Van de Vanter's first year in the business, and it is to be hoped that good luck will follow his enterprise, as he has long been a breeder of good stock in the Northwest.

THERE was a successful matinee at Coronado race track, San Diego, on Memorial Day. The race for 2:50 trotters was won by Dr. Schrader's Highland Lad, with Mr. Phillips' Midget second, W. B. Prentice's Rialto third and Dr. Burke's Lancet last. The best time made by the winner was 2:39½. Midget won two heats, 2:47 being her best time. A race for gentlemen's roadsters, driven by owners was won by Dr. Burke's Flirt in 2:56. About a thousand people witnessed these races, and there were two short running dashes provided to fill up the program.

ON Saturday, July 2d, two prominent horsemen of Redding, in this State, will decide which of the two has the better roadster. W. J. Gillespie has backed Judge Sweeney's mare, Zilla, against J. H. Yeakey's Maud S. to trot mile heats, best two in three, over the Redding track for a purse of $100 a side. Half of the money is already up as forfeit, and it is probable that half the money in Redding will be up on the race the day it comes off. So much interest is taken in the outcome of this match that the Redding track is to be put in first-class shape especially for it.

PLANS for having trotting and pacing contests while avoiding records are being discussed by some of the turf papers and their correspondents in the East. The rules of both the National and American Associations are very strict in regard to these matters and there should be no effort to evade them. No true sportsman should avoid a record for his horse while racing, be it a regular race or only a matinee affair. If a horse is being kept for "a killing" don't race him. If a record is not wanted, don't start the horse. Suppression of time, evasion of records and pulling heats are all dishonest, unsportsmanlike and against the ruler. If a horse has trotted a mile in 2:20 in public in a race or against time for money, marbles or a big red apple he should be barred from starting in slower classes thereafter.

A BIG horse deal was consummated at Dillon, Montana, last week. James Maudlin, the well-known breeder of Norman and French draft horses in that State, disposed of his entire band, consisting of 15 pure-bred stallions and about 200 pure and grade mares, to Geo. Lane, a prosperous stock raiser of Calgary, Canada. Mr. Lane has a large stock ranch about half way between Calgary and Fort McLeod on the Little Bow river and is well located for successfully conducting the business. The country is new, large and is rapidly being settled up, and there is now quite a demand for heavy draft horses in the Kootenai country, both for freighting and farming purposes. The Kootenai country is beginning to see wonderful mineral development and Mr. Lane will be in a position to readily dispose of his fine horses.

AT Kapiolani Park track, Honolulu, May 28th, a match race came off between James Quinn's bay mare, Violin, by Alex. Button, and L. L. McCandless' bay mare, Irish Lass, by St. Patrick. The race was mile heats, three in five, for $500 a side, and it is reported that between five and six thousand dollars were wagered on the outcome, Irish Lass being a slight favorite. The story of the race is quickly told, Violin taking the first heat in 2:25 and Irish Lass the next three in 2:24½, 2:36 and 2:33. The Honolulu papers state that Violin was claimed to be in no condition for a heat race, being too fat, but that some of the horsemen had a suspicion that she was a quitter. The horsemen were about right, as when the mare was raced here in California she never had a liking for the last half of a mile. She was a chunky-built, short-necked individual, very speedy, but liable to choke down at any time.

ATLANTA, brown mare, foaled 1875, full sister to that great broodmare Beautiful Bells, is now the property of Palo Alto Stock Farm. At the Corbitt sale June 2d, she was knocked down to the $150 bid of Superintendent F. W. Covey of Palo Alto, and her remaining days will be spent in all probability on that great farm. As she was heavy with foal at the time of the sale, having been stunted to Oro Wilkes, 2:11, July 16, 1897, the probability is that by the time this paragraph is read she will have a foal by her side. Atlanta is a grand individual, and though twenty-three years old does not look half of it. She had considerable speed, but was never trained. But two of her produce are in the list, and neither are very fast, Othello, 2:28, being by Sultan, and Atlanta Wilkes, 2:29½, by Gny Wilkes. It is Mr. Covey's intention to breed Atlanta to Monaco, in the hope that the Electioneer blood will produce the good results which have followed its union with that of this mare's full sister, Beautiful Bells. In the old days Atlanta, having produced two with records better than 2:30, would have been considered a great broodmare, and she is now enrolled under that title in the books, but in this day of speed Atlanta's past life can not be considered as a great success, and should she produce a great one to the embrace of an Electioneer stallion the theory that a proper "nick" is necessary will acquire evidence that will go far to establish it.

Racing at Salt Lake.

The Jordan Driving Club held a meeting during the week beginning May 30th, which was quite successful. The track, which is half a mile around, was in splendid condition. It has lately been fixed up and fenced round, and the grand stand put in good shape, and the park and surroundings looked very refreshing in their new mantle of green.

There was considerable dissatisfaction expressed by the crowd over the rulings of the judges on the opening day. Betting was pretty lively all day, and the pool-sellers did a big business and made considerable money, the public getting the worst of it all round, which may in part account for the bad humor of the latter.

The first race was a 2:35 pace, for a purse of $250, best three out of five heats. There were five entries, Erma D. owned by Tom McCoy; Zemper, owned by C. G. Price, Windsplitter, owned by E. G. Hines; Freddie K., owned by J. B. Keyser and A. Williams' Dewey.

Windsplitter took the three heats straight, and won; time for each heat 2:37, 2:36 and 2:40. Freddie K. and Dewey divided honors for second and third and Emma D. was fourth. It was a pretty race.

The 2:24 Trot.—Over the second race the 2:24 trot, best three out of five, there was heaps of trouble. There were only three entries. Wasatch Monarch, owned by Dufer Rimac, owned by Thompson and Erma D. A. entered by McCoy. It took six heats to decide the race and Erma D. A. was declared the winner of the purse of $300. The positions of the horses in this race were as follows: Erma D. A., 2, 3, 3, 1, 1, 1; Wasatch Monarch, 3, 1, 2, 3, 2, 2; Rimac, 1, 2, 1, 3, 3, 3. Time—2:22, 2:30, 2:28½, 2:30, 2:30, 2:34.

In the second heat of this race Tom McCoy, who drove Erma D. A., met with his accident. When about half round the track on the first lap, one of the wheels of the sulky broke, the vehicle keeled over and the driver was thrown off, but luckily got free of the sulky.

It was found that his right shoulder was dislocated and that a rusty iron from some part of the sulky had penetrated the fleshy part of his leg, inflicting an ugly wound. It is likely to be some time before he will be able to be around again.

The heat was decided Wasatch Monarch first, Rimac second, Erma D. A. third. The little mare was soon all right again and entered the next heat with George Edwards as driver, and finally won the race.

In this race the ruling of the judges was criticised a good deal. In every heat Rimac passed the wire first, but was given third place in three of them and second place in one because of his mixed gait.

The third race was a 2:17 pace for a purse of $300, best three out of five heats.

Entries—Black Cloud, owned by G. Edwards; Iris, owned by E. Thompson and Minnie B., owned by J. Bennion.

Iris won three heats straight, Black Cloud second and Minnie B. third in each heat. Time—2:22, 2:25½, 2:25½.

A dash of three-eighths of a mile for runners was won by J. W. Cory's Troublesome, Camas second and Nancy H. third. Time—0:38½. The purse was $50.

The judges were Messrs. S. J. Wiegel, Ed Johnson and D. J. Murphy, and the timekeepers Messrs. T. H. Harris and B. D. Blackmar.

SECOND DAY.

With the weather as fine Tuesday as any one might wish, the second day of the races at Agricultural Park was poorly attended, which may be partly accounted for by the expected ebb from the holiday rush on Monday.

If the judges were harassed by accusations of unfairness and wild gesticulations from the crowd on Monday, the very opposite state of feeling prevailed Tuesday, there being perfect order and no kicking to speak of against the decisions of the judges.

The three-minute trot was declared off, there being only two to start—Lord Mortimer, owned by J. W. Cory, and Watsaka, owned by Henry Horker. Consequently, the first race was a 2:28 pace, for a purse of $300, best three out of five. There were three entries: Windsplitter, owned by E. G. Hines; Minnie B., owned by Ira Bennion; Billy W., owned by McCoy. Four heats were run, Windsplitter winning first heat and Minnie B., the remaining three, who was declared the winner of the race. Time, 2:37½, 2:40, 2:33½ and 2:33½.

The third race was a quarter-mile dash, for $50. Entries Nancy H., owned by O. W. Winberg; Spider, owned by Sam Clark; Troublesome, owned by J. W. Cory. Spider won by at least two lengths; Troublesome came second. Time, 0:25½.

For the last race a quarter-mile dash for $50 was made up. Entries: Bob Martin, owned by J. T. Axley; Camas, owned by McCoy; Strip, owned by Albert Child; Spider, owned by J. T. Evans. Camas won, with Spider, Strip and Bob Martin following successively.

The judges were J. C. De Kalb, Ezra Thompson and E. H. Airis.

Starter—Melville McLaughlin of New York.

THIRD DAY.

The attendance at the Agricultural Park races Wednesday afternoon was small again, as on the previous day. A strong westerly wind pounded dust into the eyes of the spectators, making it very disagreeable to watch the races.

The first race was a two-year-old trot, for a purse of $250, one-half mile heats, best two in three. Entries: Anxiety, owned by J. Butterfield; Wasatka, Jr., owned by J. W. Cory; Nettie Graham, owned by Henry Parker; Libbie M., owned by D. McLord. Only two heats were trotted, Nettie Graham winning both and Libbie M. coming in second. Best time, 1:52 and 1:53.

The second race was a half-mile dash for $75. Entries: Strip, owned by N. Evans; La Belle, owned by R. Leon; Vivian Vinton, owned by J. Axley.

Vivian Vinton first, La Belle second, Strip third. Time, 0:51½.

Three-minute pace, best three in five, purse $300—Entries: Brig, owned by A. Grant; McMillan, owned by A. Strathford; Tombstone, owned by R. Mackenzie; Freddie K. owned by J. B. Keyser; Sailor, owned by McCoy.

Four heats were paced, Freddie K. winning the first heat, and Sailor Boy the other three. Time, 2:41, 2:34½, 2:36½, 2:35½.

Fourth race, three-eighths mile dash, purse $50—Entries: Vivian Vinton, owned by J. Axley; Camas, owned by J. McCoy; Spider, owned by J. T. Evans. Camas first, Vivian second, Spider third. Time, 0:38½.

Dr. C. W. Higgins entertained the crowd by sending his splendid driving team around the track, making a half mile in 1:24.

The judges were J. C. De Kalb and Ezra Thompson. Starter—Melville McLaughlin.

LAST DAY.

A small crowd of shivering people saw the end of the races at Agricultural Park Thursday afternoon. Owing to the rain the only races were the 2:35 trot and free-for-all pace, the three-eighths and one-half mile running races being discarded.

Soon after the races commenced a cold north wind, with rain, set in, causing the ladies to huddle together in the amphitheatre and driving the men from the track to shelter. The judges suffered severely in the open stand, but wrapped themselves in blankets and managed to endure until 5 o'clock when, with chattering tooth, it was decided not to attempt the running races.

In the 2:35 trot Wasatch Monarch won three out of four heats, Captain Haines capturing the second heat, while Riley C. came out third all the way. The time of the four heats was 2:36, 2:35, 2:35, 2:39.

Second race, special free-for-all pace, best three in five, purse $250—Entries: Black Cloud, owned by G. Edwards; Iras, owned by C. Thompson; Ruby Messenger, owned by Pat McEvoy. Iras first, Black Cloud second, Ruby Messenger third. The time was 2:24, 2:27, 2:36.

After the first heat, in which Messenger came in second, the judges cautioned McEvoy not to hold her back. Iras won in each successive heat, with Black Cloud crowding her in the last two, while Messenger dropped back to third place. If the apprehension of the judges was correct that Ruby Messenger was held back in the first heat, when she came in second, it is quite logical to conclude that the strings were drawn still tighter in the second and third heats when she brought up the rear. The spectators were divided as to whether or not Messenger was allowed to do her best.

Toward the end of the races the track became very heavy, and the mud flew from the pneumatic tires of the sulkies, slowing up the speed.

The judges were O. J. Salisbury, J. C. De Kalb and E. H. Airis.

Starter—Melville McLaughlin.

Colorado Spring Races

The four-days' meeting held at Roswell Park, Colorado Springs, of which the first day's results were published in this paper last week, came to a close on Thursday, June 3d. Quite a number of California horses were present at the meeting. The track record for harness horses is 2:14, and on the last day Andy McDowell attempted to reduce this with the Sydney mare Lena N., but failed, 2:15½ being the best she could do. The track was heavy and slow, and a high wind was blowing. The following are the summaries of the last three days of the meeting:

SECOND DAY.

First race, trotting, 2:16 class—Hazel Kinney, by McKinney, won second, third and fourth heats and race. Ariel won first heat. Lady Beaumont and Dr. Leek were third and fourth respectively. Time, 2:22½, 2:20½, 2:21½ and 2:22½.

Second race, pacing, 2:19 class—Aeler, by Camp, won in straight heats, Carmine second, and Simon Guggenheim third. Time, 2:23, 2:22½ and 2:23½.

Third race, running, four and one-half furlongs, purse $150—Sadie M., 110, won, Laparan, 110, second, Torsion, 112, third. Time, 0:58½.

Fourth race, running, six furlongs, purse $150—Swiftly, 110, won, Rosmore, 109, second, Harold Whittington, 109, third. Time, 1:09½. Royal Lancers, Boodler and Ocorona were left.

THIRD DAY.

The third day of the meeting was more successful than either of those which preceded it. Not only was there a large attendance, but the races were run in better shape. There were no delays and all seemed to be working to make the meeting a success. A great deal of money changed hands in the different events.

First race, trotting, 2:25 class—Electric Light, br g, by Alcolyte, won; Armenian, by Pelletier, second; Respond, b s, by Campbell's Electioneer, third. Best time, 2:24½.

Second race, pacing, 2:25 class—Miracle, blk g, by Joe Thorndale, won; Shecum, b g, by Durfee, second; Montclair, br g, by Monte, third. Best time, 2:28.

Third race, running, Office Club Stakes, half mile and repeat, purse $150—Lorena II, 105, won; Patsy Dugan, 107, second. Time, 0:51.

Fourth race, Antlers Hotel Selling Race, six furlongs, purse $150—Miss Redwood, 114, won; Pleasanton, 109, second; Brobuska, 111, third. Time, 1:19. Miss Redwood was sold to the owner for $300.

Fifth race, running, Hoffman Club Stakes, one mile, purse $150—Charlotte M., 113, won; Encino, 116, second; Pueblo, 116, third. Time, 1:48.

Running, Pikes Peak's Club Stakes, $150, three furlongs—Humming Bird won, Lou Watkins second, Way Behind third. Time, 0:36.

Running, Hiawatha Branch Handicap, six furlongs—Melody won, Lucky Star second, Sallie Lamar third. Time, 1:18.

Running, The Gazette Stake, $125, five furlongs—Torsion won, Ocorona second, Royal Lancers third. Time, 1:03½.

FOURTH DAY.

The last day of the meeting drew several thousand people, and there were five races finished. Two of the events were for harness horses, the others for the gallopers. A California horse, Geo. W. McKinney, won the three minute class trot in straight heats, Hooper pressing him closely, however, in each heat. In the report sent the time of this race was not given.

In a free for all pace and trot Lena N., Raymond M. and Klamath were the starters. Lena N. won easily in straight heats, the best time being 2:15½. The track is said to be three or four seconds slow.

Going Some at Denver.

The following from the Denver News of June 2d, will show that the California horses have been going pretty fast over there in their preliminary work, and that the Colorado colt Carbonate is pacing like a whirlwind already this year:

"Carbonate, the great son of Superior, has commenced his summer's campaign by pacing the fastest practice mile ever stepped on the Overland track, and the second fastest mile ever negotiated in Colorado. Robert J.'s exhibition mile in 2:06 is still the best mile ever made in the State, and Kate Medium holds the record for a heat in a race at 2:10. J. C. Wallace brought the iron gray out on the track yesterday just before noon for a little fast work. He had been watching the California horses step a mile in from 2:12 to 2:15 and thought he would take a jog to show them they weren't the only ice in the pond. Searchlight's three miles of Tuesday has aggravated him a little, for Keating drove the coast wonder three miles in 2:15, 2:12½, 2:09½. Wallace scored Carbonate down easy and got away at a fair gait. The first quarter was made in 33 seconds and the second in 30 seconds, making the half in 1:03. The third quarter was also stepped off very rapidly, though its time was not caught, and the last quarter in slower time. The mile was in 2:08½. Wallace and another man holding a watch caught the time as 2:07½, but Ferry's watch gave the time 2:08½, and the latter was accepted. When the little grey went shooting under the wire and it was certain he had made the fastest mile of the year the stablemen and rail birds who were watching the performance cheered the plucky horse and driver, something very unusual on working out days.

The road drivers of Portland, Oregon, will hold a matinee over the Irvington track July 4th. It is expected that thirty or forty horses will be entered.

A WRONG CREDIT.—After the labor bestowed, the time occupied, the anxiety to avoid errors, not at all surprising that Ralph Tozer, editor of the racing department of this paper, should feel aggrieved when the Thoroughbred Record credited "Great Sires of America from Lexington's Time" to me. In all probability the error came from my long connection with the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN and from being unaware of Mr. Tozer's connection with it. It will not be out of place to say that there are several heads of departments connected with this paper. As stated before Mr. Tozer has charge of the Racing Department and "The Saddle," Mr. D. L. Hackett the Trotting and Track, Mr. J. X. Dawitt, Gun, Rod, Kennel, etc. Dr. Heyman is on the Agricultural, and in addition to the Special I take a hand at The Farm, Breeding, a general "all-round" commission, wherever I can lend a hand.

That my associates fill their places with credit I feel well assured the readers of the paper will readily grant, and this much I do not need any endorsement of that being that none can pursue their work more cheerfully, each doing his "level best" to make a good record.

"THE FIGURE SYSTEM."—Namely the system which has been adopted from tracing the winners of "classic events" in England, Derby, Oaks and St. Leger, from the institution of these races up to the time that Mr. Bruce Lowe completed his tables, and giving the greatest prominence to the families which had furnished the greatest number of winners. (This would appear to be sound doctrine and it is, in a measure, but whether it can be carried to the extent that the originator of the system and his disciples claim is somewhat more than doubtful. Mr. Wallace in his article on that system which was published in the Spirit of the Times, May 28th, states: "The book is evidently the result of a vast amount of labor in the search for the mysterious and unknown, and the attempt to methodize the ideas it may contain is still a further requirement of the mysterious and unknown, and the labor required to comprehend the exact meaning of the author is herculean. The years required to prepare the book clearly and fairly, foreshadow the labor of months required to comprehend it."

Fairly stated so far, "though the mysterious and unknown" are so intimately connected with breeding animals, especially those which are to display remarkable speed, courage and endurance that it never can nor never will be eliminated. The most natural system to fix upon is to couple animals that possess the qualities in as high a degree as can be obtained those that are sought on account of their fitness for the place. "Were like to produce like" whenever like attributes of sire and dam were blended, the mystery of breeding would no longer trouble the student. Simply this, that with male and female of the same type the offspring would be exact duplicates of the parents. Neither better or worse, and if there were differences in sire and dam then the offspring would be a mean between the two. Racehorses, however, have a mixed ancestry, and which may be termed the sources of modern thoroughbreds of varying characteristics. Without considering other breeds which have been instrumental in producing the qualities sought after there are enough divergences in the three main lines to warrant the assertion that about the only point of resemblance was speed at the gallop. Barbs, Turks and Arabs are credited with being the potent force in the production of racehorses, and it is beyond all reasonable contention that Turks and Barbs have been the prime factors in establishing the race, and the judicious intermingling of that blood and other strains—in one sense kindred—resulted in the grand animals of the present time.

Mr. Lowe in Chapter V, sires, says:

"Having satisfied myself as to looks and performance, the next step in choosing a sire to select a horse tracing in male descent to the Darley Arabian, if one expect continuous success. That there have been scores of high-class sires bred from the other two lines of Byerly Turk and Godolphin Barb (in other words Herod and Matchem) goes without saying, yet 'the long result of' has shown that these two lines are gradually but surely going to the wall, or only exist by mating with mares very strongly inbred to Eclipse. Yet, as stated elsewhere, I cannot believe that the superiority of the latter line was altogether due to the Darley Arabian, and am far more disposed to think that the dominant position of the line was brought about by the extraordinary combination of female lines in the pedigree of Eclipse."

With all the partiality for the male line of the Darley Arabian in place of getting into some inextricable confusion consequent on a person striving with figures, at least those who have not mastered the intricacies of the system, an easier method is to take the tabulated pedigree of Eclipse and learn the dominant lines.

There were 4-64 of Darley Arabian blood in direct male descent. Of the Godolphin Barb 8-64, and of Hautboy (by Darcy's White Turk from a Royal Mare) no less than seven crosses, aggregating 8-64. Beside the blood of the Darcy White Turk, there are several more of Turkish blood, so much of that blood that it vastly preponderated over all other breeds in Eclipse.

There are other good reasons for the Turk and Barb proving better than the best of the Arabians, among which one of the best informed of his time, one who was conversant with Turks and Barbs, has described them as they were when the breed of race horses was in the process of formation, that was the Duke of Newcastle, and his book published in 1667 gave description of the various breeds.

"The Barb is not so fit a horse for a stallion for the manage, as for running horses; for he gets long and loose horses * * * If you would have mares to breed running horses of, then they must be shaped thus; as light as possible, large and long, but well shaped, a short back, but long sides, and a little long in legs, their breast as narrow as may be, for so they will gallop the lighter and nimbler, and run the faster, for the lighter and thinner you breed for galloping is the better. Your stallion by any means must be a Barb, and somewhat of the shape I have described the mares to be of; for a Barb that is a jade will get a better running horse than the best running horse in England, as Sir John Fennick told me, who had more experience of running horses than any man in England, for he had more running horses than all England besides, and the most part of all the famous horses in England that ran one against another were of his race and breed.

Some commend the Turk very much for a stallion to breed running horses, but they are so scarce and rare that I can give no judgment of them, and therefore I advise you to the Barb which, I believe, is much the better horse to breed running horses.

Of the Turkish I have seen very few of them, but two merchants brought three Turkish horses to Antwerp, very fine horses, but oddly shaped, their heads were very fine, but like a camel's head; they had excellent eyes and thin necks, excellently rising. Somewhat great bodies, the croup like a mule, legs not great, but marvelously sinewy, good pasterns and hoofs and their backs rising somewhat like a camels.

I had a groom, a heavy English clown, whom I set upon them, and they made no more of him than if he had been as light as a feather.

They appeared not so fit for the manage as for to run a course, which I believe they would have scoured (secured), they trotted very well and no ambling at all.

The horses about Constantinople I have spoken about with many gentlemen that have been there, as likewise with divers merchants who came from thence, who all agree that there are there the most beautiful horses in the world. * * * That it is one of the most glorious sight these horses that can be, and the most beautiful horses in the world. And certainly they are brave horses!

I never saw but one of these horses (Arab) which Mr. John Markham, a merchant, brought over and said he was a right Arabian. He was a bay but a little horse, and no rarity for shape, for I have seen many English horses far finer. Mr. Markham sold him to King James for five hundred pounds, and being trained up for a course, when he came to run, every horse beat him."

Not at all surprising from these descriptions that Mr. Lowe discovered that from Barb mares are descended the greatest number of winners of "classic races." The only competitors, so far as can be told from old history, Turkish mares, and for some reason few, if any, of these were imported into England, whereas Barbs and "Royal mares" were quite numerous. The description of what shape mares to breed running-horses from should be, corresponds with the conformation of the Barbs, and the Turks with their larger size, heavy bodies and capacity to carry weight "oicked" well with the looser made animals from Morocco. The application of figures to demonstrate the relative value of the old time sires and dams is entirely proper, and to those who take time to master the lessons Mr. Lowe presents it may be a fascinating study.

At all events, one who takes the time to learn will surely have a better acquaintance with old genealogies than a person who cares little for Barb, Turks and Arabs, but in extending the application to sire figures, dam figures and running figures, it may be that there is a tendency to involve in obscure theorems, a propensity to overrate the "tap roots" to glorify Eclipse, Matchem, Herod, to apotheosize Godolphin, Byerly Turk and Darley Arabian and underrate superior animals which are not embellished with star numbers. In most instances a good deal of time wasted which could be employed more profitably than in the endeavor to acquire the figure doctrine, and also to establish such heterodox notions that certain strains of blood are good in one case and worse than worthless in another.

Individuality, form and performances, "top crosses" cast aside, if not connected with that abracadabra, the cabalistic arrangement of figures.

HORSES OF THE EARLY DAYS.—No one who is at all conversant with the native horses of California can deny that they were animals of wonderful endurance. The Fremont ride from Los Angeles to Monterey and back, published in the paper of last week is sufficient proof of their marvellous capacity to cover distances seemingly beyond the power of any quadruped, and in these days similar feats were not unusual.

The Spanish horse was imported into England during the reign of William the Conqueror, according to Cambrensis. Roger de Bellesme, one of his captains in the invasion, was created Earl of Shrewsbury, for military services, imported from Spain a number of stallion which were located on his estate at Powisland. The progeny of these horses were eulogized by the poet Drayton, and the Duke of Newcastle extols the breed in the highest terms of praise.

That they were a prominent factor in the formation of the English thoroughbred is well assured.

Newcastle states: Corqueror was of a Spanish horse, Shotten-Herring was of a Spanish horse, Butler was of a Spanish horse and Peacock was of a Spanish horse, and these beat all horses in their time so much, as no horse ever ran near them.

Many vacant spaces in the pedigree of Eclipse when the table is carried for a number of generations and there is scarcely a question that mares by Spanish horses and Spanish mares were used in the early days of race-horse breeding.

Notwithstanding the many years that have elapsed since Turks, Barbs, Syrians, Persian, Spanish and native breeds were used to found the breed, the striking characteristics of the various races are apparent, heightened, of course, by better systems of rearing and a more favorable climate for increase of muscular development.

The stronger Turk, the long and rather loosely made Barb, the diminutive and prettily turned Arab, the Spanish horse, larger and with a good deal more substance, Persian and Syrian between Barb and Spanish, and the English race, which was undoubtedly a valuable part of the compound, all having exemplars among modern racehorses.

Inbreeding has intensified characteristics and it is susceptible of proof that owing to the earlier importations into England of Turks and Barbs than Arabs these strains were multiplied and built upon each other almost to the exclusion of the others. Few Arabs in England in the seventeenth century, while there were many from Turkey and not a few from Barbary. As has been shown, an importation of Spanish stallions was made in the eleventh century, the first recorded importation of a distinct and superior breed. The habit of calling all horses Arabs that were brought from all parts of the Orient in the beginning of the eighteenth century has, doubtless, led to many errors.

Generally, in fact, actually conceded that Godolphin was a Barb, and distinguished authorities claim, that as Darley Arabian was purchased in Smyrna he was in all probability a Turk or Syrian. At this date, however, when importations from these countries have come to an end, there is little to be gained, further than the gratification of knowing the origin of modern thoroughbreds, and the satisfaction the student of genealogy derives from delving into into the "dim and misty past," as it is entirely safe to say that the practical breeder can obtain all necessary information for successful breeding in the history, records and performances of horses of this century.

"SANTIAGO."—On the 21st of March, 1852, a race was run at Los Angeles which evoked a "heap" of excitement, and on which it was claimed that $50,000 were staked. The race was for one thousand cattle and two thousand dollars in money a side, but the betting was very heavy.

The Sydney mare, Black Swan, beat the California horse, Sarco, the distance nine miles.

The account states: "Sarco was thought by the native population to be invincible, and many hesitated not to stake their whole property on his winning the race."

The story of the race was copied from the Los Angeles Star by the Spirit of the Times in the issue of May 22, 1852, and it contains the sentence: "At the word Santiago they were off." That, according to my recollection was the word used, though it seemed that one of four syllables was somewhat too lengthy for the purpose, but a reference to the paper verifies the remembrance. But San-tee-aw-GO! and there is a solution. The first three syllables to get ready, GO and the start is ordered.

Not at all unlikely that our method of "giving the word" originated from the Spanish use of the sanctified name, though it is somewhat passing strange that the word which is now in the thoughts of millions should have been the starting signal for races on this coast some fifty years ago.

Why not a favorable Angury? The mare of English blood defeated the pet of the descendants of the "haughty done," and there can hardly be any other termination than a "glorious victory."

RECOLLECTIONS OF MESSONNIER. Charles Yriario in his recollections of the great artist recounts the following interesting story of the first meeting of the two great men, Governor Stanford and the world-famed painter. Messonnier was never satisfied with less than absolute correctness, and in his great picture, 1814, not only horses, uniforms and all the component parts of the historic picture had to be faithful transcripts, but the action of the horses correctly represented. The anecdote gives the interview and it must have been a revelation to the artist when the Governor descended on the topics he was so anxious to get information upon:

"Messonnier's habit of constant observation was also displayed in the first interview he had with Mr. Leland Stanford, ex-Governor of California, who, armed with an intro-

California Horses East and the Superiority of Our Youngsters.

The past week's racing on the eastern side of the Rockies has demonstrated that California-bred horses are important factors in the running, as usual. Formerly, to our minds the best two-year-old colt in the Golden State last spring, has won two good races within a week, in the last one beating with ease the highly-thought-of Phoenix colt, Mr. Phinizy, whom he was conceding five pounds. It would not surprise us if he made matters warm for Jean Beraud, Dr. Eichberg and others in the front rank of two-year-olds as the distances in the races for youngsters are lengthened. We say this because he is always coming fast at the wind-up in five-furlong races and because his five furlongs in 1:01½ over Ingleside track with 113 lbs. up is not to be sneezed at.

About the best two-year-old at Harlem is Santello, a Rancho del Paso product by imp. St. Andrew—Lorilla. He has won several good races of late for W. J. Speirs, and the critics over there pronounce him a good one. Here he was about a third-rate colt. At the Toronto and Hamilton (Ont.) meetings the best timber-toppers by long odds were Sir Andrew and Red Pat, both bred at Rancho del Paso. The first-named is also by imp. St. Andrew. Green B. Morris won some good races at Benning a few weeks ago with Tyr Shena, by Tyrant from Shena Van, and at the Brooklyn meeting, now in progress, the filly was also successful in good company. Alvarado and Mainstay have run some fair races at the far East. Mr. Clay (by imp. Darebin—Miss Clay) has won some very excellent races, and last Saturday ran second to the good Californian, Formero. Richard J. (by Morello—Bonnie Leaf) has shown his heels to the Harlem sprinters on several occasions, and Our Johnny (by Fresno—Jess) has won a good share of the money he has run for. Estaca (by Emperor of Norfolk—La Cienega) was hard to beat at Louisville, and was taken out of a selling race for something like $3,000. Rey Salazar was also a winner at Louisville in good company.

As Olinthus has not faced the starter at Chicago, whither he went, as Nick Hall has not sent to the post his good fillies, Sevens and Canace, and as the colors of Burns & Waterhouse, now at Harlem, have not as yet been seen, the California horses may be said to have not fairly had a chance to show their Eastern and Middle West rivals that they are superior from a fast galloping standpoint. However, within the next month we shall doubtless be called upon to chronicle many glorious victories of the flyers bred in this horse paradise, a task we shall most cheerfully perform.

We contend that California-bred thoroughbreds are better-developed as two-year-olds and will win more races for their owners during that season than those bred in any other State of this great Union, and that as three-year-olds, four-year-olds and upward they fully hold their own, as their victories in the American Derby, Brooklyn Handicap and other great stakes amply attest. They are generally acknowledged to be the superior of two-year-olds bred in any other State, taken as a class, and as they run well in after years, are consequently more valuable as pieces of racing property than horses that first saw the light in States where the winters are severe, where their growth is checked by the prevalence of blizzards, of storms of sleet and snow, and where the youngsters have to remain indoors from November 15th to March 15th. In California such conditions do not prevail, our baby flyers knowing not the blighting effect of snow or sleet, hail or blizzards, but on the contrary are allowed to run out, stretch their limbs and develop until, as two-year-olds, they look to our Eastern friends like four-year-olds. It is no uncommon thing, at our November and December sales, to see youngsters termed yearlings led into the sales-ring looking like three-year-olds at the least, ranging in height from 15 hands 2 inches to 16 hands 1 inch. A Sir Modred yearling was sold for $1,700 at Charles Kerr's sale late in 1895 that stood good 16.1 hands and weighed close to 1,050 pounds. He won early, too. Big Strive was over 16 hands as a yearling, as was Lucky Dog and many others that we could name. As the big ones in most cases proved performers of more than average merit, the claim cannot be set up that they were soft and unprofitable.

We say to those turfmen of the East that have never given much thought to California-bred horses, come out and buy a yearling bred here, take it back East the following spring and beat the Kentucky and Tennessee youngsters in nearly all the rich stakes. If you follow this plan you will bless California and her race horse products and the one that pointed out the path for you to take.

THE pool-room keepers have been notified to quit by the Sheriff of San Mateo County, and last Tuesday shut up shop. On Thursday they transferred their paraphernalia to Sausalito, transacted business, were arrested and bailed out, and will make a test case with the authorities. It does look strange that the Town Trustees of Sausalito, or Gamblerston, since they have seen fit to grant licenses to persons to gamble on the green, gamble on the ponies or any other kind of gamble, should say that Messrs. Billy Harrison and Joe Harvey are fish and that Messrs. Henry Schwartz, John Humphrey and Charles Kingsley are fowls. The outcome of the judicial discussion of the matter will be watched with interest by those that like to see Monopoly triumphant and those opposed to close corporations.

THE six-year-old gelding Merloolas was led into a sales ring in Australia recently and an offer of 1,500 guineas was refused for him. The owner wanted 2,000 guineas. Later he concluded to take the 1,500 guineas offered, but the man that had gone that high had changed his mind too, and the Sydney Cup winner remains in his original owner's hands. Merloolas was not trained until he was five years old, and was bred on the figure system of the late Bruce Lowe—a plan known in Australia and followed out to some extent by Frank Reynolds of Tocal and a few other breeders long before the book on the subject was ever printed. That Merloolas should not be trained until he was five years old was probably a plan of his owner, too, he in all probability arguing that the horse was bred according to his notion, should be a "stayer," and that if the gelding were allowed to thoroughly develop by running out in the fields he would make a much better "Cup" horse. That the breeder was wise in saving the horse there is no gainsaying, but it is also true that few race horse owners possess the patience of this equine giant's breeder.

THE believers in the Bruce Lowe plan of breeding race horses, in putting the figures to their animals, have to go deep into the pedigree pit, and get an insight as to how the celebrities of the long ago were bred. If for no other reason than that its adherents are forced to "dig," the Lowe system is a good thing. Out of the research it would be odd indeed if some breeding theories of great benefit were not evolved. That too much credit is given to the "tap-root" matrons, in many instances twenty-two generations away, is our present belief, for it certainly looks reasonable that the proportion of the blood of those mares in the veins of racers of the present must be infinitesimal, even if they should trace eight or ten times to a particular "tap-root" mare. Mr. E. I. Robinson, who has taken a great interest in our late friend's theories, presented an argument to us the other day against the Lowe plan that, to our minds, is unanswerable, and it is the fact that England's very greatest broodmares (Penelope, Pocahontas, Emma, Queen Mary and Cini-zelli) all trace to different "tap-root" matrons, respectively the Tregonwell Natural Barb mare, dam of the two True Blues, D'Arcy's Black-legged Royal Mare, a mare by Gower's Stallion and the Burton Barb Mare.

Han d'Or Goes Close to a World's Record and Beats Plaudit.

CINCINNATI, June 9.—The mighty has fallen. Plaudit, the greatest three-year old of the year, met his first defeat to-day in the Latonia Derby after one of the grandest contests ever witnessed on the Western turf. Han d'Or is the colt that lowered the colors of Madden's pride, and in doing it he was within a quarter of a second of Buckwa's world record for a mile and a half, made at the Oakland track. Ten thousand people cheered Han d'Or as he came down the stretch like a wild horse and looking every inch a winner. Martin was whipping Plaudit and riding like a demon. A hundred yards from the wire Plaudit made a gallant effort to come up, but it was of no use; his speed and endurance were gone, and Han d'Or crossed the wire a winner by three lengths amid great excitement in the grand stand and loud cheers from the hundreds of stable hands in the field.

The pair went away heads together, and Han d'Or at once set out to make his own pace. The first half of a mile was covered in 0:50, the six furlongs in 1:14½, seven furlongs in 1:27½, the mile in 1:40½, mile and an eighth in 1:54 and the mile and a quarter in 2:07½, the final time being 2:32½.

Plaudit was always 1 to 7 in the betting, while as good as 5 to 1 could be had on Han d'Or. The Derby is worth $5,000 to the winner, which is the property of George A. Slingerly.

The mile and a half record is held by Buckwa, who ran the distance at Oakland December 24th last in 2:32½, but as a six-year-old he carried only 103 pounds, so that Han d'Or's record is the better. The best previous performance by a three-year-old was Lamplighter's mile and a half, made on August 9, 1892, at Monmouth Park, in 2:32½, with 109 pounds up.

[By Ed.—Plaudit carried 127 lbs., Han d'Or 114, but as the latter won rather handily by three lengths, he must be accounted nearly if not quite as good a horse as Plaudit. Last season the winner of the Latonia Derby started in nine races, winning three, running second once, third once, unplaced four times. All his wins were over the Newport (Ky.) track, all at five and a half furlongs, too, the best performance being when he carried 113 lbs. to victory in 1:08½. The best horse he beat was Frank Thompson. The breeding of Han d'Or is first-class, he being by Hanover (leading stallion of America) out of Fleur d'Or, by imp. Rayon d'Or (sire of Tenny, Tea Tray, Souffle, Don de Oro, &c.); second dam Blandona by Longfellow; third dam Blanche J., by imp. Australian; fourth dam Crucifix (dam of Fairplay, Quito, &c.) by Lexington; fifth dam Lightsome (dam of Sprightly, Salina [Salvator's dam], Nevada [dam of Luke Blackburn], Linda, Lexicon and Fadette) by imp. Glencoe; sixth dam, the immortal Levity (dam of Ruric, Mildred, Brenna, Lever and Legatee) by imp. Trustee. Coming from the family of which Salvator, Luke Blackburn, Fairplay, Longstreet, Volturino and Leonatus were members, little wonder that Han d'Or is a rare good one.]

CONCERNING the Eastern two year old fillies, Morning Telegraph says: "The 2 year-old fillies do not seem to be a particularly high class lot by the way they keep beating each other. One day Ornamental gives promise of being a real good one, then Onondaga's Pride trims her, which in turn succumbs to Lady Meddlesome and High Degrees. Now all except High Degree may be considered second best to Whiplash. The latter is no doubt a good filly, and with her size and speed, if not given too much of it this year, ought to develop into a grand 3-year-old."

DR. H. E. ROWELL has purchased Whitcomb from H. T. Carmen for $1,200. The horse is speedy and ran some clever races last fall. Dr. Rowell will hardly be able to run any of his horses on the Harlem track. Yesterday was the first time that Satsuma has been able to raise a gallop in his exercise, and after his work the horse pulled up lame.—Chicago Exchange.

duction, presented himself at his studio at Poissy. After visiting the master's studio, Mr. Stanford, who was accompanied by his wife, asked him to paint his portrait. Meissonier, who had been disturbed at his work, refused, alleging his numerous engagements, and in order to show him how busy he was he took him into that part of the studio where his picture '1807' was in progress. Mr. Leland Stanford seemed to take a great deal of interest in the numerous studies of horses, and his remarks struck the painter, who, astonished at the knowledge he displayed on such a difficult point, inquired how he had attained such a correct view. Mr. Stanford at last told him that he had spent several years of his life analyzing by means of photography the different movements of the walk, trot and gallop of a horse, and that he had still hundreds of plates in his possession. Meissonier, who had been at first somewhat cold and formal, immediately changed his tone and inquired 'which day he would like to begin sitting for his portrait.'

Never a person he had met previous to that time who could impart so much knowledge in relation to the manner in which horses progressed as the one who had spent so much money and given so much of his time to teach what had been a "sealed book," and not only on that, but form and peculiarities of race he had just as much knowledge to impart, and none with a happier gift of conveying information pleasantly.

Had Governor Stanford not engaged in the instantaneous photographing of horses in motion it might never have been done. That is on the complete scale followed at Palo Alto. Incurring an immense cost, the only one likely to carry it out, himself.

"THE BOTTOM" } That part of Rancho del Paso, the level
THE PICTURES } land which lies north of the American river is called "The Bottom." Not a euphonious name by any means, a sort of Americanism to designate that kind of land, of such general use that people who have lived in any of the big valleys of the continent are familiar with the term.

Now that the greater part of the horses are kept at The Bottom, the larger share of the buildings erected there, that in fact the center and main location of the buildings, a post office established, Del Paso, it will be surely well to let it be known by the same name as has been bestowed on Uncle Sam's quarters.

Famous land, no matter what name it is known by. Several thousand acres there may be, somewhere near two thousand in alfalfa. Some years ago quite a large acreage in hops, but owing to the falling off in price the land has been put to other uses. Notwithstanding it is nearly a dead level and only slightly above the high water mark of the river, the soil is of a character that does not get muddy. Rainfall, however heavy, soon dries, the water rapidly percolating through the ground, and at the same time the water is so near the surface that in the driest times capillary attraction is sufficient to keep plants well supplied.

THE BOTTOM.

The picture represents the narrowest part of the bottom, a point of the high land extending within a half mile of the river bank, widening rapidly in each direction. There are many very beautiful views, the timber on the bank of the river forming a pleasing background to the picture, the rolling hills, broken into ravines and with many fine old trees which beautify what may be termed the landward side. Very beautiful where hills and bottom join to the east of the cottage and stallion stables, and if anything were needed to complete the view, the summits of the Sierra Nevadas in the far away distance add grandeur to the prospect.

The bottom land has its uses and the hills complete the advantages. The hill paddocks and fields when the grass grows scant supplied with the cut alfalfa, and mares and foals could not look better. The foals strong, full of life, even those which had only a few days of existence ready for a gallop, and the mares, however sedate, from a dozen or more years after having been thrown out of training, ready to join in the sport, especially when near the hour of being returned to their boxes, rushing from one side to the other of the field with all the ardor of youth.

A PRINCESS ROYAL.

The blue bloods on a thoroughbred stock farm are of different grades. All of the nobility, Kings, Queens, Dukes, Earls, Marquises, Lords, Counts and so on, titles earned by long lines of illustrious ancestors, though once in a while one forces itself into the companionship of those of high degree notwithstanding a bar sinister. Most of the dames of Rancho del Paso have at least sixteen quarterings, but on other places not so well endowed, occasionally one with a near cold cross will force itself into companionship.

Thus the fourth dam of such cracks as Diggs, Sutton, Arbaces and Olinthus is one of the "said to bees," though there is a strong probability that if the ped. could be extended he flaw would be removed. Then the grandam of Sport McAllister and Zamloch was by Indicator, a son of the well-known trotting stallion Signal, and while these two grandsons have a wonderful flight of speed and can hold it for the best part of a mile, the trotting descendants of Signal labored under the charge of softness.

But the picture that appears shows that it is a Princess Royal without a line of anything but royal blood in her veins and is a sample of the feminine yearlings at Del Paso.

Few better, if any, judging from looks, a whole lot of them well up to that high standard.

IMP. CRIGHTON

An Australian representative, the horse that is pictured over the name of Crighton. Highly formed and as handsome as one could desire to see. The cut can be pronounced a capital portrait, although any picture will fail to picture him as he is. A powerful horse all over, "speed lines" standing out in bold relief, and the shape is not that of a counterfeiter, as he is one of the fastest horses ever saddled. Cy Mulkey, who trained him, rates Crighton the fastest horse he ever handled, and as the veteran had in charge some of the very fastest quarter-horses of the olden time, and many fast ones of high breeding in later years, his estimate is based on good grounds.

A finely-bred horse, the only fault that can be found in his pedigree is that his fifth dam was an Arab mare. But that being so far off that Crighton has only one part in thirty two of Arab blood, even people who have as little fancy for the "desert steed" as I have must admit that the dose is so homeopathic as to be incapable of injury.

Hissire, Clieleden, a brother to the great Chester and other great race horses, while his dam adds another strain of Australian Sir Hercules—which has been dubbed the "Stockwell of the Antipodes," and in the fifth remove Crighton inherits the blood of a host of the celebrities of old England, among them The Colonel, Sir Hercules, Priam, Irish Birdcatcher, Glencoe, Economist, Emilius, Venison, some of them doubled, so that there is enough of the genuine kind to counteract the Arab drop.

Australian and New Zealand horses have done so well on California mares that Crighton can hardly fail, and his daughter, Canace, has shown so well, having beaten Sombre and other cracks, that he has already established his name.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

HOOF-BEATS.

KING BARLEYCORN, by imp. Kantaka—Nattot, seems to be the best of the youngsters racing around Harlem. He makes his fields very yellow.

DOLLY REGENT and her owner, R. Rome, with the rest of the stable, were ordered away from the St. Louis track June 3d, on account of the mare's inconsistent running.

J. HENRY MILLER has sold to E. C. Headley and H. H. Stanhope the yearling bay colt by imp. Deceiver out of Confidence, by Longfellow. Price, $750.—Thoroughbred Record.

THERE are seven entries for the free-for-all trot at the Breeders meeting and they are Azote, 2:04½; Ethel Downs, 2:10; Zambro, 2:11; Aster, 2:12; Galette, 2:12½; Toggles, 2:12½, and Monterey, 2:13½.

AMONG the prominent Lexingtonians who will "do" the Montana circuit this season are Col. J. Henry Miller and "Johnny" McLaughlin. They will leave Lexington for Butte, Mont., in about two weeks.—Thoroughbred Record.

ACCORDING to her picture, in an Eastern exchange, Naron, the two-year-old filly by Arion, 2:07½, dam Nancy Hanks, 2:04, is an exquisitely blood-like thing, strongly favoring her mother. She is described as a big little one and "shows promise of speed."

THERE are 434 entries in the trotting and pacing events to come off during the first two weeks of the Breeders meeting. The number of horses entered is 120; and it will thus be seen that each horse is entered about three and a half times on an average during the two weeks.

MISS MARK, a recent two-year-old winner at Harlem, is by imp. Galore out of imp. Phoebe Marks (dam of San Jacinto, owned by Owen Bros.), by Kingsborough. Phoebe Marks was purchased in Australia by Capt. Tom Merry for Hon. L. J. Rose, of Los Angeles, but is now the property of R. W. Walden, owner of the Bowling Brook Stud, Maryland.

CAPT. SAM BROWN, Christianburg, Ky., has purchased from J. M. Murphy the good mare Souffle, by imp. Rayon d'Or, out of Soncy Lass, by imp. Mortemer. She is in foal to Buck Massie, and will join Capt. Brown's select band of broodmares.—Thoroughbred Record. Charley Boots tried to buy Souffle here last spring, but Murphy would not at that time set a price on her.

THE famous Monmouth Park track is reported to have been sold for $40,000 to Martin Van Kuren, the Superintendent of the course, who represents others. An effort to pass a law permitting limited racing will be made next winter. If it succeeds, Monmouth Park will resume its old place in the list of tracks governed by the Jockey Club. Otherwise Monmouth Park may become a truck patch.

MATT STORN's horses are turned out at Ingleside track, and Morinel, who was not larger than the proverbial pint of cider, is furnishing into a slashing big mare. Right now she is nearly as big as Morellito. Horatio will stand training all right, Mr. Storn thinks, and should prove a very useful horse. Mercutio is big and strong, and it is the intention of Mr. Storn to school him over the timber. From his conformation and activity, we should say he would make his mark at the jumping game.

A DISPATCH from New York to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "One of the Fleischmanns says that the offer Sloan received to ride in England next year came from the Duke of Portland. Sloan will, it is said, accept it. He will sail early in October. The season in England lasts longer than it does here, and Sloan will finish the season with the Lorillard Eeresford stable for which he rode last year. Sloan did not ask to be released from his contract with the Fleischmanns in order to go to England this year. It is said that the Duke of Portland's retainer will be between $20,000 and $25,000."

QUITE a number of Western stables are getting ready to come East. The powerful California stable of Burns & Waterhouse is on its way. According to telegraphic dispatches received this morning, the establishment is resting at Chicago and may take part in a few races at Harlem, even though the civic authorities stop betting at the track. The stable will be in force at Sheepshead Bay and Brighton, but will reserve its strength for Saratoga. The Gravesend meeting will continue until Thursday, July 16th, and the Coney Island Jockey Club will throw open its gates on the following Saturday. The book programme of the last-named course is expected to be out to-morrow. It will offer quite a number of long-distance races. Few, if any, of the stables quartered at the local tracks will proceed either to the Canadian or Western circuits. In fact, most of the best establishments now out of town will come East, where conditions for all classes of horses are being made daily—"Centaur" in N. Y. Com. Advertiser June 3.

Australasian Notes.

The Hobartville lot opened the sale, and they did not go as well as usual, even the first of the great Marvel's get not being much sought after, and a fine colt out of the Dutch Skater mare Welcome only realized 95 gs. A beauty by Far Niente from a Trenton mare did not go beyond 100 gs. A filly by the last-named out of a Goldsbrough mare, with plenty of size and quality, brought 80 gs. and another out of Banksia, a rare pedigree, related to Gozo and Bobadil, was sacrificed for 75 gs. F. Fielder, who was the chief buyer of the most fancied ones, secured a Splendor colt and a St. Blaise gelding (this latter showing great promise) for 100 gs. and 80 gs. respectively, and he gave top price, 330 guineas, for a "perfect gentleman" from Tiwona (Jeweller's sister), by Cranbrook. A Clan Stuart colt, more than half-brother to Survivor, realized 135 gs. Mr. McCaughey's bid, and Mr. J. Alsop gave the same for Patriot's half-sister by Gibraltar. She was all but being passed in at 100 gs. A Goldsbrough colt from a Grand Fleuret mare, the picture of Goldsbrough was knocked down at 120 gs. One representative of Antaeus, as handsome and racing-like as his sire, realized 105 gs. and Mr. Tom Payten secured, for 110 gs., a remarkably stout son of Cranbrook and Clare. Corzeze was represented by some highly creditable stock, which was not much sought after; nor was Mr. Allen's Corinth produce, though showing plenty of substance. The best price for the latter was 70 gs. for a half-brother to The Chevalier, which Mr. Archie Yuille purchased. Total yearlings were drawn last. They were a very even lot, and considering the demand on the day sold well. A colt, as near perfection as possible in every way, was one by Sweet William from the dam of Melos, and not unlike the latter. Started at 100 gs. and Mr. J. Gough got him for 205 gs. second top price. Mr. W. Kelso, Jr., secured a rare bargain in the Goldsbrough—Equation colt at 100 gs. He had previously caused a sensation by bolting, and narrowly escaped breaking his neck in the saddling paddock.

Mr. D. O'Brien arrived in Lyttleton by the Talune on April 26th, and gave the Southern writers some interesting gossip concerning his experience. He has leased Rob Ray to one of the Randwick trainers, and his two broodmares he has left behind to be mated, one with the St. Simon horse, Haut Orion, and the other with the Galopin horse, Grafton. Mr. O'Brien is a thorough believer in the figure system, and is breeding his mares according to the book, while the Sweet William colt he brought with him is produced from somewhat similar lines as was Carbine, he being by a No. 3 sire from a No. 2 mare. Talking of racing, Mr. O'Brien has no hesitation in pronouncing Bobadil the best two-year-old he has ever seen. A veritable flying machine is the St. Albans colt, and this can be imagined when he was timed to run a mile in 1:37. Merloolas, who is bred strictly to the figure system, the ex-owner of Carbine regards as one of the best horses he has come across. Amberite he reckons a right good colt, but it would always be 2 to 1 on Aurum as against him if they were to meet on terms of equality. The demonstration against Mr. Hordern and his trainer, Earnshaw, at the recent A. J. C. meeting, Mr. O'Brien terms a scandalous exhibition, as there is no straighter owner in the Colonies than Mr. Hordern, and his trainer is also looked upon by those who know him best as quite above deceptive tactics. Vedette, says Mr. O'Brien, was extremely lucky to win his race, which was due to good horsemanship, or rather bad horsemanship on the part of the jockey of The Chief. The latter should have won by several lengths. Mr. O'Brien is strongly of opinion that the entries for our classic races go in too early. He thinks an opportunity should be given our owners to secure youngsters at the Australian yearling sales in time to enter for the valuable two-year-old events.—New Zealand Sporting Review.

We are fast approaching the end of the racing season, as there is nothing more of an important nature, says the Sydney writer, "Martindale," either in the way of handicaps or weight-for-age races, to be run off between now and August 1st. Such being the case, a glance can be cast backwards at the past, and looking over the results may show us that Amberite has been far and away the most profitable to his owner of this season's three-year-olds. It is really now an open question, though the majority may think otherwise, as to his not being Aurum's equal. Anyway, on paper he has the pull; and when in years to come people overhaul the calendars they would be apt to say that Amberite was the best of his season as a three-year-old. His record is a wonderful good one, amongst the wins being a Caulfield Cup, V. R. C. Derby, Champion Race and A. J. C. Derby and St. Leger. There are minor events in the way of weight-for-age races in addition to these, and, at a rough estimate, Amberite's winnings so far this season amount to a little over £7,000—not a bad sum for one horse, and I should think far in advance of any other. When well this son of Carbine is possessed of a great turn of speed, as was shown in the way he covered the last mile in each of the races for the Cumberland Stakes and the A. J. C. Plate. I well remember timing Amberite and Aurum on the Monday after the V. R. C. Derby, when Amberite did the best, but it was generally admitted that Aurum was not quite himself. However, there is an idea that Aurum, who is now suffering from a split hoof, will never leave Australia. If so, there is yet a chance of their meeting again. However, so far Amberite has proved himself to be the crack of the season so far as the two-year-old class is concerned, and of the local contingent Essex is about the best of a moderate lot, as in the Easter Stakes he, to appearances, could have put up another 9lb. and then have been a little better than Cocos, who is far from being the crack that was anticipated. Taken all through, our two-year-olds are a moderate lot indeed, and as Essex has been sold to go to West Australia, Cocos now stands at their head, and quite a host at the bottom of the list.

WINNING SIRE IN AUSTRALIA.—Merloolas gave his sire St. Swithin, a good lift up among the sires by putting £2670, to his credit during the late A. J. C. Meeting (writes "Milroy" in the Sydney Mail), which, with the earnings of Insulator and Gnullo, will place the Tooralie sire in a respectable place when the lists are made up at the end of July. Gozo, who got a good start last Spring with Gaulus and The Gaffer, stands second on the list of winning sires over the late meeting, thanks to the doings of The Chief and Syerla, and Amberite has put on a tidy cheque to the good total he has already earned for Carbine during the current season. The following table shows the position of all the sires whose stock earned more than £200 at the meeting:—

Sire	Amount won in stakes
St. Swithin, 14, by Cadogan, 11.....	£2670
Gozo, 20, by Wild Oats, 14.....	2140
Carbine, 2, by Musket, 3.....	1797
Bill of Portland, 25, by St. Simon, 11.....	1114
Lochiel, 36, by Prince Charlie, 12.....	681
The Fester, 13, by Sacchorometer, 14.....	533
Battalious, x, by Warlike, 3.....	416
Sweet William, 3, by Yattendon, 17.....	414
Nordenfeldt, 13, by Musket, 3.....	397
Metal, 5, by Sterling, 12.....	368
Clan Stuart, 11, by Prince Charlie, 12.....	363
Antaeus, x, by Sir Modred, 17.....	321
Vanguard, 2, by Traducer, 20.....	281
Splendor, 23, by Speculum, 1.....	254
The Dauphin, 27, by Traducer, 20.....	239

It will be seen that, where practicable, I have added the number of the family to which each stallion and his sire belongs, but unfortunately for the system I cannot give Battalious and Antaeus a number. Antaeus goes back to the Young English mare by Bay Camerton (imp) from a mare imported from England by Messrs. Aspinall and Brown. What the pedigree of that English sire was is more than anybody knows. If she had one there is no record of it. The dam of Battalious was by imported Drum Major (11) from Miss Newbold, by imp. Livingstone (11) from Day and Night, by imported Rous' Emigrant (4) from a daughter of imported Theorem (1). All record of the lines of the beautiful chestnut son of Warlike ends at the daughter of Theorem, but, clean or half-bred, Battalious was one of the grandest-looking and fastest racehorses on the Australian turf in his day, and he has a knack of putting his good looks on and infusing his great pace into his stock.

The turf obituary notices of recent date from New South Wales contain the names of two famous brood mares, viz: Melody and Ghinnie Ghinnie. The former as the dam of The Broker, Melos, Melodius (dam of Meli and Wallace), Minuet (dam of Elton) and other good ones, was a great favorite with her owner, Mr. Frank Reynolds, of the famous Tocal Stud, N. S. W. Singular to say, the ancient daughter of The Barb and Sweetheart never threw a bad one to Goldsbrough. The Broker, in the early '80's, was a high-class horse, whilst every racing man knows what a champion Melos was. Melodius, too, could gallop a bit. The loss is a severe one to Tocal, but Mr. Reynolds has fortunately retained several of the old mare's fillies for stud purposes. Ghinnie Ghinnie was a great pet with her owner, Mr. Jas. Lee, of L-r-ras Lake. The daughter of Barbarian was very fast on the turf and scored some big wins. At the stud she produced some really good animals, such as Regins, V. R. (Oaks winner), Crichton (now in America), Tridentson, Rangitsinghi and others.—N. Z. Sporting Review. Crichton is owned by A. B. Spreckels.

While at Hobartville recently, says the Sydney writer "Milroy," I had a long yarn with Mr. James Wilson, Sen., who is staying over at Chipping Norton with Reaper and Relic. Mr. Wilson is the kind of man that would have got on in any walk of life, but no doubt he struck the right and most congenial path when he threw in his lot with the horses. He is a man of prodigious memory, and remembers Muley Moloch, the sire of Alice Hawthorne, standing in the same part of England as he came from. Muley, Mr. Wilson says, was a brute, and one of the worst stallions in England, and if it were not for his fluking Alice Hawthorne he would have been forgotten a week after his death. Mr. Wilson told me how he became possessed of Dinah, the fourth dam of Newhaven. She was a very fine mare, bred at Bukulla by Messrs. Wyndham, and when she came into Victoria she had a foal by Commissioner (an Arab). Mr. Wilson in due course bought this foal, who was afterwards the famous Buckley, and ran till he was 16 years old. When Mr. Wilson discovered the worth of Buckley he determined to buy a few sons of Commissioner when he next visited Sydney, but John Higginson told him the stock of that horse was worthless, so he at once concluded that Buckley got all his excellence from his mother, and when he returned to Victoria he tried to buy Dinah, but the owner would not listen to any proposal to purchase. However, in time the owner of Dinah became involved in financial difficulties, and Mr. Wilson got the mare. There was no such thing as a stud book around in those days and he did not bother about her breeding, being quite satisfied she was thoroughbred, but had he imagined breeding would have come to the pitch it has he would have written to Messrs. Wyndham for her full pedigree. The first foal she bred for him was Eleanor, the granddam of Mermaid, with whom he won the Sydney Cup in 1861. Then followed Ebor, the best horse of his day in Victoria. With him Mr. Wilson took the conceit out of the followers of the Sydney crack, Tarragon, in the Adelaide Cup in 1865. The late Mr. Richard Holland took many large bets that he would win the Adelaide Cup of 1865 with his nomination, and to win those bets he secured the best horse in Australia, Tarragon, but Ebor beat him and won Mr. Wilson a pot of money. Musidora, who followed Ebor, was a good race mare and the dam of Briseis, who won the V. R. C. Derby, Cup and Oaks in 1876, and her sister, Idalia, was the dam of Oceana, the dam of Newhaven. Mr. Wilson has no doubt about Dinah being pure-bred, both from her looks and the excellence of her stock, and the best proof of his opinion of her purity is that her stock were good from the first, and since she foaled her first foal for him in 1856 he has stuck to the blood to this day.

Answer to Correspondents.

SUBSCRIBER.—I should be obliged if you would inform me on the following: 1. What is the breeding of Annie Stout (thoroughbred)? 2. What winners she has produced if any? 3. Has she produced anything by Lord Clifden? 4. If so, what is the breeding of this Lord Clifden? Answer.—1. Annie Stout, b m, foaled 1880, by Bay Dick (son of Lexington and Alabama, by Brown Dick). 2. She produced Clifton, by Lord Clifden, who, as a three-year-old (in 1892) won six races, and Live Oak, by Linden, who won nine races as a three-year-old (in 1894). 3. Lord Clifden is by imp. Buckden out of a mare by Enquirer.

"Gave Good Satisfaction."

LORENA, Tex., Sept. 10, 1897.

Enclosed please find money order for $1.50. Send me one bottle of Caustic Balsam. The bottle I bought some time ago gave good satisfaction. Please be prompt, as I need it at once.

The Reward of the Honest Jurist.

Out of all the places of public honor or public trust, where men are placed in the crucible of public opinion, there to either carve for themselves an imperishable name, or to acquire everlasting odium, none rises in point of severity to that of the Supreme Court. As a political annihilator it has no equal. It has often been said that the highest court in the land is the political stepping stone to nowhere. This axiom finds exemplification in one of two ways; one of these is perpetuity in office, the other political oblivion. One is the fruit of fidelity, the other the reward of treachery. The man who serves the people well in the temple of Justice is rarely ever permitted to serve them in any other capacity; this also may be said of the one who fails to do so, but in an entirely different way. The truth of this is manifested at every State Convention where Supreme Judges are to be nominated. While geographical, personal and political advantages are considered in the case of the Governor, and all other officers of State, the question of selecting material for the Supreme Bench resolves itself into one of fitness alone. Upon this line there is no division of sentiment. It is generally conceded by both parties that the man who enters the judicial chamber and leaves his party behind is the man who serves that party best. The man who has no friends upon the bench is the one who has the most among the laymen. No more forcible illustration of the truth of this principle could be had than that furnished by the quiet undercurrent which has already set in for the nomination of Justice McFarland to succeed himself. Without waiting to ascertain whether or not he will accept the nomination, his numerous friends throughout the State have determined that it shall at least be tendered him at the hands of the next Republican State Convention. In doing this, they are paying him but a just tribute. The twelve years he has spent upon the Supreme Bench of California, are years that any man might look back over with pardonable pride. In fact it may be said that his whole life, nearly all of which has been spent in the State of his adoption, has been devoted to the advancement of its judicial interests. For many years he was an eminent practitioner at the bar, and for more than twenty-four years has been one of the prominent jurists of the State. His judicial career began in 1861, when he was elected District Judge of Nevada County. This was supplemented later by a four years' term on the trial bench at Sacramento, and the whole finally crowned by a twelve years' service upon the Supreme Bench. His record there is part of the State's history. In asking for his re-nomination the friends of Judge McFarland honor both the man and the party.

A NUMBER of strings which were campaigned in California last winter and spring are already quartered at the Butte (Mont.) track. Harry Whitman has Joe Levy and Velox; A. Wright, Peixotto; Dan Dennison, Lord Chesterfield and Judge Tanner; Lynch & Lannigan (trainer, W. Short), Tuxedo, Kaiser Ludwig, Miss Reid and Scotch Rose (several others are at Denver); E. F. Smith, Torsida, Hermanita, Racination, Don Luis, Montallade, Paul Pry, Torpedo, Strathrose and Fred Gardner; W. D. Randall, Oatler Joe, Salvation, Robair, McLight, Greenback, Watomba, Twinkle Twink and Cipriano; J. McLaughlin, Una Que Amo and El Ladrone; F. Howard, Oro Fino; J. Gazan, Irma and a two-year old colt by Irregular; D. Jordan, Master Mariner, Rio Frio and Chilcoat Pass, and Garnet Ferguson, with Sweet Cakes, Maud Ferguson, Distance and Distinction.

It is understood that the price paid by P. Donne for Paul Griggs was $4,000, and for David Tenny $2,000. B. J. Johnston offered to sell Griggs, Tenny, The Plutocrat, Serena and Candle Black for $9,000 last week.

The State Tournament at Live Pigeons.

Under the auspices of the Olympic Gun Club, at the Ingleside grounds, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 3d, 4th and 5th, was held the state tournament at live birds for 1898. The total number of entries during the three days' shooting was thirty-six. The weather during Friday and Saturday was a little too warm to liven up the birds, but however, a fair number of them were up to the standard and taxed the skill of the shooters time and again; on Sunday, the birds were, as a rule, an exceedingly lively lot and created havoc with a number of promising scores. Among the visiting shooters in attendance we noticed Frank Merrill and J. P. Taylor of Stockton, J. E. Vaughan and C. E. Leighton of Los Angeles, J. Rice and O. M. Judy ("Fox") of Visalia, Merced was represented by Kibby and Ingalsbe, H. Stelling ("Burnett") of Davisville, one of Sacramento's crack shooters, G. Rubstaller, Jr., was also in evidence, Dr. J. M. Barker ("Heidelberg") of San Jose, Lieut. Whitworth, U. S. A., and others. The interest was unabated throughout the three days' races and in some even amounted to a positive enthusiasm, the successful shooter receiving the warmest congratulations from his competitors and friends. The shooting was daily witnessed by quite a number of spectators.

The first event on Friday was at six birds, $2.50 entrance, $10 added money. Nineteen men faced the traps in this race. The pool money, $52.50, was divided between Merrill, Jackson, Vaughan, Leighton, Kibby, Haight, and H. C. Golcher, who were high guns with a clean score each.

The second event at ten birds, $5 entrance, $15 added, with twenty entries, gave a money division of $115 between O. Feudner, Maskey, Merrill, Ingalsbe and Wales who had straight scores.

The principal event of the day came third on the program, it was at twelve birds, $7.50 entrance, $25 added. Haight (who made the best average during the entire shoot) Rice, Maskey and Kibby with a clean string of twelve birds each took the pool money, amounting to $150.50. "Burnett" kept with the high men until his eleventh bird, which he missed.

The last event of the day was a miss-and-out, $2.50 entrance, $10 added. On the first round Rice, Sears and Merrill were out, leaving ten men who staid in until the end of the fifth round. The shooting was then continued from the thirty-two-yard mark until the ninth round was ended with four men still in, "Burnett," Kibby, Feudner and Haight, who divided the purse of $42.50.

The initial event of the second day was a ten bird race, entrance $5, $25 added. Straight scores were made by Merrill, Haight, "Fox," Rubstaller and Sears, who divided the purse, amounting to $105. This event placed "Fox" in the money for the first time during the shooting.

The second race was also at ten birds, $5 entrance, $25 added. The winners were O. Feudner, C. Nauman, "Fox," "Burnett," Ingalsbe and Kibby. The money divided amounted to $115, contributed by eighteen entries.

The contest for the Gold Dust medal was the final race for the day. Twenty birds, $5 entrance, $15 to second and $10 to third high guns. Seventeen shooters entered this contest, which was won by Merrill, who scored twenty straight O. Feudner won second money, $15, on his score of nineteen; the third money, $10, was divided among Haight, "Burnett" and Rubstaller with eighteen birds each. The winner of the medal will receive all the entrance money in this event next year. Rice, who won this trophy at the last tournament, was paid the entrance money for this match, amounting to $85. A side pool of $7.50 in this race, between three men, was won by Feudner.

The two preliminary races of the last day were at ten birds each, $5 entrance and $25 added. In the first match, eight men with straight scores, O. Feudner, Rice, Merrill, Slade, Webb, Maskey, Jackson and Kibby divided the purse amounting to $150.00. The second race, the Du Pont Smokeless Powder match, gave a money division of $155 to seven out of the twenty-six men who were entered, Nauman, Merrill, Haight, "Burnett," Webb, Leighton and F. Feudner were the skillful and lucky shooters who made clean scores.

The final race of the tournament, the trophy for the winner being the Fay Diamond Medal, brought out twenty-two entries. Twenty birds per man at $5 entrance, $15 to second high gun and $10 to third high score. The winner of the medal will receive the entrance money in this event at the next tournament. Clarence Nauman proved to be the invincible in this race, his string of twenty straight being acquired by reason of skill and nerve, and also with the aid of an element of luck that turned in his favor at three different times when birds which were hard hit made for the boundary line with a temporary strength and speed that seemed almost certain to call forth the referee's decision of "lost bird;" such record on the score was happily averted by the fall of the bird in each case within bounds. "Fox" and Maskey gave him a close race; on the sixteenth round a "lost bird" for Fox and on the fifth round a miss for Maskey spoiled their chances for a straight score, both finishing the match with nineteen each, the added money for second and third high guns, $25, being divided between them.

reason. They say: 'We like the sport, but we don't see why we should pay more than it actually costs, simply to fill the pockets of a man or a body of men who, under the guise of sportsmanship, advertise a shoot and get up a program of events.' There is a great deal in this: more perhaps than most people think, and unless this system of holding tournaments for profit is done away with, the sport of trap shooting will receive a black eye that it will find it a hard matter to recover from.

The large tournaments of the past few years, in which big sums of money were added as cash inducements for shooters to come and try for, almost invariably added large sums to the club's treasury. The added money was raised in various ways, the manufacturers of sporting goods and ammunition being mulcted heavily for advertisements in the programs. According to an authority on the subject, several of the programs for such large tournaments netted anywhere from $500 to $600, while they did not actually cost, typesetting and paper, printing and postage, over $100 at the outside; often not half that sum. The entrance fees included a charge of three cents for each target thrown in the event. Now it has been proved by actual experience, and can also be proved on paper, that targets can be trapped at a small profit to the club when one cent is charged. The profit at that figure is, it is true, almost infinitesimal, yet the fact that there is a profit of one cent a target, warrants the claim that there is a profit of two cents clear on each target thrown at three cents. At a tournament held in a Southern city a few years ago, the sum of $3,000 was added to the purses. This added money was obtained from various sources. A certain number of manufacturers were asked to donate $50 apiece, a sum of $1,000 being obtained this way; then each shooter was taxed $10 before he was allowed to shoot, and this tax resulted in another $1,000 or thereabouts, 100 shooters paying their fee of $10. Thus $2,000 of the added money was obtained. The other $1,000 came from the excess of receipts over expenditures for targets, and the deficit was easily overcome, the club coming out ahead instead of behind, thanks to the skillful and ingenious methods of financing the tournament.

But such shoots as the above are out of date now. When trap shooting was in its infancy, and before professionalism at the trap had risen to the pitch it reached a year or so ago, there were any number of fairly good shots and enthusiasts who were ready and willing to "donate" for the mere pleasure of competing in a tournament, on the bare chance of making a "killing." The "killing" came, but it was always on the wrong side, and the enthusiasm died out. The professionals, the paid experts, invariably walked off with from 85 to 90 per cent. of the purses, and the semi experts had barely more than carfare when it was all over. As a natural result large tournaments were doomed, and it is now a hard matter to get thirty or forty shooters together, where a few years ago an average entry list of that size might be confidently looked for if there was only $500 added money announced; $1,000 would not draw them out now.

Trap Shooting at Monte Carlo.

A prominent Eastern trap shooter, who recently returned from Monte Carlo, talked upon his return from the world's greatest gambling resort, as follows, concerning trap shooting there:

"There are some great shooting matches there, and most of the contestants do not care a pin for money. They go there with lots of money to spend and what they win at shooting is lost in some other game. The Monte Carlo management sees to it that few people get away with the cash. There are some fine shots at Monte Carlo, but not many of them, as the greatest number of shooters are poor shots and only go there to have sport and spend their money. The best shots make lots of money during the season, and I suppose live by shooting.

"The pigeons are better than our pigeons, and the boundary is shorter. There is only a boundary of seventeen yards straight away from the trap and a boundary of twenty-six yards at each side. This means that a shooter has to get at his birds at once. But there is not as many birds to kill there as here. I won one match by killing eight and another by killing nine. A man who kills ten straight wins lots of money. The conditions are generally miss and out, and the entrance fee is high. There is added money, so that a winner gets lots of cash for killing nine or ten birds. Lots of wealthy shooters come down in the morning and just as soon as they miss a bird they leave and you never see them again until the next day. They put up large sums for their shots."

Los Angeles Gun Club.

A combined live bird and blue-rock shoot at Los Angeles on Sunday, May 29th, was held by the Los Angeles Gun Club. Blades broke 93 out of 100 targets, Van Valkenberg 92, Bruner 90 and Breer 88. Three live-bird and four blue-rock events and a merchandise shoot were on the program. The weather was very favorable and a large attendance of visitors watched the shooters. Winner of the Gold Dust Medal, State Live Pigeon Tournament, Ingleside, 1898.

Words of Praise.

SPORTING EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Dear Sir: Permit me to congratulate you on the thorough account given of the tournament held by the California Inanimate Target Association, and the manner in which you have tabulated statistics of individual matches, guns, loads, shells, etc. It is the best account I have seen. Please send me twenty-five extra copies.

Yours truly,
P. B. BEKEART.

An Ideal Portable House.

A most convenient and comfortable house for camping parties, cottage parties at the seaside or in the mountains, for hunting or fishing camps, etc., will be found in the "Portable Leatheroid Houses." These houses are transported knocked-down (flat) in compact bundles and are so constructed that they can be easily erected and ready for occupancy within a few minutes, they can also be taken down and packed rapidly and conveniently. No nails are used in putting the structure together, all the parts are fitted on mechanical principles, the adjustment being very simple. These houses are dust and water proof, perfect arrangements for light and ventilation is combined in the method of construction. Models can be seen and full particulars given at Clabrough, Golcher & Co's, 538 Market St.

Golden Gate Gun Club.

The regular monthly shoot of the Golden Gate Gun Club was held last Sunday on the Pacific Tournament grounds,

H. JUSTINS

Winner of the Golcher Individual Trophy, California Inanimate Target Association Tournament, Ingleside, 1898.

Alameda, two club shoots at twenty targets, and several practice races at twenty and ten blue-rocks were held. The attendance at these shoots is increasing. The shooting of several members is noticeable by reason of rapid improvement.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Coming Events.

June 12—Olympic Gun Club (live birds), Ingleside.
June 12—Empire Gun Club (blue-rocks), Alameda Point.
June 12—Alert Gun Club (Blue-rocks) Birds Point.
June 12-26—South End Gun Club (blue-rocks), Colma.
June 19—Lincoln Gun Club (blue-rocks), Alameda Point.
June 26—Olympic Gun Club (blue-rocks), Ingleside.
July 3—California Wing Club (live birds) Ingleside.
July 3—Reliance Gun Club, Webster street, Alameda.
July 3—Golden Gate Gun Club (blue-rocks) Pacific Tournament

There is a probability in the near future of a challenge being sent by the Golden Gate Gun Club to the South End Gun Club to smash blue-rocks in a match at the traps.

The regular live-bird matches of the Olympic Gun Club at the Ingleside grounds, the regular monthly shoots of the Empires at Alameda Junction, the Alerts at Bird's Point and the South Ends at Colma offer the shooting fraternity a choice and variety of sport to-morrow.

The Alert Gun Club shoot had a large attendance of shooters at Birds Point last Sunday, lack of space prevents the scores being given in detail.

The regular semi-monthly shoot of the Stockton Gun Club at twenty-five blue-rocks was held last Sunday afternoon at Jackson's baths. The scores made were: Jessen 20, Umlauf 19, Ditz, G. 18, Barnett 17, Brown 16, Lonjers 16, Jackson 16, Keyes 15.

ROD.

Chicago Fly-Casters.

Four gold medals were contested for by the members of the Chicago Fly-Casting club last Saturday afternoon. The contests were held in the north lagoon at Garfield Park. Fifteen contestants took part, and some good scores were recorded.

F. B Davidson won two of the events, and was awarded the gold medal in each. He won the long distance and accuracy events, and also the bait casting, his average being 97 and 95 respectively. The long distance dry fly casting was won by F. N. Peet, his throw being 111 feet which is (?) within but a short distance of the record.

For accuracy and delicacy the medal was awarded to M. Heston, his average being 96. A strong wind prevented accurate throwing, and as a result many low scores were recorded.

Fly-Casting at Stow Lake.

Last Saturday and Sunday the seventh (postponed) and eighth contests of the series by members of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club took place at Stow Lake. Champion Mansfield, as usual, was the star performer in Saturday's events; his absence from the lake on Sunday enabled Carr to be champion for a day at least, with H. C. Golcher a good second. The re-entries for casting up back scores were numerous.

The ninth contest will take place June 18th and 19th. A regular meeting of the club will be held in the assembly room of the Mills Building Tuesday evening, June 14th.

The scores in detail are given herewith:

NOTICE TO ANGLERS.

Every angler is invited to drop us a line occasionally, telling us of the condition of the streams they have visited, the killing lure, the number and size of the fish caught, or any other item of interest to anglers.

Coming Events.

June 18-19.—San Francisco Fly-Casting Club. Eighth series of Saturday and Sunday contests. Stow Lake, Golden Gate Park.

June 8-9.—West Michigan Fly-Casting Association. First Angling Tournament. Grand Rapids, Mich.

Fish Commission Notes.

Paper Mill and Lagunitas creeks will be stocked, probably in July, with rainbow and Tahoe trout.

Quite a number of striped bass from three to fifteen pounds in weight have been caught in Russian river recently. These gamey fish are evidently in the river to stay.

No Lock Levin trout fry will be placed in the streams of Marin county this year. The Fish Commissioners state the stock on hand is too small and the conditions of these streams so unfavorable.

A shipment of 25,000 Lock Levin trout fry and 15,000 Eastern brook trout fry (S. fontinalis) will soon be made from the Sissons hatchery for transplanting in the streams and lakes of Yosemite Valley and the National Park Reservation.

The Fish Commissioners have recently placed in Lake Tahoe 7,000 yearling Mackinaw trout, which had been raised in ponds at the Sisson hatchery, they also placed 700 yearling land-locked salmon in the lake, these fish are all from four to seven inches in length and represent the finest conditioned shipment ever made from the Sissons hatchery.

This season has been a poor one for the capture of black bass fry on Russian river, there being but few land-locked pools: the fish, in consequence, have spawned in the river. The policy of the Commission is against the depletion of the stock of bass in the river, so not more than about 5,000 fry is counted on for this season. The pike and other natural enemies of the young bass will, no doubt, take advantage of the young fish in the river this year, this and other indications point to a rather poor season for black bass angling.

The Santa Rosa Republican of last Monday has the following angling notes:

"Frank Brown captured an even hundred trout Sunday. He caught them all in a tributary of the Sonoma creek.

George Riddle and Will Aubrey fished in Sonoma creek and together secured a hundred trout. Most of them were small. Both flies and worms were used.

Fred Page and Hampton Mathews also fished in a tributary of the same creek last week and brought home 138 trout."

The rapid growth of sportsmanship is shown by nothing more plainly than by the increased supply and demand for the lightest rods and tackle for catching game fish. It is only a few years ago that "any old thing would do." The small boy and his bean pole are just as effective as ever, but that only goes to show that the fish are just as unsophisticated as they were then. Fine tackle and light rods, therefore, are due to nothing else but the desire to give the fish a chance for his life, the jerk-'em-out methods of the old days being played out. There is, too, a strong and growing sentiment against the use of "gang hooks," most of the best anglers and the truest sportsmen disdaining to use such murderous implements. The pleasure to be derived from even a small basket of fish caught by sportsmanlike efforts can never be felt by the man who uses a worm, strong tackle, a stiff rod and the jerk-'em-out principles.

Recent advices from Boca state that fly-fishing has been most excellent. A great many fine fish having been caught after dark, as late as 10 or 11 o'clock. So far as the experience and observation of a number of anglers on this stream is concerned, this is something remarkable in the annals of fishing in the Truckee.

Steelhead fry from this State, to the number of 30,000, have been planted in the streams near Barton, Vermont, recently.

Salmon fishing in Monterey bay has been first-class for the past two weeks. Great sport is afforded the anglers in boats.

KENNEL.

Standards.

THE ENGLISH SETTER—There should be considerable prominence of occipital bone, moderately narrow between the ears, and with a decided brow over the eyes. Nose: long wide, without fullness under the eye; nostrils large and wide apart, end moist and cool. Dark specimens of the breed should have a black nose; for orange and whites or lemon and whites a colored nose is desirable. Jaws should be level and equal in length, not pig jawed or undershot. Ears: small, shorter than a pointer's and carried close to cheeks, not showing the inside, partly covered with silky hair, leather thin and soft. Lips: not full nor pendulous, slight fullness at angles, but not to the extent of hanging. Eyes: medium size, animated, best colors being brown, angles straight across.

Neck: must not be th roaty, though the skin is rather loose, slightly arched. Shoulders: sloping, deep blades. Elbows: well let down. Chest: deep rather than wide. Ribs: well sprung, with great depth of the back ribs. Back: arched over the loins, but not roached or wheelbacked. Stiffles: well bent, set wide apart to allow hind legs to be brought forward easily in the gallop. Legs, elbows and toes set straight. Arms: muscular, bone fully developed. Knees, broad and strong. Pasterns: short. Hindlegs: muscular, with plenty of bone. Hocks: clean and strong. Feet: either cat foot or hare foot, well clothed with hair in and between the toes, long and thick preferred. Flag, sweeps gently downward; feather, plenty, straight and silky.

Coat: soft, silky and without curl.

Color: black and white ticked with large splashes and more or less marked with black; orange and white, liver and white, ticked as above. black and white ticked with tan markings; orange or lemon and white; black and white; liver and white.

General appearance: outline elegant and very taking to the eye; should display a great amount of "quality" and symmetry.

Weight: Dogs from 48 to 60 pounds, bitches rather smaller.

Black Pointers.

Some attention has been called through the field trials, both in this country and in England, to the remarkable work done in the field by black pointers. It would almost appear that this somewhat rare color in this breed of sporting dogs is a guarantee for general excellence of working powers. Comment upon the fact has not only been made in England, but has also been the subject of correspondence in our own sporting journals.

Early in the century black pointers were held in special esteem, both for their natural beauty and on the score, justified or not, we cannot pretend to say, of their superiority in the field. Probably such an enthusiast as the remarkable Duke of Kingston, the fame of whose kennel of black pointers has come down to to-day, worked on the lines that "handsome is as handsome does," because we have it on good authority that when his dogs were sold sportsmen of the day vied with one another in securing stock from the ducal kennels.

In connection with the apparent superiority of the black pointer in the field, the question of color in sporting dogs crops up. There is no doubt that the proper color, generally speaking, is liver and white, or lemon and white; speaking from the point of view of what is most proper to the dog as a sporting dog. But when regarded from the point of view of the pointer's utility and services in the field, the question of visibility to the quarry comes in.

Now, we all know that a dark or one-colored dog—bar white—is less visible to game, ground or winged, than another, and that may have something to do with the greater success of black dogs in trial than of others, for it may be taken, that to a bird or hare on the ground, a black dog is less pronouncedly visible than any, bar a dark brown one, thus allowing it a better chance of approaching its game and fewer flushes out of range.

The matter is one of interest, even if the strong arm of coincidence be allowed to enter into the argument, and he fact remains, that on many occasions of recent years, black pointers have asserted themselves as superior dogs on game in a most marked manner.—The Stock-Keeper.

Entries for Eastern Field Trials.

Mr. E. V. Sullivan will be represented in the coming Eastern Field trials by the entries of a quartette of famous English setters from his kennels. Mr. Arthur Bennett will have charge of the dogs and will probably be absent for a year. The Manitoba Field Trials Club trials to be held at Winnipeg, September 8, 1898, is the first of the Eastern events scheduled for the appearance of the Menlo Park field cracker; the entries will include Lock, Dash Antonio, Peach Mark and Hope's Lill. The performances of these field trial winners in the past is a strong criterion upon which to base the placing of a goodly number of wins this season to the credit of the Menlo Park kennels.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Mr. Arthur Bennett has severed his connection with the Verona Kennels and will leave shortly for the East.

The visits noted, in our kennel registry of this issue, of Phil Wand's English setter bitch Flora W., to Dash Antonio, and Jos. Ames' English setter bitch Zippo Zoe to Lock are the only times this year that Mr. Sullivan's dogs have been in the stud, nor will they be bred with any bitches prior to their Eastern trip.

H. CLAY GLOVER, Esq.

RICHMOND, VA.

Dear Sir:—It gives me great pleasure to testify concerning your Mange Cure. I have used it for several years upon my dogs, and find it, used in connection with Fowler's Solution given internally, the most effective preparation I know of. Have recommended it to many gentlemen of my acquaintance, and they all speak of it favorably.

Yours truly,

JOHN S. WISE.

Crops on the Upper Sacramento Valley.

Counting all above Sacramento as the upper section of the valley, and Red Bluff as the northern terminus, a brief journey of two days gave an insight into the crops so far as could be told from the railway car and a short lateral trip at Chico. Heretofore the furthest north the writer had journeyed was Vina, and a couple of days spent on that famous rancho in the Autumn of 1891 created an anxious desire to see more of that country. The grandest valley, or rather it may be better to say, grand from the combination of pleasing scenery and evident fertility, lands as fair as sun shines upon, framed by mountains to the East and West, the Sierra Nevadas one side, the Coast Range on the other and to the north snow-capped Shasta, the white-crowned monarch of them all. Disappointed in not reaching Red Bluff owing to an obstruction on the track, the down train was met at the first station beyond Tehama. The dry season had seriously effected the crops in the neighborhood of Tehama and it was a pleasing change when the alfalfa fields of Vina came into view. Where cut and cocked the rocks were so close together that several tons to the acre were surely in sight, and in the pasture fields great herds of sleek, fat cattle, hundreds of Holsteins and grades, the intense black and snow white in vivid contrast, harmonizing so pleasantly with the green carpet, and the green leaves on the oaks under which they were chewing the cud of blissful contentment. No wonder, for if there is a bovine paradise the fields at Vina can thus be classed. Plenty of feed, shade, and water, and in many places the irrigating ditches are wide,—would be called rivers in some countries,—rapid streams in places, and, where dams have been built, breaking over the obstruction in gleeful cascades. Coleridge writes:

"A noise like of a hidden brook
In the leafy mouth of June.
That to the sleeping woods all night
Singeth a quiet tune."

Byron also signifies his appreciation of the music of a cascade:

"Tis sweet to be awakened by the lark,
Be lulled by falling waters."

and surely anyone who has an eye for beauty and an ear for sweet sounds, cannot fail to admire the clear, sparkling water and the dulcet melody as it falls over the slight obstructions.

And the stream which runs near the house on the Vina rancho sings more than a quiet tune, a liquid melody as it rushes over the pebbly bottom and sways the drooping branches of the trees which grow on the banks.

Between Vina and Chico are some heavy crops. On low lands the wheat was still green and of such heavy growth that it was "lodged" beyond anything I have heretofore seen in California. Part of it cut for hay and I afterwards learned that four tons of hay to the acre was the yield from the portions cut the earliest.

While the growth was not so rank on ground slightly elevated above that which had such a luxuriant mass of vegetation, the return of which will probably be superior, and quite a proportion of that left to be harvested, in place of turned into hay, make a satisfactory crop. The rains which came on the 14th and 15th of May, and subsequent showers, transformed the country surrounding Chico from a prospect of an utter failure of crops to comparative plenty. Late sown grain especially benefited and the grain on fields that had been entirely given up sprung forward with such marvelous rapidity that a fair crop of hay was cut from the poorest, the best left as being of sufficient promise to give a good return of grain.

Mr. L. H. McIntosh on his Nelson ranch, cut eight hundred tons of hay, that averaging about two tons to the acre, and he sold it in the stack for $12 a ton. He could have cut some more but was apprehensive that rain might interfere, and that was reserved for pasture, while another portion was promising enough to leave for grain. And in this connection it will be well to bear in mind that straw is likely to command a relatively higher price than hay the coming fall and winter. The market price now, wholesale 70 and 80 cents per bale, and from the present outlook the price is sure to keep up.

There is in Chico and surrounding country an illustration of the fertility of the soil, and adaptability of the climate to promote vegetable growth. Trees so densely covered with leaves that it would seem that only the very smallest of the feathered tribe could secure ingress. Not restricted to trees like the fig, which have such broad leaves, maples, locusts, oaks, in fact, all the varieties of deciduous trees, and evergreens, too, with a wealth of foliage that is a surprise to people from other countries.

A still more wonderful exhibition of rapid growth is that of a California walnut tree which was grubbed up and sawed off at the "crown," i. e., where the tree emerged from the ground. The longest diameter three feet three inches and the five outside rings measure  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches. Thus the growth of five years added nine inches to the diameter, and as nearly as could be told from the annual growth, the tree was twenty-two years old. An attempt had been made to burn the stump and the central portion was slightly charred, which made the counting difficult, but Mr. McIntosh while not positive was of the opinion that was about the age of the tree.

Nearly the whole of the country between Tehama and Siskiyou greatly benefitted by the late rains. Many of the fields still green, "green as emerald sea," as the Ettrick Shepherd described the vales in which "bonnie Kilmeny" roamed. A pleasing spectacle the large fields south of Chico, dotted with oaks, a sea of verdure relieved by the gray trunks and the spreading canopies of branches and leaves. Fully as beautiful when the grain had ripened enough to obtain the rich golden hue, and then where the brown of summer fallow gave another contrast there was an attraction even in the bare ground. It told of future prospects and the thousands of acres of summer fallow from Suisun to Tehama will surely, if the next season be at all favorable, produce a heavy crop. The late rains gave a grand opportunity for plowing, and with the hope that the weather regulator will vouchsafe a good year as reparation for this "dry season," the year 1899 will bring California out of the ruts.

The greatest width of the Sacramento is somewhere in the vicinity of Colusa, though at Chico there is a width of about forty miles. By far the greatest portion of the valley is susceptible of being irrigated and the time will surely come when danger from drouths will be almost entirely obviated.

What a grand prospect from the summit of the Marysville Buttes when irrigation is general throughout the upper valley. A striking illustration of the forces which created valley and mountain on this side of the continent these serrated elevations. Not far from midway of the valley, the wider plain on the eastern side, the western, though, fully twenty miles from the base of the Buttes to the foothills of the Coast Range. Rising to a high altitude, the crest a wavy outline in places, and then broken into deep and rugged defiles. Wooded glens on the northern side, trees and chapparal extending well up one of the highest peaks, while on the southern side there is little arboreal growth, and, therefore, less attractive than where trees and shrubbery take off the barrenness.

A field of corn on the river bottom looked fairly well and with the warm weather that prevailed on Saturday and Sunday, and a continuation thereof, it will doubtless make a good crop. To one who has lived in the corn-growing sections of the United States it would seem that it might be a profitable crop here on the lands that are favorable for its cultivation. Different from wheat, barley, oats, etc., the "tap root" of corn will reach moisture when the other cereals would succumb to drought, and with moisture enough in the top soil to give it a start it will mature and make a good return in such a season as this.

There were some fair crops along the line, and in the neighborhood of Gridley, fields of wheats and barley that gave promise of a moderate yield, but after passing Marysville some distance, a somewhat gloomy prospect and the few straggling cattle on the hills between Sheridan and Roseville had evidently to "hustle" for a livelihood. Quite a relief, after the sere and yellow landscape, the orchards near Antelope, and still more cheering in this year of scant forage the alfalfa fields on the bottoms of the American river. The worth of that species of clover is better appreciated when there is such a decided scarcity of other forage plants, and this was forcibly exemplified on a small ranch of Mr. W. O. Bowers, which is a few miles from the Sacramento postoffice on the Folsom road. Only fourteen acres and only a small part of it in alfalfa there is abundant feed for eleven cows and three horses. A gasoline engine of four-horse power and a shallow well furnish plenty of water for irrigation as well as a bountiful supply for other uses, and those who grumble over the muddy water of the Sacramento river, can easily secure that which is clear by sinking a few feet in the friable soil. The third crop of alfalfa was being cut, and it was nearly three feet high.

The eleven cows supply the Golden Eagle Hotel with milk and cream, and better cannot be from the care that is taken to keep the animals healthy. Small trouble with such feed and water and stabling at night where there is not the least taint, entirely free from the odor which oftentimes is so overpowering in cattle barns.

Two shorthorns in the herd and one of them, a handsome red and white, Mr. Bowers eulogized as the best. Jerseys and part breeds and the superiority of the Durham proves that by careful selection the rich milk of the Channel Island breeds and the beef-producing shorthorns might be combined with profit. The writer has a cow by Mr. H. A. Mayhew's premium Jersey bull from a Durham cow which is a famous milker, and it may be that eventually a combination of Jersey or Guernsey, Shorthorn, Ayrshire and Holstien will be produced that for "all round" cattle will show decided superiority. There is a small vineyard on Mr. Bower's ranch, and although he has gathered grapes, a bunch of which weighed nine pounds, he intends to replace the vines with alfalfa.

Mr. Mayhew also regrets planting vines on his White Sulphur Spring ranch adjoining the town of Niles, as it is the best early potato land in the country, and while grapes can be grown profitably from San Diego to Siskiyou the "warm belt" extending from De Coto to Warm Springs is peculiarly well adapted for potato culture, securing the benefit of the "first in the market."

The trip, short as it was, and the view restricted to lands contiguous to the railway, removed some of the forebodings occasioned by the failure of crops in parts of the country heretofore visited. Not nearly so bad as was imagined and acquiring a big bundle of faith that California is not so badly off after all.

"The California Vegetables in Garden and Field."

The above is the title of a book, Professor Edward J. Wickson the author. From the short examination, owing to the book being received only a few days ago, it should be in the hands of every farmer, gardener, everyone in fact, who grows vegetables.

There is a prevailing opinion among farmers in California that vegetables can be bought for less money than it costs to grow them, and were that true even then the advantages of having them fresh would be sufficient counterbalance.

But in a great majority of cases that idea is surely erroneous.

This wrong estimate may have been due to the ignorance of native Californians—that is, those who resided here before the acquisition of the country by the United States—and Professor Wickson gives an illustration of the prevailing ignorance as follows:

"Illustrating the inability of the rancheros to understand the wide adaptability of the simple horticultural lessons given at the Missions, it is related that at the time of the American settlement most of the Spanish families living in different parts of Alameda and Contra Costa counties had their garden patches near the Mission San Jose. They knew fruit and vegetables would grow there, because they had seen them in the Mission gardens and they did not know that they would grow elsewhere and had not taken the trouble to find out. Thus the Estudillos of San Leandro had their garden patch at the Mission San Jose and transported their vegetables fifteen or twenty miles, while right outside of the door of their house at San Leandro was the finest garden soil in the world and they did not know it!"

People who have little knowledge of the capacity of California soil for the production of vegetables will be astonished when they learn how small a patch is required to grow a full supply of vegetables for even a large family. Adobe soil, while it is not as suitable as the more friable and lighter colored loams, can be rendered serviceable by a comparatively small addition of sand. Silica enough to overcome its tenacity and then the extreme richness of the black clay will furnish plant food in excess of the requirements of the rankest feeders.

A garden patch can be irrigated at small outlay. Where there is water enough for domestic uses few instances, indeed, where there is not a sufficient surplus to water the garden.

Pease picked fresh from the stalks, potatoes only taken from the ground a short time before placed in oven or pot, cabbage, lettuce, asparagus, in short all kinds of vegetables so much better when stored in their natural receptacle until the cook is ready to prepare them for the meal, so much better that it does not require an epicurean palate to realize their superiority.

If any of our readers ever participated in a coon hunt, and took that occasion to make a raid on a corn field, when "roasting ears" were in their prime, roasted them in the husks under ashes and glowing coals need not be informed that is the only real method of cookery, all the gout retained none of the fragrant and toothsome loss by long lapse of time after being detached from the stalk. It may be, on the principle that "stolen waters are sweet," that boyish tastes were gratified by the excitement of the risk of being detected in the transgression. The racoons caught, however, would have done far more damage, and therefore the abstraction of a few ears of corn only a fair reprisal for the benefits derived from the death of the marauding animals.

We have taken the liberty of copying that part of the chapter on beets which relates to feeding purposes. Even at this date there are lands that can be planted with a prospect of a good return, and this year every additional ton of cattle food will bring relief. Professor Wickson says:

"Thus, by planting from February until June, or even later on moist bottom or irrigated land, the stock feeder can have beets for his animals the year round."

Again we desire to call attention to Professor Wickson's book, confident that it will prove of great value to farmers and gardeners. It is published by the Pacific Rural Press Co., Battery and Bush Streets, San Francisco:

"BEETS AS FOOD FOR STOCK."

All that has been said about the fitness of California soils and climates to the growth of the sugar beet is also applicable to the growth of beets for stock food. Early plantings of beets furnish succulent food when the pastures yield but "dry feed," which is the local name for grasses and clovers which make rich hay as they stand in the field. Though this food is very nutritious, it is better fitted for fattening purposes than for maintaining the milk-flow, and for this reason it should be supplemented by succulent food. By later planting of beets good supplies can be provided for the deficiency of pasture growth early in the winter, which occurs when the winter happens to be colder or drier than usual. Thus, by planting from February until June, or even later on moist bottom or irrigated land, the stock feeder can have beets for his animals the year round.

Preparation of the land is the same for stock beets as for sugar beets. The plants must have wider spacing, both for the rows and for individual plants, according to the size of the variety grown. The long red mangel-wurzel, which frequently reaches a weight of seventy pounds, and should average half that or more, needs room. Three feet between the rows and two feet between the plants in the row is as little space as should be given.

Growers of stock beets often sprout the seed before planting, and sow by hand, from five to eight pounds per acre, in a shallow furrow, following a line set by a "marker," and cover with a cultivator or harrow, finally smoothing with a plank clod-crusher or "rubber."

Summer cultivation determines the character of the crop as it does with sugar beets, and the best cultivators secure almost incredible weights of beets from rich, moist soils. The crop often reaches twice that of sugar beets, and though the stock beets are inferior in nutritive contents, the greater crop and the greater ease with which large beets, growing a good part of their bulk aboveground, are gathered and handled are held to compensate for their less nutritive substance.

Varieties—Of the many cattle beets of Europe three have gained wide popularity in California: the Long Red Mangel, the Yellow Globe Mangel, and the Golden Tankard.

Long Red Mangel—This variety is the largest and produces the heaviest crops, and is the best generally preferred by dairymen and for hog feed, but it requires a deep, strong soil to do well. A rich, sandy loam, a heavy black adobe or a yellow clay, will produce great crops of Long Red Mangels.

Yellow Globe Mangel—This is medium in size, rutabaga shaped, more solid and less watery, and is the best beet for a light, shallow soil. All root crops, as stated already, require a deep, moist soil, and the richer the better. But Yellow Globe Mangels are recommended on a light or gravelly soil, but in such case a liberal use should be made of old and well-rotted barn-yard manure, well worked into the soil.

Yellow Tankard Mangel—This is also called "Golden Tankard." It is one of the most famous English varieties. It is very neat and symmetrical in form—cylindrical, narrowing abruptly at both ends. It has yellow flesh throughout. It reaches large size, but can be grown more thickly than the Long Red.

These Yellow Mangels have gained rapidly in popularity during the last few years; first in Southern California and now in the north as well. They are better suited for calcareous soils, which are very prevalent in California, and they endure drought better than the Long Red.

Twelve hundred and fifty head of cattle together with sixty-five drivers will leave Seattle in a few days on the barge Skookum. They belong to the Thebo-Gavin Cattle expedition. The stock has been specially selected in Montana and Idaho, and will be driven over the Dalton trail to Five Finger rapids, a distance of 220 miles. A steamer will be waiting at the rapids and convey the stock to Dawson where they will be butchered. This band of cattle will average 1,500 pounds each.

CATTLE.

Profitable Cattle.

The conviction of our farmers in regard to cattle may be briefly expressed as follows: There are three kinds of cattle which are profitable, first, special dairy cattle; second, special beef cattle; third, dual-purpose cattle if kept under favorable conditions.

As to the first two classes, there is little difference of opinion. The superiority of the dairy breeds in the dairy, and of the beef breeds on the ranges where dairy products are not wanted is almost universally conceded. Over the third class there has been many controversies and much misunderstanding. But after a few years of experimenting the atmosphere is cleared and intelligent conclusions reached as to the value of this latter grade. Dairy cattle are finding a clearer field in the dairy, beef cattle are unquestionably masters of their domain, and the dual purpose cattle are again filling the great place for them between the two extremes of beef and butter. On the thousands of farms where dairying is not a specialty, these cattle are undoubtedly the most profitable that can be had. Thousands of farmers who have been led into raising special purpose cattle for which they had no use, are going back to the general or dual purpose stock, that gives them enough milk and butter, and good steers to consume their rough feed at a profit. Experience has taught that the average farmer doesn't and can't handle a special purpose cow to make the most out of her. Indeed, he will oftener make the most from the more rugged and less sensitive machine, the dual purpose cow or even the selected scrub.

The special-purpose, highly bred cow needs careful and skillful handling and feeding, just as a standard-bred horse needs careful handling and a competent and intelligent driver.

Oregon and Montana Ranges.

The outlook for Oregon and Montana cattle this year is reported as very fair, and it is being more and more established each year that these sister States are great breeding countries. The ranges in Montana, where stock is better matured than in Oregon, are in excellent condition, and there is every reason to believe that prices will be good for both beef and mutton next fall. Oregon cattle bought last year and taken to Montana, have given the greatest satisfaction to rangemen. They have developed into excellent shape and got to Chicago, Omaha and Kansas markets in first-class condition. Our reports are to the effect that there has been very little winter in Montana this year, comparatively speaking the per cent. of loss has been so nominal as hardly to be worth mentioning.

The spring range is in the very best condition, the early rains doing a great amount of good, and there is today the finest stand of grass in the history of the State.

Red Polled Cattle.

A favorite breed with many of our cattle men on the Pacific Coast of late years has been the "Red Polled." The results obtained in raising this stock has been so thoroughly satisfactory that they are spoken of as the best general purpose cattle known. Hitherto not much has been written about the ancestry of this breed and a short description will undoubtedly be read with much interest by stockmen in general.

The Red Polls, are natives of the countries of Norfolk and Suffolk in England. They are a distinct breed of polled cattle, and in no way related to the Angus or Galloway. Their history can be traced as far back in the past as that of the Black Polls. Herodotus carries back the record of polled cattle to a remote period, and Hippocrates, speaking of the Scythian chariots, says they were drawn by oxen that had no horns. The ancient Egyptian had a mania for carving, and whenever he came across a smooth surface he could not resist the temptation of carving his daily exploits and his favorite animals. Hence we have as clear a record of these strange people as if they only passed away yesterday. The earliest indications of polled cattle are to be found on the tombs, monuments and pyramids of Egypt, also on the bas relief animal sculpture among the ruins of Persepolis in Persia. The records carved on these ancient monuments give a glimpse of the rural life of a people that lived at a period so remote from our own that the mind can hardly realize it.

The probability is that England derived the Red Polled cattle and the trotting horses from the same source—the people who settled in eastern England after the Romans were gone. The Red Polls were noted for their excellent dairy qualities as early as 1792. John Kirby, writing in 1834, says: "The butter produced in the dairy district of Suffolk is justly esteemed the pleasantest and best in England." Arthur Young, in his survey of Suffolk published in 1792, says: "I cannot recommend any cross on the Suffolk cow with a view to the dairy. Wherever exhibited in England or any other country in competition with other breeds in milk tests the Red Polls have made a good showing."

In 1873 a herd book of the Norfolk and Suffolk Red Polled cattle was established, in 1883 the words Norfolk and Suffolk were dropped and the breed has since been known as the Red Polls. Description—First, they are uniform red in color, the tip of the tail and udder may be white. When crossed with other breeds the color is generally transmitted. Second, they are hornless when crossed with horned cattle, they impart this quality so strongly that 90 per cent. of their progeny are hornless. Third, they are easy to keep, being smooth and fine in bone and muscle, mature early and make beef of the best quality of rich milk and many of them never go dry. The cows have large udders with teats of good size. Red Polled cattle especially to excel as general farm animal, and are suited to the needs of the stockmen who expects to raise the male calves for beef, and where the cows must yield a profit in dairy produce.

It is the purpose here to present a few facts in support of these claims on the part of the Red Polls. The following is culled from a Chicago market report: "During the week ending May 24th, 1893, Mr. R. Starky, of Illinois, sold a carload of Red Polled cattle averaging 1,666lbs. These cattle brought $5.80 per 100lb in Chicago. The highest price paid for Herefords that week was $5.75 per 100lb, and for Polled Angus $5.40." There was a good exhibit of Red Polls at the World's Fair at Chicago. They were also quite successful in competition with other breeds in the general purpose class. In aged bulls they won second in a class of ten; in two-year-olds, third in a class of nine; in aged cows, first and seventh in a class of ten; in three-year-olds, third in a class of seven; in two-year-old heifers, first in a class of six; in aged herds, third and fourth in a class of sixteen; in young herds, second, sixth and tenth in a class of fourteen.

In the show rings of England the Red Polls are holding their own with the other breeds, and frequently surpassing all others. At the Norwich Fat Stock Show held in November, 1889, Mr. Colman's Red Polled steer took first prize for best steer or ox on exhibition and for the best animal in the show. At the Smithfield Show in 1881 a steer of three years and seven months old weighed 1919lbs; at the same show in 1889 two Red Polled steers showed the highest gain in weight of anything on exhibition. At the Smithfield Show of 1890 a pure bred Red Polled steer weighing 1987lbs dressed, the highest per cent. to live weight of any slaughtered, being 73.72 per cent. This, according to the Live Stock Journal has only once been exceeded in England by a crossbred steer which dressed 74 per cent. at the Suffolk Show of 1876. A three-year-old steer weighed 1857lb at the Smithfield Show of 1885. Two exhibits weighed 2152lb and 2092lb at the same show in 1884. These were of course selected animals and much above the average, but they show the breed is capable with proper care of producing good size and quick growth. It is further claimed that they are great favorites with the butcher and consumer and command the highest price in the market.

California Cattle Will Be Investigated.

In response to a petition from stockmen in Southern Oregon, Governor Lord has directed Dr. Withycombe, State Veterinarian, to go to that portion of the State to look into the condition of cattle there. A number of cattle have been driven from the drouth-stricken region of California for feeding, and the petition to the Governor is based on the expressed fear that infectious diseases may thus be brought into the State. Dr. Withycombe received instructions from the agricultural department that a Federal officer had been detailed to inspect cattle in California, and for that reason had not gone to the southern part of the State to inspect the California stock coming into Oregon. After reading the petition of stockmen and consulting with Governor Lord, it was decided that the State Veterinarian should go to that section and personally investigate the conditions. It is the policy of the State to allow cattle free from disease, or having certificates from inspecting officers that they are in a healthy condition, to enter the State. Strenuous efforts will be made to protect stock-growers from loss through the introduction of diseased cattle.

Stockton Butchers Picnic.

The fourth annual picnic of the Stockton Journeymen Butchers' Protective and Benevolent Association will take place at Goodwater Grove next Sunday. There will be many games, for which prizes are offered, and one of the contests will be a wrestling match between M. J. McCaffery and Bert Tucker.

Notes.

Messrs. Matthews & Abbott, cattle men in Southern California, arrived at Davisville on the 5th inst. with about 1,200 head of cattle, which they are pasturing on the Cary place, east of that city.

The Santa Barbara Press says: Captain Waters stated last week that his stock were doing well, and he had no reason to complain. He also said that the weather favoring with good rains he would this coming winter plant San Miguel Island heavily to gain and hog stock it to the limits of wisdom.

H. G. Harvey of the Paletto, Bakersfield, is shipping beef cattle to Los Angeles.

The Pajaro Valley farmers expect to cut 10,000 tons of hay this season which will be kept exclusively for feeding stock in the valley.

Chas Baldwin, representing the Breugger Mercantile Co., of Welliston, N. D., was in Portland, Ore., on the 5th inst. He purchased 1,400 head of two-year-old in the Willamette valley, which will be shipped to Williston for maturing.

Flowerree & Lowery, of Helena, Mont., have purchased 4,000 head of cattle in the Willamette Valley which will be shipped to the feeding grounds in North Montana.

The Portland (Ore.) North Pacific Rural Spirit says: A good many cattle have changed hands, but buyers have been more plentiful than sellers, as most owners sold off very close last year and are now stiff on prices for the few left that several buyers have gone away empty handed. Most cattlemen are sanguine that prices will still go higher and remain well up for several years at least.

The cattle movement from Walla Walla so far has been somewhat less this spring than compared with last year. About 3,200 head of range stock has so far been shipped to Montana and Dakota ranges.

Our Watsonville correspondent writes: The pulp pile at the terminus of the beet factory cattle line is of late a busy place. The Watsonville Cattle Co., Christy & Wise and John Lacrahere, are taking large quantities daily from the big deposit to feed to their stock, and several dairymen are also being supplied. The pulp is in choice feeding condition. There is an immense pile of it; by some estimated at over 25,000 tons.

From Santa Barbara, we learn the shipments of stock from Santa Rosa Island and from the ranges in the interior of the county continue, and by another month there will be but a remnant of the immense herds left. The dry year has wrought its greatest damage in the grazing districts, and it will be years before the stock raising industry recovers from the shock. It will probably never be so extensive as in the past, as the drought will discourage crowding the ranges, and much of the grazing land will doubtless be used for other purposes just as profitable. One advantage will be the improvement of the stock, and of course only the best will be saved for breeding.

Our Marysville correspondent, under date of June 7th, informs us that one hundred head of cattle were stolen on the evening of the 6th from the old Miner ranch, twelve miles northeast of Marysville, where they were on pasture.

Albert Vestal, a cattleman of Trinity county, surrendered himself at Red Bluff on Tuesday last. He informed the Sheriff that he had shot and probably killed one of the Alford boys also stockmen in the Bee Gum section of the county in self defense. He was badly beaten about the head and neck and showed signs all over his body of having been roughly handled.

DAIRYING.

Foods Which Keeps Milch Cows In Condition

Most experienced dairymen will concur with us when we say it is no easy task to put much flesh on a good dairy cow while she is in full flow of milk, and if this should be accomplished it must be done at an expense for fattening food that will seriously draw upon the profits of the milk production. Most dairymen are, however, anxious to have their milkers in good condition, not what should be considered fat enough to kill, but with her ribs and hips well covered with flesh which some people might consider being fat before she calves. After a cow has calved and the calf is two or three days old, she should be given plenty of hay or rough fodder or placed on a fairly good pasture, in addition a liberal supply of grain where it is easily digested keeping, of course, careful watch not to overfeed at any time.

It is a good practice to vary the food, giving a mixture of corn meal and oil meal, the latter is considered as particularly good in influencing the flow of milk; increasing the amount of fat into the milk, or cream on it without drawing upon the resources within her body.

About five or six months before the next calf is due, with old cows and free milkers it may be well to substitute this course of rations with bran or middlings. About a month before calving it is well to stop grain altogether and feed again hay, early cut clover or roots which should be grown by all intelligent dairymen. Under this treatment, the calves will be of good size, strong and vigorous, the cows will have no sickness, they will come to a good flow of milk quickly and the milk will have a thick cream on the top from which butter can be readily churned. The cows will also be in good flesh when the calves are dropped and will keep if fed as above very nearly at the same point all the year round. There is but one fault, if a fault it can be called that if these directions as regards feeding is properly carried out, it will be no easy task to dry off some of the cows before calving.

Butter Test and Milking Trials at the British Dairy Show.

The estimation in which the several breeds of Dairy Cows are held in Great Britain, is best shown by the points required in the report of the Show Committee, made to the Council Meeting of the British Dairy

Farmers' Association held in London last month, in which the committee drafted a schedule of prizes, which they proposed should be offered for competition at the next dairy show. With respect to the butter test, it was proposed that the prizes for all breeds be determined by the following scale of points: One point for every ounce of butter; one point for every completed ten days since calving, deducting the first forty days, maximum allowance for period of lactation, twelve points. Fraction of ounces of butter, and in complete periods of less than ten days, to be worked out in decimals and added to the total points. In the case of cows obtaining the same number of points, the prize to be awarded to the cow that has been the longest time in milk. No prize to be awarded in the case of cows under five years old failing to obtain thirty-two points. The Council also received the recommendation of a sub-committee that the points to be awarded in future milking trials organized by the association be as follows: One point for every ten days since calving, deducting the first forty days, with a maximum of fourteen points. One point for every pound of milk, taking the average of two days yield. Twenty points for every pound of butter-fat produced. Four points for every pound of "solids other than fat." Deductions: Ten points each time the fat is below 3 per cent; ten points each time the solids, other than fat, fall below 8.6 per cent. The sub-committee further recommended the adoption of the following standard of different breeds in adjudicating champion prizes:

Breeds	Points	Breeds	Points
Shorthorns	120	Ayrshires	100
Jersey Cows	90	Kerries	70
Jersey Heifers	55	Red Polls	90
Guernseys	90	Cross Breeds	120

No prize or award to be given to any animal which does not come up to this standard.

Notes.

D. Streeter of Biggs is very much interested in dairy matters and will build a silo on his place this summer. The silo will be made of 2x12 studding 2 feet apart, boarded up outside with rustic, lined with tarred paper and then ceiled with tight ceiling. It is to be 16 feet square and 20 feet high, with a brick wall underneath. Two feet of coarse gravel will be put in the bottom to provide proper drainage. He will fill the silo with green Egyptian corn and other forage growths. Mr. Streeter recommends the silo to all farmers throughout the country, and says that the early growth of oats, barley, etc., which would otherwise dry up with the coming on of the summer, can be cut while green and put in the silo, and become the best kind of feed.

Gilt-edge butter is not wholly due to the excellence of the cow, but also to the intelligence and management of the farmer who attends to the stock and looks after all the details necessary in order to produce a superior article, and thus get the highest prices.

The 49th volume of the American Cattle Club Herd Register, carries bull numbers from 48,501 to 50,000, and cows from 124,001 to 129,000. Of the 43 gentlemen who founded the organization, thirty years ago next July, 19 are still living. The total number of breeders that are or have been members is 618, of whom about 450 are now on the active roll. E. A. Darling is president; J. J. Hemingway, secretary.

Higher prices for butter will not be of any special benefit unless the management is such that it costs less to produce than the price secured.

The Grizzly Bluff Creamery, located near Ferndale, Humboldt Co., is receiving 13 tons of milk daily and making about 900 lbs of butter and 400 lbs. of cheese every day.

Some tubercular cows have recently been killed which were found in Fresno dairies. The general condition of cows of that county is, however, reported healthy.

In summer the churning should be done at as low a temperature as will permit the cream to form butter at the least cost of time and labor. The temperature ranges from 55 to 65 degrees, according to conditions. When the cream is most oily, as in summer, the lower temperature is better, while in winter the higher temperature may be an advantage. There is no exact temperature for churning, as cream varies with altitude, and only observation will enable one to arrive at a full understanding of the requirements. Use a thermometer and in a few days much will have been accomplished in learning of the proper temperature.

It seems possible to follow a system of summer feeding that will possess certain advantages for those who do not grow alfalfa. This consists of planting annual plants that will serve as forage crops, and when they have attained a proper growth, allowing the cattle to pasture on them. The system may be used to supplement permanent pasture when it fails or to replace it altogether. It insures sufficient fodder during the entire summer, and does not entail the expense of cutting and feeding the crop. It does, however, necessitate preparing the land for each crop, and increasing to some extent the amount of fencing required. It also has one disadvantage that soiling does not possess, in that a portion of the crop is destroyed by the tramping of the cattle, but this is much less than one would imagine.

The farmer should have pasturage specially for his dairy cows, and should set apart some of his cultivated land to raise grain and forage for them.

The Central Creamery Company, of Oakland, has incorporated; its objects are to control the milk business of Alameda county, to build creameries in Oakland and other places. The incorporators are A. C. Fay, J. M. Carr and N. Neilson, of Fruitvale. Capital stock, $75,000.

On every farm some small patches of ground should be sown to some crop that will be available for milk cows when other pasturage fails. Cow peas are of value for such cases, or corn, planted much more closely than when grain instead of pasturage or forage is the object sought.

POULTRY.

Houdans.

What other product of the farm is there that will produce so quick a return and so much profit upon the investment as poultry and eggs? Both are nutritious food at all seasons of the year, and in this respect are not equaled by any other product of the farm. Is it not well then to give more attention to the birds from which so much profit as well as pleasure is derived?

If it is not convenient to go into the business upon a large scale, certainly every farmer, as well as the residents of the city having any room for fowls, should do so at least upon such a scale as their surroundings will permit. We know from experience that there is no money lost in keeping a few good fowls, and that there is much profit as well as pleasure derived from them. Viewing the subject in this way, we shall make an effort to improve this department of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN as much as its other departments have recently advanced, thereby seeking not only to make our paper more valuable and interesting to our friends and patrons, but, if possible, to lead them into enlarging and improving it. We much desire to see California produce poultry and eggs sufficient for her own consumption. We believe in thoroughbred stock of all kinds. The same reason exists for breeding up and improving your fowls that exists for the breeding up and improving of your horses, cattle, sheep, or hogs, and the better bred your stock is, the more pleasure and profit you will derive therefrom. With each issue of our paper we propose, besides other interesting matter relating to fowls, to give our readers a short description of some standard fowl, and the points required of it in the show room, as well as its disqualifications. With this issue we present the Houdan, a native of France.

These birds derive their name from a village in France, where they originated and they are the favorite fowl of that country. They are a hardy breed—easily reared and fattened. They are constant layers of good-sized eggs, and are non-setters. The quality of their flesh is better than most fowls, and they are generally a very desirable bird. At poultry shows, it is required of them to possess that monstrosity called a fifth toe. The head is crowned with a peculiar tuft of hackle feathers, which, together with a very strange, double spiked comb with a center somewhat resembling an ill-shaped strawberry, gives them rather an odd appearance about the head. A flock of these birds presents a very striking and rather brilliant appearance.

GENERAL APPEARANCE—THE COCK.

Crest—Composed of hackle feathers, full and well-arched, falling back, and right and left of comb, clear of the eye, rather than over it.

Comb—Well developed, large, red and branching, broad at base, well indented, looking like a mass of coral with antler-like branches, inclining rather backward into the crest.

Beak—Curved, with nostrils wide and cavernous, dark brown color.

Eye—Large, full, bright and lively; color various.

Wattles—Thin, rather long, neatly rounded and bright red.

Muffing or Beard—Full and thick under beak and reaching well back in a curve to the back of eye.

Face—Red, the less seen the better.

Breast—Deep, full and plump.

Back—Wide and straight.

Wings—Moderate, and carried well up.

Tail—Moderate, erect and well sickled.

Thighs—The shorter the better.

Legs—Fine in bone, white shaded.

Toes—Five in number, the fifth curved upwards at back.

Color—Broken black and white, as evenly broken as possible, free from colored feathers, which, however, though objectionable, are not a disqualification.

Carriage—Lively, brisk, well set up and spirited.

THE HEN.

Chest—Large, compact and even, as in Polish.

Comb—Small branching and coral like.

Eye—Full and bright.

Wattle—Small, red and neatly rounded.

Muffing—Full, forming a thick beard reaching back to the eye.

Neck—Rather short, full feathered and arched.

Breast—Full and deep.

Back—Wide and straight.

Wings—Moderate and carried closely to body.

Tail—Moderate and fan-like, carried well up.

Thighs—Short.

Legs—Fine in bone, white, or shaded in color.

Toes—Five in number, the hind or fifth claw curved upward.

Color—As in the cock.

Carriage—Brisk and rather upright.

DISQUALIFICATIONS.

Absence of crest, deformity of any kind. Main color or growing color, other than black and white.

Douglas' Mixtures.

This valuable restrictive is made by dissolving  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. of sulphate of iron and 1 oz. of diluted sulphuric acid together, and adding 2 gallons of water. In the proportion of one teaspoon full to a pint of water give it to the fowls to drink; it is good to prevent roup, and other poultry complaints, which it does by toning up the system and giving strength and stamina.

Notes.

A healthy fowl can be hatched and raised with less trouble than is often given by an attempt to cure a sick one, and a sick one, if cured, will never be so good as a healthy one, either as breeding stock, for the table, or for the production of eggs. We say nothing against doctoring sick fowls as a matter of kindness, but we have no faith in it as a matter of economy, and would not make a practice of doctoring very valuable birds.

The French mode of preserving eggs is to dissolve four ounces of beeswax in eight ounces of warm olive oil; and with this anoint the egg. The oil will immediately be absorbed by the shell and the pores filled up by the wax. If kept in a cool place, the eggs, after two years, will be as good as if freshly laid.

To keep your flock healthy and vigorous, avoid that vile practice of in-and-in breeding. Kill or sell all of the old male birds in the winter or early spring and in their stead place good healthy young cocks of another flock, thereby giving new life and vigor to your next season's birds. If this practice is followed you will have but little trouble from roup, gapes, cholera and other poultry diseases, and besides that you will get more eggs and better table birds.

The same reason exists for selecting the best variety of fowls, as for selecting the best of any other kind of stock.

It would be profitable for every person keeping fowls to change roosters every spring.

If those who make a business of breeding and raising fancy or standard fowls were as careless as most of farmers, and people in the city are, who keep fowls, about the practice of in-and-in-breeding, their flocks would soon become worthless.

The beautiful birds seen in our poultry shows is an evidence of what the proper care and attention to the mating and breeding of fowls produces.

If properly attended to, it costs just as much to keep a poor bird as a good one—then why not commence with or breed up to the best?

When chicks fledge, if they droop and seem to suffer as the feathers on the head grow, give them meat cut up fine, and a little canary seed once a day as a part of their diet.

The most critical time with young turkeys is at about six weeks of age, when they throw out that which is termed the "redhead." During this period it is well to give them a mush made of equal parts of cooked oat and barley meal. This crisis passed, the birds may be considered fairly toughened and past danger.

If a single weak, sick or unprofitable fowl gets into the flock dispose of it as soon as possible.

It is estimated that the turkey trade of the United States exceeds $12,000,000 annually.

For stock purposes remember that the eggs of two-year-old hens are much better than those of pullets. A larger percentage thereof will hatch and produce larger and stronger birds.

The Fajaronian says: A Hollisterite who has been feeding horses to chickens sold sixty-four horse hides last week. The man who feeds horse flesh to hogs—and it is discovered—is boycotted by butchers, but no one has raised an objection to poultry and eggs which have been built up on horse flesh.

SHEEP.*Sheep on California Farms.

The most success in handling sheep goes, of course, to the men who give it their undivided attention and probably expert knowledge is more important to the man who is specially a sheep breeder than to men engaged in raising any other class of live stock except high class horses. But there are so many ways in which the sheep will bring profit to the farmer and benefit to the farm, that the neglect to raise any at all on so many farms has been a grave mistake through which California farmers have been deprived of very considerable benefits.

Because of the special knowledge required in the profitable handling of pure bred sheep, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, does not believe it best that the farmer who has only a farmer's ordinary knowledge of sheep should start into the business of sheep raising with pedigreed ewes. Nor is it indeed profitable to anyone to handle such animals if he has to devote to the other duties of general farming the time and attention they require. The ewes selected should, first of all, be of vigorous constitution and of proper age, hardy native or mixed breed of sheep. The rams cannot be too highly bred, as the character of the flock will be fixed by them. The breed of the ram should be determined by location and circumstances.

As a general rule where ranges are dry and scanty and warm climate, wool production will generally be looked to for a profit and Merino rams should be selected. On rich pastures with abundant feeding products on the farm to finish for market, mutton qualities predominate in importance and the best mutton breeds will be selected, or as expressed by a learned authority on this subject: "Compact rams of the long wool breed—combining in this way the hardy characters of the native short wool sheep with the size and mutton capacity of the latter, and producing a middle wool flock with the least expenditure of time and money" we might add however, to the above, select only after full consideration of every circumstance affecting the breeding. After the selection of breed is made, the future grading up should be continuously perfected on the same line. The farmer will be acquiring the needed knowledge as his flock improves. The value of sheep to the farmer has been too often presented in stock journals and is so well known to the flock master to require any repetition in this article.

Owners of Sheep Must Pay.

The recent tax levied by the Board of Supervisors of Siskiyou county on sheep where driven into the mountains to graze amounts almost to prohibition. The courts have sustained the ordinance and there seems no way to avoid this imposition. At a late special meeting the following sheep ordinance to license the business of grazing and raising sheep was passed:

Those owning or having control of 5,000 sheep or more constitute the first class, and must pay $750 per year, and $150 for each additional thousand. The second class, numbering 4,000 head must pay $600. The third class of 3,000 must pay $450. The fourth class, numbering 2,000, must pay $300. The fifth class, numbering 1,500, must pay $225. The sixth class, numbering 1,000, must pay $150. The seventh class, numbering 500, must pay $75. The eighth class, numbering less than 500 head, must pay 15 cents per annum for each sheep. The Collector is authorized to deduct 25 cents per head for each lamb born between the first day of February and the first day of May in each year. The license must be procured and paid for in advance, and a failure to do so is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not exceeding $200, and in default of payment to be committed to jail for a term equal to $1 a day of the fine imposed.

Notes.

The following recipe for a waterproof branding ink of interest and value to sheepmen: Shellac, two ounces; borax, two ounces; water, twenty-five ounces; gum arabic, two ounces; lamp-black, sufficient, says the Wool Record. Boil the borax and shellac in water until they are dissolved, and withdraw from the fire. When the solution has become cold complete twenty-five ounces with lamp-black enough to bring the preparation to a suitable consistency. When it is to be used with a stencil it must be made thicker than when it is applied with a brush. The above gives a black ink; for red ink substitute Venetian red for lamp-black.

Our Tehachapi correspondent writes us: Three French sheepmen, Villard, Cesmat and Les Cros, have sold their flocks, about ten thousand head, to parties from Utah. Prices obtained were $1 for lambs and $1.75 for ewes.

Permits will be granted sheepmen to graze their sheep on the Cascade reserve on and after June 15th, by Special Agent S. B. Ormsby. This will be good news to the sheepmen in Eastern Oregon.

A. F. Nunes, a sheep man of Hanford, Kings County, returned from La Porte this week, where he had been inspecting a band of 5,500 sheep which he is ranging in the mountains near that place. Mr. Nunes reports to the Marysville Appeal that of his band some five hundred head had succumbed to poison from browsing on the shrub which grows in that vicinity, and the nature of which was at first not understood by his herders.

Shorn young ewes are now considered worth from $3.25 to $2.50 on the range and scarce at these figures.

Some local capitalists at Mt. Pleasant, Utah, have invested $37,000 in California sheep and say they are going to range them in Colorado, says Field and Farm. This is bound to make a rumpus and rangemen are cautioned to be on the lookout for this invasion.

The North Pacific Rural Spirit Says: There are close to 22,000 head of sheep being rounded up at the Kidder corals about twelve miles east of Baker City, for the purpose of shearing them. Carter & Miller, the prominent butchers and packers of that city, have 2,000 head of sheep at the rendezvous from which they expect a clip in the neighborhood of 15,000 pounds. The wool clip this year in Baker county is of excellent quality, and the quantity per animal is panning out very satisfactorily to the sheep growers. There are upward of 70,000 sheep in Baker county.

The Humboldt Times says: Shearing has commenced in northern Humboldt. A crew of Indian shearers are now at work on the Hooker ranch, Hower's and Jonathan Lyon's on the Bald Hills, and in a few days they will go to Thomas Bair's ranch at Three Cabins. Mr. Bair expects to have 2,100 sheep sheared this year, while Mr. Hooker will have about 4,000, Mr. Lyon about 3,000 and Mr. Hower about 800.

George E. Stewart, Special Commissioner, has returned from his recent trip to the Pine Mountain reservation, says the Ventura Signal. During his two weeks' stay he expelled some 16,000 sheep from the forbidden pastures.

SWINE.*Notes.

A number of the hogs shipped to this market show the result of too much inbreeding by careless farmers who reason that it does not pay to get a new boar each year while they have one which will breed, and they lose enough in a litter or two to pay for a new sire.

To prevent the ravages of lice in a swineherd keep sulphur in their wallows and it also well to have some coal oil mixed with it. Feed charcoal at all times by allowing the pigs to run to it and there will be no trouble in the herd.

There is a great scandal out in hog society, says the Denver Field and Farm. George G. Council of Illinois is under investigation before a grand jury for substituting another boar for Kelter's Model, the famous show hog, in selling it for $5,100 to a syndicate headed by A. M. Caldwell. The Model was sold at auction and another hog delivered said to be Columbia Wilkes.

A prominent hog raiser in Illinois boldly affirms his belief in hog cholera being incurable, all guarantees and testimonials for sure cure medicine to the contrary notwithstanding, and gave his three weeks' experience and trial at Des Moines, Iowa, with the representatives of all sure cure remedies that chose to come forward, as evidence of the truth of his statement. He declared it his honest opinion from those trials that they were one and all frauds and humbugs and in their way were doing as much to impoverish the swine breeder as the disease itself. He urges farmers to do their utmost in the way of prevention and advocates the use of turpentine, carbolic acid, creosote and lime, not to be used occasionally, but all the time.

THE man who gets into swine-breeding in the expectation of finding it a rosy path leading to a picnic may be disappointed in time to learn that his piglets are subject to a few such ailments as indigestion, thumps, diarrhoea, affections of the throat, quinsy, stomatitis, laryngitis, pharyngitis, parasitic diseases, measles, trichina, kidney worm, mange, stryglyus paradoxus and the contagious and infectious diseases of cholera, swine plague and tuberculosis.

A number of the breeds of hogs now are being bred for early maturity, and need not be kept till one year old to mature, but can be held to six or eight months old and turned off to top the market or put in the smoke house to make the sweetest and best bacon and the pigs in the fall turned off at from $3 to $5 a head at four to six months old, or fed for spring market, as may be desired, not forgetting that extra attention is what makes the additional profit. Alfalfa pork is good enough for anybody.

Some cantaloupe raisers of San Joaquin Co., especially those who are starting the first year, should not forget the profit to be derived from having a few shoats. There is naturally a certain per cent of the product which is unmarketable as first class goods and the only way to save them from total loss is to convert all the refuse into hog fat and in this way nothing is lost. One man who is raising fifteen acres of cantaloupes expects to be able to carry through the season fifty head of hogs on culled melons.

A subscriber writes: "We read lots of twaddle about skim and buttermilk for hogs. I long since ceased to notice such articles but in my new locality the question is put to me very often, 'is milk good for them when sweet, and will not butter milk kill pigs?' My answer is to take the questioner to the pasture adjoining a creamery and show him shoats that are averaging over one pound of gain a day on skim milk alone. The milk is given as soon as it leaves the separator. As for buttermilk we give all we can spare without stint. We expect to maintain an average gain of one pound or better during the summer on our twenty head of shoats and in the fall thirty days of corn feeding will make us some very cheap pork."

At the Montana experiment station pigs at the age of two and one-half months was placed on good alfalfa pasture and given a small ration of cracked barley. This maintained them for four months very cheaply. They were then turned into the stubble fields where they gathered up scattered barley, wheat and peas. This furnished an abundant supply of food from the middle of September to the first of November, when they were ready for fattening. At this time the pigs weighed 150 pounds and had cost two and one-half cents a pound up to this point. This was done with pigs that were farrowed from the middle of March to the first of April. It is very evident from a practical standpoint that hogs thrive on alfalfa, clover, peas, wheat and barley, and that pork can be produced cheaper than it can be purchased.

During the last thirty days hogs have been making a slow but continuous advance in price, the gain being about fifty cents per 100 pounds in that time. This seems to be the result of conditions that will continue through the season. Everything in the situation indicates that there will at least be no decline in any foodstuffs, excepting perhaps, in wheat, the market for which has shown a fevered strength that may decline before settling upon a normal basis. This fact makes it an important matter for the California farmer to so arrange his plans that he may have no more meat to buy, and, if possible, he should make a good surplus to sell. The plan of making pork entirely with corn is one that progressive farmers are abandoning everywhere, and as the cheapest and the best meat is that of the hog whose growth and fame have been made on pasturage no farmer can more easily prepare his hogs for market than the California farmer.

A clean, well-kept pen, clean trough and pure water are preventives of disease.

Contagious diseases cannot be absolutely prevented by the most healthy system of feeding and caring for hogs, but if they have plenty of healthy food, good grazing and pure water they are far better able to resist the assaults of contagious disease and escape the dangers of any others.

Continued feeding of corn or any rich food or lack of variety will injure the digestion of hogs and render them more susceptible to disease. Charcoal is the simplest, best and cheapest remedy for such indigestion, and will be a preventive if kept where it is always accessible. The best is made by firing corn cobs stacked or heaped up, and after they are charred and become cooled, sprinkling them liberally with salt.

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climatic and crop conditions is based upon reports received from nine Weather Bureau Stations, fifty-two telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company and many reports scattered throughout the State received from correspondents in their districts.

Tehama County—Small fruit plentiful; some early peaches. Grain ripening; haying over.

Glenn County—Haying over. Harvesting barley will begin soon.

Yolo County—Warm wave end of week rapidly advanced fruit, wheat and barley. Apricots, peaches and plums now being shipped; fruit small. Grain harvest now on, crop light, haying nearly over.

Sacramento County—Weather fair for crops. Helpful rains on June 1st, ending with dry, north and southwest winds. Saturday very hot; no wind for irrigating. Hay mostly all cut; will commence baling next week. Grapes growing fine.

Solano County—Rain early in the week; no damage. Shipping Royal Ann cherries. Haying finished; only enough for use. Summer fallowed grain will yield 12 to 15 sacks per acre; winter sown will not pay for harvesting. Barley harvested 6 sacks per acre. Grape crop will be large. Peaches and prunes doing well.

Stanislaus County—Begin cutting grain this week, expect a fair yield. Warm weather ripening grain rapidly. Fruit doing well; good crop. Hay all under cover; no damage.

Merced County—Early peaches ripening, small crop and good quality. Grapes look well. Haying progressing rapidly; light crop. Wheat apparently matured and in no danger from hot winds.

Fresno County—Cool. High winds keeping fruit back, but no injury. All grapes setting splendidly and promise a good yield; also pears, nectarines and peaches. Yield of hay and grain somewhat greater than expected three weeks ago. Few apricots and some peaches. Vine hoppers all gone.

Kings County—Good run of water in all the canals, and land is being planted to summer crops more extensively than before. Second crop of alfalfa doing well and nearly ready to cut. Young grapes falling badly, but still a good crop. Cold weather improved the grain and it will fill well.

Tulare County—Deciduous and citrus fruits doing well. Hay crop will be short.

Kern County—Grain prospects somewhat improved, previous cool weather allowing grain to fill. Hay crop will exceed last estimate. Cutting hay, grain and second crop of alfalfa.

Lake County—Continued rain has done much good and some harm. Much hay was cut, and most of it will be seriously damaged, and in some places grain is badly lodged. Late crops will be benefited. Extra cultivation necessary in orchards and vineyards. Some summer fallowing. Fruit in excellent condition.

Sonoma County—Haying. Cherry picking and canning; good crop of fruit. Corn, hops and grapes making good growth. Hot northern forced fruit and did damage. Many plums and other fruit on ground; all fruits small and of inferior quality. Prunes developing wonderfully, many trees have to be pruned.

Napa County—Fruit ripening. Shipping cherries. Good hay and grass crop; pasture for local use only.

Alameda County—Vegetables all in. Farmers expect two thirds of a crop of all kinds except apricots.

Santa Clara County—Hot weather injurious to cherries, and may cause other fruit to drop some. Haying; light crop. Sugar beets doing well.

San Mateo County—Hot wave at end of week ripened fruit and grain; haying over; harvesting will begin early, crop light.

Santa Cruz County—Ripening crops will be fair.

San Benito County—Cherry crop light; fruit small. Good prospect for prunes; few apricots; little hay but of superior quality.

Monterey County—Grain ripening fast. Beets and potatoes doing well. Rain June 1st, very beneficial.

San Luis Obispo County—More hay than expected. Good crop of fruits, berries and vegetables on irrigated land. Cattle, horses, sheep and hogs moved to the north for pasture.

Santa Barbara County—Excessively hot weather injurious to summer crops. Beans will not make much of a crop.

Ventura County—High east winds. Owing to last rain crop prospects are improved and hills are green. Home grown alfalfa hay by aid of irrigation is coming into market. Walnuts falling and some damage to apricots.

Los Angeles County—Very warm. Hay cut; light crop. Vegetables looking well; citrus fruits looking well, other fruits up to average in quantity and quality. New crop of navel fine. Some alfalfa hay mowed. Barley very light; corn looking well.

San Bernardino County—Warm. Deciduous fruits fair.

Orange County—Apricots looking well. Large crop of walnuts and peaches. Corn fields look nicely.

Riverside County—Cool and clear. Prospects for blackberries and pears good. Harvesting grain and hay, crop light. Deciduous fruits scarce.

San Diego County—Haying nearly over; about one-tenth of a crop of very rich hay. All irrigated crops doing well; also fruits. Little, if any, improvement in the bee interest. Oranges are forming well and indications for a good crop, especially navel. Encouraging reports as to hay from back country, but yield in hay section less than for years considering increased acreage.

Los Angeles Summary—Cool weather early part of week favorable for beans, hay and corn; but hot, drying winds at close, injurious. Hot winds blew fruit off trees in localities. Eureka Summary—Copious showers followed by decidedly warmer weather have greatly benefited pasturage and advanced growth of crops. Strawberries being marketed. Stock in excellent condition.

A. S. BOYD, Ballard, Cal., says—I have used many kinds of poultry preparations, but none compare with Wellington's Improved Egg Food. Many people make the mistake of experimenting with new articles, which have no merit, instead of at once using what has a well-known reputation of merit. If your dealer does not keep it, insist on his getting it. Remember—This Egg Food positively makes hens lay.

BUTCHERTOWN.

The market for all grades of beef has ruled fairly steady throughout the week and prices are about the same as reported in our last week's issue. The arrivals of poor cattle are still plentiful and on this surplus shall have been worked off we do not look to any improvement or firmness.

CALVES—Are slightly firmer owing to light arrivals this week with a good demand.

MUTTON—Really good mutton is scarce and commands an advance on our quotations. There is, however, plenty of mutton on hand to meet all requirements, but the bulk of supplies arriving cannot be spoken of as A 1.

LAMBS—Receipts are somewhat free and, prices easier.

HOGS—The market is still improving with an upward tendency and prices are again advanced. Good, choice, hard, desirable stock are bringing our full quotations. We quote:

Steers—First quality, very choice, 6 1/2c; Steers, No. 1, 6 1/4c; Steers, No. 2, 5 3/4c; Steers, No. 3, 5c. Extra choice Cows and Heifers 6 1/4c; Good to Fair, 5 1/2c; Bulls, stags and old Cows, 4c; Calves, choice range, large, 5 1/2c; Dairy, 6 1/2c to 7c; Weathers, first quality, 7 1/2c; Weathers, second quality, 7c; Ewes, first quality, 7 1/2c; Ewes, second quality, 6 1/2c; Lamb, yearlings, —; Lamb (this spring), 7 1/2c; Hog, dressed, hard, 6 1/2c; Hogs, live, hard, medium, 4 1/2c to 5c; Hogs, live, hard, heavy, 5 1/2c.

REFRIGERATED DRESSED MEATS.

The re is undoubtedly no abatement in the volume of business as regards refrigerated meats, the canning department at the Company's abattoir is running at its full capacity to complete government contracts which require immediate shipments. Livestock of all grades are fairly plentiful at the Company's yards, and prices remain about at last week's quotations. Hogs are firmer and prices correspondingly advanced. We quote:

Beef carcasses, prime, 6 1/2c; beef carcasses, second quality, 5 1/2c; No. 1, Cows and Heifers, 5 1/2c; No. 2, Cows and Heifers, 4 1/2c; Mutton, Weathers, carcasses, 7 1/2c; Mutton, Weathers, carcasses, No. 2, —; Mutton, Ewes, carcasses, No. 1, 7c; Mutton, Ewes, carcasses, No. 2, —; Lamb (this year's Spring) 8 1/2c; Veal, light, 6 1/2c to 7c; Veal, heavy, 5 1/2c; Pork, carcasses, 6 1/2c.

HIDES AND SKINS.

The hide market remains very firm at quotations with a good demand for all desirable skins. There has been a further advance this week in the large Eastern market and it is no more than probable that our local market will be similarly affected. Buyers are ready purchasers of hides and dealers are well satisfied with the outlook, which is promising. We quote:

WET SALTED HIDES—Heavy Steers, over 50 lbs, 10c; culls, 9c; Medium, 45 to 50 lbs, 9c; culls, 8c; Light Steer, under 45 lbs, 8c; culls, 7c; Heavy Cows, over 50 lbs, 9c; culls, 8c; Light Cows, 30 to 50 lbs, 9c; culls, 8c; Stags, 60 to 70 lbs, 5c; Kips, 5c; culls, 4c; Veal, 9c; culls, 8c; Calf, 10c; culls, 8c; Dry Hides, 16 to 18c; culls, 13 to 15c; Dry Kip and Veal, 16c; culls, 13c; Dry Calf, 18c; culls, 14 to 15c. Hogs, Hides, large prime, $2.50 each; medium, $2; small $1.

TAILS—Large size 35 cents per dozen.

PLEATS AND SHEARLINGS—15 to 25c each; do, short, 40 to 50c; do medium, 60 to 80c; do, long, 80 to 100c; Deer Skins, summer, 25 to 30c; do, good medium, 20c; do, winter, 10c per lb; Goat skins, 30 to 37c apiece for prime to perfect; 10 to 20c for damaged and 5 to 10c each for Kids.

TALLOW—We quote: No. 1, Rendered, 30 1/2c per lb; No. 2, 28 1/2c; Grease, 1 1/2c to 2c per lb.

WOOL REPORT.

Notwithstanding certain dealers are sending out circulars to the effect that the market improvement is limited to the local market, the fact is considerable improvement to be noted, whereas two weeks ago complete dullness prevailed, activity is now established. The heavy withdrawals of wool in first hands in New York and Boston has considerably exhausted stocks in warehouses and dealers are beginning to draw on our Pacific Coast wools. The effect with the next two weeks will be materially felt in California and we look to a good firm market at advanced prices. We quote:

CALIFORNIA FALL CLIP—Plains, 60 to 65c; Mountains, 90 to 110c; Northern, 100 to 110c; and Northern defective 80 to 100c; Mendocino and Humboldt, 130 to 140c.

NEVADA SPRING—Light and choice, 12 to 14c.

OREGON SPRING—Eastern choice, 10 to 14c; Eastern poor, 9 to 11c; Valley choice, 14 to 16c; Valley low grade, 12 to 14c.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

BUTTER—Heavy arrivals of all grades and plenty of this week has materially weakened the butter market and prices have dropped in some instances from 1 to 2 cents per lb, particularly for the cheaper and inferior grades. Creameries have been mostly in demand, only the choice eat brands about holding their own. At the close of the week receipts had been somewhat reduced, but there was considerable butter yet to be worked off. The market closed easy and steady. We quote:

Creamery extras per lb, 18c; Firsts, 18 1/2c; seconds, 17 1/2c to 18c; Dairy select, 17c; seconds, 16 to 17c; Dairy soft and weedy, —; Mixed select, 13 to 15c; Creamery in tubs, 19 to 21c; Pickled roll, —; Dairy in tubs, —; Firkin, Cal., choice to select, 19 to 20c; Firkin, common to fair, 17 to 18c.

CHEESE—A full and uneventful market is a fair report of transactions in cheese this week. Stocks are heavy and the demand very light. Dealers are of the opinion that after the surplus now on hand has been disposed of that the prices will be improved. We quote: California per lb, Cheddars, 9 to 11c; Flats, mild, new, 9c; fair to good, 8 to 9c; Young America, 10 to 11c; Eastern, New York Cream Cheddars and Flats 11 1/2 to 13c; Western, 11 to 12c.

EGGS—Eggs have taken another jump this week and the supply was much below the demand for home product. Good California Ranch are very firm and likely to advance any day. The Eastern article has gone up proportionately. We quote: California Ranch, 15 1/2 to 16c; California Store, 15 1/2 to 16c; Eastern, 14 1/2 to 15c; Duck eggs, 16c.

POULTRY—The market of poultry has been slightly "off" and prices consequently are weaker than last reported. Arrivals of all grades have been heavy this week; in fact, in excess of a healthy demand, and we caution shippers if they want to sustain prices to go easy with consignments, as overabundance means reduced prices.

We quote: Old Roosters, per doz, $4.50 to $5.00; young, $4.50 to $5.00; Fryers, $4.00 to $5.00; Broilers, large, $4.00 to $5.00; small, $3.50 to $4.00; Hens, $3.50 to $4.00; Ducks, old, doz, $3.50 to $4.00; young, $3.50 to $4.00; Turkeys, live, Hens, per lb, 11 to 12c; Gobblers, 11 to 12c; dressed, per lb, 12 to 13c; Geese, pair, 75c to $1.00; Goslings, pair, $1.00 to $1.25; Pigeons, young, $1.25 to $1.50; do, old, $1.00 to $1.25.

Eastern Poultry—Old Roosters per doz, $4.50 to $5.00; Fryers, $4.00 to $5.00; Broilers, $4.00 to $5.00; young Roosters, —; Ducks, $4; Turkeys, per lb, 12c; Geese, pair, $1.

WHEAT—The market was stronger all around, but business was dull. Tied water quotations are as follows: — for shipping and $1.55 to $1.60 per ctn. for milling.

HAY—With the exception of wheat and alfalfa there is no new Hay whatever coming in. Receipts of old are also falling off sharply and outside shipments have almost ceased. (Ex-car 1st round lots)—Wheat $2.00 to $2.25 per ton; Wheat and Oat $2.00 to $2.25; Oat, $1.75 to $1.90; compressed Wheat, $2.00 to $2.25; compressed Oat, $1.60 to $1.80; Alfalfa, $1.25 to $1.50; Clover, nominal; Oregon Timothy $1.50 to $1.75.

Success Beyond Expectation.

Mr. L. J. Farnsworth, prominent Veterinarian at Washington Springs, S. D., writes as follows: "I have given the package of Quinn's Ointment you sent me a trial, and it has succeeded beyond my expectations. Enclosed find draft for another bottle." This is the general verdict of the most prominent breeders and horsemen throughout the United States. For curbs, splints, spavins, wind-puffs and all bunches Quinn's Ointment has no equal. Price, $1.50; smaller size, 50 cts. If you cannot obtain it from your druggist, address W. E. Eddy Co., Whitehall, N. Y.

Six horses belonging to Burns & Waterhouse arrived today in charge of Jimmy McCormick. They left Oakland at 1:30 last Sunday morning and reached the Union depot at 1:30 A. M. Thursday. At Ogden, where a stop of an hour and a half was made, the horses were taken off the car, walked and rolled. A two hours' stop at Council Bluffs was utilized in a like manner. The horses stood the journey well, but while the car was standing in the Union depot, Bliss Rucker took a chill. Harlem was reached about 1 P. M. After being unloaded Rucker got a rest of a couple of hours and seemed to be all right. Jockey J. Woods came with the stable. Charley Thorpe is at Whiting, Iowa, visiting his parents and will be here Monday. Ten horses had been selected to ship here, but four, including Odds On, were not well and had to be left behind. The horses here are Candelaria, Eddie Jones, Bliss Rucker, Excursion, First Tenor (brother to Counter Tenor), and the 2-year-old Gauntlet, by Cavalier—Herschel. Three horses belonging to Earnshaw Bros., and three belonging to Fred McCullough, came on the train that brought the Burns & Waterhouse string. The Earnshaw horses are Mistral II, Joe Mussel and Elidad. They are at Harlem. The McCullough trio, Del Paso II., Triumph and Prestar were taken to Hawthorne—Daily Racing Form, June 3d.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 63,816.
Susie M. Lewiston, plaintiff vs. Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, send greeting to Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's failure to provide for more than two years last past for plaintiff the common necessities of life, said failure to so provide being caused by the idleness of defendant. Plaintiff also asks for the custody of the minor child, the issue of the marriage, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 14th day of April, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 64,430
Annie A. Ackerman, plaintiff, vs. Charles E. Ackerman, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, send greeting to Charles E. Ackerman, defendant. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's desertion of plaintiff, said desertion having continued for more than two years last past and having been without the consent or cohabitation of plaintiff; also, for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 3d day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

Alameda, at $100 the Season.

(WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGES.)

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities. In having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a pacing-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electioneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Prince. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONTS.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

NOTE—Bessie Rankin, by Altamont, sold November, 1897, brought the highest price obtained for a harness horse at public auction in California during the year. Address

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, salting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm. Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

BREEDING RACE HORSES.

Theories That Strike Us as Possessing More Merit Than Those Advanced by the Late Mr. Lowe.

That the theory of our departed friend, C. Bruce Lowe, regarding the blood of "tap-root" mares having great influence upon the race horses of the present was an erroneous one—one that will not bear a mathematical test—we have not the slightest doubt. According to the great English scientist, Francis Galton, the parents of a foal contribute between them one-half, the grandparents together contribute one-quarter, the great grandparents one-eighth, the next generation one-sixteenth of the blood, and so on, ad infinitum, the whole forming a diminishing geometrical scale, which may be infinitely extended. Thus it will be seen that even if a foal were to trace ten times to a certain "tap-root" mare, and that matron were twenty generations away, there would be but a very small amount of that particular mare's blood in the veins of the racer of the present.

We have taken the pains to determine the amount of Herod, Eclipse and Matchem blood carried by the world's most successful sires of the year 1845, respectively Melbourne, Irish Birdcatcher, Touchstone, Glencoe and Boston, and on figures (it's an old saying that they do not lie) we find that there has been a mistaken idea prevalent among breeders about these celebrities all these years. Melbourne is called "the great scion of the Matchem line." True, he is of the Matchem male line, but when it is known that he carried in his veins but 5 per cent. of the blood of Matchem against 11.13 per cent. of Herod and 5.47 per cent. of Eclipse, how mistaken writers have been in terming him "the great Matchem horse"—this when he has more of the blood of Herod than of Matchem and Eclipse combined. He therefore had 78 per cent. of the blood of horses other than Matchem, Eclipse and Herod.

In Irish Birdcatcher, generally supposed to carry a great preponderance of Eclipse blood, we find that he traced eight times to Eclipse, twice to Matchem, ten times to Herod, and when figured up by the Galton law of heredity the percentage is as follows: Eclipse, 14.64; Matchem, 4.78; Herod, 15.33. Of blood outside of Eclipse, Matchem and Herod Birdcatcher carried 65.34 per cent.

Touchstone, foaled in 1831, was an Eclipse male line horse. He won the St. Leger and begot three winners of the Derby, one of the Oaks, three of the St. Leger. Melbourne, foaled 1834, sired three Derby winners, three Oaks winners, two St. Leger winners. Irish Birdcatcher, foaled in 1833, was the sire of one Derby winner, one Oaks winner, two St. Leger winners. Glencoe, foal of 1831, was brought to America early in life, but got Pocahontas (dam of the St. Leger winner, Stockwell) before leaving the land of his nativity. Boston was foaled in Virginia in 1833 and always lived in America. Touchstone is also called an "Eclipse horse," yet he had 15.62 per cent. of Herod blood against 14.84 per cent. of Eclipse and 3.90 per cent. of Matchem.

In Boston the Herod blood predominated over that of Eclipse and Matchem to a great degree, so that of the really phenomenal sires from 1840 to 1855 there was not one which did not have in his veins more of the blood of Herod than of any other of the three great "strains."

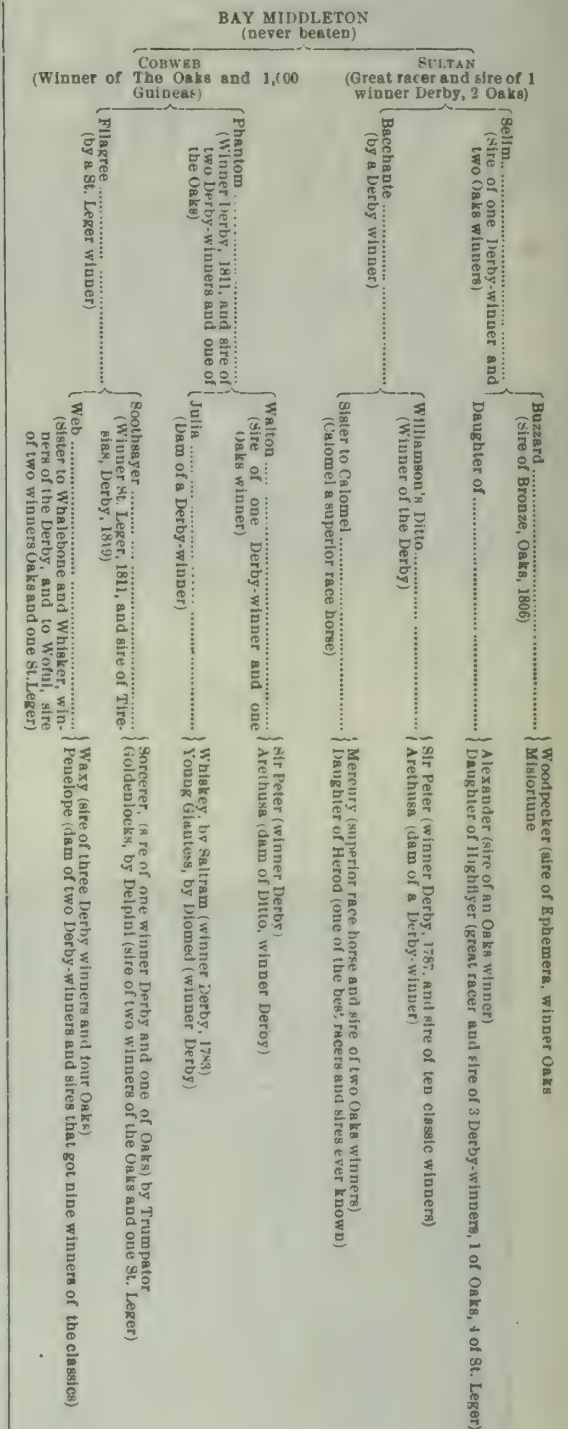

As there was so much more of the blood of Herod coursing through the veins of the great sires of the period spoken of above, we must conclude if there is such a thing as "sire blood" that Herod must have been a more potent stallion than his supposed rivals. Besides, Herod lived three years less than Eclipse and eleven less than Matchem, and that is a great argument in his favor.

We believe Lord Falmouth's theory that better results were obtained by not breeding a mare two years in succession to any particular stallion was fallacious, and cite the cases of the unbeaten Bay Middleton, Whisker, Rataplan, Salvator, Czar (the unbeaten), the undefeated El Rio Rey, the unbeaten Norfolk, the unbeaten Asteroid, the unbeaten French Park, Salina, Nevada and the queenly Miss Woodford to show the error of the English breeder, and many other cases just as telling against the theory could be cited. Cobweb was bred to Sultan in 1830, 1831 and 1832, and Bay Middleton was the result of the third mating in succession. Penelope (a result of a second mating in a row) was bred to Waxy many years in succession, and produced Whalebone, the Derby-winner of 1810, and Whisker, who won the blue ribbon of the English turf five years later. Rataplan, generally regarded as a better race horse than Stockwell, his brother, was Pocahontas' foal of 1850, Stockwell the one of 1849. Salvator, foaled in 1886, was a thousand times better at racing than his brother, Prince Charlie, foaled in 1885, and El Rio Rey, the best of Marion's produce by Norfolk, was the ninth Norfolk foal in rapid succession—in fact, with one exception (Vera), each succeeding foal from Marion by Norfolk was better than the one just preceding. Norfolk was Novice's second Lexington foal, Asteroid a third Lexington foal in succession, French Park (unbeaten) a third foal by imp. King Ban, Salina (dam of Salvator and a great race mare) a second foal, Nevada (her sister) a third, and had the owners of the Runnymede Stud stopped mating Fancy Jane with imp. Billet after Belle of Runnymede was foaled we might never have had the American turf queen, Miss Woodford.

We have evolved a theory regarding the breeding of race horses that we believe is much more sensible than the one of the late C. Bruce Lowe regarding "tap root" mares exerting an influence for good or bad upon race horses of the past three quarters of a century, and we take our ideas from the way the celebrities of the race course were bred. In our opinion, it is the excellence, the individuality of the animals in the first three or four generations, that determines the worth of the racer. It strikes us as a reasonable conclusion that if neither the sire nor dam, grandsire or granddam, possessed any great merit as a racer or sire or dam of racers, that a very poor specimen of race horse would result. We can account for the great worth of unbeaten Bay Middleton by the fact that his sire was a high-class race horse and a success at the stud, begetting one winner of the Derby and two of the Oaks, that his dam, Cobweb, won the Oaks and 1,000 Guineas, that Cobweb's sire, Phantom, was a Derby-winner and the sire of two Derby-winners, that Cobweb's dam, Filagree, was by Soothsayer (winner of the St. Leger) out of Web (sister to the Derby-winners Whalebone and Whisker, the successful sire, Woful, and the great race mare, Wire) and that the grandsire of Bay Middleton, Selim, was, like Sultan, sire of one winner of the Derby and two of the Oaks. In the third generation we find, besides Soothsayer and Web, such horses as Buzzard (sire of Bronze, winner of the Oaks), Williamson's Ditto (winner of the Derby), a sister to the famous Calomel, Walton (brother to Ditto and sire of a Derby and St. Leger winner) and Julia (dam of the Derby-winner, Phantom, and a sister to Eleanor, winner of Derby and Oaks), by Whiskey, son of Saltram, winner of the Derby. In the fourth remove we discover Woodpecker (sire of Ephemer, winner of the Oaks), Alexander (sire of Nike, winner of the Oaks), Sir Peter (winner of the Derby and sire of four Derby-winners, two Oaks winners and four St. Leger winners), Mercury (sire of two Oaks winners), Sir Peter again, Whiskey (sire of one winner of the Derby and two of the Oaks), Young Giantess (dam of a winner of the Derby and Oaks and granddam of a Derby-winner), Sorcerer (sire of one winner each of the Derby and Oaks), Waxy (sire of four winners of the Derby and three of the Oaks) and the wonderful Penelope (who was the mother of two Derby-winners, Whalebone and Whisker, of Woful, Wire, Web, Wilful, &c., in fact the greatest matron in all turf history. Truly, if ever a horse was bred to be an unbeaten racer Bay Middleton was, and the Derby-winner of 1836 had the blood of more winners, sires and dams of winners in the first four generations than any horse whose pedigree we ever ran out, bar perhaps imp.

Golden Garter, at Rancho del Paso. We submit the pedigree of this, one of the few unbeaten race horses in England during the past seventy-five years:

We will take a few more examples to bear out our theory that to be a well-nigh invincible racer a horse must be bred right—must have, close up, the blood of gallopers of the highest racing ability if it is itself to prove a racer of renown. Lexington, practically unbeaten, was by the mighty Boston (unbeatable in his younger days) from Alice Carneal, a stake-winner, by imp. Sarpedon, a superior racer and a son of Emilius (winner of the Derby in England and sire of two winners of the Derby and one each of the Oaks and St. Leger), Alice Carneal's dam Rowena, a good race mare by Sumpter, a great race horse by Sir Archy (the best racer of his day and the sire of more great winners than any horse in America up to Lexington's time). The third dam of Lexington was by Robin Gray, a superior sire. Boston's sire, Timoleon, was invincible upon the turf, and the dam of Boston was by Ball's Florizel, who was never defeated during his turf career, never knew the touch of whip or spur. Lexington was bred to be the crack horse of his day. Further, Lexington, Alice Carneal's best racing produce, was by the best race horse she was mated with, Boston, the next best Umpire by Lecompte (Lexington's alleged rival), the next in merit Lavender by Wagner, not quite as great a racer as Boston or Lecompte. Reel can be taken in the same way, her foals ranking as racers: Lecompte by Boston, Starke by Wagner and Priores by imp. Sarpedon. Her foals by imp. Leviathan and imp. Yorkshire were not nearly as good in the racing line as those spoken of above, and as racers Leviathan and Yorkshire did not compare with Boston or Wagner.

Take Ormo de, winner of the triple crown and never beaten. He was by Bend Or (winner of the Derby and by the Derby-winner, Doncaster, son of Stockwell, winner of the St. Leger). Bend Or's dam, Rouge Rose, by Thormanby, winner of the Derby, Doncaster's dam Marigold, by Teddington (winner of the Derby and son of Orlando, a Derby-winner). Bend Or's third dam was Delhi, by Plenipotentiary, winner of the Derby. Stockwell's sire, The Baron, won the St. Leger. Ormonde's dam, Lily Agnes, was one of the best race mares of her day in England and by the Derby-winner, Mac aroni; his second dam, Polly Agnes, by The Cure (son of Physician, by the great Blacklock; his third dam by Irish Birdcatcher (sire of a Derby-winner, an Oaks winner and three St. Leger winners), while his fifth dam was by Priam, winner of the Derby and sire of three winners of the Oaks as well as the unbeaten Monarch.

Salvator ought to have been the racer he was, too, and breeding counted in his case. His sire, imp. Prince Charlie, won the 2,000 Guineas in England, besides a number of great stakes, and as a five-year-old he won all his races. Prince Charlie was by Blair Athol (winner of the Derby and St. Leger) out of Eastern Princess, a superior mare by Surplice, winner of the St. Leger. Surplice was by Touchstone, a St. Leger winner, out of Crucifix (winner of the Oaks) by Priam (winner of the Derby), he by Emilius (Derby-winner). Blair Athol was by Stockwell (winner of the 2,000 Guineas and St. Leger) out of Blink Bonny (winner of the Derby and Oaks) by Melbourne. No wonder Blair Athol was such a race horse and sire, then! The dam of Salvator was the great stake-winning mare, Salina by Lexington, his second dam Lightsome (dam of half a dozen great winners, including Nevada, dam of Luke Blackburn and Greenland); third dam Levity (dam of Ruric and other good ones and called the Pocahontas of America), by imp. Trustee, latter own brother to Mundig, winner of the Derby; fourth dam the Tranby mare that threw the great Vandal (only second as a sire in his day to Lexington). Little wonder, then, that Salvator was a race horse of marked ability, for he had nothing but the blood of phenomenal racers and producers of racers in the first four generations, where we claim it counts many times more than at the tap-root.

We could go on all day enumerating the famous racers that were bred right—that by inheritance should have been superior in the line of racing. Once in awhile there comes a stud matron away above the ordinary that makes you wonder where she gets her excellence, but she has the blood of great racers in her veins, you can rest assured, and that not very far removed, either. Take Marion by Malcolm, the most wonderful stud matron alive. She is, to begin with, one of the best individuals ever seen—roomy and rangy, with marked muscular development, yet showing no end of what is termed "quality." Malcolm, her sire, was a superior race horse, by imp. Bonnie Scotland (winner of the Doncaster Stakes, &c., and second for the St. Leger) out of Lady Lancaster, by imp. Monarch (never beaten, winner of ten races); second dam Lady Canton, by imp. Tranby (best "stayer" in England and sire of the dam of Vandal and Levity). Maggie Mitchell (dam of Marion), by imp. Yorkshire, was never raced, owing to an injury she received, but she was exceedingly promising and much was expected of her. The second dam of Marion was the best racing daughter of Glencoe (Charmer), winner of twenty-eight races, sixteen at three-mile heats and one walk-over, also victorious at four mile heats. The only horse that ever beat Charmer that she did not get revenge upon was Doubloon, and Jenny Lind, the sister to Charmer, downed that celebrity, so the family got even on the Picayune by Medoc tribe. The third dam of Marion was Betsey Malone, (by Stockholder), who was the winner of twenty-one out of twenty-two races, nearly all at four-mile heats, and she only lost this one, it is said, through a bad stumble. Thus Marion, by inheritance, ought to have been all she was—the most celebrated stud matron of her day and one of the best we ever had in America.

Our idea is that great sires are like great Generals or geniuses like Edison, Tesla, et al—only born at rare intervals—and that no law has been discovered making it possible to breed a wonderful sire with any degree of certainty. Still, we believe that a great, masculine-looking mare by a prepotent sire and having a mother of masculine cut by a sire whose sons "bred on," is quite likely to give to the world a son possessing great merit in the direction of siring race horses. Pocahontas, the phenomenal mother of sires, was a masculine-looking mare of good racing ability, and when bred to sturdy stallions that could never at a distance be mistaken for mares, threw Stockwell, Rataplan, King Tom, Knight of Kars and Knight of St. Patrick, all sires of winners, Stockwell (a big bull of a horse) best, King Tom (a giant in build) next best, Rataplan third. The latter's vitality was sapped at the racing game, for if memory serves us he ran seventy races, mostly at long distances, winning forty-seven of them. Yet he begot Kettledrum, winner of the Derby of 1861. Stockwell did not run half as many races as his brother, Rataplan, and this goes far to show that a stallion which has not been "drummed to death" on the turf is more likely to prove a stud success than one that has been campaigned for many years, naturally losing much of the vital force that is so necessary in a stallion. At any rate, Stockwell was more masculine-looking than either Rataplan or any of his distinguished half-brothers—in fact, looked more masculine and sturdy than any horse whose likeness we have ever looked upon. Musket, the English horse that was so successful in New Zealand, was another sturdy customer, substantial-looking to a great degree. Gladiateur, the triple crown winner, was racy-appearing, but looked more like a mare than a stallion. He was a dismal failure at the stud, and any stallion that does not look like a horse will, in our opinion, never make his mark at siring winners. To sum up, a stallion must look as strong as the proverbial ox, be "all horse," as the horseman put it, and if he has the delicate, greyhound conformation he is not at all likely to make a name as a sire of winners.

We believe that in the above article we have given some points to breeders worth following, that it is blood in the first four generations that makes the breeding of the high-class racer reasonably certain, and that the blood of the tap-root matrons, twenty and sometimes twenty-two generations away, has very little influence upon the racer of the present. We also believe that it was the individuality of Stockwell and other successful stallions and the masculine make-up of their mothers that gave them their merit, and that there is nothing like as much in the "sire line" theory as in individuality and "happy nicks." That there were "happy nicks" there can be no doubt, the Stockwell-Touchstone, Stockwell-Melbourne, Bend Or-Macaroni, Isonomy-Wenlock, Lexington-Glencoe and Leamington-Lexington being marked examples. We also believe that wherever these "nicks" are found and the dam and grandam were superior racers, themselves sired by superior ones, the result will be much higher class race horses than those that did not have such excellent dams and grandams.

Top Crosses and Individuality.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Your comments and those of other writers upon the Bruce Lowe Figure System of Breeding has interested me very much.

While there is perhaps some merit in the claims of Mr. Lowe, I am strongly convinced that he has overestimated the value of the tap root mares, and from my own studies and observation I believe that the tap-root mares are so far in the background (from ten to twenty generations in nearly every instance) that if they ever had any influence in the breeding problem it has become so infinitesimal and so deeply buried by the top crosses of later generations that it now counts for naught, and will, if relied upon to any great extent, tend to mislead rather than assist the breeder. Top crosses and individuality are much safer guides to follow.

Eclipse is given the Number 12 because he traces back through his dam (Spiletta by Regulus) through the old Montagu mare, by D'Arcy's Old Montagu, to Tap Root Mare No. 12. Her dam was a daughter of Hautboy, granddam a daughter of Brimmer, great granddam a Royal mare, breeding unknown—Tap Root Mare No. 12. The Royal Mare, breeding unknown, did not produce anything of note, but her daughter by Brimmer (son of the Yellow Turk—Royal Mare), an improvement upon herself, produced a daughter of Hautboy (son of the White D'Arcy Turk—Royal Mare), another improvement, and she in turn, bred to D'Arcy's Old Montagu, produced the Old Montagu Mare, and while she was undoubtedly a better individual than either of the named matrons preceding her, she never produced enough of merit to place her, as a matron, coupled with a list of her produce, upon the pages of the English Stud Book, but advancing a generation further we find her daughter, Mother Western by Smith's Son of Snake, registered with a list of her produce including Spiletta (by Regulus, son of Godolphin Arabian), dam of the great Eclipse. What does this demonstrate? If any conclusion can be drawn from such facts, it is that but little or no real credit should be given to Mr. Lowe's tap root mares, but instead thereof we must look to other sources and reasons for the establishment of our great racing families. What was it that improved each succeeding generation from the unknown mare down to Spiletta, the dam of Eclipse? It was unquestionably the infusion of new blood, adding increased vigor or vital force and greater individuality. It is not the tap root mares that we should consult as a guide to success, but the topcrosses and individuality.

Was it the Tregonwell Barb Mare (their eleventh dam) that made Whalebone and Whisker great sires? She was so far in the background (eleven generations) that her blood and the influence thereof, with each succeeding generation thereafter, improved by reason of the top crosses and greater individuality, is like a drop of homoeopathic medicine thrown into a running stream, which can neither be seen or tasted, having no power to discolor or alter the flavor of the water, which is constantly growing in volume and force until it becomes a mighty river, and finally mingles with the ocean.

Prunella, by Highflyer, grandam of Whalebone and Whisker, the best matron of her day, bred to Waxy, produced Pledge (dam of Tireias, winner of the Derby of 1810), Prudence, Pope Joan and eight other fillies, none of whom ever won any of the classic events, but her daughter, Penelope, bred to Waxy, produced Whalebone (winner of the Derby of 1810 and sire of Lapdog, winner of the Derby 1826, Spaniel, winner of the Derby of 1831, and generally credited with having been the sire of Moses, the Derby winner of 1822), Whisker, Derby winner of 1815; Web, Woful, Wilful, Wire Wildfire and others of note. Was it the Tregonwell Barb Mare, her ninth dam, that made Prunella so much greater than any other in the line preceding her?

What, if any, influence did the Tregonwell Barb Mare have in making Penelope so much greater than her mother, Prunella, as she is shown to have been by the fairest kind of a test—the results of having been bred to the same sire, Waxy? Prunella was the greatest in the line up to her time, because of her more valuable top crosses and her greater individuality, and for the same reasons her daughter, Penelope, became still greater. Why was Pawn, the full sister of Penelope, not as great a broodmare? Simply because she did not possess as great individuality.

Why was not Marpessa, by Muley, as great a matron as her daughter, Pocahontas, by Glencoe? Why was the latter so much a greater matron than any other mare preceding her back to Tap Root Mare No. 3? Simply because of the improvement in top crosses of blood lines and her superior individuality.

Queen Mary, by Gladiator, the founder of another wonderful family, is another instance similar to those already illustrated, and so on with all of the great broodmares of England. No two of the great matrons except in case of mother and daughter, such as Prunella and Penelope, trace to the same tap root mare.

Who would ever think of going back of Marion, by Malcolm, the greatest American brood mare, to give any consideration whatever to her seventh dam, a daughter of Pegasus? There is not a tap root mare in this case, and Marion possessed so much individuality, and is so great, that all behind her is almost as completely lost sight of as if it never existed.

The tap root mares were numbered from one to forty-three inclusive by Mr. Lowe, according to the success achieved in the three classic events of England, the Epsom Derby, the Oaks and Doncaster St. Leger, the one to whom the greatest number of winners traced being number one, and so on to the highest number. The fallacy of that theory is strongly presented again when we look at the great broodmares: Penelope is No. 1, Pocahontas No. 3 and Queen Mary No. 10. In comparison with the vast number of good and great matrons of England, who would ever think of locating Pocahontas and Queen Mary where they are numbered?

Waxy (No. 13), because he traces to Tap Root Mare No. 18, sired four Derby winners. Highflyer (No. 13), because he traces to Tap Root Mare No. 13, sired three Derby winners. Gohanna (No. 35), because he traces to Tap Root Mare No. 35, sired two Derby winners. Whalebone No. 1, the sire of three Derby winners; Melbourne, No. 1, the sire of two Derby winners; Bay Middleton No. 1, the sire of two Derby winners; Parnesan No. 7, the sire of two Derby winners; Hermit, No. 5, the sire of two Derby winners; Emilius, No. 28, the sire of two Derby winners; Scud, No. 1, the sire of two Derby winners; Phantom, No. 2, the sire of two Derby winners; Isonomy, No. 19, the sire of two Derby winners, and Hampton, No. 6, the sire of three Derby winners. A greater number of sires, each of whom has sired two or more Derby winners, than can be named of sires having the sire numbers who have sired two or more Derby winners, nor can an equal number of the sires, having sire numbers, be found who have sired as great a number of Derby winners. Neither of them had that which is termed a sire number by Mr. Lowe, but each has to his credit more Derby winners than many of the sires possessing the charmed figures 3, 8, 11, 12 or 14, termed sire numbers.

Mr. Lowe has evolved a very interesting theory, one which will lead students to study and examine the blood lines of the thoroughbred, and in that respect it will result in much good, but as a practical and certain guide to breeders it will not stand the test. I shall put my faith, until something more convincing is presented, in the desirable top crosses and individuality of the animals mated.

THE following is taken from a Chicago paper: "I never hear the American Derby mentioned," remarked a California horseman who dropped into the office of the Washington Park Club recently, "but that I think of the first one run and smile as I remember how obstinacy prevented Lucky Baldwin from having that race placed to his credit on the books along with those afterward won by Volante, Silver Cloud, Emperor of Norfolk and Rey el Santa Anita. In the Baldwin stable in the spring of 1886 was a three-year-old called Fallen Leaf, by Grinstead and out of Mollie McCarthy. At the Latonia meeting she started twice, being beaten the first time in the Hindoo Stakes by Audrain, yet leaving such good ones behind her as Buchanan, General Harding and two others. The second time out she carried off the Glidelia Stakes, for three-year-old fillies at a mile and a half, beating Mona, Hiflight and four others in 2:13½ and winning by six lengths in a common canter. She was then brought to Chicago, and, contrary to the wishes of Albert Cooper, her trainer, she was started over the West Side track, then hard as flint, in the Illinois Oaks, one mile and a quarter, which she won in a hand gallop in 2:11½, beating Mona and Europa. She had a mortgage on the American Derby before starting the last time, but that race cooked her goose, and she never faced the flag again. The next morning she was lame, and a few days before the Washington Park was to open she broke down hopelessly, and Baldwin's Derby chances had gone glimmering. Ed Corrigan's Modesty, thanks to Ike Murphy's superior skill, carried off the stake, but from that day to this every Californian believes that had Albert Cooper's wishes been heeded the first American Derby winner would have been Fallen Leaf and not the chestnut daughter of War Dance and Ballet."

Saddle Notes.

THE once noted Clifton. N. J., race track has been cut up into building lots.

SANTELLO won again at Harlem on the 10 h inst., the track being very heavy.

FORTUNA, daughter of imp. Brutus, won at Denver last Tuesday at five and a half furlongs.

E. C. COWDIN, the owner of Requitall, is a member of Roosevelt's troop of rough riders.

FROM Mr. Morrin's stud comes the news of the death of Onyx, dam of Nordenfeldt.—Australasian.

OSRIC, Dan Honig's purchase here last spring, won a seven-furlong race at St. Louis last Monday at odds of 8 to 1.

JOCKEY EDDIE JONES arrived yesterday and was at Harlem during the afternoon. He is to ride here.—Daily Racing Form, June 10.

IRENE F., a winner at Harlem on June 10th, is by Eolo (now owned by A. B. Spreckels and at his Napa farm) out of The Black Squaw.

MISS GUSSE, a three-year-old filly by Chorister—Katona, ran a mile at Detroit on the 10th inst., in 1:39½—the track record at that distance.

THE three year-old filly Belchasse died Thursday night from the effects of wrenching herself and breaking her stiffl joint in a race that day.

GIL CURRY is doing well on the running turf. He has but a small string, yet Glesnevin (by St. Leonards—Countess) is winning pretty nearly every time he starts.

MCDONALD rode two winners at St. Louis on Tuesday last (Kisme and Skate) and was third on Isinene. Johnny Woods finished second on Night Gown, a favorite.

LEORA, the gray ghost of Prince of Norfolk out of Della Walker, has foaled to Connor and been mated with Captive. She belongs to Al Farrow of Lake County, Oregon.

THE racing firm of Baker & Gentry is to be dissolved and their horses sold. Mr. Baker retiring to devote himself to the duties of the office of Assessor of Fayette County, Ky.

SANTELLO and The Manxman, California-bred, respectively by imp. St. Andrew and Tyrant, won over Harlem track last Tuesday. The latter beat O'Connell and others.

DR. C. E. FARNUM's mare Ela (by Hockhocking), the mother of Patriot and Green Hock, has foaled a bay colt by Almont, son of Three Cheers and Question, by Joe Hooker.

LITTLE JOHNNY WOODS is riding at St. Louis and riding well, too, piloting Silver Set to victory in a couple of races and putting Valid first over the finishing line at odds of 5 to 1.

BOBADIL's six furlongs in 1:13½, 132 pounds up, in the Champagne Stakes at the A. J. C. meeting, Sydney, is probably the best run ever made by a two-year-old, considering it was over a grass track.

W. L. STANFIELD's fast and handsome bay mare, Miss Gentry, foaled a colt by Ducat (the good horse formerly owned by El Corrigan) and was bred to Captive, once a grand race horse in the string of Pat Danne.

PRINCE A. PONIATOWSKI, quite a believer in the Lowe plan of breeding race horses, and who will in all likelihood be well known as a breeder of winners ere many years have passed away, left last Monday for New York City.

FROM a list printed in another column, it will be found that California is well represented in Oregon and Montana this season—in fact, a great proportion of our good gallopers are now domiciled at either the Butte or Portland track.

THE foals of A. B. Spreckels' Napa farm sired by imp. Crichton and Eolo are declared to be a superb lot, and Mr. Spreckels believes he has a great sire in the former and thinks nearly as well of the brother to Eolo and St. Saviour.

FRED TARAL will have a mount in the American Derby. He has been engaged to ride Warrenton, who won the Claremont Stake at Morris Park in a gallop. Warrenton is by imp. Florist—Addie Warren (dam of Hy Dy) and can go a route.

IN the mile race at Detroit June 10th that was won easily by Miss Gussie, Our Johnny, a Rancho del Paso-bred horse, finished third with 16½ pounds more weight up, beaten but one and one-half lengths, and he swung wide into the homestretch, too.

LARVA, a chestnut colt by imp. Inverness—Butterfly, won the Bedford Stakes at Brooklyn on the 6th of June, beating Chemisette, Autumn, Tyrol and other good ones, and conceding weight to all. He is in Marcus Daly's stable and was piloted by Taral.

JEDDAH, winner of the Derby at Epsom, captured the Prince of Wales stakes for J. Larnach last Tuesday at Ascot, England, and the Duke of Westminster's brown colt Batt, (who was also second to Jeddah in the Derby), was second, Prince Soltykoff's Canopus third.

HORSES that raced in California last winter and spring are much in evidence at the Denver meeting. Last Saturday B. C. Holly's El Rayo colt Horton won at half a mile in 0:48½. Lucky Star, by imp. Friar Tuck, captured a mile and a sixteenth race, beating Tulare and others. On Monday Mides (by Emperor of Norfolk) won at five furlongs, R. Q. Ban at five and a half furlongs (Torsion third) while Encino ran second to Swift at six furlongs, Lorena II. third.

MCDONALD is doing some excellent riding in St. Louis. Last Monday he piloted Fireside (2½ to 1) and Osric (3 to 1) to victory and was second on Gibraltar, a 6 to 1 shot. At Harlem W. Martin rode Hosi in first and H. Martin won with Boney Boy.

HARRY BLATLOCK, some years back one of the best known of Western jockeys, especially when he rode for Ed Corrigan, is reported to have become violently insane, and to be in confinement in a Canadian asylum. His wife and five children are said to be in pressing need.

JAMES WOODS, of Eneryville, left last Monday night for Edinburgh, Scotland, his old home. He will make a visit of about two months there. Mr. Woods is the father of Johnny Woods, the clever young jockey, and is an enthusiastic sportsman who has owned some fair race horses in his day.

IN Frohsinn Mr. John E. Madden has the superior of Glenheim. Frohsinn ran a rattling good race on Saturday, and the only regret was that Simms did not go to work on him sooner. The moment Simms cut the colt with the whip he leaped by Kingdon and Counselor Wernberg as though they were tied to a post. He showed a lot of speed in the last furlong, and is unquestionably a colt of courage. He improves with every race, and will be a dangero is factor even to Jean Beraud at six furlongs.

AT the last sale in Sydney of yearlings 400 guineas was the top price, it being for the chestnut colt by Abercorn from Tempe, purchased by Mr. Sam Hordern. Other good prices were: 330 guineas for chestnut colt by Cranbrook from Tewooda, 300 guineas for chestnut colt by Lochiel (son of Prince Charlie, Salvator's sire out of Donna), 305 guineas for a brown filly by Gossoon from Cinnamon, 230 guineas for a brown filly by Gossoon from Percussion and 240 guineas for a brown colt by Splendor from Ellerdale.

IN the string of William Oliver, which arrived at Harlem Tuesday evening, were the American Derby candidate Warrenton, Haphazard, Hi Daddy, Friskal, Mazie O, and Mail Bag. Oliver says he has engaged Fred Taral to ride Warrenton in the big 3-year-old event, at Washington Park. In the same car that brought the Oliver lot from the East were R. Bradley's speedy colt Traverser and his stable companions Plantain and Boney Boy; Thomas Smith's Come Quick; R. McKeever's Oviatt and J. J. Harrison's The Manxman—a fair horse in any kind of going.—Daily Racing Form, June 9th.

BY the way, the owners of Lochiel have wisely decided not to raise the Prince Charlie horse's fee above the 30 guineas this year, so that the services of this successful progenitor may remain within reasonable reach of breeders. By this decision the Messrs. Thompson have proved their wisdom, as they thus ensure a monopoly of the best mares (of suitable strains) in the colony, instead of keeping half of them outside the harem by demanding a heavy service fee, and indirectly sending many really high-class matrons to assist in bringing into prominence young and now almost obscure sires to damage the prospects of Lochiel.—Melbourne Sportsman.

THE Suburban Handicap will be decided this afternoon. Ornament's weight was 128 pounds, but his victory in the Brooklyn Handicap gained him a penalty of three pounds, so that he will have to carry 131 pounds in the big Sheephead Bay event. If he wins with this impost he will do something no other horse has done since the institution of the Suburban. He will be sure to be the post favorite if everything goes well with him, and the present outlook is that the Western mare Imp will be second in favoritism. She was given 98 pounds in the original allotment of weights, but through winning the Memorial Day Handicap at Harlem she secured a four pounds penalty, making her weight 102 pounds. This is a mere trifle in view of her performances this year at Newport, Lakeside and Harlem. Imp has yet to cover a mile and a quarter route, but she has done all that has been asked of her so far in a way to suggest that she is fully up to the task.

H. L. FRANK's stable, under the management of Johnny Campbell, arrived from San Francisco last night. Fort Augustus died shortly after being taken from the car. Fort Augustus was by imp. Inverness out of imp. La Trappe and was owned by Wm. McClelland. The horse won several races on the Coast and gave promise of being a big winner this season. Larva, a two-year-old sister to H. L. Frank's Loch Ness, by imp. Inverness, out of Butterfly, won a good race at Gravesend yesterday. This, coupled with the win of Ogden at the same track, gave the Butte admirers of the Bitter Root Stock Farm a good reason for rejoicing.—Butte Inter-Mountain, June 7th. Fort Augustus was an own brother to Trappean, quite a good performer as a three-year-old in this vicinity. La Trappe, dam of Fort Augustus, is by Hermit (winner of the Derby at Epsom), and she cost a lot of money. One of her foals was the crack racer, Barmecide by Barmecide, another Friar by Ayreshire, while another (by Isidore) is the mother of a couple of stake-winners in the Colonies.

OUTSIDE of Jean Beraud, "Kelston," of the Morning Telegraph, does not have an exalted opinion of the two year-olds that have been shown on the Eastern tracks so far, but says: "I have reason to believe that they will make a better record later on. The half-brother to Ben Brush, by Sir Dixon—Roseville, is, I feel satisfied, a good colt, and one that will take a lot of beating from the best. Macleod of Dare (half-brother to Halm) will also prove a race horse, but I doubt if he will show at his best until he has another year over his head. Gold Car, I think, will also show different form to what he has already done. Indeed, bred as he is, it would be strange should he fail to develop some class. Charite, in Mr. Waldon's string is, on her private form, a high-class filly, and should she train all right she may take a lot of beating in the Futurity. Whiplash, which won the other day, will also prove but little behind the best before the season is out. "Matt" Simpson, who owns Whiplash, the dam of Whiplash, has a yearling half brother to her by the Ill Used horse Daniel. He is of just the same type as his raking half-sister, only he has a bit more finish and quality. Glenheim has not proved anything like his real form yet, although at that he has shown far better than Plaudit did in his first attempt. Good judges who saw him work at Louisville this spring tell me that he showed a first class colt, and W. Walker, the owner of Mr. Phinix, which won out Thursday, whose opinion I value highly, thinks that when Glenheim is right good he is a first-class colt."

IN the fifth race Santello demonstrated his ability to negotiate any kind of going and beat good colts and fillies of his age. Heading for home Cheval d'Or, Ned Wickes and Cambrian all appeared to have a chance to beat him, but when Clawson called on Santello he came away and won easily.—Chicago Racing Form, June 11th.

PERRY HILDBRETH has given the game Bramble colt Lincoln a course of blistering. In all the horse will be blistered for 100 days, with rests of 25 days in between. The clever horseman says his brother Sam won't know that "leg" when he comes back. Satyr will in all likelihood stand training, too, and be seen in front at the finish. That's the way things look now, at least.

J. B. HAGGIN gave $21,000 for imp. Maxim, $15,000 for Sir Modred and $12,000 for imp. Darebin, and all proved excellent investments, their progeny bringing many times what the California multi-millionaire paid for them, though Maxim did not live many years after his arrival in the Golden State. Other thoroughbred horses from the Colonies that got good winners here were True Briton, Clieveland, Trade Wind, Paramatta, Stromboli and Loyalist—in fact, there were but a very small proportion of the Australasian horses that failed to achieve quite a measure of success at the stud. We have never had a winner of the Melbourne Cup brought to our shores, but we understand that Tarcoola (by Newminster—Imogene, by King of the Ring), who won this, the greatest of all events in 1894, will be brought to California next November or December and offered for sale. Newminster sired the great Newhaven (now in England), and headed the "winning stallions" list for several years. He is, we understand, much such a horse as Buck Massie in appearance—a good-looking big horse on short legs—all horse—and his record of wins outside the Melbourne Cup (which he captured with 116 pounds up) shows that he was a top-notch as a racer. The Australasian some months ago, in an article making over half a page of that valuable paper, spoke very highly of this horse and his first lot of youngsters, and that a stallion of his caliber (bred on such winning and sire lines) will find a purchaser here quickly is very probable.

THE victories of Metallic will give his sire, Metal, a well-deserved lift. Like many another stallion, the imported horse has not received the attention his breeding deserves. If owners of thoroughbred mares only knew it, there are stallions whose services can be obtained very cheaply who are equal, as far as looks and breeding are concerned, to horses standing in England at 50 and 100 guineas. A few timid people cry out every time one of our cracks is sent to the old country that our studs are being decimated. Why, if these alarmists will only look round them, they will find dozens—yes, dozens, of highly bred and shapely stallions standing in the country districts at "a fiver" per mare. Any one of these may, nay, doubtless will, get just as good stock as the stallions sent home. Of course, there are plenty of rubbishy stallions traveling about the country—more's the pity—but there is no lack of good ones, too. All these neglected sires require a few suitable mares, and then their excellence will become known. Take St. Swithin's case, for instance. How many racing people knew there was such a sire until Merloolas and Gaullo brought his name into prominence? Not one in a hundred, I'll be bound. Whether judged by the Bruce Lowe figures or by any other medium, little fault can be found with Metal's pedigree. He is one of the few sons of Sterling at the service of the public in the colonies. It is a great sire line this. Members of the Sterling family accounted for seventy-two races, valued at £21,135, in the old country last season. The "triple-crowned hero," Common, was got by Isidore, a son of Sterling. Metal, 5, was got by Sterling, 12 (son of Oxford, 12, by Birdcatcher, 11), from Fair Vestal, by Vespasian, 19 (son of Newminster, 8), from Rosamond, by King John, 1 (son of Kingston, 12), from Seclusion (dam of Hermit), by Tadmor, 12 (son of Ion, 4), from Miss Sellen, by Cow, 2, from Belle Dame, by Belshazzar, 11 (son of Blacklock, 2). Metal, it will be seen, is a direct descendant of the great No. 5 "running" family, of which Bobadil is the latest scion to achieve greatness, but he is strongly inbred to the 12 sire family, so it is little wonder he gets gallopers from all kinds of mares.—Melbourne Sportsman.

SOME few years ago (writes the "Special Commissioner" of the London Sportsman) Mr. W. R. Wilson, the well-known Australian breeder and owner, did me the honor of consulting me as to the purchase of a St. Simon stallion in this country. Banks were breaking just then in Australia with utmost recurrence, and no one felt like spending much money, since he never knew how soon his available balances might be locked up in reconstruction scheme, so it was to be no fancy price for a horse, nothing touching even the border line of the sensational. I thought of Dunure, whom Mr. Houldsworth was willing to sell for 3,000 guineas, and whom, when offered by me for that sum, the Austrian Government refused as not good enough, and then within a fortnight gave 6,000 guineas for him to another seller. Verily, the ways of these governments are inscrutable! Dunure, however, had not done enough for Mr. Wilson, and then came the idea, which has always been a leading one so far as I am concerned, that it is better to get a really first class horse with a "crab" about him than a mere bourgeois commoner whose chief merit is that he is undeniably sound. So it was that I fixed upon Bill of Portland, whom most of us remember as creating a tremendous sensation the first time he came out and won. The least estimate of his value at that time was 10,000 guineas, and writing at this distance of time, I unhesitatingly say that he is the finest horse ever sired by St. Simon, always excepting Persimmon—and Bill of Portland surpassed Persimmon in one way, viz, that big-boned and powerful as he was, he was not in the slightest degree gross or bulky. A trouble in the respiratory organs had suddenly run down his value. Of all the follies of the British breeder and owner, there is none greater than the fear of this thing, which to my mind is the least important, and the least hereditary of all the infirmities which horseflesh is liable to be troubled with. Be that as it may, Mr. Combe gave the refusal of Bill of Portland for a month at a reasonable price—at a tenth of his value but for that trouble—and it so happened that the month expired a day or two before the tardy vessel bringing Mr. Wilson to these shores arrived. His first act on landing, however, was to make tracks for Newmarket, and the first horse he saw in the paddock there was Bill of Portland, and though Mr. Combe cavilled a bit at the extension of time, he ultimately sold the horse to Mr. Wilson.

OUR DENVER LETTER.

Happenings in Horsesdom at the Colorado Metropolitan—The California Contingent.

OVERLAND PARK DENVER, Col., June 7, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—If the weather were a little favorable, this would be a very lively as well as interesting place. Since my arrival here it has rained so frequently that it has been impossible for any of the horses to receive their regular work, the trainers being obliged to give their charges work in "fits and starts." The grounds of this Association are very prettily located, being built in a little valley about four and a half miles from the center of Denver and although the city limits extend nearly two miles beyond, it is very sparsely settled in this vicinity. Electric lines running very near the track make transportation to and from the city very easy. The snow-capped summit of Pike's Peak is plainly visible, in fact, it looks to be but a short distance from here.

The grounds are quite large, having plenty of shade trees surrounding the stalls, making it very pleasant during the hot weather. The track, grand stand and club house are all built on a very generous plan, in fact, everything in and about the track has the appearance of prosperity. It is estimated that there are about 450 horses here being prepared for the coming meeting, which commences next Saturday, June 11th, and there is no doubt that at the present time there is a collection of a higher class of horses on these grounds than were ever here at one time before. Outside of the several different stables from California, there are but few strangers here, the majority of the horses being trained and owned in Colorado. Many names of Eastern horses appear in the entry list, but up to the present time they have not put in an appearance and it is doubtful if they will come, and I am at a loss to know where they would find stable room, for every conceivable place is occupied, and in addition the Association has erected a large tent, filling same with temporary stalls.

California is well represented here. T. E. Keating has in his stable Searchlight, 2:09½, and Anaconda, 2:08½, well known to all on the coast; both of these grand colts are in fine form. I have seen Searchlight work a mile in 2:10. Anaconda working one in 2:10 and repeating in 2:10½, it would look as if they ought occasionally to get some of the money. Dione, 2:14, and Clatawa, 2:18, are stable companions of the above. Andy McDowell has a very promising lot, consisting of Caryle Carne, 3:14½, Lena N. (p) 2:12½, Dolly Maoshutz, a green trotter, and Fannie Putnam, a green pacer, by Christmas. All of his horses are doing well, the grey champion has worked a half in 1:05½, and Lena N. won her first race at Colorado Springs very easily, beating the game old veteran Klamath. William Ivy has Tuttle Bros.' Stam B., 2:11½, and he looks to be the great horse he is. If he remains here he will add glory to his sire and cash to the bank account of his owners. W. H. Robinson has in charge that fast and good race horse Dr. Leek, 2:15½, owned by the prominent Dr. Leek of San Francisco; this horse is looking good and acting as if he would greatly reduce his mark. Clem Smart, who wintered in California with his good filly Idn Sultan, is here and prepared to meet the 2:30 trotters. I look to see her make a great race mare. Dr. A. W. Boucher of San Jose has his green pacing mare Miss Logan and Jerry West of the same place has a green mare (trotter) by Iris, out of Lyda C., 2:26½, by Bay Rose. They call this mare Lyda and she will render a good account of herself when started. Wm. Cecil of San Jose has in charge Mr. Martin Carter's great colt J. A. McKerron, two-year-old, record 2:24½; here is a great colt in good condition and able at present time to race much better than his record. Mr. Cecil has also Irvington Belle (p), 2:18½, who will make starts in 2:15 and 2:19 classes for pacers. Mr. A. Haywoods' two horses, Ellert, 2:19, and Stamboulette, 2:19, are here looking fine enough to show; also Mr. A. Connick's Wayland W., 2:12½, looking better than ever. P. W. Hodge of Los Angeles has five, consisting of Hazel Kinney, 2:17½, and Geo.

W. McKinney, 2:29½; both of these horses won at Colorado Springs. Hodges also has Sophia R., 2:15½, Bill Nye and You Bet, all pacers. G. H. Judd has old Klamath, looking better than ever, and seeming to have all of his old-time speed. Chehalis is also here ready and willing to meet any and all of the free-for-all pacers, and he looks fit to give them quite an argument.

California is fairly well represented with thoroughbreds, B. C. Holly having a lot of good ones, including La Mascots, Daylight, Devil's Dream, Lorinne II., Lucky Star and Horton; he made several winning starts at Colorado Springs. William Short has Rubicon, Midas, Roadwarmer, R. Q. Ban and others. Pop Weaver has Cabrillo, Tulare and Charlemagne. Although California is so well represented she will have worthy competitors. S. H. McEvoy of Anaconda is here with a good stable. Billy Dingley of Missoula has Bill Howard and others, and there are many others whose names will receive mention when the bell taps.

Amongst the local harness horses Messrs. DuBoise Bros. of Denver have a very promising lot in training, including that speedy old California-bred mare, Yolo Maid, also some good young ones by their horse Superior. Judge Colburn of Colorado Springs, has Kate Medium, 2:10½, looking very fine, also a three-year-old that he calls Judge C; this fellow is quite a trotter, and as he meets the California colt, Jno. A. McKerron, quite a race is expected. As the meeting progresses, I will have the pleasure of mentioning many others, and will send you a weekly account of races and such items that may be of interest to your readers.

OVERLAND PARK, DENVER, June 11, '98.

After a seige of unpleasant weather lasting for the last four months, the opening day of the present race meeting came to light a beautiful, clear day with a good track, not what would be considered fast, still excellent. The inside track, generally given over to the running division, was not used, it being considered too heavy, the thoroughbreds using the track of the harness horses. The card advertised was an excellent one, and the people of Denver showed their appreciation by turning out in full force. The large grand stand was filled to overflowing, and conspicuous in the large crowd were the bright colors of the fair sex of Colorado. The front of the grand stand is divided into boxes and each and every one was crowded with the beauty and fashion of the city of Denver, while the spacious verandas of the club house were also filled, to say nothing of the many tally-hos, drags and all kinds of handsome vehicles. It was a great comfort to the Californian who happened to be present to see in this section so many who still appreciate the Sport of Kings, even though in the "glorious climate" of the Golden West they have lost interest.

The attendance was estimated at 6,000, and among the large crowd were many notables, conspicuous being Judge O. E. Le Fevre, Judge Julius Bissell, Westbrook S. Decker, Robert Speer, Milton Smith, Harry Lee, Frank Adams and others. It was a gala day for California, the horses from that State winning three firsts and two seconds out of the five races on the card. Promptly at 2 o'clock the bell was rung by Starter A. P. Updegraff, and the contestants in the 2:09 pace were called. The judges were Mr. Frank Smith, Dr. Danlevy and Mr. Fred Mulholland. In the timers' stand were Ed Gaylord and Wm. Thompson.

Six starters responded in the 2:09 race. Theo. E. Keating's "Anaconda," McDowell & Wise's "Lena N.," Judge Colburn's "Kate Medium," Edwin Gaylord's "Raymond M.," C. E. Smith's "Ophelia" and Walter J. Wood's "Carbonate." Each as they came for the word looked to be in the pink of condition, but "Anaconda" showed his class in his appearance—of this fact he afterwards convinced his friends as well as his opponents by his performance. After one false start they were given the word to a very straggling start, the only one being well out stride was "Kate Medium." "Carbonate" and "Anaconda" were pulled up. Before they reached the eighth, "Kate Medium" went into the air, and before she could recover she was an eighth of a mile behind the leaders, Anaconda and Lena N., and when the winner

Anaconda came under the wire, Kate Medium, the favorite and pride of Colorado Springs, was behind the flag. Lena N. secured second place, Carbonate, Ophelia and Raymond M. finishing in the order named, the time in quarters being 0:32, 1:04½, 1:38, 2:09½.

The second and third heats were repetitions of the first, in so far as the heat winner was concerned, but Carbonate finished a good second in the next heats, Lena N. making a disastrous break on the first turn and finishing behind the flag. The time in the second and third heats was 2:09½ and 2:10½ the fastest three heats ever paced on this track. The betting showed Anaconda an even money favorite against the field, Lena N. being the choice for the place.

The second race, the 2:24 trot, for $1,000, brought out six starters—J. B. Stuart's Dr. Dunlevy, J. B. Duboy's Respond, G. R. Landers' Electric Light, G. W. Pickards' D'Oyley, C. Sherey's Armenian and Du Bois Bros.' Evadne. Electric Light was an even money favorite against the field, while Armenian was picked as winner of the first heat. The heat winner turned up in Respond, Armenian making many bad breaks, although leading past the half. Electric Light finished second well in hand. Time, 2:21½.

The next three heats were easily won by Electric Light in 2:21½, 2:21½, 2:21½.

The first run event on the program was the half mile dash for two year olds and was handily won by B. C. Holly's good ch c "Horton," a favorite at even money. Theo. Cockrill's br f "Enzy" a good second and Roland & Maley's ch f Ocorona secured the third place. Joe Doughty, Fancher, Jerry T. and Lillian T. also ran. Time, 0:48½.

The St. James Handicap, one and one-sixteenth miles, was the next event and brought out Tulare, a favorite at even money, Lucky Star, second choice, at 8 to 5, Zoraida, 6 to 1, and Rarilda, Mary Barnes, Sally Lamar and Gertrude from 10 to 25 to 1. When the barrier went up Lucky Star assumed the lead and increased it, finishing pulled up several lengths in front of Tulare and Sally Lamar, noses apart. Time, 1:49½.

The last race on the card was a five-eighths mile dash, bringing out Bill Howard, Melody, Pat Morrissey, Blue Sign, Tiny P. and Reel.

Melody was the good thing, the books quoting her at 1 to 2, some refusing to take any bets on her. That good old race horse, Bill Howard, raced her to death, winning handily. Reel and Pat Morrissey finishing second and third. Bill Howard's price was 8 to 1 and 6 to 5 for place. The time was 1:02.

This concluded the first day's racing, which, from beginning to end, was a success. Everything went along without a jar or mishap and the management deserves great credit for the business-like manner in which everything was conducted. Following are the

Ringers.

The American Trotting Association is showing commendable zeal in exposing attempts to perpetrate the outrage too frequently successful of "ringing," and it is to be hoped will punish these scoundrels to the full extent of their power. These men are akin to the highwayman and the fellows who administer "knock-out drops," and have no place beside the genuine sporting man. At a recent meeting the Board of Appeals brought to light the fact that Walter B., who was campaigned in the West last season and "scooped in" a handsome sum, is in reality Tom Tacker, 2:18 (b g), by Freedmont, dam Flirt, by Forrest Goldust. He was entered as "Walter B" by Charles Caffrey. Suspension seems too light punishment for such dishonesty. The legislature of the State of New York last winter created a law making this offense a crime, punishable by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of any court having jurisdiction in cases of misdemeanor. It would be well for other States to follow his good example.

Closing Out of San Mateo.

The closing out sale of Mr. William Corbitt's stock at San Mateo should not be interpreted as indicating a serious decay of the horse breeding interests by any means. It may denote a falling off in the demand for the trotting horse, it unquestionably does, and for various reasons. The law of supply and demand is as inexorable in establishing values as the law of gravitation obtains in philosophy. The introducers of mechanical devices for transportation and the "bicycle craze" have both, no doubt, contributed to the present depressed demand for horses. These two elements have caused an over supply, but an over supply is not exactly an over production. The former rather denotes a discarded element that already exists, while the latter applies to an element which is to supply a prospective demand, nevertheless the result may be nearly the same. In political economy all such inequalities regulate themselves and horse production is not an exception to this rule. Throughout the whole country the number of stock farms that have voluntarily and involuntarily retired from business is startling when one consults the figures. In some States the statistics show a reduction of over twenty per cent. in the foals of 1896 and 1897. The horse, God's second best gift to man, was created for his enjoyment as well as utility, and it will never be supplanted by any combination of wires and steel which man may devise. The affection which exists between the horse and his master is a part of the owners enjoyment as well as the handling of the reins and cannot be engendered and enjoyed from any inanimate object however skilfully constructed, for this reason alone a demand for the noble animal will never cease. Another reason which has contributed to decrease a demand is the low records which have characterized the performances of the trotting horse for the past few years, though very much more should be attributed to the modern appliances than really is. The man who expects to have the skeleton of the horse exhibited to his children as the bones of an animal extinct, is certainly void of sentiment and gratitude, and is making a decided mistake. As in all other cases the supply of horses will eventually conform to the demand; so long as breeding does not pay it will receive but limited attention, one extreme always follows another and the time will assuredly arrive when it will pay, and as encouragement to those who are obliged to remain in the business it is a happy thought that when the demand does come one cannot produce a four-year-old colt on six months' notice. No man would be so foolish as to declare because fabrics are now sold below cost, that the human family will hereafter go unclothed, yet the same man on the same ground will declare horse breeding has had its day because they are now so cheap.

The history of San Mateo is now a record of the past. Lesa Wilkes, Muta, Sable, Ora, Mary Best, Burlingame and their kin will no longer graze beneath the shade of the Eucalyptus trees at Burlingame. John A. Goldsmith has gone to that undiscovered country, and its proprietor will now sit in quiet beneath the climbing roses at his cottage door, but the achievements of this historic farm will forever live in the brightest annals of the American race track.

Mr. Hamlin's Opinion of the Wilkes Family.

In an interview published in New York Sunday Sun Mr. C. J. Hamlin gives his opinion of the Wilkes family, and in no very complimentary terms. Of George Wilkes he said: "I had seen George Wilkes trot against Ethan Allen and others up here on Long Island before he went to Kentucky, and I didn't like him. He was a rank quitter, a plain-looking horse with no style, and he carried his hind legs like a duck swimming when he was at speed. He had just one redeeming trait. He would stick to the trot under all circumstances, as though he knew no other gait. And his offspring came in all shapes and sizes."

"Let me tell you what I think of the Wilkes family. There are some good campaigners among them—some great race horses. But there are too many $30 horses, too many blanks, horses that have no speed, and, being without beauty of form, can only be sold at prices which do not pay the breeder one-fourth of what it costs to raise them. The craze for the Wilkes family and other families like it has been, in my judgment, the ruin of many Kentucky breeders. When they failed to get a trotter they had only a street-car horse."

Unquestionably, Mr. Hamlin's first impressions of George Wilkes were as he stated them, but it is rather singular, in the light of future events, that Mr. Hamlin still clings to the delusion. If the fact that in after years he paid $15,000 for a Wilkes horse as he says "because he trotted a mile in 2:15 at two years old," is not a sufficient argument or acknowledgment of his error of opinion, the pages of the Year Book fully testify to the superiority of this family, whom he still appears to take pleasure in denouncing. He says: "I bought Rex Americus because he was one of the best Wilkes horses I ever saw." The future history of the animal does not reflect much credit on Mr. Hamlin's judgment, as the last Year Book gives him credit for one solitary individual in the '30 list. Any statement emanating from even such men as Mr. Hamlin bearing the imprint of prejudice have but little weight with the reading public. For three years Mr. Rydeck was vigorously denouncing Volunteer, a son of his own horse as of no account, yet lived to see the best broodmares in the country turn away from his stable door and seek the paddock of this same Volunteer. The records of the race tracks and the pages of the Year Books testify to the superior achievements of the Wilkes family, Mr. Hamlin's declarations to the contrary notwithstanding.

A Good Conundrum.

When is a lady not a lady? When she is a little sulky. In asking this of your best girl be careful and not confound Sulky with the Buggy!

Denver Letter.

MONDAY, JUNE 13.

It was a day for the field players in the running races at Overland yesterday. The favorites without an exception failed even to win place. Lorena II. and Torsion "showed," but Melody repeated her performance of Saturday and struggled with Powhusky and Patsy Dugan for fourth place. In the harness races George W. McKinney was a hot favorite in the 3-minute trot and stepped easily away from the bunch in three consecutive heats winning the first heat by a length, the second by a length, the third heat easily by a neck, John Nolan second in the last two heats, Baby Wilkes second in the first heat. Dazzle owned, by Joe Osner, took two straight heats in the Gentlemen's Driving Club race with 11 starters. She trotted in about 2:24 and seemed capable of faster time without much exertion. Josie C. gave Dazzle a couple of brushes down the stretch, but had to be content with second money.

The track was in very good condition yesterday. The crowd was not as large as Saturday, the grand stand being about three-quarters filled. The betting was lively on the running races and the crowd was jubilant. The odds on the favorites were so short that the crowd picked long shots or trusted their money on the field. Swiftly was 15 to 1 and had an easy thing, showing her heels to the favorite two furlongs from the wire. Midas was 3 to 1, with even money for place, and a whole lot of people backed him and won. There was little money squandered with the bookies on the two harness races.

There was a little more enthusiasm than was evinced on Saturday, especially when Swiftly galloped ahead of the bunch and went under the wire with colors flying. Midas, recently purchased by By Holly for $400, won handily by two lengths, and R. Q. Ban took the last easily by two lengths.

Below will be found the Associated Press reports of the races held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday last, details of which from our Denver correspondent, will appear in next week's issue:

DENVER, June 14.—Results at Overland Park:
First race, pacing—Shecam won, Florence B. second, Blast third. Best time, 2:21½.

Second race, trotting, for two-year-olds—Annine won, Jack Dean second. Best time, 2:45.

Third race, one mile—Charlotte M. won, Pleasanton second, Tulare third. Time, 1:46½.

Fourth race, six furlongs—Miss Redwood won, Warrior second, McPryor third. Time, 1:17.

Fifth race, four and a half furlongs—Jim Gore won, Lew Watkins second, Tommy Tucker third. Time, 0:56½.

Sixth race, five and a half furlongs—Fortuna won, Da Capo second, Emma D. third. Time, 1:10.

DENVER, June 15.—The great race of the day was the 2:14 trot in which seven heats were required to decide the winner. The entries were all California horses. Results:

Pacing—Miss Peterson won in three straight heats. Best time, 2:17½.

Trotting—Hazel Kinney took the fourth, sixth and seventh heats and race. Time, 2:15½, 2:16½, 2:17½. Stamboullette took second and third heats. Time, 2:15½, 2:14½. Dr. Leek took fifth heat. Time, 2:18½. Dione took first heat, but was withdrawn after the second. Time, 2:16.

Six furlongs—Reel won, Thurman second, Daylight third. Time, 1:17½.

Six furlongs—Tiny P. won, Valiente second, Charlemagne third. Time, 1:16½.

Seven furlongs—Lucky Star won, Rubicon second, Cabrillo third. Time, 1:29.

DENVER, June 16.—The time in the pacing and trotting races at Overland to-day has never been beaten in the month of June in the history of the turf. Results:

First race, pacing—Lena N. won fifth, sixth and seventh heats and race. Time, 2:14½, 2:19, 2:18. Roberts took first and second heats. Time, 2:09½, 2:10½. Raymond M. took third and fourth heats. Time, 2:09½, 2:14½.

Second race, trotting—G. W. McKinney won third, fourth and fifth heats and race. Time, 2:14½, 2:19½, 2:19. John Nolan took first and second heats. Time, 2:14½, 2:14.

Third race, five and one-half furlongs—R. Q. Ban won, Royal Lancer second, Midas third. Time, 1:09.

Fourth race, four furlongs—Demand won, Silver Jim second, La Fontera third. Time, 0:49.

Fifth race, seven furlongs—Zoraida won, Gertrude second, Uncle Dan third. Time, 1:31.

Good Roads.

While trotting tracks and large purses are regarded as the stimulant for producing and developing trotting horses, the fact that good roads or speedways is equally as potent is too often forgotten. This fact, however, is recognized by the New York horsemen by the opening of the Harlem River Speedway on June 18th. All vehicles of heavy draught will be excluded. This event has already made a demand for good trotting-bred roadsters and for harness and carriages as well. From a financial standpoint the city of New York has done a wise thing, and while it is not expected that cities of smaller dimensions can go to the extent mentioned nevertheless the same rule will apply. The real estate owner who frowns on trotting horses and opposes any such improvement as speedways, fails to realize that by such means a demand for stables, wagons repositories, harness stores, blacksmith shops, dwellings for employees, and so forth, is created, the occupants of which indirectly pay the taxes which he so much fears.

County Fairs and Horse Racing.

The officers of county fairs who object so strenuously to horse trotting at their gatherings, should profit by the experience of the management of a like institution which is said to have occurred last fall. Owing to the lack of interest the exhibition had dwindled down to a calf and a large pumpkin; on the evening of the first day the calf escaped from its pen and ate up the pumpkin; this caused the death of the calf and ended the Fair. A trotting meeting for each day would have been a "God-send" to that institution.

Patents of May 31st, of interest to Horsemen.

Wm. G. Allen, Hartford, Conn., machine for making metal spokes.

Lee R. Chambliss, Langston, Okla. Ty., Vehicle Wheel.

George N. Clark, Dry Ridge, Ky., Buckle.

George M. Core, Charlotte, N. C., folding wagon body.

Jesse A. Crandall, Brooklyn, N. Y., Combined hub cap and nut.

John Finley, Granby, Mo., Doubletree.

Leroy W. French, Phillipsburg, Kansas, Animal Poke.

Osborn B. Hall, Malde, Mass., Tire.

George A. Hidden, Phoenix, Arizona, Horse-controlling device.

Henry W. Horton, Wilkesborough, N. C., Truck.

Miles Martin, Marshall, Ind., Draft-equalizer.

Robert G. McDowell, Anaconda, Montana, Vehicle wheel.

George L. Nichols, De Kalb, Ill., Cattle-stanchion.

Oliver B. Reynolds, Brockton, Mass., Dumping wagon.

Frederick R. Simme, London, England, Pneumatic tire.

Ferdinand Sier, Allentown, Pa., Adjustable holdback.

James W. Taylor, Herndon, Va., Dumping cart.

Frank M. Tenny, Decatur, Ill., Scoop-board.

Robert H. Wallace, New Concord, O., Running gear for vehicles.

Robert S. Wiesenfeld, Baltimore, Md., Soft-tread horseshoe.

John C. Conrad, New York, N. Y., Design, Body for deliver wagons.

EXHIBITIONS of "guidless wonders" are decidedly on the increase. The plunging deers have now rivals. Horses are advertised that will "willingly dive from a high platform into a lake of real water" and a whole field will trot a race without harness or drivers. In this age of progress may we not some day attend the races and witness Hickox, Dickerson, Turner, Geers and others sitting on the fence and seeing their strings go by.

PHILADELPHIA will emulate the example of New York City and will soon have a speedway of her own. The old Gentleman's Driving Park has been acquired and will be transformed into a speeding course. The location is a desirable one, and will be appreciated by the lovers of harness horses in the Quaker City. Bicycles will be excluded from the track.

It is said the United States has purchased all the mules that will be required unless the war extends beyond the limits anticipated. Only about three hundred of the total twelve thousand purchased remain at St. Louis.

A DRAWING CARD this season would be a series of races between John R. Gentry and Star Pointer. The latter made very many friends last season, some of whom predict for him a phenomenal performance this year.

An Efficient Remedy.

Mr. A. E. Wilson, prominent liveryman at Springfield, Ont., writes May 3d as follows: "I have used Quinn's Ointment for some time and must say I can do better work with it than with any other remedy I ever tried. Quinn's Ointment is an efficient cure." For curbs, splints, spavins, wind-puffs and all buncches it has no equal. Price $1.50 per package. If you cannot obtain it at your druggist, address W. B. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y. For sale in San Francisco by Messrs. J. A. McKerron and J. O'Kane.

C. L. GRIFFITHS.

Sulky Notes.

CORBETT 2:14½, is in Mark Demone's stable.

KLAMATH, 2:07½, will go to the East again this year.

It said a monument will mark the grave of Guinette.

RACING will take place at the coming State Fair, Oregon.

THE horse show recently held at Baltimore netted a profit of $500.

REX AMERICUS 2:11½, has been prominently retired from the turf.

SOME ten or fifteen horses have already entered the list this season.

IN New York city last week a trotting-bred coach team brought $2,000.

PAT L., 2:09½, shows no sign this year of lameness and is doing good work.

JACK, by Mambrino Boy, reduced his record to 2:18½ at Philadelphia last week.

BESSIE BONEHILL is said to have recently worked one-eighth in just 15 seconds.

ONE hundred and fifty stalls have been added to the stables at the Utica (N. Y.) track.

THE report current East that Stam B., 2:11½, is out of condition is not well founded.

HARRY STINSON of Cleveland has a three-year-old by Guy Wilkes which he says he has driven a half in 1:11.

It is estimated that The Monk, 2:08½, and American Belle (3), 2:12½, are liable to be laid off for the season.

KLAMATH, 2:08½, will go East, at least as far as Dubuque, where he will be entered in the $5,000 free-for-all trot.

It is reported that Wm. K. Vanderbilt will gratify his taste for horses by having a stable on the turf this season.

AT last McCarty has a namesake that will perpetuate his memory. He is a pacer and will be known as "White Hat."

THE Kentucky Association will have a clean field for the week of Sept. 26th to Oct. 1st. The purses aggregate $32,000.

GEN. BASIL W. DUKE is quoted as saying that for a cavalry horse the American trotting bred horse has no superior.

HELEN M. and Fabian, each with a record of 2:29½, will soon contend for $500 a side at Point Breeze Park, Philadelphia.

It is probable that a big outdoor horse show will be held at Combination Park, Boston, the last of August or early in September.

SAM GAMBLE has bought a two-year-old filly, by Simmons out of the dam of Ackland, 2:13½, from J. L. Tarlton, of Lexington, Ky.

THE colt by Stam B., out of Laurel, 2:13½, is dead. It was owned jointly by Buckman & Carroll and James Carroll, Sacramento, Cal.

THE United States Government has purchased in the St. Louis (Mo.) market twelve thousand mules which means an expenditure of $1,200,000.

FAMOUS old Narragansett Park at Providence, R. I., will hold meetings in July, September and October, offering $42,000 for trotting and pacing.

MORE harness racing meetings have been announced for 1898 in the State of New York than has been projected before in a great many years.

A THREE-YEAR-OLD colt by Kenneth, son of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, is reported to have stepped a quarter recently in 31 seconds over the Waverly (N. J.) track.

WILLIAM PENN, 2:07½, was placed first and Alcolyte, 2:21, second in the class for trotting stallions at the late Philadelphia horse show at Washington Heights.

CALIFORNIANS will be glad to learn that the mare Visalia 2:12½, will be campaigned this season by John A. Davidson of Pittsburgh, Pa. She will do credit to the Golden State.

JUDGE-AT-LAW, 2:15½, by Heir-at-law, has lately been castrated, and his engagements for the early meetings have been cancelled. He became unmanageable both in his stall and on the track.

THE conflict between Terre Haute and Louisville over dates has been amicably settled. The Louisville programme offered superior inducements, and Terre Haute wisely surrendered the date.

CHARLES E. BENNETT, a well-known horseman of Jackson, Mich., died instantly at his home about two weeks since. Although weighing 250 pounds, he always would drive his own horses in races.

THE veteran Bert Sheldon, Jr., 2:16½, winner of 199 standard heats—more than any other living trotter—is racing again, and opened the season by winning a race at Dover, N. J., in straight heats.

It is now said that Joe Patchen, 2:01½, will be driven by Billy Maloney of Buffalo. If Patchen is driven by all the drivers that have been assigned to him by the newspapers they will have about a heat each.

ABOUT all that remains of Hermitage Stud is Wedgewood, 2:19 and he will be allowed to spend his remaining days on the farm. May Overton, the leading spirit of the establishment, still owns Bow Bells, however, and at no late day may establish a new farm.

At the opening matinee of the Gentleman's Driving Park, Glenville track, Cleveland, O., June 4, Cephas, after having shown a mile in 2:20 with Marguerite, made the circuit in single harness to wagon in 2:12½.

CHAS. JAMES, a horse trainer at Hampden Park, Springfield, Mass., was formerly coachman for Queen Lil of the Hawaiian Islands, and it does not seem to have disqualified him for a more exalted position.

WE were happy to receive a call on Thursday from Mr. Ray S. Congee of the Butte Daily Miner. Mr. Congee is wearing Uncle Sam's uniform and is on his way to assist in raising the Star and Strips at Manila.

A TABLE which has been prepared, comparing the records of the five fastest trotting mares, shows that the average for the trotter is three-quarters of a second faster than that of the pacer. This is rather remarkable.

THE new woman will be in evidence on the Maine tracks during the coming season. Much opposition is manifested to these occupants of the sulky, but they have resolved to repeat the feature of last season and that ends it.

ACCORDING to latest advices Mr. Monroe Salisbury has reached Klondyke, having arrived safely at Dawson City, after a successful trip. He is engaged in freighting and has over one hundred and fifty horses for the service.

THE Driving Club of New York city has at last expired. On Tuesday evening, June 7th, all of the officers resigned in a body. The march of improvement has rendered Fleetwood track a thing of the past and with it expired the New York Driving Club.

A LETTER from W. B. McDonald, the Buffalo trainer now in Austria, says that the Black stallion Lakeside Prince, by Patchen Wilkes, is just now one of the very fastest trotters in Europe. Lakeside Prince was bred by Senator Lamy, and was out of an Almonarch mare.

THE judges at Point Breeze Park, Philadelphia, fined Stote Clark $25 for not trying hard enough to win with Bella Woodnut in the 2:37 pace on the opening day last week. Plymouth M. won the race, Bella Woodnut being second. The best time was 2:20½, made in the third heat.

JAMES JOHNSON was fined $100 and sentenced to 60 days in the work-house at Warren, O., recently, by Mayor Predmore, for cruelly beating a horse. Would we had more Mayor Predmores! Politics should sink into insignificance when such men ask for the suffrage of their fellow citizens.

THE long continuous rains on the Atlantic Coast have so seriously interfered with training that many meetings were postponed on that account. The Central New Jersey Driving Association was obliged to defer their meeting for several weeks in order that horses might receive proper preparation.

IN selecting horses for the cavalry service the United States is ignoring the prejudice heretofore existing against roan and gray, and any color is now considered good enough with which to whip the Spaniards. It is also a fact that the trotting bred horse is considered superior to others for this branch of the service.

THE stallion Plymouth M., 2:20½, by Election (brother to May King) is registered as Plymouth Meeting, he having been named after the town in Pennsylvania where he was foaled. He is nine years old and is out of a mare by Thomas Jefferson, second dam by Mambrino Pilot, and third dam by a son of Mambrino Pilot.

A CONTEMPORARY says: It is now very generally conceded in Ohio that the agricultural fairs are greatly aided financially, muscularly and from a truly orthodox standpoint by adding the intellectual and esthetic horse trot to the apple-butter and goose-neck squash and fine art departments. And this sentiment is growing.

LADY ANDERSON, one of the guideless wonders, with a record of 2:06½, died recently. She was owned by Wm. H. Thomas, of Greenfield, Ind., and held the second best record as a guideless wonder, being second to Marion Mills, 2:04½. Lady Anderson was a roan mare, by Anderson Wilkes, dam by Frank, and held a harness record of 2:19½.

WILLIAM WALLACE SCRIBNER 2:13½, it has been announced, would be raced without hobbles this year. He was tried without them at a matinee at the Valley Track, Cleveland on May 30th, and lost the first heat in 2:22½. For the next they were restored, and he won in 2:19½, but was finally beaten in the race. This tale points its own moral.

WILLIAM L., sire of Axtell, 2:12, and other good ones that was purchased from the Simmons consignment to the Woodward & Shanklin sale in February by Mr. R. E. Estill, have been taken from Elmhurst Farm to the farm of Mr. Henry Schmulbach, at Wheeling, W. Va., where he is doing stud duty. We understand that he is doing a good business.

DEWEY has already been taken many times for names of horses. The next on docket will no doubt be Schley or Sampson and whoever is first winner of honors in the Cuban war will stand best with horsemen who desire naming best colt with most appropriate name. The name of Miles may come in after some decisive land battle has been fought on Cuban soil.

THE veteran Johnathan Hawkins, breeder of Dexter and Dictator, is still naturally partial to the blood of Clara, the immortal daughter of American Star, who made him famous as a breeder. He has now the broodmare Cloverly, by Belvidere, son of Belmont out of Corinne, daughter of Volunteer and Clara. She is heavy with foal by Direct, 2:05½, and her produce will thus be a double descendant of the greatest of Star mares.

FOR the New Jersey State Fair all the races, eighteen in number, have filled excellently. Among the nominations in the 2:20 trotting stake are: Fred T. Steinway's Lou Mitchell, 2:20½, by Direct; Oakfield Stables' Joanne, 2:22½, by Grosjean; Glen Moore Farm's Cherrycroft, 2:22½, by Nutwood; E. M. Lockwood's Eth Bel, 2:22½, by Lynne Bel; H. Hoffmann's Thelma, 2:19½, by Sidney; A. B. Cummings' L'96, 2:19½, by Electricity; H. H. Demarest's Charity; Alcyoner Farm's Alcyoner, 2:25½, by Alcyone, and many others entitled to respect.

A TERRE HAUTE (Ind.) paper contains the following: Horse flesh comes cheap. A. B. Sollenberger was fined $5 and costs last Wednesday for cruelty to animals. Sollenberger is the liveryman on Seventh street, between Ohio and Walnut. It was he who poured gasoline on the pavement under a horse Sunday evening and set fire to it, burning the animal. Sollenberger denies that he rubbed gasoline on the horse's hoofs. The Humane Society was preparing for a vigorous prosecution of the case and Sollenberger decided a plea of guilty and a light fine would be the proper thing to do. We have an abiding faith that a fire will be placed under such men as these in the other world.

CALIFORNIANS may be interested in knowing that the representative of the Golden State, Burlingame, by Guy Wilkes, is producing a fine family at Orange County, New York. Mrs. John A. Goldsmith (now Mrs. Conrad Kohsel) purchased him at Mr. Corbitt's sale in New York three years ago, and he was placed in the stud at Walnut Grove. On the farm are several of his yearlings which show very excellent promise. Prominent among them is a filly out of Alcyola by Alcyone; this filly was foaled July 4th, and is properly named Independence. Evelyn W., the dam of Thelma, 2:19½, has a nursing by her side which is regarded a superior animal and has been named Count von Rohden-Kohsel, for Mrs. Goldsmith's present husband.

OF the principal amusements of the feminine beau monde of New York, riding and driving seem to predominate, and ladies, attired in the latest creation of the tailor and dress maker, mounted on a smooth-gaited saddler, or sitting erect with reins drawn taut over an attractive roadster, is no uncommon sight. The riding academies have been well patronized, and one of the prettiest sights in Central Park is a class of young ladies, under the watchful eye of an instructor, out for an afternoon ride. Driving four-in-hand for women is now considered a necessary accomplishment, and as yet only a few women have started a coach, but it is predicted that a woman's coaching club will be in existence at a time not far distant. Altogether, the coming woman is to be a thorough horsewoman.

CONTRARY to the weather which has so long prevailed in California, the East has had a superabundance of rain. In New York State, out of thirty-one consecutive days in May and June but two were without rain. Races were to have taken place at Goshen and Orangeburgh, N. Y., on May 30th, but the classes did not fill owing to the inability of the drivers to work their horses on account of the constant heavy condition of the tracks. At Goshen is located the strings of Mr. E. H. Harriman, Senator McCarty, Mr. Sargent and others, which have occupied the stalls continuously excepting a very little jogging. This condition of weather has insured to the New York State breeders a remarkable large crop of hay, as a consequence that commodity is now selling in New York for $6 to $8 per ton.

HENRY HELMAN will leave Hollister on the 20th inst., with his horses, to attend the races at Oakland, which commence there on the 25th. Mr. P. L. Nash and W. H. Clark will also leave with their horses about the same time. Mr. Nash will take Col. Benson, 2:14½; Menlo Belle, 2:27, and a two-year-old by the "Col." Mr. Clark has the green trotter Favor, and a green pacer, sired by a son of Electioneer. In Helman's string will be the bay mare Winnella, 2:28½; Ned Thorn, 2:24½; Frank Murphy, 2:15; May B., 2:10½; Uncle Johnny, 2:19½, and the green pacing mare Lindo. Several others left Eureka on Monday for the same destination, among them Dr. Ottmer's Jack W., 2:12½, in charge of Trainer Haas, and Dr. Rae Felt's Wayland colts, Pearl K., from a Grand Moor and Alsandy from Rapid Ann. Alsandy derives his name from a combination of the names of the owners of his parents, "Al" Little, owner of Rapid Ann, and "Sandy" Connick, owner of Wayland W., 2:12. These last named horses are in charge of Trainer Landon Hunt.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Horse business in Ventura county is improving very materially both in the demand for good horses at good prices and in the way of breeding.—Mr. B. F. Lavin, of Ventura, has leased the stallion Longworth (p), 2:19 at four-year-old, by Sidney, owned by A. C. Dietz of Ferndale Ranch, this county, and Prince Derby, own brother to Derby Princess, 2:08½, by Chas. Derby, owned by J. G. Hill of Oxford, Ventura county. Both stallions are doing remarkably well in the stud considering the dry season.—Mr. Pete Doyle has in training at the Ventura track trotters and pacers by Longworth that will be heard from this fall, Nellie D. (trotter) and Lady D. (pacer) by Longworth, are also in his string.—James Mack, horse trainer, of Hueneme, formerly of Santa Paula, has been put under heavy bonds by Judge Boling of Ventura, for using vulgar and insulting language as well as assaulting and threatening to do bodily harm to A. C. Dietz of Ferndale Ranch. So says the latter gentleman. Jimmy is now in Omaha with the famous Waldo J., setting the pace and keeping the peace.

CONTEMPORARY with the Corbett closing-out sale occurred that of The Hermitage Stud at Nashville, Tenn. In commenting on the sale the Nashville American says: "With this sale there passed out of existence an institution that was a credit as well as a source of pride to Nashville and Tennessee. It was with a feeling of genuine regret that the citizens of Nashville saw finally dispersed the grandest collection of trotting horses that was ever gathered or, perhaps, ever will be gathered again within the borders of the State. The lot sold, taken as a whole, was undoubtedly the finest that ever passed under the hammer in Nashville, and the prices realized were in keeping with the quality. Quite a number of foreign buyers were present, but the citizens of Tennessee know a good thing when they see it and many of those sold will remain in the State. Just such horses as these is what has given Tennessee the reputation of raising the finest horses in the world. In the two days a total of eighty-nine head were sold for an aggregate of $15,417—a very fair average, indeed, when it is considered that many of the animals were aged broodmares, saddle horses and ponies. The top price of the entire sale was brought by Irma Y., a five-year-old bay mare by Bow Bells, out of Romolo, by Argyle. With a little track work last year she stepped a trial mile in 2:27½. B. F. Wilson, of this city, purchased her for $695. Belgard, a three-year-old bay filly, by Bow Bells, out of Glenoro, by Belmont, brought $610, and was secured by John R. Price, of New York. Dona Saidee, a bay four-year-old filly, out of the same dam, by Ponce de Leon, was bought by D. S. Williams, of Nashville, for $520."

The Ewell Farm Sale.

Below will be found a list of the purchases at Ewell Farm's annual sale, May 25th, Nashville, Tenn. It will be borne in mind that the offerings were nearly all yearlings, a fact which will greatly encourage all when young things bring so good an average. This is, perhaps, the best colt sale since the depression in the horse market began, and indicates the steady advance being made in the home market. The total number of horses sold during the day were forty-four, of which ten were consigned by the Ewell Farm, fourteen by Cleburne Farm, seventeen by Woodlawn Farm, and three by H. M. Polk, of Spring Hill. In the lot were included the gat of Brown Hal, Tennessee Wilkes, McEwen, Mercury, Tempest, Cleburne, Fred S. Wilkes, Blue Hal, and other famous sires, out of grandly-bred dams. The aggregate sum brought by the entire forty-four was $5,660. Of this amount the Ewell ten brought $2,000, the Cleburne fourteen $1,625, the Woodlawn seventeen $1,625, and Mr. Polk's three $360. At the conclusion of the horse sale twenty-three head of fine Jersey cattle, the property of Ewell Farm, M. C. Campbell and H. M. Polk, were sold. Prices ranged from $25 to $105. These horses brought $100 or over:

Exit Guinette.

The "Pale Horse" has at last defeated Guinette. He has paced his last heat, and with that event has expired all the hopes of his owner, Mr. James A. Murphy, which he had so confidently expected to realize during the coming season. He died May 30th. The eyes of all horsemen were turned toward this animal from the fact that Mr. Murphy matched him during the past winter in a series of races against John R. Gentry, to come off during the coming season. It was a singular incident that when the match was made Mr. Bowne, on the part of John R. Gentry, wished to qualify the agreement that in the event of the death of either horse the money was to be refunded. This precaution on the part of Mr. Bowne proved of $10,000 worth to his opponent. The horse had shown no evidence of any ailment, but after his work on May 24th he showed a little "off," grew rapidly worse and died on the following Monday. A postmortem revealed heart failure in addition to slight pneumonia. Guinette was decidedly a game horse, having honestly won that distinction in the great race at Readville, Mass., last summer, in which Bumps, Heir-at-Law, Planet and others participated. It was a desperate encounter between he and Bumps from the word "go." The first day saw the race unfinished, and it was only as the sun was disappearing the second day that the contest ended. Guinette was declared the victor, and an animal with no superior for courage and endurance. It is said that on an occasion early last year, in which Gentry had given an exhibition mile in 2:04½, Mr. Murphy gave his horse a workout with Frank Agan, and that his performance at that time prompted him to make the match which has ended so unfortunately. When a stallion at four years old he took a record of 2:10½ and was afterward unsexed. He was bred by the Cecils of Danville, Ky., and paced at Fort Erie in 2:05½.

Judging at Horse Shows.

No factor that enters into the creation of a successful horse show is one-half as important as competent and satisfactory judging, in fact, it is the show. Probably as long as man remains human, judging at horse shows will continue to add force to the saying that to "err is human," but to err from a human standpoint is different from the standpoint of favoritism. From the various horse shows which have recently taken place there appears to emanate more than the usual amount of fault finding with the decisions of the judges. At the Queen's County Horse Show (N. Y.) held last month two trotting-bred stallions came in competition in the class for stallions kept for service, which had met in the same class at Madison Square Garden in 1897 and 1898. On both occasions one was awarded the red ribbon over nine competitors, the other on one occasion receiving honorable mention, and in the other nothing. At the show first above mentioned the latter received the blue ribbon and the former the red. The fact is, that personal feeling for the owner of animals too often influences the judges in their decisions, and the fact that some exhibitors contribute larger numbers, too often has its influence as well. While on this subject it is well, perhaps, to speak of the very unsatisfactory manner in which exhibits are catalogued. Very little information can be obtained from them of the animal's pedigree, except giving the name of the sire and dam, and in many cases even these are omitted. Justice and honesty require as much manhood in a judge at the horse show as is necessary in the judges' stand at the race track.

Robert J. as a Roadster.

Garney C. Gue in the New York Sun in commenting on the road horses driven by various gentlemen of Greater New York says of Robert J. as follows:

"His owner was driving the ex-champion of pacerdom up the road the other day, when he met his next-door neighbor, Nathan Straus, with Cobwebs, 2:12. It was the first time that Straus had seen Robert between the shafts of a road wagon, and he pulled up and called out:

"Well, how do you like him?"

"First rate," returned Tewksbury. "He's all that Ed Geers told me I would find him to be—the safest, fastest, best road horse I ever drove. The air was full of horses for about the first time I drove him under the elevated, but nothing scares him now."

And with that the owner of Robert J. laid the lines over the dashboard, jumped out and walked across the avenue to take a closer look at Cobwebs. Straus was dumfounded to see Tewksbury leave his spirited horse stand without hitching.

"Great Scott!" he exclaimed. "You ought not to take a chance like that. Go back. Your horse will run away."

But Robert J. only turned his head and pricked up his thin tapering ears in the direction of his owner, while he stood without moving a muscle. Tewksbury drives the great pacer without boots, blinds or checkrein of any sort. He lets him jog along with the reins slack, and if Robert J. wants to chase one of the gray squirrels that scamper across the path on his early morning drives through Central Park he is free to do it. In fact he has done it so far as he could without getting on the grass. During the few weeks that he has been driven on the road Robert J. has proved that he is an exception to the general rule that the best race horses are not the best road horses. His owner says that at first Robert J. wanted to break away and race with everything he came across, from ice wagons up, but he was quick to learn that some horses were not in the class with the pacer."

Horseless Carriages.

In no part of the world has as pronounced an effort been made to introduce the horseless carriage as in the city of New York, and it may fairly be pronounced a total failure. The idea of running them to and fro on the Boulevard and other thoroughfares, ostensibly on business or pleasure bent, with the motorman in gay livery, proved too glaring a device as well as expensive, and the visitor to Greater New York will now find them lined up at the curb of Madison Square and other locations, the motorman in discarded livery and decidedly unsuccessful as compared with his competitors with horse and cab. It will be also noticed that the hansom is quite rapidly coming into favor, and it is to be presumed a horseless hansom will be the next venture. The failure is attributed to the motive power, the fact is they are ungainly, and require a very smooth surface to afford any pleasure whatever to the occupant. The promoters of these vehicles attribute it to the motive power, and very properly. People prefer the "motive power" which the Creator has given them, endowed with intelligence, rather than a power produced from strong smelling coal oil, gasoline and substances of like nature—a renewed effort is now being made, and electricity, according to the new idea, is to "knock out" the equine race. Commenting on this subject "L. N. B." in the Breeders Gazette says:

The Hartford Company claims they have solved the problem of motive power, and are making vehicles of the general appearance of a Stanhope, finished and upholstered in the best style. Storage batteries are used weighing 850 pounds, and the entire weight of the vehicle is 1,800 pounds, and this to carry but two persons. The cost of charging a battery is about fifty cents, requiring three hours' time, and a run of thirty miles on a good road can be made with one charge. That is to say, the thing requires as much time to take on its power as it is able to run. The cost of such a vehicle is $3,000. Verily a man who will invest in such a pleasure vehicle must have an abnormal love of a novelty or be woefully wanting in knowledge of the value of a good road horse as a means of pleasure or service. We have given the best showing that can be made for the horseless carriage from the claims of an expert sent out by the strongest company in the business. He thinks it unfortunate that inventors and manufacturers were so foolish as to make absurd displays and contests in public and at agricultural fairs before they had fully mastered the motive power and mechanism of the vehicles. It will take years to overcome the effect of these fiascos. In the face of such a showing by an expert and enthusiast, it is safe to go on breeding good coachers and drivers. Every reaction of such efforts to displace the horse for purposes of business and pleasure will only increase confidence in him and add to his value. Possibly the auto-car may some day displace hacks and streets to such an extent as to compel farmers to breed better horses or none. Now is a good time to select the soundest and handsomest mares and breed them, provided a stallion of stamina, size and style can be found.

A Music-Loving Horse.

Speaking of the intelligence of the horse, a little incident of a music-loving horse is well worth the telling. Within a few blocks of the Gazette office is one of the city's fire engine houses. Here lives a horse of extraordinary intelligence who is extremely fond of music. The writer visited the firehouse the other day to give the firemen a concert with a national gramophone, a talking and music-producing machine. This horse is 17 hands high, coal black, standing very erect, with a long, bushy tail, and as gentle as a kitten. One of Sousa's lively marches was put on the machine and played. Mr. Tom, the black horse described, commenced to prance in his stall and paw at the door. One of the men brought the horse out and he stood close up to the horn, with head bent down and both ears drooping forward to catch every strain of the entrancing music, which is so loud and distinct on the gramophone. The horse was delighted with several choice selections and then reluctantly taken back into his stall. We believe if Tom should hear a gramophone playing on the street, while on a mad rush to a fire, he would be tempted to stop and listen—Buffalo Horse Gazette.

American Imports and Exports of Horses.

The following imports and exports of horses are for the month of March, the latest period for which the official figures have been compiled by the Treasury department at Washington. Horses were imported free in March to the number of 87, valued at $18,016, as compared with 51 horses imported last year, valued at $2,240. The total for the nine months of the present fiscal year amounted to 557 horses imported, valued at $97,864, as compared with 470 horses last year, valued at $52,145. The dutiable imports of horses amounted to 261 horses, valued at $24,191, as compared with 850 horses imported free last March, which were valued at $48,006. The total imports during the nine months ending March, 1898, were 1,768 horses, valued at $197,537, as against the imports of last year, which were 4,088 horses, valued at $218,176. The exports of horses in March amounted to 6,236 horses, valued at $710,712. The total for the nine months amounted to 37,123 horses, valued at $4,481,140, as compared with 26,048 horses last year, which were valued at $3,046,038. The re-exports of horses amounting to 23, valued at $1,230, during the nine months of 1898. There were no re-exports during either month, nor during March of 1897 of the nine months. The dutiable re-exports of horses amounted to 142 horses, valued at $70,098, as against 57 horses last year, valued at $27,715. There were no re-exports during either month, the above answering for the nine months. Remaining in customs warehouse were 11 horses, valued at $3,870, as against 6 horses last year, valued at $2,050.—The Horseman.

Rheumatism and Horses.

CORNHILL, TEX., March 24, 1897.

Please send me six bottles Gombault's Caustic Balsam by express. Your Balsam is the best liniment I have ever used, both for horses and myself. I have used it on myself for rheumatism with good success. I doctored four months and spent $110 for doctor and medicine with no results, but since using your Balsam I can work around on the farm. Would like the agency for this country. OTTO A. BEYER.

HORSE BREEDING FARMS IN CALIFORNIA.—Now that none of the large establishments on which trotters and pacers are reared are taking part in the races here this season, it may appear that the future of harness horses on this coast has rather a gloomy look. Neither Palo Alto, San Mateo Stock Farm, Rancho del Paso trotting department, Pleasanton Stock Farm, not one of the big places that starts a horse at the coming meeting, and in all probability will not take part at the State Fair or Los Angeles. But it is safe to say that more trotters and pacers are in training in California, including those which have gone East, than ever before, and it is also a warranted conclusion that more mares have been bred this season than for anyone of three or four years in the past, and that the smaller breeding farms will increase their operations hereafter. Not that the big farms named have given up, and excepting the two which have gone out of existence, San Mateo and Pleasanton, the others are still breeding on a large scale.

The following, copied from the Horse Review of June 8th, will show something of the intentions of Palo Alto, and as 'Rio Alto' is closely connected with the place that obtained a world-wide reputation as the breeding place, the nursery, the college from which so many champions have graduated whatever he states has the sanction of authority.

PALO ALTO IN 1898.

For the first time in many years Palo Alto Stock Farm, the place that in the past has contributed so many performers to the circuits both east and west, will not be represented in either circuit with a string of its own. It is not the intention of the management of Palo Alto to discontinue racing for all time, but the lack of opportunity to campaign a stable in California this year, and the fact that the increase has been so much greater than the number sold, caused the disposal of the racing string for 1898 and made the policy of the place for the present the development of stock for sales and the breeding up of a new racing string for the future.

When the horses making up the great string of world's record breakers in 1891 were sold, relegated to the stud, and passed away—Sunol, Palo Alto, Arion and Bell Bird—it did look as if it was up-hill work for Palo Alto to regain its standing in the race-horse world; yet in a short time there stood in the stalls vacated by the great quartet of record breakers the great race horse, Azote, 2:04½; the grand racing filly, Expressive, 3, 2:12½; the crack racing two-year-filly, Palita, 2:16, and the world's champion yearling, Adbell, 2:23.

Again the stable was ruptured by sales and relegation to the broodmare paddocks, and a new stable had to be developed to maintain the former prestige Palo Alto had made, and in a short period there appeared the two mares, Helena and Peka, both with race records of 2:11½, the fastest of the get of Electioneer; Pasonte, 4, 2:13, the race record for four-year-old fillies for 1898, and the great young pacing stallion, Betonica, 3, 2:10½, a public exhibition of 2:06½. These being sold at Cleveland, Palo Alto once again starts its training stable with a lot of youngsters, and not a record horse among them.

If there were nothing in progression, it might be well for Palo Alto to stop training now, and rest on its glorious showing of the past. But, no; the material is on hand to produce greater results in the future than has been accomplished in the past, and with the development of the youngsters, bred in blood lines that the founder believed would produce extreme speed, and stamina to carry it over a distance of ground, there is no good reason why the Palo Alto of the future should not be greater than the Palo Alto of the past.

RIO ALTO.

Neither can it be said that he is entirely out of the way, by being far too over-sanguine when he formulates the statement, "there is no good reason why the Palo Alto of the future should not be greater than the Palo Alto of the past," though that implies a rate of excellence that will be higher than any heretofore shown by any establishment of the kind in the world. Azote stands at the head of his class, and when measured by consistent performances, number of very fast heats trotted is an undisputed champion. I always considered Palo Alto the greatest of trotters when all the adverse circumstances are carefully weighed. Then Arion who has made a mark that it is safe to say ne'er a two-year-old will equal in the next ten years to a sulky of the old fashioned kind, though granted a kite-shaped track. Sunol who holds the record to the same kind of a vehicle and Adbell and a whole lot of champions of their day. Great as were the Palo Alto stallions who have made such brilliant history; that have startled the world with their accomplishments, it is not beyond all the bounds of probability to predict that their equals, if not their superiors, are now occupying boxes on the famous rancho. Advertiser, Azmoor and others that have already gained great celebrity, and if Monaco does not "join the band" of the illustrious progenitors I will be greatly mistaken. Others coming on from great sires and great dams and another important point every year adds to the experience of the people who have been for so long a time connected with the horse department of Palo Alto.

Trusting, with exceeding faith, that the predictions of "Rio Alto" will be verified, and with the sincere hope, that not only the historic establishment but California also may take a still more prominent place in the annals of horsemanship, I can truthfully add that the signs of the times point to the same conclusion, notwithstanding the present outlook.

OAKWOOD PARK STOCK FARM, with only one representative on the tracks this season, Klatawah, which is in Keatings string, is well supplied with the material to bring forth more of the stamp of Derby Princess, Diablo, W. Wood and others of renown.

Steinway carries his twenty-two years right gallantly. But for a trifle swaying of his back he would not seem to be otherwise than in his prime. A grand old horse as the accompanying cut shows, though it is far from displaying his immense muscular development as it really is:

STEINWAY

His son, Charles Derby, is a remarkably fine-looking horse, more quality than his sire, and that coming legitimately through the breeding of his dam, Katy G, by Electioneer, Fanny Malone by Niagara, and his third dam, the celebrated long distance trotting mare, Fanny Malone, not only thoroughbred, but very highly bred, being by Herald, her dam by imp. Trustee, without flaws to the end of the list. While Derby has the fastest trotter of the family to his credit, Derby Princess, 2:08½, Steinway leads in the pacing division, W. Wood, 2:07, and Agitato, 2:09. And another one coming this year, as there will be many disappointed if Klatawah fails to obtain the front place for three-year-olds, or very close to the mark whether record or trial.

While the horses of the Oakwood Park Stock Farm have brought it into high repute wherever fast harness horses are appreciated, the beauty of the location, the completeness of the improvements, everything in fact which money and educated tastes could do to make it the finest stock farm in California. This is saying a good deal with Santa Anita, Palo Alto, San Mateo, Rancho del Paso to come into comparison, but I have not the least hesitation in giving it the first place, and fully confident that nearly all who are familiar with California breeding farms, grand as they are, will coincide in the award. At the base of Mount Diablo the lands extending far enough up the hills to secure a supply of water and a natural basin for a reservoir, a small dam all that is needed to form quite a lake, and the elevation sufficient to force the water to the top of the buildings. A sloping valley—if such a name is admissible—wherein house, barns and most of the buildings are located. The cut of the carriage house and stables for the carriage horses will give an idea of the character of the buildings, and it is safe to say that there is not a stock farm in the United States which has superior adjuncts for the conducting of the business.

COACH HOUSE.

The house, in characteristics and surroundings, can be termed a model country seat, and Mr. Boyd informed me that when their winter quarters in San Rafael were vacated every member of his family rejoiced over the change.

Greatly disappointed that the photo of the house was not a good picture, as even a shadow of the real gives a better idea of what is represented than columns of printed description.

Surrounded by wide verandahs, and these enclosed by lattice work, over which passion flowers, wisterias and other graceful climbers grow, when the sun is shining brightly and the air outside is somewhat fervent, a pleasant temperature within.

Grand old oaks on every side. Magnificent trees, some of them having so much room that the branches extend to a distance that will afford shelter to a big band of horses, others that are in groups, and a few with ivy enshrouding bole and branches.

All kinds of fruit trees and vines flourish, the tillage of the best, not a weed or tuft of grass on the many acres that are planted to nearly all the varieties of trees and vines.

The only drawback is the location of the training track, and the only thing detrimental is that it is some distance from the house and the magnificent barns which were built before the track was constructed. This necessitated building a number of boxes adjoining the track, and for training purposes it cannot be excelled. No expense was spared in constructing, the inequalities of the ground being remedied by grading and a passer-by would come to the conclusion that it was intended for a public course which would meet the approval of the most critical.

I am somewhat partial to up and-down work for young trotters, and English trainers insist on a bit of up grade to finish the gallops in order to strengthen the lung power and at the same time relieve the strain on the forelegs. The objection to a track which is a good way from being level is that a correct estimate cannot be made of the capacity of horses trained upon it. The relative speed of the track with those over which races are held can soon be gauged. The Palo Alto track has been found to be several seconds slower than any of the good tracks in California, and that is not a great deal from being level.

CHICO STOCK FARM—This beautiful farm, within a mile of the attractive town of Chico, while it differs from the place at the base of Monte Diablo, will attract those who are at all gifted with aesthetic tastes.

Very nearly level the soil of the red hue, which prevails whenever adobe is absent, rich and easily cultivated it is model fruit farm and also well adapted for the breeding of fine horses. Never muddy, at the worst a little spattery on top, and feet and legs of horses reared on it are sure to be good when belonging to families that are free from defective limbs. The stallion which Mr. McIntosh selected, Arthur Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes from a mare by Arthurton, combines so many strains of Messenger, and other thoroughbreds that he could not well fail to have the right kind of bone and tendons, and his progeny—the largest numbers of which have been reared on the Chico Stock Farm—have stood training and racing wonderfully well. Quite a proportion of the get of Arthur Wilkes have gone fast enough to test the quality of their legs.

Among the trotters Wayland W. 2:12½ and Hobo 2:13½, the pacers Welcome 2:10½ and Fitz Lee 2:13½. Had Arthur Wilkes been awarded anything like the opportunity that others of his family have been granted there is scarcely a doubt that by this time he would have taken high rank. Few trained of the few foaled, and for the last year Mr. McIntosh has not given any track work to the colts on his place, and that with brothers to Wayland W. and Welcome, sister and brother to Fitz Lee and other colts of promise. Arthur Wilkes as a road horse is hard to excel, and one grand essential a very fast walker. I have ridden behind him several times and when kept on the walk showed speed enough to cover at least five miles in an hour.

The brothers to Wayland W. and Welcome are highly formed colts. One three years old, the other two, plenty of size; the three-year-old is now 16 hands or very close to it, and the other promises to be well up to the family standard.

The cut presented is not after the usual pose, Arthur putting his head to the ground just as the button was pressed. It shows his build, however, and those who knew his sire will at once mark the resemblance.

ARTHUR WILKES.

Victory.

In common with the whole country the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN rejoices over the brilliant successes which have crowned the efforts of the gallant officers and men of our navy, and with the civilized world honor that heroism which has so indelibly inscribed on the pages of history the record of American valor at Manila Bay and Porto Rico.

The American tar or Yankee soldier, when he dons the army blue, is prompted more by a feeling of patriotism and a determination to maintain a principle in which he himself believes than any other soldier in the world. 'Tis true he is embarking for a foreign country, but he feels the struggle is a continuation of the idea that brought this nation into existence, which was reviewed in 1861 and removed from our national escutcheon the last token of barbarism. Human rights are the same whether in the torrid or temperate zone, and oppression, tyranny and cruelty perpetrated on heroic men, and appeals from helpless women and children will always find a response in the American soldier's heart. Imbued with this idea, this nation has determined that the horrible inhumanities perpetrated by an Alva, a Cortez and a Pizarro shall not be re-enacted in this age, and that "Old Glory" shall proclaim to the world that the love of justice and the rights of humanity so inherent in the American heart is not circumscribed by race or boundary lines, but is as broad as the universe, recognizing one common brotherhood of man.

ON Thursday, the 23d of June, commencing at 11 A. M., Killip & Co. will sell at auction at their salesyard, corner of Market street and Van Ness avenue, ten fine, new vehicles of different descriptions (buggies, sulkies, carts and carriages), besides harness and horse boots of all descriptions. These articles were formerly in use at the celebrated San Mateo Stock Farm of Wm. Corbitt, and that there will be some great bargains goes without saying.

Breed Only the Best.

The experiment of several breeders of Kentucky and Tennessee in spaying a large number of weedy fillies or those having transmittable defects is attracting no little attention among breeders and turfmen. That the practice will result in the accomplishment of much good there can be no doubt, and if all the breeders of America would follow suit it would be a trump card in the long run, its effect shown in a sturdier, healthier, speedier race of horses. Indiscriminate breeding, breeding on the theory that if a stallion is "fashionably-bred" he must beget high-class performers, or if a mare is "bred in the purple" she must produce a "phenom," has been the bane of a host of breeders throughout this great horse-raising country.

This indiscriminate breeding of royally-bred "weeds" has reduced the price of horseflesh throughout America as no other plan of action could have done. Trotting horse breeders, especially, have felt the effect of this folly more than any other class of breeders, for horses of this sort five years ago would bring on an average five times what they do to-day. The watchword of breeders should be: "Throw away the weeds of the horse garden and let the healthy and prime material thrive." Individuality should come first by a long distance in the minds of horse-raisers, then they should ask themselves the question: "What did my stallion or mare or their sire or dam ever do in the line of racing?" After they have answered these questions satisfactorily to themselves it is time to take up the breeding and performances of the horses in the third and fourth generations. After the fourth remove is scarcely worth consideration, further than to know that they were thoroughbred if you intend breeding thoroughbreds and "well-bred" if you are to rear trotters. The blood of ancestors of 1800 cuts very little figure in the animals of to-day, according to the calculations of eminent scientists, such as Francis Galton, of England, who has made a study of heredity. There were several unbeaten race horses who "bred on" in this country whose genealogy could not be traced beyond the fifth or sixth generation, and this fact will cause the admirers of the Lowe theory to scratch their heads and turn from the subject of breeding to something else. If you have in the animals you intend mating individuality of the highest order, racing ability above the ordinary of a sire or dam and back of that for say three generations animals in a pedigree that made their mark at the racing game, you are not likely to make any failure at breeding, and you will beat the man with the tap-root theory who places pedigree first in the scale and individuality second all hollow. And therefore we say let the good work inaugurated go on, bringing with it an improved race of animals, greater racing ability and enhanced values in horseflesh.

We do not believe in spaying good-looking, well-bred fillies, however, for many superior race mares would be lost to the harem through the use of the surgeon's knife, and that would be a calamity indeed. Neither do we believe that the unsexing of good individuals would make them race much better, taken all in all, and besides it would perhaps result in the perpetration of no little fraud unless a careful record of the unsexed ones were kept. We do, however, believe that the spaying of weedy fillies two or three years of age would do much good, as spoken of above.

Coming Trotting-Pacing Meeting at Oakland.

Everything points to a splendid month's meeting at Oakland track. The entries assure it, and now all that is necessary is to rally the lovers of light-harness racers and point out to them the necessity for their presence during this, the longest meeting ever proposed for trotting or pacing horses in all America. The Oakland track is in superb condition and the horses have been moving on their home tracks faster than they ever did at this time of the year. The rail bird is beginning to be very much in evidence, and he twitters as merrily over the quarters he caught in 0:30 as his timer ticks off the seconds. To-day the course was thrown open to the horsemen, and there will be excitement galore until the opening bell rings next Saturday. Then there will be thrills of several sorts.

The speculation will be through the auction box and the bookmaker. Of the latter it is expected there will be at least four to shout, "Come on, boys! I'll bet against any of them!" Maybe there will be more. Admirers of the truly American horse on this coast should form themselves into committees of one to make this meeting a success from every standpoint. It is in their power to make or mar the great industry of breeding trotting horses in California. The aim of this meeting is to popularize light harness racing, the time-honored sport of Americans, that it will balance in the scale with the sport of kings, which has such a hold upon the hearts of our people. Good management will place the harness horse on an equal plane with the galloper, and there is no doubt that the P. C. T. H. B. A. officials having this meeting in hand will use their utmost endeavors to so conduct affairs that no fault can be found with anything pertaining to the meeting, and when it is over it will be the general verdict that the way has at least been paved for the giving of financially successful trotting and pacing meetings of long duration, at least around the coasting metropolises.

Following is a list of horses that will "line up" on the opening day:

Three-year-olds, 3:00 class, trotting, dash, one mile, purse $200.—J. J. Murray Moorehead's ch f Maud Murray, by Hambletonian Wilkes; P. J. Williams' ch c California, by Silver How; A. G. Shaw's bi m Lindo, by Strathway; Alex. Connick's bi g Alasandy, by Wayland W; W. S. Maben's Rex Alto, by Alto Rex.

THE recent sale of Galtee More for £21,000 to the Russian Government makes us think that while this is a prettystiff figure for a galloper, California still has within her borders the horse that brought the largest sum ever paid, viz., the unbeaten Ormonde. For this great stallion, young W. O. B. Macdonough paid $150,000 to Senor Bocau in Argentine Republic, and by the time Ormonde had been taken to England and then brought across the Atlantic and the American continent, the son of Bend Or and Lily Agnes represented an outlay of about $175,000. California had other high-priced bits of horseflesh, too, in Maxim, sold by G. Stead of New Zealand for $21,000 to J. B. Haggin. The last-named gentleman also paid $15,000 for imp. Sir Modred, $19,000 for imp. Goldfinch, at least $12,000 for imp. Watercross, $26,000 for imp. Order and $12,000 for imp. Darebin, while Charley Fair is reported to have given $27,500 to Theodore Winters for Yo El Rey and as far back as 1864 Mr. Winters gave $15,000 for Norfolk, Jim Eoff the memorable extra one dollar to make good the boast of the late R. A. Alexander that he would sell one of Lexington's colts for more than he paid for "the old horse," viz., $15,000. Hyderabad, a Ranch del Paso product, sold for $30,000 a few years ago, and this is the largest price ever given for a California-bred thoroughbred, we believe. The late Senator George Hearst paid $38,000 for the counterfeited King Thomas (brother to Ban Fox) when he was a youngster, and the horse won but one little race. Trotting horses bred in California have brought the very largest sums on record—Arion, $125,000; Anteeo, $65,000; Stamboul, $50,000; Sunol, $40,000 (reported); Mascot, $29,000; Ansel, $20,000; Woodnut, $20,000. All this goes to show the enterprise of California breeders in getting the best stock obtainable for coin and breeding horses that sold for sums running away up into the thousands. A Californian bought the highest-priced horse in the world, a Californian sold the highest-priced trotter in all history, and a Californian gave the highest price for a yearling on record if memory serves us, viz., $38,000.

THE forms containing the ad of the Los Angeles Fair Association had gone to press when the following was received: "LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 14, 1898—EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Dear Sir: Will you kindly change our ad some. In the first place, where it says 'the Sixth District Agricultural Association' have it read 'District Agricultural Association No. 6 of Los Angeles,' etc. Change entries to close June 27th instead of June 25th. Add, after the words 'to trot or pace in any one of the events,' entrance money must accompany the entry or the entry will not be accepted.' Change June 25th to June 27th—in fact, change the last clause of the conditions to read thus: 'Entries close on June 27th, and records made in 1898 will not constitute a bar.' Kindly have these changes made so that it will appear in the next issue, and oblige, very truly yours, LEWIS THORNE, secretary.

SINCE the article of E. I. Robinson on page 492 in relation to the breeding of Young Emilius, Emilia's sire, was put into type and sent to press a contemporary called our attention to the fact that the name of Eric, Shoveler's foal of 1833, was changed to Young Emilius, and while that change does not appear in the list of her foals, it is to be found in the index in volume 8 of the English Stud Book. Mr. Robinson therefore erred, but the error was one very easy to make. It was probably not the endeavor of our correspondent to pick flaws in the great work of Col. S. D. Bruce, but to correct what he thought a mistake—one made for many years. When we are wrong we will "acknowledge the corn," and now hasten to set matters right.

Special Department.

Mr. Runyon of Red B'uff has sent five mares to be bred to him, and Colonel Park Henshaw has sent four, every one of which should nick well with Arthur. Mr. Runyon has one by Dexter Prince, one by Azmoor, one by Truman, one by Hugo and one by Alfred.

Colonel Henshaw has Belle, pacing record 2:11, Orphan Bell, dam of Chico, 2:14½, Gladys, by Blackbird, Reavis', and another Blackbird mare. There is a McKinney foal, a yearling from one of Colonel Henshaw's mares that is an extra good-looking colt, and a filly from another which some of the experts prefer to the colt.

That the Electioneer blood in Mr. Runyon's mares, and the Blackbird in Colonel Henshaw's will blend with the Wilkes and Arthurton in a way to produce winners is reasonably well assured.

Lesla Wilkes, 2:09, the fastest of the Guy Wilkes. is three-quarters the same blood as Arthur, and the two-year-old Idolita, which sold for $4,700 at the Cleveland sale combines the Electioneer and Wilkes blood, two crosses of Electioneer. It may be that my favoritism for the Blackbirds warps my judgment when holding that the blood will mingle kindly with any of the trotting families through the success of the Richmond mares warrants the assertion.

Chico Stock Farm, as stated before, is a beautiful place. A quiet homelike place, its greatest beauty the orchards which contain nearly every variety of fruits and nuts adapted to the climate, though the monarch of all the trees is a huge oak, ivy-clad, the vigorous creeper reaching the top of the tall tree, and hanging in massive festoons to within a few feet of the ground. The accompanying picture shows Mr. McIntosh's house and a part of the tree and climber.

HOUSE AND OAK TREE IVY CLAD.

A row of walnut trees along the country road, one of which was noted in the paper of last week, the others being nearly as large. Maples on one side of the lane which leads from the road to the house and barns, and in the barn yard another large oak, and a huge fig tree in the lawn adjoining the house which has a circumference of six feet three inches three feet above the ground.

Pure water is another good feature of the Chico Stock Farm. A few feet from the surface there is a full supply, and though the day—two weeks ago to-day—was quite hot, after pumping a few strokes from the well in the barnyard, a cool and refreshing drink was obtained. There are irrigating ditches on a part of the farm, and with little additional trouble the whole place could be brought under the vivifying effects of the potent fluid.

Mr. McIntosh has two other ranches which would give an opportunity to keep hundreds of horses if that should be his desire. The place on the west side of the Sacramento, near St. Johns, contains three thousand acres, and no part of the Sacramento Valley has a richer soil. Heavier soil than on the eastern side and better adapted for grain and grass. Scarcely a limit to the production when the season is at all favorable, and never a year when the pasturage on it fails. Hogs in prime condition on the herbage alone, and horses and mules fairly revelling in the green and succulent forage.

The Gridley ranch contains twelve hundred acres, and, as stated in the paper of last week, from a portion of it eight hundred tons of hay were cut and stacked. Grand pasturage, on that, too, and a number of horses were sent from the home farm to secure the benefit of the "good feed." A part that would have made a crop of hay that would have been hugely welcome in other sections was turned over to horses and colts, and that the recipients will go into the winter hearty and strong is beyond all reasonable doubts.

Mr. McIntosh sold several horses and mules to the government officials, and had others been broken he could have sold the whole band. The officer in charge and the veterinarian expressed the highest opinions of the horses in the neighborhood of Chico and good horses are the legitimate result for a preference for good stock, and as many stallions of high merit have been kept in Butte, Colusa and Tehama counties that sequence could be expected.

THE FRONTISPIECE.—The greatest picture of the kind ever presented is that from which the frontispiece of this number is copied. The original is seven feet by five, exclusive of the frame, so that the portraits of the horses in that are about fifteen times as large as in the reduced copy.

Colored as in life, no one who knows the horses can fail in selecting the animals. Even the miniatures are so life-like that there is little trouble in designating them without the key, and if a magnifying glass be used the observer will be astonished by the fidelity of the representation. Each horse stands out so prominently, the perspective so accurate that under the lens they appear endowed with life.

And there is the advantage of photographic representation of horses over the work of the best artists when the camera is handled and the subsequent work done by one who can handle them so deftly as the creator of this picture. A Herring, a Cooper, a Troy, Scott, Cross or Stull may put on the canvas a representation that is pronounced perfect, and yet when critically examined with the subject in juxtaposition, many faults will be disclosed. The old time artists were prone to reduce limbs, neck and head, spindle legs, goose necks and heads disproportionately small being the rule in place of the exception. The camera may magnify from the animal being in a wrong position, exaggerating the part that is near and diminishing that which is furthest away, but as will be seen by a careful examination of the picture everyone of the nineteen horses portrayed are in proper proportion.

An artist of the stamp of Mr. Hodson will never make a mistake of the kind noted, and hence the observer can rest assured that the horse is before him and not a counterfeit.

Celebrities, too, from fast sprinters to the winner at four miles and in keeping with their speed and endurance, many of them endowed with the bluest blood in the stud book, descended from the magnates of the turf, paternal and maternal ancestry of rare distinction in every generation to the days of Eclipse, Herod and Matchem.

The names at the bottom of the picture, and the numbers on the horses give an opportunity for identification and those who have not seen them race but have racing guides will freely acknowledge that the title, "A SELECT GATHERING" is worthily bestowed.

A GOOD IDEA, PERHAPS?—The Spirit of the Times states that starter C. J. Fitzgerald has instituted a new plan in relation to the position of the starting gate, and that in place of being placed at right angles to the stretch it is inclined so that each horse will have to go the same distance when rounding a turn. In the account the words used are: "In order to equalize matters Starter Fitzgerald has the machine placed at an angle to the track, which gives the outside horses an equal distance to travel with the others," and adds: "The wonder is that the present starter's predecessors should have failed to adopt the plan." Without further explanation the merit is not entirely noticeable. Were the start made at the commencement of a semi-circle, and the turn sixty feet wide, then the outer end of the barrier would have to be advanced—according to the ratio of 3,141 of circumference to 1 of diameter—188 feet. If the starting point were midway of the turn, 94 feet, and in that proportion for whatever part of the circle was embraced in the race. But if the start in a race of a mile was as it usually is, sixty feet, or more up the stretch, then a horse starting thirty feet out of the pole horse could "take the track" before reaching the turn. Starting thirty feet from the pole the distance would be only seven feet further than the inside horse would travel, and, consequently, should the angle at which the barrier is set be anything like enough to equalize the distance in one semi-circle, great advantage to the extreme outsiders. But a moderate angle will doubtless help to equalize chances, and that, in all probability, is the improvement inaugurated by Starter Fitzgerald and endorsed by the Spirit of the Times.

LOS ANGELES.—The "City of the Angels" is the banner place on this coast for harness-horse racing. In no other locality so many people ready to attend the races in which trotters and pacers are the contestants. And it is nearly as great a certainty as anything in the future can thus be classed, that the meeting this Fall (commencing October 5th and continuing ten days) will be superior to any of its predecessors. The purses which will close on the 27th inst are of $1,000 each, five of them, the classification being 2:12, 2:17, 2:27 trotting and 2:12, 2:25 pacing. Records made in 1898 will render the horses making them ineligible, so that the horses which have won races or heats at Colorado Springs and Denver will be qualified to participate in races to which they were eligible at the close of 1897. The Los Angeles Association can be called angelic in the theatrical sense, as in addition to the fine big purses to close on the 27th a full programme will be issued during July, and it is beyond question that it will be based on the same solid foundation that has always been laid, corner stones, walls, arch in harmony, the keystone carrying the inscription, T. P. T. I. O. H. H. B., which can be taken to mean: To promote the interests of harness horse breeders.

CLEAN RACING.—Notwithstanding my efforts to purify the sports of the track has awakened violent animosities, induced attacks, personal and vituperative, in place of endeavoring to correct abuses, admitted to be such by all who have the true and future interests of harness-horse racing at heart, have endeavored to shield violators of not only rules, but also the fundamental principles on which alone all kinds of sport can flourish, great good will result. A supreme satisfaction that I am sustained by such a large majority of the supporters of harness racing, that scores of friends are gained, and even those who take exception to the course pursued, and heretofore have been slack in enforcing rules, will be more diligent hereafter in fulfilling the duties they are selected to look after.

I will feel the keenest disappointment if future harness-racing in California is burdened with the heavy loads that it has been made to carry in the past—a heavier burden than that which Sinbad bore when the old man of the sea sat on his shoulders—and though the same heroic treatment that rid the renowned navigator of his enemy may be necessary, it should be recognized that palliatives are not the true remedial agents in such cases. The X ray of public opinion has brought into prominence the evils which cannot be denied, and when the ailment is known and admitted, then it will become imperative to apply the remedy.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

Horses at Portland Track.

Californians are well represented at the race track. They are after the good fat purses offered.

"The drought has knocked business into a cocked hat in the South," said Lee Shaner, a well-known horse-owner, "and as the people have more money here than they need, why, we consider it an act of charity to relieve them of some of it. This is a land of plenty. The State seems to be rolling in wealth. The burning sun of California has withered our pocketbooks, but we expect to moisten them here so that they will expand again."

The fact of the matter is that the Californians are represented by some of the best racing stock in the South. Among those already here are Lee Shaner, Frank Starkey, Arthur Harrison, Jake Krouse, Penn Moore, W. Fine, M. Dolan, Charley Spooner, Durfee, "Big Dick" and several colored men who have excellent racing stock.

Californians are daily arriving. Runners from British Columbia are headed this way, and several Oregonians are already on the grounds. Most of the runners of Oregon will not arrive upon the ground until within a week or so of the races. Being close at hand, it will not be necessary for them to hurry.

The scene at the race track is one of animation. From the long rows of stalls protrude the heads of blue-blooded racing stock. The men lie about under the sheds in every kind of position and discuss the merits of the different horses and criticize new arrivals. There are men there who understand the points of a horse as thoroughly as a mechanic does the machinery of an engine. Their knowledge of horses is their stock in trade. That is the means by which they make their living. During the forenoon the horses are exercised on the grounds, and a pretty sight it is to see them prancing around pulling eagerly at their halters.

Among the horses on the grounds are some that have never been heard of, but they will be heard of in the coming meet, and probably to the sorrow of some of the old trained animals. It will be their first year on the track, and if they fulfill the expectations of their trainers, there will be some startling surprises among the "old uns."

"It is a mystery to me," remarked one of the Californians, "that racing has so long been neglected in Oregon. Not only is the race track close to the city and one of the finest on the coast, and the most centrally located in the West, but it also has the advantage of climate and cheap feed. This should be the greatest racing center west of the Mississippi. After coming from California, where the grass is burned to powder by the blazing sun, and where one has to gasp for breath, the sight of valleys rolling in green grass, the cool evenings and ice-cold water make one appreciate Oregon's opportunities."

Some of the racing stock from California which have records are as follows: Oahu, Alcatraz, Flornel, George Palmer, Little T. G., Pescador, Red Spinner and Dunpraise, owned by Lee Shaner; Sandow, by Penn Moore; Boscol, by Charles Spooner; Jim Bozeman, Santa Paula, Borthwacher and Much Love, by Frank Starkey; Uncle True and Tortoise, by W. Fine; Goldbug and Kittie Brady, by Jake Krouse; Lee Kylo, Howard and Nervosa, by M. Dolan; Navy Blue, Ping and Tennessee Maid, by Big Dick; Brownelle, by Jack Burns. Most of these are runners.—Portland (Or.) Telegram, June 8th.

H. L. FRANK's horses arrived, looking fine as silk, and all took their gallops yesterday morning. Ojai (pronounced Ohi) owned by Harry Howard, is a two-year-old sprinter of the very best class. He has a way of starting from the gate quickly and keeps it up. Some two-year-olds will have a hard time beating him for half a mile. Miss Rowena, owned by Burns & Waterhouse, the owner of the Oakland race track (?), is quartered with Billy Randall's string at the Butte track. No one knows just how fast this filly can run, but she has run five-eighths of a mile in a little worse than a minute and should go on for a distance. Lord Chesterfield is one of the prettiest jumpers in the country. He is a blocky sort of a horse, and will be hard to beat in races over the sticks. Track Superintendent Walter Carns will put up a gate for trainers to school the green horses this week.—Anaconda Standard, June 7th.

GEORGE WEAVER left for San Jose this morning for the purpose of getting the famous broodmare and suckling colt belonging to Irving Diggs, and bringing them back to Woodland. The old mare has been at Cook's Stock Farm, near Milpitas, for the past month.—Woodland Democrat, June 11th. The "old mare" spoken of is Lily Wright, the dam of Diggs, Sutton and Olinthus. She recently foaled a Red Iron colt and was mated with imp. Brutus. By the way, Olinthus, now at Harlem (Chicago) has been coughing, and Galen Brown has not started the clinking son of Red Iron.

IMP. CALPURNIA, the property of Clay & Woodford, died a few days ago at Runnymede Stud from the effects of foaling. She was by Julius out of The Test, by Sacharometer, she out of Lady Abbess by Surplice. She was a very good producer, having thrown Mabel Glenn, Dungarven, Humidity, Catalpa and Elmer.—Thoroughbred Record.

THE summer race meeting of the Victoria Jockey Club will be held at the Driving Park on Friday and Saturday July 22d and 23d. Purses and prizes to the value of $1,200 have been offered and should bring out a string of horses. In fact there are already a number of local horses undergoing preliminary training at the track.—Victoria Colonial.

The Breeding of Young Emilius, Sire of Imp Emilia.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In relation to the breeding of Young Emilius, I am, after a very thorough examination of the English Stud Book, convinced beyond any doubt whatever that the breeding of the dam of Young Emilius, as stated by Mr. Bruce in Vol. 1, page 84, of the American Stud Book, where he gives the breeding of imp. Emilia and names her sire as Young Emilius (son of Emilius out of Shoveler), is not correct, and the error seems to be universally repeated and copied wherever the name of Young Emilius occurs in American books and catalogues. I contend, and the English Stud Book shows beyond any question whatever, that instead of Shoveler, by Scud, being the dam of Young Emilius, his dam was Cobweb, by Phantom; second dam, Filagree, by Soothsayer; third dam, Web, by Waxy; fourth dam, Penelope (dam of Whalebone, Whicker and others) by Trumpator, and thence on to the Tregonwell Barb Mare. In Vol. 4, page 423, English Stud Book, Shoveler, by Scud, is registered, and her produce given as follows:

- 1822—B f, Mercy, by Merlin.
- 1824—B f, Mulebird, by Merlin.
- 1825—B c, Magnet, by Merlin.
- 1827—B c, Captive, by Cervantes.
- 1828—B f, EARWIG, by Emilius.
- 1830—B f, Mowhen, by Emilius.
- 1832—B f, Wilduck, by Whisker.
- 1833—ERIC, by Emilius.
- 1834—B f, Erica, by Emilius.
- 1836—Merganser, by Merchant.
- 1838—B f, St. Calomb, by St. Patrick.
- 1839—B c, St. James, by St. Patrick.
- 1841—B f, by Albemarle.

Missed in 1823, 1829, 1831, 1835 and 1840. Slipped foal in 1887.

Died in 1843.

In Vol. 4, page 96, Vol. 5, page 66 and Vol. 6, pages 37 and 38 of the English Stud Book, Cobweb, by Phantom, is registered and her produce given as follows:—

- 1827—Ch f, by Comus.
- 1828—B c, Y. EMILIUS, by Emilius.
- 1829—Br o, by Master Henry.
- 1830—Ch c, Lucius, by Emilius.
- 1831—Ch f, Nell Gwynne, by Sultan.
- 1832—B c, Mahomet, by Sultan.
- 1833—B c, Bay Middleton, by Sultan.
- 1834—B c, Achmet, by Sultan.
- 1835—B c, Phoenix, by Buzzard.
- 1836—B c, by Sultan.
- 1837—Ch c, Glenorchy, by Glencoe.
- 1839—B c, Jersey, by Buzzard.
- 1840—B c, Catesby, by Slave.
- 1842—B c, King Cob, by Slave.
- 1844—B f, Clementina, by Venison.

Missed 1838, 1841, 1843 and 1845.

Died in 1847.

By looking at the produce of Cobweb, it will be noticed that her foal of 1828 was Young Emilius, and that her foal of 1833 (the year in which Bruce in his Volume of 1892, entitled "The Thoroughbred Horse," and other similar volumes, credits Young Emilius with having been foaled) was the celebrated Bay Middleton, by Sultan, and a like examination of the produce of Shoveler by Scud discloses the positive information that her foal of 1828 (the year in which Young Emilius was foaled) was the bay filly Earwig, by Emilius, and that her foal of 1833 (the year in which Bruce says Young Emilius was foaled) was Eric, by Emilius, and that she never had a foal named Young Emilius. Since writing the above I have examined G. Lehnendorff's "Horse Breeding Recollections," published in London in 1883, and find therein on page 100 a tabulated pedigree of Lollypop, wherein the name of Young Emilius occurs, and his dam Cobweb, as I now claim. But aside from all other claims and books the English Stud Book is the standard authority, and by that all are bound to abide, and that appears to settle the question beyond any doubt whatever that the dam of Young Emilius was Cobweb by Phantom, and not Shoveler by Scud.

Very truly yours,

E. I. ROBINSON.

MR. WILLIAM WEBB, who for so many years was connected with Daantine Station, where with old Battailous he bred a number of good horses, has sent his recent purchases—Coronation, by Little Bernie—Trentrose, and Borgia, by Battailous—Corinda—to Sydney. From there they will be shipped on Saturday next by the Aberdeen liner Damascus for England, and it is Mr. Webb's intention to race them in the old country. Coronation was at the top of the tree amongst the two-year-olds here during the early months of the present season, and as he has grown into a fine, big fellow, there appears to be no reason why he should not be able to advertise this colony well at home. Borgia has yet to show what he is made of, but he, too, is a fine colt.—Queensland cor. The Australasian.

At the Duckenfield sale the Australian Peer was knocked down at 120 guineas to Mr. John Esles. The purchase, I believe, was made on behalf of an American, Mr. Mitchell, and there is little doubt but what the horse will be shortly shipped to go abroad.—The Australasian.

JOCKEY RUTTER has made a contract to ride for S. C. Hildreth next fall.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Mayor James D. Phelan.

The subject of this sketch occupies a unique place in the political world of California. Although he is anything but the latter day politician, James D. Phelan has positively made a success of politics. Without damaging commitments or a taint of personal compromise, such as usually attaches to municipal nominations, he made himself the Chief Executive of one of the great cities of America. And this, too, without any evident pre-arrangement. If he ever had even a hope of political preferment prior to his nomination for the office of Mayor two years ago, that hope never took the form of words. His most intimate friends never heard him express even the most indirect political aspirations, and yet in less than two years he has jumped from the routine labors of managing a princely estate to a place in the public mind where his name figures prominently both as a gubernatorial and senatorial possibility.

But with all this, James D. Phelan is not in any sense the creature of chance. His laurels have been honestly won. It may be said without reflecting in any sense upon his predecessors that he has come nearer meeting public expectation in the discharge of his duty as Mayor of this city than any other man who has ever held that office. This is saying much, but much can be said of the subject of this sketch without employing fulsome flattery or departing from the truth.

Few men have come to that high office better fitted by nature or education for the administration of its affairs than the present incumbent. Although he is a man of the common people in everything except the princely fortune which he enjoys, he is not one who plays to the gallery. James D. Phelan is not a demagogue. This trait was clearly brought out during his somewhat memorable campaign. Between the clear-cut sentences of his speeches one could readily trace a spirit which said, "I want you to vote for me, but I don't want your vote bad enough to trade my honor for it." He held out no hope during that campaign that has not been fulfilled, and this, too, without damaging compromise. He made no promise that could not receive the sanction of the most circumspect grand jury San Francisco County has ever had. This was a radical departure from the lines upon which high office had heretofore been obtained, but he made it win and therefore can justly be credited with making a success of politics.

His canvas was probably the cleanest one this city has ever experienced. His administration has been a liberal, but not a wasteful one so far as he controlled it. In public matters he has no favorites. There is but one door leading to his public office or his public favor, and that door admits all. He leans toward the party of his choice in all things, but he does not lean on it. In manner he is as thoroughly cosmopolitan as the city over which he presides. He has brains enough to detect fraud, no matter how deftly it may be concealed, and courage enough to expose it. This has resulted in making enemies out of those who "do" politics for a living and friends out of the people who pay for it. His bold championship of municipal reforms and the public ownership of public utilities has carried his name beyond the confines of the city and made him a prominent figure in State politics.

Although he has not been conspicuous in the agricultural world of California, the name Phelan is not unknown in the rural districts of the State. If we are not mistaken the elder Phelan was the pioneer produce and commission merchant of San Francisco, commencing business as he did, along in the early "fifties." From that date down to the present time the name has been one of prominence in both the social and business worlds of California. In the matter of charities it has been more than prominent. Mayor Phelan is a generous as well as a gracious giver; he can say no to an undeserving appeal without imparting offense, or yes to a meritorious one without implying undue obligation.

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN does not lay any claims to political prognostication, but it feels justified in saying that a new figure has appeared upon the horizon of State politics in the person of James D. Phelan. He represents what might be called the unknown quantity in politics; with this, the politician of the near future must deal. The nearest approach to anything like an estimate of his true strength is that furnished by the vote on the New Charter. To him more than any other man or agency is due the credit of that victory. On one side were the "bosses" and the papers, on the other Mayor Phelan and the people. It was a bitter contest, but he won, which shows that he is closer to the people to day than he was the day of his election. This is the reward of political fidelity.

As Mayor Phelan is one of the largest ranch owners of California, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN feels that the rural interests of the State will have nothing to fear at his hands in case he concludes to extend the scope of his political action. This we hope he will do.

Won By Belmont's Colt.

LONDON, June 3.—At the third day's racing of the Manchester Whitsuntide meeting to-day August Belmont's three-year-old chestnut colt Bridgegroom II. won the Carlton Maiden Plate. This race is of 103 sovs. for three year-olds and upwards; entrance, one sov. Nine horses ran, including the Lorillard-Beresford stable's three-year-old chestnut filly Bloozed. The distance was one mile. The result in detail was as follows:

August Belmont's ch c Bridgegroom II., 3, by Rayon d'Or—St. Bridget 1
J. M. Hanbury's br f Lowland Beauty, 3, by Alloway—Comely, 2
T. Craven's ch c Waterhead, 3, by King Monmouth—Estuary, 3

Mr. Vyner's four-year-old brown colt King Crow, by Crowberry, out of Queen of Hearts, won the Manchester Cup. This race is of 2,000 sovs. (200 sovs. in plate and the rest in specie) added to a handicap sweepstakes of 25 sovs. each, 10 sovs. forfeit, the second to receive 300 sovs. out of the stakes; entrance, 3 sovs. Ten horses ran over the course, one mile and three-quarters, and the result in detail was as follows:

Mr. Vyner's br c King Crow, 3, by Crowberry—Queen of Hearts; 99... 1
W. Low's b b St. Ersk, 5, by St. Simon—Nadine; 115... 2
H. R. H. the Prince of Wales' b f Nunsuch, 4, by Nunthorpe—La Morlaye; 168... 3

Answers to Correspondents.

SUBSCRIBER, Bishop, Inyo Co., Cal.—Will you publish best performances of Bronco while at Oakland and Bay District tracks? Bronco is now owned by W. F. Edwards, of Benton, Mono county, Cal. Answer—Won five races at Oakland course, two at Bay District track, run in the years 1893-94. At Oakland, won at six furlongs in 1:15½ (August 1, 1893), six furlongs in 1:15 (July 31, 1893), six furlongs in 1:16½ (June 10, 1893), mile and a quarter in 2:09½ (August 3, 1893), and one and one-half miles in 2:38 (August 4, 1893). His wins at Bay District were six furlongs in 1:14½, 119 pounds, (April 4, 1893), and five and one-half furlongs in 1:10½, 122 pounds (June 1, 1894). He ran second and third on several occasions, among the number second at seven furlongs, beaten one length in 1:28 (July 1, 1893); second, beaten one length at seven furlongs in 1:28½ (July 4, 1893); second, beaten three lengths at six and one-half furlongs in 1:21 (April 18, 1893), and third, beaten two heads at six furlongs in 1:15 (April 13, 1893).

THE California jockey Spencer rode in superb form at Gravesend last Monday. He was first past the post on four horses, one of which, Whistling Con was disqualified for fouling. His other three horses were Imp, the fast mare from Chicago, which is accredited with having a chance to beat Ornament in the Suburban, beating Havoc and Knight of Garter handily, Lehman, a favorite, and Swiftess, an 8 to 1 shot. In the first, Spencer was second on Tendresse, a 6 to 1 shot. Considering the horses he has had to ride, the California boy has had a record excelled by few. That he was fortunate enough to fall in the hands of a clever horseman like Jimmy Rowe contributed greatly to his success can hardly be disputed. It will not be gainsaid that he had talent, but talent is not always rewarded without opportunities which he has had. Jimmy McCormick, mighty quick to discern a comer, picked Spencer out and sent him East for his friend Rowe, this in response to a request that he look out for a likely rider for him.

PAT DUNNE received yesterday from Woodford Bros., of Paris, Ky., a letter which said Leonatus died of colic at their farm last Thursday morning. As a 3-year-old, when the property of Chinn & Morgan, Leonatus won ten straight races and then broke down. These were the Blue Ribbon, at Lexington; Kentucky Derby, Tobacco Stakes and Woodburn Stakes at Louisville; Hindoo Stakes, Ripple Stakes and Himyar Stakes, at Latonia; Dearborn Stakes, Green Stakes and Illinois Derby, at Chicago. He was taken from Chicago to Long Branch to fill engagements and was training there when one of his tendons gave way. An offer of $40,000 was refused for him a few days previous to the mishap. He was not a success in the stud, but sired Leonawell, Libertine and Tillo and a few other good performers.—Daily Racing Form, June 13th.

THE race for the Grand Prix de Paris was run over the usual course at Paris, Sunday, June 5, and attracted the usual crowd of pleasure seekers. Seventeen horses made up the field, and among the number was J. S. Curtis' American bred bay colt Archduke II., by Luke Blackburn—Duchess, by Kingfisher, who was unplaced. The race was won by Baron de Rothschild's bay colt Le Roi Soleil (by Heaume—Mademoiselle de la Valliere). Gardefeu was second and Cazabat third. The betting was 5 to 1 against Le Roi Soleil, 1 to 1 against Gardefeu and 4 to 1 against Cazabat.

COUNT LEHNENDORFF (who manages the German Government's stud) has purchased from Mr. Patton the famous Australian sire Carnage, by Nordenfeldt—Mersey. The price paid was $50,000. For the last three years Carnage who is more than a half-brother to Carbine, has stood at the Cobham Stud.

JEAN BERAUD was sold on June 11th to William C. Whitney for a big price—reported as $4,000.—Mr. Whitney to get the Great American Stakes prize which the colt won that day, valued at $10,000.

WANTAGE BELLE, who recently won in England for Richard Crocker, was bred at Belle Meade Farm, near Nashville, Tenn., and is by imp. Loyalist (sire of Lissak) out of Wanda.

NOTICE TO ANGLERS.

Every angler is invited to drop us a line occasionally, telling us of the condition of the streams they have visited, the killing lure, the number and size of the fish caught, or any other item of interest to anglers.

Tunny Fishing off Catalina Island.

The season for tunny (Orcynus thynnus) fishing in the waters off Santa Catalina island and other fishing localities of our southern coast is now apparently on for good. The fish is called "tuna," by the local and visiting anglers, possibly following the patois of the Portuguese and other fishermen in the southern waters of our State. The following account of a recent fishing trip, by a correspondent of the Los Angeles Herald, has a sufficient dash of adventure and sport in it to arouse the enthusiasm of any angler.

E. E. Doran and C. R. Scudder of St. Louis went tuna fishing off Avalon bay Thursday morning, June 9th, expecting to return by breakfast time. Mr. Doran did return, but he left Mr. Scudder fastened to a big tuna, and came to get some breakfast for the fisherman. The news was circulated, and soon Mr. Doran started out with Mrs. Palmer and daughter of Oakland, Mr. Fitch Dewey, a famous tuna taker of Toledo, Mrs. C. R. Scudder, Mrs. Doran, Mrs. Cook of Colorado Springs, and C. F. Holder of Pasadena. Another launch put out at the same time with Mr. Studebaker and party. The launches found Mr. Scudder and Jim Gardner, his boatman, about four miles off shore, still fighting the fish, and laid by for an hour, when a sea picked up and the presence of several large whales decided the ladies that they would go in. The two fishermen had now been working for four hours, and Mr. Holder was put aboard their boat, while the launch put back to Avalon, expecting to return at once and lay by the fishermen, who were all the time drifting out to sea. It was believed that the fish would soon be taken in, but this was a mistake, as the game creature seemed to gain strength all the time, and made a most remarkable fight. For the first three hours it played about on the surface, rushing in and out, trying all the tricks a game fish can. When it was first "struck," it seemed, as one of the party said, to leap into the air and strike with the tail, then lashing half an acre into foam. It towed the boat around and around for an hour, then started for the main land, circling and fighting in a manner that was calculated to exhaust any one but the skillful manipulator of the reel from St. Louis, who made a brilliant fight, and has probably fought a fish longer than any one ever did.

Mr. Doran's launch did not return at once, owing to some trouble with the engine, and the "three men in a boat" were rapidly towed out to sea.

Sometimes ten or fifteen feet would be gained, but the fish would take twice as much in a desperate rush. Then the handle of the reel broke, and all was supposed to be lost, but this was soon remedied. The reel was oiled and the fight begun again. Three times a blaze of silver was seen near the boat and the gaff was brought out, but the fish rushed away again. So time dragged on until half-past one. At this time the boat was nearly half way across the channel. A heavy sea began to pick up, and the anglers began to fear that in the heavy sea the fish would break away. The wind was from the northwest, directly off Avalon, which was now out of sight, and the fish was towing them south so that they were off Seal Rocks, nearly half way to San Juan Capistrano, as near as they could make out. At 2 o'clock the fish was fighting as hard as ever, and the fishermen began to think that it would never give up, and that they would have to make for the main land if night came on and the boats from Avalon could not find them. The outlook was not a pleasant one, but there was no question of cutting away that fish. If the fight had been carried into the night, it was decided to try for the main land and if it blew hard, but fortunately this did not happen, and after several hard rushes the fish seemed to grow weaker and was finally, at about half-past two, brought to gaff and hauled into the boat, where it nearly stove the bottom through with its powerful head. The weary fishermen gave a cheer for the benefit of the whales, which were still on hand, raised a flag and began to pull in against the sea.

The launch was now seen coming down under steam and sail, and an hour later the boat was picked up by Mr. and Mrs. Doran and Mr. Dewey, taken in tow, and at 4 o'clock the fish was landed, after towing the boat at least twenty miles, ending perhaps the most exciting experience in catching the leaping tuna. Catalina has ever seen, the exact time of the fight being seven hours.

The fish weighed 125 pounds, and if weighed direct from the water would have tipped the scales at 130.

Mr. Studebaker has taken two fish, Dr. Macomber of Pasadena one and Mr. Dewey of Toledo one, and the little bay of Avalon was filled with leaping tunas yesterday, affording great sport. On a rod and the lightest line it takes from one to three or four hours to land these fish, but with a hand line which is fine sport, the deed can be accomplished in fifteen or twenty minutes. Tuna fishing has aroused the greatest excitement amongst anglers, and for the time being the game little yellow tail is forgotten.

The big records for the season for rod and reel are: C. F. Holder, Pasadena, 183 pounds; L. C. Wadsworth, Redlands, 163 pounds; Dr. Macomber, 138 pounds; Mr. Fitch-Dewey, 148 pounds; Mr. Doran nine fish, ranging from 75 pounds to 140; Mr. Studebaker, 116 pounds, while twenty or thirty others have been taken or hooked by parties unknown.

River Eels.

A fisherman arrived in Stockton last Sunday morning from Knights Ferry, where he had been fishing. He had several fine eels in his creel. Fisherman claim that there are very few eels in the river and it is seldom they are caught, but the man who exhibited them stated he had taken the lot he had in a very short time.

According to a writer in the Commercial Advertiser, the German brown trout placed in various localities in the Eastern waters have made a history for themselves as follows: Some people do not like the German brown trout that has been introduced into this country in several sections. There have been many complaints that the big brown trout are terrible cannibals, preferring young trout fry to anything else. By this bad habit many streams have been denuded of brook trout that used to haunt them. But in all such places the brown trout has taken strong hold, and after a few years have given anglers a chance of landing three and four pounders, where formerly a pound-and-a-half fish was a rarity. The brown trout, too, are good eating, and are good fighters, equalling in this respect the best black bass that ever swam around a lake or up and down a swift-running stream. Thus, while the brown trout have practically swept before them the former inhabitants of a stream, they have populated it with worthy successors, who can and will uphold the trout reputation to the last gasp.

Recent reports from Santa Cruz are enthusiastic in praise of salmon fishing in Monterey bay. The Santa Cruz Surf of June 9th has the following notes:

This has been the best day of the season for salmon, every boat returning with good catches. The largest fish caught was a 28 pounder by "Big Jim." Yesterday the catch was also good, Mr. Googins making the largest haul, bringing in sixteen.

Following are a few of the catches to-day: J. Buelna 12, Charles Holcraft 9, O. M. Button 7, James McCall 7, Henry Uhden 10, Jim Balaklava 5, Jim Sterling 4, Roy March 12, A. A. Googins 5, Andrew Soria 12, Johnson 4, J. Morris 10, J. Jackson 10.

Dr. John Purvis and George R. Vernon Jr. of Oakland, two well known disciples of Isaak Walton, write that fishing in Salmon creek, Sonoma county, is at its best at the present time. Recently in four hours they landed 112 salmon trout, none of which was less than seven inches, while the largest scaled one pound and three ounces. So freely did they bite that in several casts two were taken at a time.

Game Warden Ferguson, of Fresno, received from the Fish Commissioners on Saturday, June 11th, four cans of bass fry which are to be placed in the streams of Fresno county. Reports from various parts of the county show that the bass planted last season are doing finely.

M. J. Geary caught eighteen beauties at Point Reyes, in the big rock pool, last Saturday. Frank Dolliver's catch consisted of one over two pounds in weight, and two smaller fish.

A day's catch in Monterey bay recently was as follows: One fisherman caught 28 sand paper sharks (the fins being sold to Chinamen), 7 shad, 17 salmon and a large sea-bass.

Lewis creek, near Jamesburg, Monterey county, has afforded good trout fishing recently, a fish weighing nearly three pounds being one of a late catch.

Anglers in the vicinity of Spokane are enjoying first-class trout fishing. Fish from one to seven pounds are frequently caught.

Bay fishing is good just now. Fine catches of smelt, rock-fish and perch are made daily.

C Breidenstein and Sid Hall had good luck on the Lagunitas last Saturday.

Reports from Boca state that fishing on the Truckee at present is first class.

Yellowtail and barracuda are plentiful at Redondo beach.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows:

National Rifle Association of America.—Rules for Competitions.

Rifles.—Rifles allowed in competition are: 1st, Military rifles, such as are in use in the United States Army or in State Militia. 2d, Special military rifles, not exceeding nine and one-quarter pounds in weight and having minimum trigger pull of six pounds; and 3d, Any rifles having maximum weight of ten pounds and a minimum trigger pull of three pounds.

The usual military sling and swivels may be used. No hair or set trigger and no fixed or artificial rests will be allowed. Rifles and ammunition must be submitted for inspection when required.

Ammunition.—Any form of fixed ammunition may be used for regular or special military rifle, provided the bullet is securely inserted in shell to a depth of not less than two thirds the diameter of the bore.

For other rifles, any ammunition may be used; but, if a breech loader, it must not be loaded, or if a muzzle loader, it must not be capped, until the competitor has taken his position at the firing point.

Targets.—The targets are divided into three classes, and are to be of the following sizes, unless otherwise stated in the terms of the match.

First Class—To be used at all distances over 600 yards.

Target, 6x12 feet.
Bulls-eye, circular, 36 inches in diameter.
Centre, " 54 " " "
Inner, square, 6x6 feet.
Outer, remainder of target.

Second Class—To be used at all distances over 300, to and including 600 yards.

Target, 6x6 feet.
Bulls-eye, circular, 22 inches in diameter.
Centre, " 38 " " "
Inner, " 54 " " "
Outer, remainder of target.

Third Class—To be used at all distances, up to and including 300 yards.

Target, 4x6 feet.
Bulls-eye, circular, 8 inches in diameter.
Centre, " 26 " " "
Inner, " 46 " " "
Outer, remainder of target.

Scoring and Signaling—

Bulls-eye counts 5; signal, white circular disk.
Centre " 4; " red "
Inner " 3; " white and black "
Outer " 2; " black "

Ricochet, scored R, signal, red flag waved twice, right and left, in front of target. Ricochet hits to be marked out after the flag signal. When a shot strikes the angle iron on which the target stands, the maker will open the trap and raise and lower his flag three times in front of the target.

A competitor challenging the marking of a shot, must first make a deposit of one dollar for the benefit of the Association, which, however, shall be returned to him if his objection is sustained.

When two shots strike simultaneously, the shot having the higher value will be marked first, and the competitor whose proper turn it was to shoot will be credited with that value.

Position.—In all matches, except for carbines, the position up to and including 300 yards, shall be standing. The elbow may be rested against the body.

In carbine matches, the position at 200 yards shall be standing; at 300 yards, kneeling or sitting; over that distance any position as prescribed for infantry.

In all other matches, at distances above 300 yards, any position may be taken without artificial rest to rifle or body. In all cases the rifle must be held clear of the ground.

Prizes.—Unless otherwise specified, no competitor will be allowed to take more than one prize in any competition. Prizes to be delivered on the Range at close of meeting. Trophies annually competed for must be returned to the Association at least one week before meeting at which it is again to be presented. All prizes not claimed within thirty days after winning, shall be forfeited to the Association.

Union Coursing Park.

The attendance at Union Coursing Park last Sunday was up to the average. The defeat of the coursing champion Moondyne by Firm Friend, a kennel mate of that grand dog For Freedom, was a jar to the talent indeed. Ingleside's triple stake-winner was a 4-to-1 favorite. He had outfooted such clever flyers as Van Knapp, Tod Sloan and Skyball with such ease that the talent plunged on him at any odds. Moondyne led to the hare, took the turn and his backers were lining up to the cashier's box when he missed in a drive. Firm Friend got in then and scored enough points to get the flag by a slight margin.

The wise ones practically had everything coming their way in the preceding courses, the only marked exceptions being the defeat of Jester by Johnnie R., who was on the short end at 2 to 1, and of Metallic by Skyball. Lalla Rookh's victory in the sapling stake over Lottie M. was a lucky one. The latter ran rings around St. Gertrude, but the hare that was slipped was the strongest during the afternoon and the youngster was at a disadvantage when she joined her little sister in the slips.

The result of the rundown last Saturday was as follows.

SAPLING STAKE.

Maid of Bail beat Prince Charming

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Several gentlemen, who are prominent in kennel matters, were, at the invitation of Mr. J. E. De Ruyter, recently spending a pleasant Sunday at the Verona Kennels. Among the matters discussed was the question of classification rules as applied to bench shows at present. After considerable argument and analysis pro and con the consensus of opinion was that rules framed on the following lines should be submitted to those most interested. In brief they provide for—Puppy classes, as at present. Novice classes, optional with the showing club. Open classes, free for all, excepting champions. Premier class, open to dogs winning thrice in the open class. Champion class, open to dogs winning four times in the premier class.

The gentlemen present were Dr. F. W. D'Evelyn, Norman J. Stewart, Chas. R. Harker, J. G. Barker, H. H. Carlton and J. E. De Ruyter.

A general meeting of the local and coast fanciers is probable during the early part of July. It is proposed to have show clubs send two delegates and specialty clubs one delegate. Discussion of kennel, club and show affairs will be confined to recognized and official representatives only, thus obviating the monopoly of time and patience by speakers who may be sincere in their motives but who by dint of reiteration of matter that has been entirely personal have worn out their particular theories and created indifference to the cult advocated.

Should a satisfactory agreement be arrived at, the matter will then be brought to the attention of the A. K. C. for further and necessary action.

Business of more than usual importance brought out a large attendance of the members of the St. Bernard Club of California last Monday evening. Thos. H. Browne presided. The matter of particular interest to the club was the resolution adopted, and which will be forwarded to New York, to the effect that the club had full confidence in the course of Dr. W. R. Cluness Jr. as the club representative on the Pacific Advisory Board, that he had always been active and alert to the kennel interests of the coast coming under cognizance of the Board, and that in connection with the recent charges filed by Mr. Knocker, he was not deserving of any criticism or censure individually. Considerable discussion was had in regard to statements made that a great deal of the alleged inattention and carelessness of the Pacific Advisory Board has been due in the past year to the efforts and influence of a certain member, who is now accused of persistently obstructing and neglecting the business of the Board whilst making an outward showing of great interest and application in its behalf. From the opinion expressed by different members, the Club seems to be in general accord that it would be better for the Coast kennel interests that the Pacific Advisory Board or any similar body be abrogated and that the control and direction of the A. K. C. be direct.

Anent the charges against the S. F. Kennel Club preferred by J. H. Sammi, it is claimed that the class in which Sammi's dog was entered, was afterwards judged by Mr. Bell and that Scaldy Mike did not get an award in competition.

H. A. Wegener has added another good cocker to the Redwood Kennels in his recent purchase from Geo. Douglass, Woodstock, Ont., of the red cocker spaniel bitch La Paloma (Champion Red Dock—Inez), whelped November 27, 1897.

Attridge & Braun have purchased from Wm. Tompkins, Macedonia Breeding Kennels, Macedonia, Iowa, a fine bull terrier dog, St. Blaise No. 39,740 (Tompkins' Blucher—Duchess Dorkey).

The name Redwood Kennels has been claimed by H. A. Wegener and is now registered with the A. K. C.

It is rumored that the A. K. C. have requested further proof in the Martin case.

SHREVEPORT, LA.

DEAR SIR—Since purchasing a bottle of your Mange Cure about two months since, I have induced my friends to use the remedy on their dogs. Some were very severely afflicted, one in particular having had the mange for nearly two years, and I am glad to say it did the work after other remedies had failed. I really would not be without it as long as I am possessor of a good dog. Yours truly,

G. A. GUYNEMA.

Empire Gun Club.

The regular club events and several practice and pool races were shot out at the Alameda grounds last Sunday by the Empire Gun Club members and visiting shooters. The day was an ideal one for blue-rock breaking. The first club event of the morning was the classification race at twenty-five targets. The scores made were as follows:

Prospective Shooting at the Traps.

The first match of the series, at blue-rocks, between teams of twelve men each from the Olympic and Empire Gun Clubs is scheduled to take place on the Ingleside grounds, Sunday, July 24th.

A series of three match races has been arranged between the South End and Golden Gate Gun Clubs, the first of which between teams of six men each will take place at Alameda, Sunday, July 17th. T. L. Lewis has donated a banner which will be presented to the winning club in this contest.

Lincoln Gun Club.

To-morrow the regular monthly shoot of the Lincoln Gun Club will be held at the Alameda Club grounds. The club races and other events are open to all. Following the regular club race a prize shoot at twenty targets, entrance 75 cents, is scheduled. The prizes will be donated by the club; they will be numerous and of good quality. Class shooting will prevail in this race. The final event of the day will be the popular "couple shoot," entrance $1.00. The club will add money in such manner as to enable shooters who lose on the second round to receive back their entrance money. Crack shots will be pitted against each other.

Vacaville Gun Club Shoot.

A recent meeting before the traps at Henry Peters' grounds near Vacaville, was participated in by sportsmen from Sacramento, Dixon, Suisun and other points. The scores in detail of the different live-bird and blue-rock events were as follows:

Event No. 1 at six live birds—
H. A. Bassford	11111-6
Ruhstahler	11111-6

Napa Trap Shoots.

The first of the series of blue rock shooting matches for prizes was held Sunday by the Napa Gun Club at Jacobson's place north of town. The scores for the match, at 25 targets were:

Reams	21
T. Prior	19
Mansfield	18
Fine	17
Pickett	16
J. Johnson	15
Wilson	15

There were also three 10-bird matches, the scores of which were as follows:

Holden	3
Pickett	7
Prior	7
Reynolds	5
Imman	5
Deweese	5

Blue Rock Shoot at Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles Gun Club gave an all-day blue rock shoot at the club grounds beyond West Lake park last Sunday, which was well attended. A summary of events and scores is as follows:

Fifteen birds, $1.25 entrance, three moneys, Leighton 15, Lyons 14, Blades and May 13.
Lyons	15
Blades	14
May	13
Twenty birds, $1.50 entrance, three moneys, Van Valkenburg 20; Blades, Vaughan, 19; Smith, Bradley, Leighton, 18. Merchandise shoot, 50 birds, entrance $1, 11 prizes:
Van Valkenburg	48
Bruner	48
Farrell	46
Blades	45
May	45
Vaughn	45
Woodberry	45

Trap Shoot at Birds Point.

The Alert Gun Club had their regular shoot at Birds Point last Sunday. The cup race and several pool events were the features of the day. The attendance at these shoots seems to be increasing. The next meeting will take place a week from to-morrow. The cup race was won by P. B. Bekeart with a score of twenty-four breaks. This match was at twenty-five targets, several of the shooters being given a handicap allowance of targets. The winner of the cup returned the same to the club, for future competition among the members, stating at the same time in a well-phrased speech the fact that being a manufacturer's representative, he considered himself in the position that he could not consistently compete for a prize or trophy against the club members. The handicap allowances and scores in the cup race were as follows:

Blue Rock Tournament at Vancouver.

The Sportsmen's Association of the Northwest will hold their fourteenth annual tournament under the auspices of the Vancouver and Burrard Gun Club, at Vancouver, B. C. June 29th, 30th and July 1st and 2d. The meeting is open only to residents of Oregon, Idaho, Washington, Montana, and British Columbia. Professionals and manufacturer's agents will be permitted to shoot for birds only. The charge for targets will be five cents each which amount will be deducted from the purses. Revised American Association rules will govern and all shooting will be classed shooting.

A summary of events, added moneys, etc. is as follows:

California Lion Killed.

Certain sections of Monterey county can be relied on to furnish a California lion hunt most any time. The following from the King City Settler is our latest lion story:

Last Monday while hunting, Pleasant Thompson killed a mountain lion measuring over seven feet in length. The enormous beast showed fight and mutilated the hunter's dog in a terrible manner before he could get in the death shot.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Coming Events.

June 19—Lincoln Gun Club (blue-rocks), Alameda Point.
June 19—California Wing Club (live birds) Ingleside.
June 26—Alert Gun Club (blue-rocks) Birds Point.
June 26—South End Gun Club (blue-rocks), Colma.
June 26—Olympic Gun Club (blue-rocks), Ingleside.
July 3—Reliance Gun Club, Webster street, Alameda.
July 3—Golden Gate Gun Club (blue-rocks) Pacific Tournament
July 10—Olympic Gun Club (live birds), Ingleside.
July 10—Empire Gun Club (blue-rocks), Alameda Point.

The Empires promise an extensive and novel program for the end of August.

A lively pigeon shoot is scheduled at Suisun for next Sunday. Several of our local cracks will be present.

The regular shoot of the California Wing Club, postponed from Sunday June 3d by reason of the State live bird shoot, will be held on the Ingleside grounds to-morrow.

The South Ends had their regular club shoot at Colma last Sunday. Pool and practice races filled in the rest of the day. This popular club now numbers nearly forty active members.

At the twenty-fourth annual shoot of the Illinois Sportsmen's Association held at Peoria June 8th, Edward Bingham of Eureka, Ill., won the State Championship Cup at inanimate targets. In the sweepstakes the money was divided between Gilbert, Budd, Heikes and Marshall, the well known cracks. Remarkable scores were made. Gilbert got 80 straight targets and broke all but three out of 135. Budd got 78 straight and broke 128 out of 135.

Crops—Oakland to Pleasanton—Martinez to Danville.

That the rains that came about the middle of May, did a great deal of damage to hay that was cut previous to that time is beyond question. That a great deal of good resulted cannot be denied by the most stubborn of pessimists.

Last week there was a report in this paper of the crops in the upper Sacramento valley, and in order to see the result in the valleys adjacent to the bays, short trips were made. One to Pleasanton another to Danville and the Oakwood Park Stock Farm. From the suburbs of Oakland to the Niles there was vast improvement for though there was a fair prospect before the May rains came some of the crops were greatly benefited. The shortness of the hay crop troubled those who had stock to feed exceedingly. Grain is not so difficult to handle, but hay even when baled into the smallest bulk fills cars without reaching the limit of their weight carrying capacity.

Quite a fair return of hay between San Leandro and Niles in many of the fields, the haycocks standing so closely together that it was a safe calculation to estimate two tons to the acre as an average.

A person traveling over that section of the country now, and noting the excellence of all the garden products would be astonished when informed that the early settlers went twenty miles away to grow their vegetables. With the exception of hay and grain fields and orchards the whole country is a garden. Peas, beans, beets, pumpkins, squashes in fact nearly all the varieties of vegetables that are suitable for this climate grown in perfection. Fields of corn that could scarcely look better, a fine stand, and whether a few inches high or measured by feet, all healthy and of vigorous growth.

Haywards is situated some distance from the railway, the valley there being the widest, and back of the plain, or rather the gradual slope, foot hills for quite a distance before reaching the bottom of the Contra Costa Range. As the mountains draw closer, there are ravines, forming sheltered nooks, cosy locations where the farm buildings nestle, and trees throw their shade, and the hills, steep though they may be, are coated with rich soil, and there flourish early potatoes, the most profitable crop that can be grown. Like a transformation scene in a theater, the break through the mountains when the train leaves the station at Niles. A few miles from there a gorge, with Alameda creek dancing over its rocky bed, the sides of the mountains covered with trees and chapparal.

Sunol is charmingly located there being a break in the hills, to the south, the valley widening to an extent to give room for fine farms though the hay crop on them suffered from the drouth to such a degree that the later rains could not be of much benefit, and from there to Pleasanton, with the exception of the narrow strip of bottom land on the Verano rancho, the crop is very light. The valley widens into the Pleasanton plains, and if the rains came too late to bring the hay out pasturage was benefited and this will bring some relief, and then the beet crop was brought forward, saved it may be said, so that will also aid in overcoming the effects of the dry season.

When the enclosure inside of the trotting track at Pleasanton was planted to beets, the ground was so dry that the seed did not germinate for some time, and but for the rains, in all probability there would have been a failure not only on that ground but also throughout the valley.

The soil is admirably adapted for sugar beet culture, and it is very likely that should the prices at the factory rule lower than their value for feeding warrants, the scarcity and high price of hay will determine that it be used for feeding.

While other varieties of beets have been grown for feeding, it may prove that the abundance of saccharine matter is surely more nutritious than when that is absent. Professor Wickson states in his book, California Vegetables, "that at the Watsonville factory, in Santa Cruz county, the whole supply of 1896 was over one hundred tons of beets which was an average of slightly over fourteen tons to the acre, and the average price paid was $4 per ton." With hay at $20 per ton and upwards beets should certainly be worth more than the price paid at the Watsonville factory. According to experiments conducted with the greatest care by scientific agriculturists one hundred pounds of hay is equivalent to two hundred and seventy-six pounds of carrots. Without a test of the comparative value of beets it will only be guess-work but even rating them as one-third the nutritive value of hay that at $20 per ton beets would be worth $6.66 per ton, and should it prove that there is more nutriment in them than carrots, likely to be worth considerably more than $6.66 per ton.

Should the greatest value be in cattle food the saving of hay in the bovine larder would add to the commissary department of the horses.

The valley through which Walnut creek runs is one of the finest small valleys in the State. From what may be termed the mouth viz., where the valley merges into the plain, below Concord, and from there to San Ramon, extremely fertile and the foothills are also covered with rich soil. Even the mountain to the west of Danville is green to the summit, and this so different from the west side of the ranges, and, in fact the other mountains in the vicinity, so brown and sere, is inexplicable until the explanation is given by the residents. It seems that heavy fogs hang over the range extending about half way down the eastern side of the mountain, and there are also springs breaking from the ground well to the top, and the subterranean supply aids in keeping the verdure fresh. Fine hay crops although much of the land is occupied by orchards and vineyards, and these are doing immensely well for this dry year.

The railway runs through one orchard where the branches touch the cars on either side, and from the platforms of the cars passengers picked cherries, filling hats and handkerchiefs while a short stop was made.

The hay crop was the most interesting part of the picture to one who has horses to provide for and like the country about Chico there will be something of a surplus over home wants. These patches of country, in many sections of California, where the May rains "brought out" the late sown grain enough to make a fair cutting of hay will aid materially in keeping the prices of forage down, although the chances are that it will be still far beyond the prices that have prevailed for the past twenty years.

Tules For Bedding Stalls.

Since the articles advocating the use of tules for bedding appeared in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN it has been learned that such a use is not entirely an experiment. Mr. Thomas Snyder, of Yolo county, informed Mr. Hackett that he had tried tules for bedding and was fairly well pleased with them for that purpose. With proper care taken in preparing them for market there is little doubt of them answering the purpose and it may be that they will prove superior to straw thrashed by a machine. Never bedding that equaled rye straw thrashed with a flail and put up in bundles. One bed would last longer than several made of machine-thrashed straw, and then it looked so much neater.

Tules may prove to be nearly as good as that and there is not a great deal of risk in predicting that they will "fill a want." Straw this year is likely to be poorer than usual. A great part of the grain which will be harvested the straw is very short, and it will be nearer like chaff than straw of a proper length to make good bedding for horses. Eleven hundred horses were stabled at Ingleside and Oakland during the past racing season, and as nearly as can be told now there will be a greater number the coming season. To bed these as racehorses require to be accommodated entails a heavy expense, and should an enterprising man test the tules, and if experiment proves favorable, put up a hundred or more tons, he will surely "strike a rich lead."

CATTLE.

Cattle-Breeding for a Specific Purpose

Appended is a portion of the report of Mr. Howard, United States Consul at Toronto, Canada, and while the report was rendered some years ago, it is practically applicable at the present time.

The point made is that when cattle are bred for a specific purpose the breeds already established are well fitted to accomplish the desired end.

The Shorthorns are generally recognized as the best adapted for the production of beef, though the race is so close between them and Herefords that partiality for either will influence the verdict. Then there are sincere advocates of Polled Angus and others of the large breeds, and locality has a good deal to do with influencing the selection. So many distinct breeds of cattle—fifteen accredited to England alone—that it would seem that nearly every use must be provided for, and that whether beef, milk, or its products, labor, whether as beasts of burden or draught, some one of the many varieties should fill the bill.

In countries of rich pasturage, the Durham is well fitted for beef and milk producing qualities, and when pains have been taken to select members of that family which were "good milkers," the result has been satisfactory when milk and butter making were looked after as well as propensity to fatten, and also reach a weight that would compensate for the food given.

There is little doubt that the charges brought against the Duchess family being true at the time that Consul Howard made his report, though time has remedied that defect, and when the bubble collapsed, and such prices that prevailed were an effectual estoppel to the dissemination of the weakly race among farmers of moderate means.

Owing to the preference of many skilled breeders for the Herefords, and the determined advocacy of such men as William Sotham, who never missed an opportunity to extol the lusty white-faced cattle that breed have deservedly been held in high estimation, but when beef was the prime motive the Durham held the chief place.

As stated before, when pasturage is rich and plentiful where corn can be grown in such profusion and at so little expense as it can in the corn-growing States, Shorthorns, and grades of Shorthorns, will retain their hold.

And so will others of the distinctive breeds of cattle, and it may also prove that hereafter there will be a blending of races that will result in better all-round animals than there are now.

"The province of Ontario was largely settled by sturdy, well-to-do farmers from England and Scotland, who brought with them to their new home not only their native, social and political peculiarities, but also the agricultural axioms and tenets of their fatherland. So that shortly there appeared in Canada a farm, here, that was a transcript, as far as the new locality and the changed conditions would permit, of the Scottish farm and surroundings; a farm there that was, as far as possible, a copy of the one that had been left in England. And in time cattle familiar to the eye of the settler, and of the sort that had been in a generous sense his friend "at home," came to be seen in the new fields and gave evidence not only of their owners' prosperity, but of that inherent sentiment that cherishes old associations—that delightful conservatism that clings to old friends. So the stately Durhams soon dignified the fields of the English emigrant and gladdened his eyes with their magnificent proportions, while the Ayrshire cow filled the Scotch farmer's heart with gladness and his pail with milk. And at one time the character of the herd—whether Durham or Ayrshire, Galloway or Devon—might almost have been determined by the name of the owner. This natural method of selection, if it may be called such, has not been without its lasting benefit. Through it there has been introduced into Canada a much wider variety of cattle than would otherwise have been the case—none of them adapted to all uses, of course, but each race excelling in some desirable quality. In later years national sentiments have ceased to govern cattle-breeding in so large a measure, and to-day cattle are bred for certain known and admitted excellencies, and the breeder selects his herd in accordance with the object in view—as stall feeding, grazing, the dairy or family use.

THE CANADIAN SHORTHORN.

Of all the different breeds in Canada, the one first deserving of notice, both by its superiority in numbers as well as its early introduction into the country, is the Durham, or Shorthorn, as it is much oftener called at the present day. The superiority of this breed of cattle for beef purposes was for many years unquestioned, and might, perhaps, be so still had not the art of Shorthorn breeding been turned from its legitimate line into unscientific and fatal courses. A kind of bucolic dilettanteism sprang up among breeders of this race of cattle, and in the development of family lines the general improvement of the race as a whole was almost entirely lost sight of. Starting undoubtedly with an honest desire on the part of the most skillful of the English breeders to perfect the Shorthorn race of cattle, their very success founded a royal family of Shorthorns so powerful in its influence that it may well be doubted if the Duchess family, as a family, have not done Shorthorn breeding more harm than good. The whole result of breeding in the years that followed the death of Mr. Bates, that most conscientious and intelligent of English breeders, was simply to produce and perpetuate a pedigree. Very soon the natural result of such a vicious system was seen in impotent bulls, barren cows not able to bring forth even a pedigree, weakened constitution, diminished size, but greater fineness of bone and that "thoroughbred look" that to many eyes compensated for the absence of the best marks of the earlier race and the plebeian families. A pampered life, incestuous breeding and a disregard of the true idea of development, brought the inevitable result of such a method. Though, fortunately, while the inherited weakness of the "royal family" kept its numbers small, the scarcity kept the prices up, and therefore in two ways prevented the average breeder from the folly of buying a pedigree with a bull "thrown in," and allowed him to go on with the development of his "plain" bred cattle, according to common sense and yet truly scientific principles. I judge the evil, however, to have been less in Canada than the United States, for the Canadian farmers, in a certain sense, had inherited the Shorthorn idea, and have not swerved from it in any material degree. They had a natural eye for a "beef critter," and that, together perhaps with the inability to pay $30,000 for a six-months' heifer, kept them in the more legitimate paths of improvement. During all this time it is to be observed that the Shorthorn, among all other beef breeds, was facile primus. If then, as now, other breeds of cattle have been pushing the Shorthorn to the wall and making that race fight for its honors, it is safe to say that the breeders of this magnificent race of cattle would have been saved the folly of attempting to ennoble a single family by false and unscientific methods at the expense of the rest of the race. The danger from this cause is now, fortunately, passed, probably never to return, for the other beef breeds—the Herefords, the Aberdeens and the Galloways—are pressing the Shorthorns so hard for their honors that the breeders of the latter animal have no time to waste in looking for a better rule of breeding than "the selection of the fittest." The Shorthorns were among the first pure-bred animals to be introduced into the province, and they have held their predominance in numbers to the present time. Professor Brown, of the Ontario Agricultural College, to whom I am largely indebted for the materials for this report, says there are three hundred and fifty herds of pure-bred cattle of all classes in the province of Ontario, and of the total number of pure-bred bulls nine-tenths, and of the total number of pure-bred cows six-sevenths are Shorthorns. The preponderance of this breed may also be seen from the fact that at the fat stock show held in this city December 14 and 15, 1883, there were no animals shown except Shorthorns and their grades. The earliest herds to be established in this province were those of Messrs. F. W. Stone, John Snell & Sons, James J. Wright, James Cowan and William Douglass during the years 1853, '54, '55, since which time Shorthorn herds have become widely extended, the principal ones being in the counties of Wellington, Brant, Middlesex, Waterloo, Ontario, Perth, York, Oxford, Bothwell, Simcoe, Huron and Bruce. As a race of cattle, the Shorthorns are generally admitted to be superior for stall-feeding purposes, maturing early and taking on flesh evenly and rapidly. I have given at the close of this report some figures bearing upon this subject derived from the fat stock show, to which reference has already been made. I was present at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition, last September, when there was a large display of Shorthorn cattle of all ages, and representing a wide extent of the province. It was a very creditable display indeed, and one that would have been difficult to excel anywhere. But while equally good animals could probably be found in the United States, I am of the opinion that the prices here are considerably lower than with us. I quote at considerable length the report from the Agricultural College of Ontario concerning the Shorthorns on the college farm:

"We can speak highly of the milking properties, in quantity and quality, of the most of our cows of this breed—making good calves or reliable milkers, as the case may have been. We have nothing to say against the sure breeding of the cows, but our four bulls in these years have not given satisfaction in this respect. Without exception, they have caused delay, loss, trouble and extra expense, why, I am not prepared to say; two were imported and two Canadian-bred; none were ever in such high flesh as those of some other breeds. If 'tis said the choice of individual bulls was bad, then the reply is that three independent judges did so; if management by want of practical knowledge is charged, then the same management had to do with the other bulls that have stood so well. If the Shorthorn requires on an average more drawing-room attention than other beefing breeds, then it had better be acknowledged at once, and I don't think their admirers need be ashamed of the fact. We have fattened Shorthorn grades, Hereford grades, Devon grades, Ayrshire grades and Galloway grades for beef, both in the stall and on pasture, and nothing equals the Shorthorn in giving that stamp to produce weight in the shortest time on Ontario conditions—growth of youth on good pasture and finishing in the stall.

Henry Pierce's Opinion of Cattle—Some Sales

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: As you have undertaken to interest yourself in the dairy business for your readers, I send you the following:

Having had experience in the breeding of most of the dairy stock, viz.: Guernseys, Shorthorns, Ayrshires, Holsteins and Jerseys, thoroughbred and grades, my experience teaches me that for dairy purposes by breeding good Jersey bulls onto Bates' Shorthorn cows you get the best all 'round dairy cows.

The Jersey cow's butter is firmer than that of any other and it keeps best. In hot weather it stands transportation without getting soft. Partially owing to that fact, I have just sold to John Drake Langworthy a herd of eight head, seven females and a bull, from my Yerba Buena Ranch. The bull to head this herd is the prize bull St. Valentine of Y. B., 43,905 A. J. C. C. of New York, grandson of the sweepstakes bull and many times prize winner El Toro of Y. B., 24,434, A. J. C. C., known all over the Coast.

In this little herd Mr. Langworthy is to be congratulated as having strains of the best blood in America—Old Kathleen of St. Lambert, through Peter J. Shields' bull Silverado 2d, and Kathleen's Roi, grandson of the celebrated old Kathleen of St. Lambert (imported), now doing service at the Yerba Buena Ranch.

This is the fourth small herd I have sold this season at moderate prices, and I still have animals for sale equal to any in America or the Island of Jersey, the home of these cattle, from which island I have selected and brought to this Coast three different importations, the first twenty-eight years ago, and now the blood of these importations is scattered all up and down the coast, Central America, Mexico, Sandwich Islands, Japan and even back to the New England States.

Yours very truly,

HENRY PIERCE,
728 Montgomery Street.

California Cattle Going East.

That the fight made by the State of Nevada against the famishing cattle of this State, on the ground that they were infected with disease, had no foundation in fact, is best shown by the following taken from the Denver Stockman, by which it will be seen that the cattlemen of the northwest were only too greedy to acquire them.

Another train of the drouth suffering cattle from California reached Denver yesterday and another train is expected here to-day, all owned by Keogh Bros. and intended for this market. These cattle are of remarkable good quality and are finding a ready sale here to feeders and rangemen. It is expected that there will be several thousand more of these cattle on this market within the next few weeks.

The movement of cattle east from the drouth stricken district of California and the stand some of the states have taken on the question of admitting them is causing more discussion among stockmen than any other subject. Speaking of this matter yesterday, W. P. Anderson, general agent for the Union Stock Yards Company of Chicago, said: Uniformity of inspection rules operate in the interest of the "feed farmer." It is a mistaken idea that railroads have any more than a nominal interest in the movement of California cattle. This spring an accident of circumstance made it possible for the "feed farmer" to get a few well bred cattle, but dilatory tactics of the state authorities of Nebraska have held them out of the market, while Kansas and Colorado reaped the benefit.

The trades are about all made and the bulk of the California cattle have gone or will go East by the Southern routes. The concentration of inspection at Sacramento would have brought 50,000 or 60,000 head this way instead of 30,000 that have or will come.

The time was when the attitude of the Nebraska authorities would have been regarded as a menace to the cattle business of the country. Cattle disease sensations have been known to cost the country millions of dollars in a single season, but that day is passed. Thus far all the California cattle that have crossed the mountains have had this expert examination, which has been satisfactory to the United States government and the school of veterinarians whom it has indorsed as being sufficient authority on this specific and peculiar subject.

Arizona as a Range Country

The following paper on Arizona as a range for live stock was read by Mr. E. R. Hooker of Wilcox, Arizona, before the National Live Stock Association.

"Mr. President and Gentlemen:—Arizona's ranges are rich in a variety of food for stock. Not only has she the grasses in common with our stock countries, but there are other forage plants peculiarly hers. Among these first in importance, may be classed the mesquite, the leaves and beans of which form a nourishing browse. The ripened beans contain a large per cent. of grape sugar, the fattening qualities of which are almost equal to that of corn. Authorities on the subject of forage plants have generally overlooked the value of the cacti as a browse, which, apart from its nutritive qualities, contains sufficient moisture to command attention. In fact, I have known where cattle remained away from water as long as three days, depending entirely on the moisture of the cacti.

"Lack of water has heretofore been a serious hindrance. This, however, is being overcome by erecting reservoirs. Owing to limited facilities in certain sections, there are miles of magnificent grazing lands lying idle that would otherwise be utilized, and, as a natural consequence, where water is easy of access there might be danger of overstocked ranges, and a proportionate reduction of the calf crop. Experience proves, where ranges are not overburdened, the increase will run as high as 90 per cent., a profit on the amount invested that is rarely equaled by any other business.

"It is an established fact that open range cattle of Arizona enjoy absolute immunity from contagious diseases, while owing to the general mildness of her climate, it is unnecessary to make provision for food or shelter at any time of the year, an occasionally cold day being invariably followed by mild weather.

"Arizona cattle have labored under great disadvantages. Many thousands of Mexican cattle have been driven across her borders, sold and shipped from Arizona points, and are thus erroneously classed and quoted as 'Arizona cattle,' whereas the majority of her stockmen are constantly striving to improve the standard of their herds by the introduction of high-grade blood. Within the past few years the once familiar Longhorn has disappeared, and in their place is seen the Whiteface and Shorthorn. While there are certain sections well adapted to finishing cattle for slaughter, Arizona as a whole will never rank as a fattening country; but as an open range country it is unsurpassed. Her rugged mountains offer no inducement to the farmer, while holding a wealth of feed for cattle.

"If the former error of overstocking is avoided, I firmly believe Arizona, to her acreage, will be the greatest breeding ground of America, and that her open ranges will thrive long after the open ranges in other countries have ceased to exist."

France Reduces Her Rates One-Half on Meat Products.

The United States and France have closed the first commercial agreement entered into under Section 3 of the Dingley tariff law.

The particular advantages procured by the United States are on meat products and lard compounds, France reducing her rates one-half on meat products and about one-third on lard compounds. The chief benefits to France are in reductions in rates on brandies, still wine, vermouth and works of art.

By the terms of the agreement the new rates go into effect on June 1st.

The agreement in detail grants the following concessions in duties on American products:

Manufactured meats, prepared from pork, 50 francs per 100 kilos in lieu of the regular rate of 100 francs; lard and its compounds, 25 francs per 100 kilos, instead of 40 francs. The French minimum rate is also continued on table fruit, canned meats, dried or pressed fruits, common woods, paving blocks, staves, hops and apples and pears, crushed, cut and dried. These minimum rates were originally procured by Ambassador Reid, but they were about to be discontinued for the maximum rates.

Oregon Will Examine All Stock From California.

SALEM (Or.), June 15.—Governor Lord has issued a proclamation declaring that all cattle brought from California into Oregon must be examined by the Oregon State veterinary surgeon. According to a recent report of the veterinary surgeon, cattle from California driven into this State have developed and exhibited symptoms of infectious and contagious diseases. Whenever diseased cattle are found provision has been made to place them in close quarantine.

Notes.

A new breed of cattle has been developed by Gen. W. W. Guthrie of Atchison, Kan. It is called the Polled Kansan and originated in a cross of the Hereford (predominating) and Shorthorn; they are polled, white-face, dark-red body, square-build broad back, early maturing, easy keepers and fair milkers.

In spite of the war and scarce money Texas stockmen are going right along purchasing improved bulls for the purpose of improving their herds, which shows that they have great faith in the future of the cattle industry. Owing to the war which brought about a stringency in the money market trading in range cattle has practically been brought to a standstill, yet there is hardly a grower to be found, who can hold to his stock, who now is willing to take much less for his cattle than they would have brought earlier in the year when trading was active and everybody who could borrow a dollar was after cattle. This shows an abiding faith in the future of cattle values on the part of the grower, and we believe this faith to be well founded. That a shortage of cattle exists, and especially in Texas there can be no question. Mexico is short on cattle and Texas pastures cannot be restocked from that country. The scare brought about by the war has about subsided and already the purse strings are being loosened and cattlemen are even now able to secure all the money they need on first-class cattle paper. Wild speculation has received a black eye, but this was bound to come sooner or later. Cattle paper is considered the best possible security, and all those furnishing the money ask is that the borrower assume part of the risk. Looking at the situation from every point of view we see no reason for discouragement, but on the other hand the grower has every reason to feel encouraged. Let the cattle grower keep on breeding up his herd to the highest possible notch, keep them in good growing condition every day in the year and the harvest will be very satisfactory.—Texas Stockman.

At a meeting of the National Live Stock Exchange held in Chicago May 18th, resolutions were adopted, calling the attention of cattle raisers to the losses caused by the ordinary method of branding cattle on the rump or side, rendering that portion of the hide useless to the leather dealer, and ranchmen were advised to place the brand on the neck or head, where the leather has comparatively little value. The statement was made that buyers made a difference of 10 to 20 cents per 100 pounds in favor of animals not branded, so as to injure the leather value of the hide, making the difference of $1 to $2 per head on 1,000-pound steers.

Mr. L. Carteri's men passed through Los Alamos Sunday with nearly 1,000 head of cattle. The cattle will be shipped from Guadalupe via the Southern Pacific to Red Bluff, where Mr. Carteri has 900 head now on pasture. From Red Bluff both hands will be driven to the "Big Meadows," Lassen county, where he has secured fine feed.

Col. Albert Dean of the Bureau of Animal Industry, stationed at Kansas City, has announced that most of the cattle in the drouth-stricken portions of California have been moved, and that he has reduced the number of federal inspectors in that State.

DAIRYING.

The Evolution of Dairying.

The editor of this paper first commenced the active agitation of dairying in 1870. A thousand and one questions, concerning milk, butter and cheese, and the best methods of manufacturing, or handling the same, have sprung up since that time, and have been fairly settled. There has been wonderful progress in the perfection of methods and machinery in these twenty-eight years. The Cooley deep setting system has, practically, come and gone in that time, though many use the system still, as it is an excellent one.

The separator, the creamery, the refrigerator car, steamship and store house, the Babcock test, the widespread dairy associations, and farm institutes, the establishment of dairy schools and experiment stations, by National and State aid, the enactment of special dairy laws, and the creation of bureaus, under the name of "Dairy and Food Commissions," for the enforcement of such laws, and, finally, the evolution of the special dairy paper, as a forum in which is taught and discussed the best thought and experience of the age on this question,—all these progressive steps have been taken in the last twenty-eight years. But this is not all. There has been a great change, for the better, in the thought and judgment of the farmers of the United States and Canada, on the question of the dairy cow. The constant agitation of the subject has lifted thousands of farmers up out of the low grounds of mere notion, dim tradition and inherited practice, to a higher plane of thought and investigation. They have begun to apply intellect to the measurement of a cow. They are no longer satisfied with mere horns, hoofs and body, of any sort, but thousands now, where there were only tens then, are saying "it is just as much the part of good dairy farming to look after and provide for the capacity of the coming cow, through wise breeding, as it is to provide feed for the cow when she gets here."

The evolution of thought and judgment among the farmers has reared a weighty industry in the nation, which is the source of a great and constant revenue.

Yet it is our solid conviction that there will be more need in the future, for the education of the farmer in a knowledge of the truth of sound dairy principles, than there has been in the past.

Past agitation has sent thousands upon thousands of farmers and cows into the business that, in reality, have no business there. Both lack dairy capacity, the first of judgment, the second of production.

This wonderful progress which the four dairy breeds of cattle, the Ayrshire, the Jersey, the Guernsey and the Holstein have made in the conviction of farmers, who, fifteen years ago scouted anything but a beefy, general purpose-bred, is very significant.

Everywhere along the line of dairy thought and practice, has there been a strong, progressive evolution greater in almost every particular, than is found in any other branch of agriculture.

This fact should teach us all that "no man liveth to himself alone;" that all healthful progress in fortune, or intelligence must come from contact with our fellow farmer, in the way of a comparison of experience, and a stimulating of the desire for more truthful, and, consequently, more profitable knowledge.

The communities that have been most prosperous have established creameries and cheese factories in their midst. Step inside of these communities, and you will find those individuals the most prosperous who have opened their minds to all progressive influences.

There is an evolution in individual farmers just as pronounced as in farming communities. Communities cannot grow and improve until the individual farmers are moved upon. Any one can tell by the looks of every crop whether the sun shines on it or not, and it will show just as plainly whether the sun of progressive thought shines in the mind of the owner.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Six Good Rations.

Reports of the ration used on a very large number of prominent dairy farms have been collected by the Ontario Experiment Stations. Of the rations reported, the following are recommended by the station as especially balanced:

No. 1—22 cows, Shorthorns and Jerseys, average weight 1,000 pounds, yielded 6,200 pounds of butter per year. Ration—6 pounds bran, 3 pounds oil meal, 50 pounds ensilage, 4 pounds timothy and 4 pounds oats and vetch hay.

No. 2—11 cows, Ayrshires, average weight 1,000 pounds, yield 65,734 pounds of milk and 700 pounds of butter. Ration—4 pounds bran, 2 of peas, 2 of oats, 1 of oil meal, 24 of timothy and clover hay, and 10 of roots.

No. 31—24 cows, Ayrshires and grades, average weight 800 to 1,200 pounds; yield, 7,000 pounds of milk each. Ration—5 pounds bran, 5 of peas, 35 to 45 of ensilage, 10 of timothy hay.

No. 36—23 cows, grade Jerseys and Holsteins, average weight 900 pounds; yield, $800.75 worth of cream, sold in Montreal. Ration—5 pounds of bran, 2 of oatmeal, 50 of ensilage, 10 of hay.

No. 37—Guernsey cows, average weight 1,000 pounds; average yield 6,000 pounds of milk each. Rations—9 pounds bran and shorts, 3 of corn meal, 10 of clover hay 44 of roots.

No. 39—16 cows, grade Shorthorns, average weight 1,000 pounds; yield $54 per head. Ration—4 pounds peas, 4 of bran, 2 of oil meal, 40 of ensilage, 9 of hay and of straw.

Most of the 175 herds reported contained more or less thoroughbred dairy blood.—Dairy World.

Notes.

The value of reputation is shown in the word "Elgin," as indicating superior butter, has come into use because the butter made in the vicinity of Elgin was good, and thus established for itself a reputation; and now is used by four-fifths of the manufacturers of butter throughout Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin.

No butter-maker can make good butter when the milk is not properly taken care of and sent daily to the creamery.

Four of the largest dairies in Oakland have combined for the purpose of building a creamery at the corner of Eleventh and Clay streets. The gentlemen interested are all experienced dairymen and own their own cows and ranges, controlling about 850 cows and about 2,900 acres of well watered pasturage. Those interested in this enterprise are A. C. Fay of Talcott's Dairy, N. Neilson of the California Dairy, J. M. Carr of the Fairmount Dairy and J. H. Medan and T. A. Medan of Medan's Dairy.

The New Era Creamery at Newman now has thirty-seven patrons who furnish milk regularly, and about 9,000 pounds of milk are received daily; their output of first-class butter is about 2,600 pounds per week.

Many dairymen and others who milk cows for profit believe that when a cow reaches the age of seven or eight her useful years are over, and that she should be replaced by one younger, says a writer in the New York Tribune. But, other things being equal, this is a mistake. A cow that has been well cared for, with generous rations and proper attention given to her comfort, through all seasons of the year, is better and will make a more profitable return at eight years than at any earlier age; in other words, she is in her prime, and she will continue in this condition several years, and will not be considered an old cow until fourteen or fifteen years have passed. Cows with first calves—at two or three years—are generally unprofitable in their milk yield, and only a really good cow between seven and eight years will pay a better revenue than two that are performing their first year's duties in the dairy herd, and she will probably consume but a little more food than one of the younger ones. This fact is worthy the consideration of those who are dairying for profit.

The creamery at Wheatland is now separating about 3,000 pounds of milk daily. Dairyman Reghetti moved his milch cows to pasturage on the Oakley ranch and expects with the improved feed to increase daily his offering of milk. Since unloading his stock here 22 days ago his weights have increased from 650 to 1100 pounds. Last month the creamery separated 75,000 pounds of milk and it is expected that this month will show an increase of fully 25 per cent. This statement means that the creamery is now making money. It will earn sufficient this summer and fall to tide over a duller season of the winter months made certain by the present unusual demand for hay and pasturage.

Raise plenty of pumpkins for your milch cows. They make an excellent feed in the fall.

Corn sown broadcast on rich ground and cut when well tasseled will make an excellent dairy feed. The corn may be put in late and cut and put up in large shocks before winter.

When the pasturage for the dairy cow is luxuriant she will need no other feed, though there will be some benefit from giving her a little bran about milking time. If she has to run on pasturage that is thin and parched, she should have a little grain and green forage. This feeding should begin before her yield of milk is seen to be less, for if once the yield becomes diminished it will be difficult to bring her back to her former yield, and her value as a milk cow may never become as good again.

The last eight years has witnessed a wonderful growth in the Guernsey cattle interest. There are 15,300 Guernseys entered on the books of the American Guernsey Cattle Club, over one-third of which have been added since the World's Fair year.

The green forage fed to dairy cows should be run through a cutter. They will eat it up cleaner and digest it better than when the whole stalk is fed.

Whether salt is added to the butter in the churn or on the worker it is better to allow some time for it to dissolve before working at all; then work slightly and set away in a clean, cool place for a few hours, then re-work and pack. Work merely enough to evenly distribute the salt. Be careful never to work the butter when it is soft and warm, as it will ruin the grain.

POULTRY.

Brown Leghorns.

It is said that this variety of fowls was originally imported from Italy, but it has been bred to such perfection in America that it has become a distinctive breed. They are very hardy birds, thriving in all kinds of climate. They are extremely good layers, and as a rule are non-setters. The young are easy to raise, and feather out soon, looking like miniature chickens at the age of seven or eight weeks, that is, fully feathered and apparently as forward as many other chicks of twice their age. They are almost constant layers of a rich, meaty egg, and are, considering their size, superior table birds. From that which we know of the variety, we consider them one of the best all-round fowls for both egg production and table purposes. The carriage of both cock and hen is proud and aristocratic. A flock of Brown Leghorns is very hard to excel for general appearance and beauty. The male birds have large, single combs, which should stand perfectly erect, full wattles and large, white ear-lobes. The hens have large combs, which usually fall to one side, and ear-lobes the same as the male bird, and both should have yellow legs.

Consumption of Eggs.

It has been estimated from quite reliable statistics that eggs are consumed annually in Paris at the rate of 175 per head of the population—which is now rated at 2,447,957—making a total of 428,202,475 eggs per annum used in that city, and the average used in the country districts is estimated at a higher rate. In London the average used is not rated quite so high as in Paris, but suppose it to be at the rate of 150 per head of the population, now rated at 4,211,056, and the annual consumption will be 631,658,300. New York, with her population of 3,250,000, at the same rate would use annually 487,500,000. Chicago, with her population of 1,438,011, at the same rate would use annually 215,701,500. Boston, with her population of 404,205, at the same rate would use annually 74,130,750, and San Francisco, with her population of 300,000, at the same rate would use 45,000,000 eggs annually, making a grand total of 1,882,283,125 eggs used annually in the cities of London, Paris, New York, Chicago, Boston and San Francisco, weighing in the aggregate more than 676,000 tons, and estimating that an egg is equal in nutritious value to an eighth of a pound of beef, the eggs used annually in the cities named would be equal to 84,500 tons of beef, worth at present wholesale rate in San Francisco, of six cents per pound, $10,140,000.00. Small and trifling as the egg business appears to people generally, these figures show that in the aggregate it cuts quite a large figure in the commercial world.

Glorifying the Hen.

Galen Wilson in Farm and Fireside, requested an old crippled soldier engaging in poultry raising to give his views and received the following: "Eggs are always cash. They are ready for the market the minute laid, and the sooner they are got to market the better. They require no cultivation, pruning or harvesting, but are at once in salable condition. With plenty of eggs on the farm there are a host of good things in the kitchen and money in the family purse. Gathering up the eggs is like picking up dimes and dollars. Great is the hen that produces them. When everything is dull in winter, the egg basket has wonderfully helped out many a poor farmer. The crops may be poor, the provisions low, the family cow dry, with a long wait for the next growing season, but the hen comes up smiling, and is ready to get a pound of tea or a sack of flour. If treated well she will respond as rapidly when snow is on the ground as when the fields are green. She is a friend to the rich and poor alike."

Notes.

Under the head of Notes in our last week's issue we were, by the omission of a couple of words, made to say that we "would not make a practice of doctoring very valuable birds" when that which we intended saying was that we would not make a practice of doctoring any but very valuable birds.

For disease, called Scaly Leg, in fowls, which comes from a small parasite, and usually comes from neglect and damp or filthy quarters, a good remedy is to wash the legs and feet with warm soap suds, and brush well under the scales with a stiff brush. Then apply coal oil. Usually two or three such applications will remove the disease.

Strong, healthy birds can be produced only in healthy surroundings.

Milk in any form, sweet, sour or buttermilk is good for fowls.

More than one half of early maturity is in high feeding.

Many persons cram their poultry before killing for market to make the birds appear plump and heavy. This is a very unwise plan, as the undigested food soon enters into fermentation and putrefaction takes place, as is evidenced by the number of greenish, putrid-looking fowls so often seen in the public markets. Fowls should always be allowed to remain in their coops from twelve to twenty-four hours without food previous to being killed. By so doing the poultry will keep longer and present a much better appearance.

Good results have been had from packing eggs in very dry barrel salt. Stand your packing box or jar in a good cool place, put therein a layer of salt, then one of eggs, with the large end down, taking care that the eggs do not touch each other; and so on until your box or jar is filled. Cover and let stand without disturbing until the eggs are needed for use. Eggs packed in this manner in June and July have been found perfectly fresh looking and free from any stale or musty taste when brought to the table in January or later.

Some writers estimate that an egg is equal in nutritious value to a quarter of a pound of meat. We think it is certainly equal to an eighth of a pound of beef.

The "unknown cause" of the frequent losses among chickens before they are more than four weeks old which is frequently spoken of or inquired about in some of the papers professedly devoted to the poultry interests, and which they often ascribe to "constitutional weakness," is most frequently caused by indigestion. The weakness is an inability to digest their food without clean grit of some sort to go with it in the gizzard, or to digest sour and moldy dough or moldy grain under any conditions. We have seen some such cases, and we always found either this or lice in abundance to be the cause of the trouble. There may be a constitutional lack of vigor which causes chickens to die in the shell before they are sufficiently developed to break out and which causes well-cared for chickens to grow very slowly and mature late, and even to be generally worthless after they have matured, but we ascribe these to the breeding fowl having been made too fat or to having been weakened by some disease like the roup. Sudden deaths in great numbers after the chickens are hatched and growing well are usually due to a lack of vigor on the part of the keeper. Somebody is too lazy, careless or busy at something else to kill the vermin in the coops, give fresh, clean gravel in the yards and mix fresh, sweet food every time they are fed and take away all that they will not eat up clean as soon as it is given them.—American Cultivator.

If you are running an incubator, test the eggs at the end of three days, and remove all not fertilized, and later upon a second test of the eggs—about the seventh day—if you find any with the germ floating about, take them out as dead and of no value.

When breeding for points in Brown Leghorns, the greatest trial which breeders have to contend with is white in the plumage. No matter how carefully bred the white will crop out more or less. Similar trouble is met with in all dark-colored fowls, and on the other hand with white fowls, dark feathers give the breeder the same annoyance.

Eggs not fertilized will keep fresh and good much longer than the fertilized ones. Egg producers should make a note of this fact when preparing to pack eggs.

To raise good fowls you must have good, strong, healthy stock to breed, give them good treatment, shelter and food, and then give the young chicks such attention as is necessary to maintain a good growth.

It is much easier to keep stock well and in good condition than to cure after they have become sick.

J. E. BRANNAN, 1014 Page St., S. F., says:—Have used Wellington's Improved Egg Food for a long time, and sent many boxes East to friends. Its results are most satisfactory; it is the best I ever used. If your dealer does not keep it, insist on his getting it. Remember—The experience of others will also be yours.

SWINE.

A Good Hog.

Jas. Riley, in an address to the Kentucky Swine Breeders' Association, gave the following as the points of a good hog:

"The most essential point, in my judgment, is the chest, as everything depends on the constitutional vigor of the hog. The chest covers the vital parts. We want to examine the pig between the fore legs, and see that the breast bone comes well forward on a line with the fore legs, and see that the fore legs are wide apart and the chest full behind the fore legs.

"The next in importance is the back and loin. I would want a broad back with ribs well sprung, carrying width of back from the shoulder to the ham, and slightly arched. Be careful to avoid a sunfish back—remember the most valuable meat in the hog is the loin, and the more of it we get the better.

"The next in importance is the ham and rump; we want the ham wide on top and broad from flank to rear and deep and full; we should remember that feed very largely makes the shoulder, but the ham must be bred.

"The next essential is the feet and legs. The fore legs should be wide in the arm, well tapered and set square under the pig wide apart; the foot should be short in pastern joint, and stand up well on toes; the hind legs should be wide in stifle and straight, the foot short in pastern joints and set well up on toes.

"The next is head, neck and jaw; the head should be short, the face, in Berkshires, well dished, widest between the eyes, jaw full and neat neck, short and wide and full on top. The other points are non-essentials, and if the pig is extra good in all the points indicated it will make a good hog if it does lack some in the points not mentioned."

Southern Hogs

In an article entitled "Favorite Hogs of the South," appearing in the June number of Southern Farm Magazine, J. B. Killebrew has the following to say of a breed of hogs that is peculiar to the South:

"A new breed introduced in the South, called the Thin Rind, is deservedly popular for family use, because of the tendency of these hogs to make 'marble meat' or a streak of lean and 'a streak of fat.' The best breakfast bacon is said to be made from the sides of these hogs. In color they are black, but white-belted about the shoulders. They are tall and thin, mature early and have a greater proportion of lean meat in the middlings than other breeds. It is probable that this breed will come more and more into popularity as the fondness for breakfast bacon grows. It may be mentioned as a historical fact that previous to the war between the States breakfast bacon was scarcely heard of south of the Ohio river. Many farmers of the South now put up their sugar-cured bacon as well as their hams."

The following from the Touchstone (Arizona) Eclipse shows what an erroneous opinion exists abroad, as to the condition of the stock interest in California.

Like the cattle and sheep, hogs are said to be in a bad way on the coast. It is reported that good hogs are being offered there at a cent a pound.

Such feed as is prescribed for hogs in these advanced days. Here is an item that mentions in the same line a winter ration for breeding sows on potatoes, cabbage, pumpkins, sugar beets, fine cut clover hay and skim milk added hot to crushed oats, shorts or rye. This would make an old farmer who keeps hogs merely to eat up the skim milk and soft corn, very dizzy.

The raising of artichokes for hogs is worth trying, and it may be well to have it in mind this spring. They can be planted as early as the ground can be made ready. They certainly are an aid toward the economical feeding of hogs.

We have been a good while making up our minds concerning, from the economic standpoint, the fattening of hogs after cattle, says an exchange. On the face of the thing we knew it was a filthy and unsanitary practice, but still there were many who defended it on the ground that it saved grain which would otherwise be wasted in feeding cattle. We have lately received a little light on the subject from a successful beef feeder, who repudiates altogether the custom of letting hogs run after cattle in the feed lot and get their living from the grain that passes through the cows undigested. This man says that if the cattle are fed the right quantity and right kind of food they will digest it all themselves and there will be no waste of grain in their droppings. This sounds about right. If cattle are fed more than they can digest, of course the overplus is wasted and is only an additional burden for their internal organs to carry and dispose of. Better save the grain clean and sound and feed it to the hogs in the first place.

Surgery Among the Lambs.

Castration and docking are the serious events in the history of the lamb, writes J. Ewing to the Breeders' Gazette. Of castration I would say that it had better be performed during the first week of the lamb's life. My method is to cut the end of the scrotum clear off, to withdraw the testicles, separating them from their envelop by using the thumb nail, then withdrawing them, cords and all, by a quick pull.

There is need of thorough disinfection of hands and knife before beginning this operation, so as not to introduce germs of putrefaction or inflammation. After the operation I like to put some lard or tallow in which has been dissolved some disinfecting substance, turpentine being perhaps the most convenient, into the wound. The lamb ought not to suffer much from the operation at this age; the later it is done the greater the risk and the more the lamb suffers.

It is well to be sure that the cords are really drawn out, else they may catch in the lips of the wound and adhere and grow there and perhaps cause serious trouble afterward. I once had lambs bought to feed, some eight months old, that became sore at the scrotum and some died from apparently imperfect castration.

Speaking of castration, let us urge breeders of pure-bred sheep to use the knife freely. There is no virtue in pedigree unless it is written first in the form and characteristics of the animal. What we must have in America if our sheep are to be as good as any in the world is the free use of the castrating knife, free culling of the ewes and sending of all imperfect specimens to the butcher.

Of docking I will say that it may be attended to at the time that castration is, or, better, deferred a week. It is hardly worth while to dock the tails of wether lambs that are to be sold under one year old; they look more like lambs with their tails on and shear a little more wool.

When lambs are docked I like to dock them close so that the shearer will find nothing at all in his way. Well-bred lambs are quite apt to bleed badly when docked, and a good plan is to tie a string tightly about the tail just above where the cut is to be made. This will need to be removed in a day. A perfect way is to use the docking pinchers, making them red hot or hotter, for then there is no bleeding at all nor any pain if they are hot enough. I have now used these pinchers for two years and find no objection to them. If a good fire with a bed of coals is at hand in which to thrust the pinchers they may be used continuously as fast as the lambs can be caught.

Notes.

It is estimated that the sheep of Arizona number over 700,000, and they are grazed mainly in Apache, Navajo and Coconino counties. They are largely grade Merinos. The wool ranks low when it is clipped on account of the dirt, sand and grease it contains, but after scouring it is placed among the best. Arizona sheepmen have recently formed an association for the purpose of prosecuting sheep thieves.—Omaha Stockman.

All the sheepmen in Montana report the best possible results in lambing and say this spring has been the most favorable in years.

The wool shipping season will soon open in Billings, Montana, and it is expected that the total receipts will aggregate in the neighborhood of 3,000,000 pounds.

Twelve thousand sheep are now in pasture along the headwaters of the Santa Ana. Forestry Agent Newhall says they are all on leased land and that he has three good patrolmen watching them to see that they do not trespass on the reservation.

Over one hundred and fifty carloads of sheep from the drought-stricken district of California have been transported to this immediate vicinity within the past ten days, their principal destination being Wasatch and Hiliard. The sheep are purchased in California for $1.35 and $1.50 per head, and lambs are thrown in at this price. This brings the price of sheep (not including lambs) at about $2 per head laid down, and after a few months' feeding they will command the present price of $3.50 and $4 per head. Alex. Topenoe, an early resident of Evanston but now of Utah, was the principal importer to this country.—Evanston (Utah) News-Register.

Owing to the depressed condition of the wool market at present, it is thought best to postpone the sale from June 17th to June 30th, when it is hoped more encouraging prices will prevail. The Ukiah sale will take place on June 28th.—Cloverdale Reveille.

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climatic and crop conditions is based upon reports received from nine Weather Bureau Stations, fifty-two telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company and many reports scattered throughout the State received from correspondents in their districts:

Shasta County—Haying about over. Harvesting will begin in a few days. Heavy yield of wheat expected. Prunes and pears fine.

Tehama County—Week very favorable for crops. Apricots and peaches plentiful. Harvesting barley and oats.

Butte County—Light southwest winds. River falling to low water mark. Peaches and vegetables plentiful. Orchardists irrigating.

Glenn County—Harvesting barley about over, yield light but better than expected several weeks ago. Will soon begin harvesting wheat.

Yuba County—Prospects good for grain and fruit.

Yolo County—Haying about over, crop light; barley harvesting now on, crop light but better than expected. Apricots and peaches coming on, crop light and fruit small. Pears look well and crop is large.

Placer County—Fruit promises well. Grapes setting nicely and a large crop is expected.

Sacramento County—Fine weather for irrigating; harvesting commenced; crops looking well. Late fruit and vegetables thriving.

Solano County—Misty, cold and windy with little sunshine. Barley harvesting progressing rapidly, averaging six sacks per acre. Wheat harvesting will begin this week; summer fallowed expected to make twelve sacks per acre; winter sown a failure. Prunes, peaches and grapes doing well.

San Joaquin County—Warm weather ripening grain very rapidly and wheat will yield from 400 to 800 lbs. per acre. Considerable grain will be cut within the next few weeks. Shipments of onions heavy; fine prospects for large grape crop.

Stanislaus County—Harvesting commenced and good yield is expected from summer fallowed grain. Fruit good; small peaches coming. Outlook good for second crop of hay and grain hay. Grapes doing well.

Merced County—Haying nearly completed; light crop, not enough for home use. Wheat is ripe and ready to cut, good quality, but scattering. Grapes promise a heavy yield.

Fresno County—Warm days with cool nights very favorable for all crops. Haying completed and yield greater than expected. There will be enough wheat for seed and to spare. Good yield of barley. Fruit trees and grape vines look well; peaches and apricots coming on.

Kings County—Cool and favorable for vineyards. Shipping considerable hay.

Tulare County—Irrigating. Large crops of grapes and corn. Many stock hogs shipped. No improvement in grain or fruit prospects.

Kern County—Grain about ready to cut. Haying still in progress. No change in fruit outlook.

Sonoma County—Cool foggy weather has caused hay and grain to ripen slowly. Much hay of extra quality has been cut. Fruit of all kinds doing well.

Napa County—Fruit crop, especially prunes and grapes will be heavy. Hay cutting shows from half to three-quarters of a crop; some few have full crops.

Alameda County—Vegetables all shipped. Hay cutting progressing. Grain filling; crop light. Beets doing well. Grapes improving.

Santa Clara County—Cool, foggy mornings beneficial to maturing grain and growing beets. Haying continues; fruits and beets look well. Cherries going forward rapidly; packing berries and small fruits.

Santa Cruz County—Haying, fair crop; fruit also fair.

San Benito County—Cool. Haying nearly finished. Prunes and peaches doing well.

Monterey County—Harvesting hay which will make but one-eighth of a crop. Fruit doing well; dewberries and raspberries ripening.

San Luis Obispo County—Hay nearly all cut, probably sufficient to carry remaining stock. Fruit and grapes doing well. Some grass will be cut. Potatoes and beets doing well.

Santa Barbara County—Cool and pleasant. Walnuts depend on later weather.

Ventura County—Hot, east winds preceding week did some damage to fruit trees, blowing off fruit and breaking limbs. Apricot crop will be but half of last year's. Alfalfa under irrigation is helping stockmen.

Los Angeles County—Cool with frosty mornings. Oranges doing well and will show an increase of about one-fourth; lemon crop very light; grapes promise a large crop; olives a very light crop. Cutting barley; but crop is of little consequence. Supply of hay will come from elsewhere. Corn looking well. Grain is a total failure at Baeatt. Honey crop a failure at Fernando.

San Bernardino County—Will not have as much hay and grain as expected; fair peach and apple crop looked for.

Orange County—Peanuts doing well; apricots ripening. Fine prospects. Hot winds injured beets slightly, cooking leaves and covering small plants with sand. Water supply good.

Riverside County—Cool and pleasant. Cutting grain and hay; very light crop. Apricots ripening; oranges growing nicely.

San Diego County—Cool and cloudy with light showers making good growing weather. Grain is being harvested on high lands; also cutting first-class hay; apples promise fine yield; outlook for prunes good.

Los Angeles Summary—Coast fogs continue but too light in northern sections for much benefit. Apricots beginning to turn. Grain being harvested in San Diego county.

Eureka Summary—Weather generally favorable for growth of crops. Extreme heat early part of week materially hastened ripening of cherries. Strawberries plentiful.

If breeders of thoroughbreds will send in their lists of foals for 1898 and any other stud news of interest we will gladly publish the said news in our columns free of charge. It will prove good reading and be a record as well.

The success this season of the sons and daughters of St. Leonards, Potomac and St. Carlo speaks well for the St. Blaise tribe. In California we have three sons of St. Blaise (St. Carlo, Magnet and San Marco), the first-named already famous as sire, the others yet to be tried. Magnet was a great race horse and was sold recently by Dan Honig for $5,000. San Marco is a half-brother to Hornpipe (winner of the Brooklyn Handicap of 1896 and winner of over $60,000), to Don Alonzo (winner of upward of $50,000) to Irish Reel (who has won over $12,000) and a brother in blood to Terpsichore II. (a good one last season in England). This horse (which was recently offered for sale at $1,200) is a good winner, being eighteen times in the money in his last twenty starts and victor altogether in fifteen or more races in excellent company. The wonder to us is that some California breeder does not buy this splendid horse without any delay. Last winter his owners refused an offer of $2,500 for him, and since that time he has won six fine races. Verily, it appears that our stock farm owners, long on money, are short on good judgment when they overlook San Marco, half-brother to a Brooklyn Handicap winner.

Race Horses at Butte Track.

All told, there are now 96 race horses at the Butte track, and every day there are accessions. With every stable of horses there are a number of stable boys, jockeys, trainers, etc., so that already the race track has become quite a little village all in itself, and it makes up in life what it lacks in population. The weather has not been favorable for much training as yet, but the horses have to be exercised regularly in spite of the weather, and very soon active work will begin in getting the horses in shape for the opening of the season, on July 2d.

E. F. Smith, better known as "Daggie" Smith, has in his stables at the track Torside, Hermanita, Paul Pry, Montallade, Don Luis, Torpedo and Racination, and he also has with him By Holly's Strathrol and Fred Gardner. J. O. Malley is his trainer, J. Sullivan and S. Glenn are his jockeys, and his colors are black, red Maltese cross and white cap.

W. D. Randall, owner and trainer, has Ostler Joe, Salvation, Robaire, McLight, Twinkle Twink, Watomba, Greenback and Cipriana. His jockeys are Eddie Ames and Ollie Everson, and his colors are red and black.

Garret Ferguson, owner and trainer, son of Starter Ferguson, has Distinction, Sweet Cakes, Maud Ferguson and Disance.

Lannigan & Co. have Scotch Rose, Kaiser Ludwig, Miss Reel and Tuxedo. Their good colt, Sam Ramon, died at Ogden of lung fever on the way up. Bert Edsel is their trainer, Chub Russell is their jockey, and their colors are green and red.

W. L. Stanfield, owner and trainer, has George Nulter, Valenciaine, Mike Rice, Castake, Aprona, Queen Nubia and Toriabic. He has no jockey as yet. The stable's colors are red, with purple stripes, and a green cap.

I. E. Linnell has Viking, Trappean, Charles A., Sir Urain and Tom Smith. His trainer is Sac McCue, his jockey Ivy Powell, and his colors yellow and green cap.

H. E. Whitman, owner and trainer, has Velox and Joe Levy.

Adam Wright, owner and trainer, has Peixotto.

O. P. Romigh has Vitranga, Ben Bolt and a two-year-old colt by Aerolite. His trainer is George Wentworth.

Jack Bray has the great jumpers, Lord Chesterfield and Judge Tanem. D. Dennison is his trainer, D. Dennison Jr., is his jockey, and his colors are blue, with white sash and cap.

Ike Morehouse has Abrialthe, Greenway and Serious. Ed Carr is his trainer, and his colors are Scotch Plaid.

H. L. Frank has Yule, Georgius and Tenary. Another carload will arrive this week. Joe Bell is his trainer.

Henry Albertson has Tammany and Mascon Boy. W. Singleton is his trainer and his colors are orange.

Smith Brothers have Bielenberg, Infred and Lillie Brass. Bush Smith is trainer, Bob Smith is jockey, and their colors are maroon and green.

B. C. Crampton, owner and trainer, has May Boy, Montana Maid and Clear Water. John McLaughlin is jockey, and their colors are blue, with gold bars.

Dal Jordan, owner and trainer, has Master Mariner, Chilcoat Pass and Rio Frio. Percy Jackson is jockey, and the colors are red, with white star and a white cap.

Jack McLaughlin has Una Que Amo and El Ladrone. Matt Green is trainer, J. McCarthy is jockey, and the colors are red and orange.

T. Higginson has Chinook. Bill Frio is trainer.

H. S. Peck has Battese and Bureline. P. Anderson is trainer.

C. P. Hendrick, owner and trainer, has Sable, a five-year-old mare, by Fonso, and a three-year-old filly by Fonso. J. Clouch is jockey, and the colors are cream, with red sash and cap.

C. Boam, owner and trainer, has Brownie.

J. Gagan, owner and trainer, has a two-year-old colt by Irregular.

P. McLaughlin has Irma. J. Gagan is his trainer, and the colors are purple and white.

W. H. Stotesbury has Silver II., Ingot, Headland, Twilight, Sunlight, Carolina and Hilo. Harvey Williams is trainer and Harry Plack is jockey.

J. Green, owner and trainer, has La Bue. The following arrived at the track yesterday afternoon.

Frank Farrar, owner and trainer, with Flashlight, Polish, William O'B., Saticoy, J. O. C., Saucy Ever, Alice Rix and Complimentary. Frawley is jockey.

Owens Brothers, with Grady, Amasa and Gold Dust. A. B. Hitchcock is trainer and C. Cole is jockey.

J. Webber, owner and trainer, with Lady Hurst.

The first event coming up will be a match race for $150 a side, between Tammany and Chinook. It will take place on July 1, and will be for a half mile.

Fred Edwards is en route from San Francisco with a carload of horses.

The work at the track yesterday morning was not sensational, the fastest being three-fourths of a mile by Silver II., in about 1:30. The track is very heavy, and it is impossible to do any fast work.

H. L. Frank's stable will arrive to-day.—Anaconda Standard June 5.

STARTER CALDWELL has been engaged to handle the flag at Oakley next fall. This would seem to dispose of the always inaccurate Enquirer's story that no autumn meeting will be held at that track this year.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 64,430

Annie A. Ackerman, plaintiff, vs. Charles E. Ackerman, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA send greeting to Charles E. Ackerman, defendant.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's desertion of plaintiff, said desertion having continued for more than two years last past and having been without the consent or connivance of plaintiff; also, for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 3d day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 63,816.

Susie M. Lewiston, plaintiff vs. Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA send greeting to Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's failure to provide for the maintenance of plaintiff and the common necessities of life, said failure to so provide being caused by the idleness of defendant. Plaintiff also asks for the custody of the minor child, the issue of the marriage, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities. In having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a pacing-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electioneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Prince. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONT'S.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

NOTE—Beside Rankin, by Altamont, sold November, 1897, brought the highest price obtained for a harness horse at public auction in California during the year. Address

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

THE BREEDERS MEETING.

Dash Trotting and Pacing Races to be Given To-day at the Oakland Track.

The beautiful grand stand pictured above will be crowded this afternoon with the admirers of the light harness horse. It will be a gala day in the history of that sterling organization, the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association, and the first trial of methods, which, with the idea of doing all in its power to aid the horse owners, it has adopted without waiting for the endorsement or consent of any other association. There is an excellent card of both trotting and pacing events, as will be seen by the program on this page, and in the 2:12 trot and 2:20 pace very fast time will in all probability be made. There is no more beautiful or more perfectly appointed track in the world than that of the California Jockey Club at Oakland, and the magnificent buildings, grassy lawns and lovely flowers now fully in bloom make it an ideal pleasure resort for a summer afternoon. It is worth a trip across the bay during the present stirring times to view the historic stand where U. S. Grant, our greatest general, held the watch while St. Julien, in October, 1879, broke the world's record for trotting horses and finished his mile in 2:12¾. And when such a splendid card of races is offered, all but one of them dashes of a mile, with bookmakers to lay odds, and a band of musicians in the grand stand to delight the ear during the interim between races, there should be five or ten thousand people to share in the enjoyments of the occasion.

LIEBER KARL, the chestnut son of Forester, in his final trial for the American Derby this afternoon, finished lame and all but broken down. His lameness seems to be confined to the coffin joint. He will not be able to face the starter to-day.

DENVER'S GREAT MEETING.

California Horses Win Many Races and Get Low Records.

OVERLAND PARK, Denver, Col., June 14.

The third days racing opened with threatening skies and an occasional few drops of rain but it blew over and left a very pleasant afternoon. There was a very fair attendance considering the weather and those who came were well repaid by seeing excellent racing.

The first race for 2:30 pace was disposed of in one, two third order by W. J. Harris' b g Shecan and in no heat there was any argument offered him. In the second heat there was quite a contest for the place between Olga and Florence B, the latter winning by a scant half length and in the third heat Blast beat Fannie V. for the place in a drive. Florence B. was the favorite against the whole field, but failed to support that opinion. Time 2:21½, 2:20½, 2:20.

The second race was for two-year-olds and was a very tame affair. Annine won the first and third heat and race, Jack Dean securing the second heat on account of a break near the wire by Anise. Time, 2:48½, 2:52, 2:45.

Next came the runs commencing with a mile selling race for three-year-olds and upwards in which six horses faced the barrier. Charlotte M., B. C. Holly's ch f, 3, by Banique—Minnie K. who was the favorite and was well supported. She won handily going to the front at the last part of it, Tulare and Pleasanton had a close race for the place, the latter winning by a head. Time, 1:46½.

When the horses went to the post in the above race, Willie Flynn, on Pleasanton, in making a false break, was caught in the netting and thrown to the ground, breaking his arm just above the wrist. Glover was substituted and rode a very creditable race.

The second race was a three-quarter mile run for Colorado bred horses. Miss Redwood, by Cedarwood—Red Girl, the favorite, won as she liked. Warren and McPryor finishing second and third. Time, 1:17.

Third race, four and a half furlongs, three-year-olds and upwards, was won by Jim Gore, Lou Watkins and Tommy Tucker getting second and third. Time, 0:56½.

Fourth race, five and a half furlongs, for three-year-olds and upwards that have started and not won more than one race in 1879 and 1898, won by Fortuna. B. C. Holly's Brutus mare, Decapo, ridden by Tommy Butler, made a strong bid for first money, but could not last out. Emma W. secured show money. Time, 1:10.

FOURTH DAY, JUNE 15.

A pleasant day and a good card brought out a large crowd A three minute pace and a 2:15 trot were the harness races. Miss Patterson won very handily in three straight heats, being obliged by Fannie Putnam, who secured second money, to take a record at 2:17. The 2:14 trot furnished many surprises. There were four starters and at some time during the race each and every horse was a favorite over the field. The four starters were all California horses. T. E. Keating Dione, P. W. Hodges' Hazel Kinney, W. H. Robinson's Dr. Leek and B. O. Van Bokkelen's Stamboulette. Dione was a strong favorite and won the first heat from Stamboulette in 2:16. The bay son of Stamboulette won the second and third heats in 2:14½ and 2:15½. The four, sixth and seventh heats were won by Hazel Kinney, Dr. Leek winning the 5th. Dione was drawn after the second heat on account of condition. It was a pretty race from beginning to end. The winners of the running programme were Revel and Tiny P.

FIFTH DAY—JUNE 16.

The large crowd that attended the races on Thursday afternoon at Overland Park saw two of the most interesting harness contests that it is the good fortune of any audience to witness. Long contests and close finishes were the order of the day. In the 2:12 pace it required seven heats before the decision could be announced, and the winner turned up in the California mare, Lena N., who was second in three heats, fourth in one and won the fifth, sixth and seventh heats. Lena N. forced Roberts, the winner of the first and second heats, to pace in 2:09½ and 2:10½. Raymond M. won the second and third heats in 2:09½ and 2:14½. Then McDowell came on and won as he pleased with Lena N., the time being 2:14½, 2:19 and 2:18. It was an interesting race from beginning to end. The finishes being very close, not only between first and second horses, but the entire field were well bunched.

We seldom see such a grand contest between two green trotters at this season of this season of the year as was furnished by John Nolan, a four-year-old, by Prodigal, and Geo. W. McKinney, by McKinney, 2:11½, in the 2:45 trot. The McKinney horse, very well driven by P. W. Hodges, showed himself to be a very high-class race horse and after a very severe struggle was announced the winner. John Nolan won the first two heats in 2:14½ and 2:14, Geo. W. McKinney in each heat being right on the winner's saddle.

Hodges landed McKinney a winner in the next three heats by a very narrow margin, trotting in 2:14½, 2:14½ and 2:18.

This was a race that was worth going across the country to see. Shamrock, Hooper, Wm. Middlemay, F. W. R. and Dollie Marshutz also started.

Three runs completed the program.

First running, five and a half furlongs, purse $200, was won by the favorite, R. Q. Ban, Royal Lancer second, Midas third. Time, 1:09. Lapover, March, Da Capo and Juris also ran.

Second, maiden four-year-old and upwards, four furlongs, Demand, a 75 to 1 shot, won, Silver Jim second, La Fortuna third. Time, 0:49. Warrior, Settle up, Little James, Harold, Whittington, Artie Ray, Heffron and Ethel B. also ran.

Third running, seven furlongs, selling, purse $200, Zuraida beat Gertrude and Uncle Dan, Jr. Time, 1:31. Raviola, Willnieter, Little Maid, Tippet, Rossmoor and Pueblo also ran.

SIXTH DAY—JUNE 17.

Another day of good racing and good attendance. Eight horses faced the starter in the 2:19 pace, which required five heats to find the winner. Clatawa, the California three year-old was the favorite from the beginning, and although losing the first and second heats to Athol Wilkes by a short head in the good time of 2:14 and 2:12½, easily disposed of the next three heats in 2:15½, 2:14, 2:14½, showing himself to be a very high class colt and one that can be looked to be knocking at the three year-old record this fall. He is a fine-looking large colt by Steinway, dam Katie G., by Electioneer, and was very creditably handled by T. E. Keating. Bill Nye, Aelse, Irvington Belle, Simon Guggenheim, Rata-at and Carmino also started.

The 2:20 trot coming next on the program, was also a hotly contested race, it requiring five heats also.

The first heat was won by the favorite, Electric Light, in 2:18½, but in the next two he was beaten by Lady Beaumont in 2:17½ and 2:20½. Electric Light, seeming unsteady, the judges substituted Perry Johnson for Dick Tilden and the new reinsman managed by a very close margin to win next two heats and race, the time being 2:17½ and 2:18. Armenian, Belvidere, Johnnie Trouble, Ariel, Respond and La Gratitude also started.

There were three runs on the card: B. C. Holly's b m La Mascotte winning the first, a selling purse of $200 for four-year-olds and upwards that have not won a race at this meeting. Oak Leaf and Dazzle More secured place and show. Time, 1:02. Charlemagne, Thurman, Blue Sign and Pleasanton also ran.

The Pavilion Handicap, purse $300, five furlongs, brought out six starters, including such high class horses as Rubicon, Dorah Woods, Bill Howard, Gold Leaf, Tornor and Swiftly, they finishing in the order named, Rubicon winning in the last few jumps. Time, 1:01.

The last race was a selling race, purse $200, for three-year-olds and upwards, six furlongs. It was won by Will-meter all on account of the superior riding of Tommy Butler. He was unfortunate in the start, but by hard riding beat Watch the Scale and Powhusky. Time, 1:17. Clorinda, Encino, Silverado, Igalo, Sam'l Dee, Jennie Clark, Pueblo, Raviola and Uncle Dan Jr. also ran.

SEVENTH DAY, JUNE 18.

Another beautiful morning foretold a good days racing and the prophesy came true, for from early morning till the last race was finished the track was kept lively and the work outs in the morning were almost as interesting as the races in the afternoon. One of the principal attractions was the work of the three pacers entered in the free-for-all for next Saturday, Chehalis, the black wonder from Oregon; Anaconda, the fast son of Knight, and Kate Medium all warmed up together and after the warming up heats paced two wonderful miles. The first in 2:06½ and the second in 2:06½. All three finished close together, no day light showing between either. Chehalis seemed to have a little the best of the first heat, but Anaconda went the best mile, being on the outside and pacing the last half of the last mile in 1:01½. It was a wonderful workout and predicts a great race for next Saturday. The races were called promptly at 2 o'clock there being six races on the card, a 2:25 pace and five runs. Eight horses faced the starter in the pace, Reward S. being a strong favorite but Miss Logan, the California mare owned and driven by Dr. A. W. Boucher of San Jose, proved to be the good thing of the meeting. She was a 10 to 1 chance for the first heat and as good as even money being laid against her by bookmakers that she would not show. She was well played by the few who ever stabled with her. Miss Logan made a runaway race of it winning the three heats as she liked and absolutely pulled up in 2:17½, 2:12½ and 2:17. In the second heat she went to the half in 1:01½ as officially timed and jogged home. She is as fast as anything on the track.

Next came the seven furlong run with seven starters. B. C. Holly's b m Lorena II. was the favorite at 2 to 5, but she was easily beaten by Sally Lamar a 8 to 5 choice. King Hazel, Charlemagne, Zuraida and Mary Burns also ran. A four and a half furlong dash came next and was won in a drive by Jim Gore, Rattler and Omaha Wood securing second and third in 0:55. Tiny P. and Lew Watkins also ran.

The Neef Bros. handicap was the next the distance being one mile. Rubicon looked to be an easy winner, but Pat Moorissey a 10 to 1 choice easily beat his field, Charlotte M. and Lucky Star running second and third. Time, 1:42½.

The four and a half furlong dash was won by Lady Clifton and the last race at five furlongs was won by Torsion in a hard drive. Thus finished the first week's racing, each day furnishing a row sport which was appreciated by large crowds there being 8,000 people on the grounds today.

A Letter From Geo. W. McKinney's Owner.

ALHAMBRA, Cal., June 18, 1893.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I have just received a telegram from P. W. Hodges, manager and driver of my horse George W. McKinney, informing me that he had won his third race, which makes three races in the last fifteen days. George W.'s first race was in the three minute class at Colorado Springs, June 2d, which he won, the best time being 2:29½. His second race was at Denver, Col., June 13th the three minute class, which he won, best time 2:17½.

Again on June 16th, at the same place he won the 2:45 class, best time 2:14½, which is a good showing for a green horse that left my stable sixty days ago to-day and at that time had not been driven a mile since last season as fast as a three minute gait, and during the winter had only been driven on the road about half of the time.

George W. is a bay horse, sixteen hands high, weighs when in good, fair condition, eleven hundred pounds, was sired by the Great McKinney—Lady Washington. Lady Washington was by Colgroves Whipple, out of a mare that I sold to L. J. Rose, who named her Lady Mayberry. She was said to be by Chieftain.

Lady Mayberry, the dam of Lady Washington, was also dam of Lady Dey, dam of Dubec, 2:16 (if memory serves me correctly), by Sultan. Lady Dey and two or three of her colts by Sultan, numbers need not count in the transaction, sold for $17,300 odd dollars at Senator Rose's great sale of trotting horses in the East several years ago.

Lady Washington is also the dam of El Molino, now seven years old, her first colt, record 2:20, by Alcazar. She has produced five colts, three old enough to be worked. Her second colt, by Gossiper, showed great promise, but met with an accident which disqualified him from being trained. Geo. W. McKinney, her third colt, has a record of 2:14½, just made. Her fourth, now two years old, a full brother to Geo. W., shows all the great characteristics which would lead one to believe he will equal him in speed as well as in size and appearance. Her fifth colt is a suckling by her side. It is among the possibilities that Lady Washington will become one among great brood mares.

Should George W. improve as fast as we have reason to suppose he ought, between this and the end of the racing season, he will be neck and neck, if not a nose ahead, of the best of the "get" of the great McKinney, which would cause Charles Durfee, owner of McKinney, to enjoy an all-round smile, large enough to make an island of the upper half of his head.

I thought perhaps you might appreciate the information contained herein, hence this letter.

E. L. MAYBERRY.

The Recall.

As the trotting season opens in California to day, and new methods are to be tried and discussed, the following from the Chicago Horseman anent the question of the recall and the best way to make it effective, will be read with interest:

Every succeeding harness racing campaign we hear complaints, more or less strongly and bitterly voiced, as to the failure of this, that or the other starting judge to sound the recall bell loudly enough to apprise the entire number of drivers competing that the word has not been given. Accidents will happen, we know, despite seemingly invincible precautions that may be taken to prevent them; but, is the ringing of a bell, electrical or otherwise, from the judges' stand precaution enough to prevent false starts? It must be remembered that the recall bell is fixed at a point which of very necessity must be behind several of the competing drivers when it is most loudly sounding. If a few of the drivers pull up, those that have not reached the wire can see them and do likewise; but those in the van cannot see those behind them, and if an unscrupulous reinsman desires to tire out the favorite, let us say by carrying him around the turn, all he has to do is to keep on driving him hard, and if the driver of the favorite is not altogether positive he surely heard the recall bell, he dare not take back in case the word really has been given and to lose his place might mean to lose the race. The shouts of the people in the grand stand coupled with the tones of the bell on which an extra effort has been put forth, soon inform him that it is no go; but the mischief has been partly done at least and his horse "has a quarter in thirty-two seconds in him," let us say again, while his most dangerous opponent has turned perchance long before the wire was reached and is calmly and quietly awaiting the return of the favorite who must turn at once and score down again without a moment's rest. Unless a starter has the most thorough mastery of the drivers, and sometimes not even then, this very same thing is done time and again. Now, when it may be done so simply, ought not associations to try to obviate occurrences of this sort? That may be very easily accomplished by stationing a man with a large recall flag well down towards the first turn, with instructions to drop his bunting only when the word is given. Let the starter give him some agreed sign and until he receives that sign let him hold his bright scarlet flag aloft in plain sight of every driver in the race—just as it is done on the running tracks. It is not possible for either rider or driver to watch every other horse in the race and listen for a recall bell or watch for the dropping of a small flag at the same time; but he may have the privilege of keeping his eye on a large, bright square of bunting held directly in front of him, and the which he may see in plenty of time and for a sufficiently great length of time to perfectly protect himself and still pull up after going only a short distance to a false start, he is in small danger of getting the worst of it. Supposing a man with a large, bright red flag should during the pendency of the scoring for a harness race, be stationed just at the beginning of the first turn. The flag would attract the eye of every reinsman competing and no matter what tactics were adopted no one of them would think of keeping on at full speed until the bunting should be dipped. Looking straight ahead of him, each driver could not help seeing the red flag so long as it should be held aloft and its fall would be equally easily discerned. There are only a very few false starts on the running turf each year caused by the jockey's failure to observe that the flag was not dipped—the inability of the riders to hold their mounts being responsible ninety-nine times out of every one hundred for such mishaps. Even a smaller per centage of false starts would take place on the harness turf, should the recall flag be used, for the reason that a driver sitting in a sulky seat has more and better opportunities to look about him than a boy perched on the back of a thoroughbred he can barely manage. All the additional expense that would be incurred by the installation of this improvement would be the price of the flag and the pay of the man to wield it—a mere bagatelle in any case, nothing when compared to the good that would be done.

A Deserved Compliment.

For a quarter of a century Count Klamen Hunady has been President of the Vienna Trotting Club, Vienna, Austria, Europe. Under his management the club prospered, and the members showed their gratitude by instituting a jubilee meeting, which was held May 5-12. During the meeting of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association held in Chicago May 10, 11, 12, the President was authorized to send the following cablegram:

PRESIDENT VIENNA TROTTERING CLUB, Vienna, Austria, Europe:—The National Trotting Association of America tenders to your Excellency the congratulations and good wishes of the people of the United States and Canada on this anniversary of a long career of usefulness and honor. P. P. JOHNSTON, President.

The following acknowledgment of cablegram reached the President of the National Trotting Association a few days ago:

PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL TROTTERING ASSOCIATION, Hartford, Conn.—Dear Sir:—Being not able to do otherwise, I beg you hereby to remit to the National Trotting Association and to the people of the United States and Canada my most profound thanks for the exceedingly tender proofs of sympathy I have received from your part on occasion of my anniversary. Please be sure that I never will forget your taking part on my jubilee. Yours truly, (Signed) KLAMEN HUNYADY, President Vienna Trotting Club.

Trotting and Pacing Mares.

While the fact is unquestioned that the pace is a faster gait than the trot, says a writer in an exchange, there remains one somewhat curious phase of the question of the relative speed of the two modes of action. That is the continued lack of a first-class pacing mare—not a mare first-class among mares, for we have had those, but one capable of holding her own with the "cracks" of the other sex. With the exception of the momentary supremacy of Jay-Eye-See, the "king for a day" of 1884, a mare has held the trotting record since 1880. Since the day of Pocahontas—1855—no mare has held the pacing championship, and none have ever come near it since, in the days of the "big four," but a fraction of a second separated Mattie Hunter's record from that of Sleepy Tom. To-day, Lottie Lorraine and Bessie Bonehill, who divide the honors, are six and a half seconds away from the 1:59½ of Star Pointer, while the supremacy of Alix among the trotters seems impregnable.

Here are the five fastest mares, at both gaits, arranged according to record to the close of 1897:

TROTTERS.

Alix..... 2:03½
 Nancy Hanks..... 2:04
 Fantasy..... 2:06
 Bouzetta..... 2:06½
 Kentucky Union..... 2:07½

PACERS.

Lottie Lorraine..... 2:05½
 Bessie Bonehill..... 2:05½
 Pearl C..... 2:06½
 Pearl Onward..... 2:06½
 Lady Nottingham..... 2:06½

Average of trotting mares, 2:04½; of pacing mares, 2:06½. It will thus be seen that the trotting mares average almost three-quarters of a second faster than the pacers. It is, however, no more than fair to say that all the pacers made their records in races, while only the last two of the trotters did so.

A Big Entry List.

The Colossal entry list received by the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association speaks volumes for both the enterprising industry and general popularity of Secretary H. W. Wilson. The Lexington entry list is the largest one thus far this season, the various events having received an average of nearly fifty entries each, distributed as follows:

Futurity, for foals of 1895 (three-year-olds)..... 53
 Futurity, for foals of 1896 (two-year-olds)..... 74
 Transylvania (subscriptions)..... 22
 The Ashland (2:11 trotters)..... 25
 The Tennessee (2:09 pacers)..... 34
 The Walnut Hall Cup (2:17 trotters)..... 51
 The Blue Grass (2:19 trotters)..... 52
 The Johnston (2:24 trotters)..... 39
 The West (2:29 trotters)..... 63
 The Kentucky (three-year-old trotters)..... 43
 The Lexington (two-year-old trotters)..... 32
 The Wilson (2:20 pacers)..... 51

On the subject of putting and keeping a track in good condition an experienced trainer and track worker very logically says that there are four things to be observed in the care of a track: "In the first place it must be kept level, by use of the track machine; second, it must be kept firm by using it while wet enough to pack; third, a cushion must be kept by very moderate use of the harrow; fourth, it must be kept elastic by sprinkling and not allowing it to dry. It is only when it is dry that it is hard; don't allow it to get dry, but keep it moist. If you haven't a sufficient supply of water to wet the whole of it, wet a part, say half way from the pole out, and you can work and keep this much of it in good condition for fast work. Deep footing will cause colts to go bad gaited, and will cause muscle and tendon soreness in fast horses, while a hard track is death to the feet. Either must be avoided."

Sulky Notes.

ATHANIO won $2,250 at the Vienna, Austria, meeting.

ATLANTA, the dam of Alir, 2:03½, has been bred to Sable Wilkes.

KLATAWAB's record is now 2:16½, made in a winning race at Denver last Tuesday.

A FULL brother of Caryle Carne will start in the races on the Oregon circuit this year.

NEARLY 3,000 licenses have been issued to drivers by the National Trotting Association.

ELLOREE, 2:09½, will probably start against Klamath, 2:07½, in the free-for-all at Dubuque, Iowa.

J. H. WALLACE believes that Arion, 2:07½, should prove the greatest trotting sire of the century.

FRANK BOGASH 2:04½, is going great guns this spring and is being tipped as the champion for 1899.

VAN BOKKELEN won a good race with Stamboulette at Denver Thursday. His best time was 2:14½.

DICTATOR'S LAST, the last foal of Dictator, is in Scott Hudson's stable at Lexington, pacing halves in 1:07.

DICTATUS starts in the 2:20 pace and his daughter, Dictatress, is named for the 2:40 pace, both to come off to-day.

ANDY McDOWELL has purchased Nettie Jefferson, 2:10½, from Frank Smith and will take her East after the Overland meeting.

ASTER 2:12 and Ethel Downs 2:10 were on the track Wednesday morning last and worked a mile together, the last quarter in 31½ seconds.

DR. FRASSE is named in the three-minute class which is to be trotted to day. This colt got a record of 2:29½ last year, so is not eligible to this race.

JACK W., 2:12½, by Waldstein, was the sensational horse of last year on the California circuit. He starts to-day in the 2:13 trot and should be inside the money.

It begins to look as though McKinney's 2:15 list will be nearly doubled this year. There are seven of his get in this list now and that is a splendid showing for a horse but eleven years old.

HERE is the best opportunity yet offered to get a race horse for a little money. Altamont, the great sire of fast pacers and trotters, will make a fall season, beginning July 1st, at a fee of $40.

THE American trotting-bred, heavy harness horse Von Harbinger, by Harbinger, son of Almont, sold for $4,600 in London on May 13th. His mate, Silver Leaf, also trotting-bred, brought $2,500.

FLYING JIB was not in condition at the Blue Ribbon sale at Cleveland, and was not sold. He has rounded to all right, however, and recently pulled a wagon containing W. B. Fasig a quarter in 31½ seconds.

ON the half mile track at Pendleton, Oregon, a matinee was given last week. The trotter Bonner N. B., 2:17, was driven an exhibition half in 1:10. The track was very heavy and the horse was hitched to a high wheel sulky.

MANY of the millionaires in the Eastern States are investing in the trotter. W. K. Vanderbilt is the latest addition to the ranks of buyers and has given his commissioner orders to get together a number of high-class ones.

TOM RYDER, 2:13½, will be entered in his class during the second two weeks of the Breeders meeting. The old campaigner has been used as a road horse in this city for some time, and there is probably not a horse that can head him on the speed track.

CHRIS PETERSON 2:13½, Plunkett 2:13½, Hijo del Diablo 2:11½ and Peanut, a very fast horse owned by Frank O'Kane, have been named for a race between members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association, to be trotted at the Breeders meeting at Oakland.

SEVERAL horses in training in California have been injured by the breaking of the steel spreaders worn in the hoof for the purpose of correcting contracted heels. In several instances the springs have broken off and been driven into the foot, causing serious lameness.

CAPTAIN JONES, a three-year-old by McKinney out of Midday by Gossiper, is claimed by his owner, A. C. Jones, to be the best individual of his age in Oregon, and he also believes he will be McKinney's fastest son. Captain Jones is a coal black, stands 15 3 and weighs 1,050 pounds.

THE bay gelding Ed Winslip, by Raymond, that starts in the three minute trot to-day is said to have worked some very fast quarters. As he has been named after his owner's brother, the popular President of the Napa Agricultural Society, the chances are that Mr. Winslip considers him a pretty good one.

SKY POINTER, full brother to the great Star Pointer, 1:59½, is in Walter Maben's string in Oakland. He is a good looking, large, bay stallion, with a most intelligent head and a perfect disposition. He has no record and is eight years old. He served quite a number of well bred mares at Los Angeles this year.

THE good colt, John A. McKerron, driven by William Cecil, won his race at Denver last Monday, in straight heat, trotting both in 2:25, which is a fraction slower than his record. This son of Nutwood Wilkes worked a mile in 2:18 on several occasions before leaving San Jose and always had speed left at the finish.

CALIFORNIA horses have been leading the procession in nearly every race at Denver this year. The trotters and pacers of this State, in proportion to the number raised, go faster, earn more and sell for higher prices than those of any other country on earth. California is the horse-breeding country par excellence.

THE National Trotting Association, Hartford, Conn., wants the present address of Arthur Braddock. He took care of the pacer Brooks, 2:16½, in 1893 and 1894 for S. A. Paddock.

THE old pacing stallion Monroe S. 2:20, is thirteen years old. He is in Sam Hoy's hands and is entered in his class at the Breeder's meeting, and starts to-day in the first race. He has as much and probably more speed than he ever had and if in good condition should reduce his record and that is what his owner very much desires.

DIRECT 2:05½, pacing, made a record of 2:18 trotting in his four-year-old form at Sacramento, carrying enough weight on his feet to stop an ordinary horse. He was then put to pacing and soon had the world's record. Now at 18 years of age he is being worked at the trot again. He goes sound and recently stepped an eighth at the diagonal gait in 16 seconds.

WILLIAM HAROLD, a bay horse, by Sidney-Cricket, 2:10, by Steinway, is entered in the 2:20 pace which comes off to-day at Oakland. That this horse has speed there is no denying and in a dash race he may give a good account of himself. He started twice last year and on both occasions got fourth money, though second in 2:14 was the best he could do. It is said that he is going like a whirlwind now.

THE mare Azelia, owned by Mr. Kirkpatrick, manager of the Palace Hotel, was started at the Memorial Day matinee of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association, and owing to a blunder of the printer of the program was given the name Dahlia. The question now arises shall the owner be compelled to pay $50 if he starts his mare under her proper name, or must he continue to race her under the name arbitrarily given her by a program printer?

AGITATO 2:09, is now at the Oakland track in C. A. Winship's string and under charge of that well known and excellent reinsman from Los Angeles, Walter Maben. Agitato has grown into a grand looking horse and is quite a surprise to those who have not seen him since he paced to a mark of 2:09½ as a three year old. It is unfortunate that there are not enough horses in his class for him to be seen during the first two weeks of the Breeders meeting, but he may be seen later on.

LOOK out for a great race at Denver to day in the free-for-all pace. Our correspondent writes us from there that Anaconda, Chehalis and Kate Medium, all of whom are entered in this race, were worked out in company last Saturday morning, and were given two heats together. In neither of the heats was there daylight to be seen between any of them and they came under the wire very close together in 2:06½ and 2:06½. This is going great guns and no mistake and shows that speed is "very prevalent" this year.

HARRY WISE, of this city, has purchased from Thomas Thompson of Pendleton, Oregon, a two-year-old colt by Chehalis 2:07½, out of a mare by Hamby, a son of Hamdallah second dam by Silas Wright, sire of Badge 2:09. This colt has been named Motanic after an Indian Chief. The pace is his natural gait and he is said to show lots of speed at it. Motanic is 15 2, smoothly turned, and in color is a dark brown with white ankles behind. He is said by those who have seen him to be a very handsome and stylish horse.

AZOTE, 2:04½, the champion trotting gelding, is at the Oakland track with the rest of the Griffith string. The leg that used to bother him does not give any trouble now, but he has another that does. The ailment this time is in the whorlbone, and was developed after he had been worked a mile in 2:15 at Pleasanton some weeks ago. A couple of seasons were put in the flesh. The sore is now healed and the champion seems to be going sound again. If he is all right, there is nothing in this State that is in the same class with him, but as to whether he is or not is a doubtful question.

WHEN Dione won the first heat of the 2:14 trot at Denver last week, Van Bokkelen's bay stallion Stamboulette was only a head behind her. The heat was trotted in 2:16. Stamboulette won the second and third heats in 2:15½ and 2:14½ and in the remaining heats was 3, 2, 2, 3 respectively. The son of Stamboul and Lady Escott was the contending horse in nearly every heat of the seven, and has proven himself to be both fast and game. According to the record of the race Hazel Kinney was the best horse in it, getting a record of 2:15½ and winning the race, but Stamboulette was a mighty good second.

A CHESTNUT mare by Silver Bow out of a full sister to Lady H. by Sidney is one of the attractions at the Oakland track. She is owned by Mr. Doran, the hay and grain dealer of Oakland, and the horsemen who have seen her at work say she is probably the fastest single footer on earth. When it is known that she has covered a mile at that gait better than 2:40, the claim will not be disputed. All sorts of devices and many ways of shoeing have been tried with this mare, but up to two weeks ago, which was the last time the writer saw her at work, she was single footing every step of the way. If properly balanced she should be fast.

MR. O. MARCHAND, of San Pablo will have a starter in the two-year-old division of the Kentucky Futurity this year that should make a good showing for California, provided she reaches Lexington safe and sound. This is a very handsome though not large bay filly by Gossiper, out of Mr. Marchand's good race mare Lady O., 2:15. Mr. Marchand got the idea when he first began working this filly two months ago that the large end of stakes for two-year-olds is for the pacing division, and consequently he put the hoppers on his filly and drove her at the lateral gait. One lesson with the straps was all she needed, and a nicer gaited one was never seen. She went with the very simplest of rigging and showed speed. Dr. H. S. Latham told Mr. Marchand that the $5,000 to be contested for this year by the two-year-olds was for trotters, and a letter from the Secretary of the Kentucky Association proved the Doctor was right. So Mr. Marchand got out his hoppers again and, putting them on the filly, crossed the straps, and took her out on the track. It was the same as before—one lesson was sufficient to teach her what was wanted, and she thereafter went as sweetly at the trot as she had at the other gait. Her action is almost faultless and with but two months' work altogether she can now show quarters in 35 seconds. Mr. Marchand is not giving her much work, but is letting her go along easily and hopes to have her in good shape to get a portion of the big stake at least. If his hopes are realized his many friends in this State will be more than pleased.

SECRETARY EDWIN F. SMITH, of the State Agricultural Society, has returned to Sacramento from Highland Springs, and believes he has fully recovered his health, at least he says he is ready for all the work demanded of him by the Society. No more energetic or more capable Secretary than Mr. Smith has ever managed the affairs of that institution, and his loss to it would be almost irreparable.

JOHN KELLY, who formerly trained and drove the Salisbury string of trotters and pacers, is now at Hartford, Conn., with the East View Farm horses. Among the fast ones he is now handling the four-year-old pacing gelding, Ed. B. Young, 2:22, by Direct, 2:05½, out of Lillie Langtry, by Nephew, is a whirlwind this spring. Kelly let him step a mile in 2:15½, over the half-mile track at the farm last week, moving him a quarter in 31½ seconds, under restraint. Directum Kelly, the young trotter that made a two-year-old record of 2:23½ in 1896, has grown into a grand-looking four-year-old. Kelly drove him a mile in 2:19½ over the farm track last week.

MR. R. J. HAVY, than whom there is no more popular man among the horsemen of California, will wield the starter's flag at the Breeders' meeting, which commences to day. Mr. Havy is a thorough horseman, a man of cool judgment and determination, and the business is not new to him. As a starter of running horses, both with the flag and the gate, he has had no superior on the coast, although some high-priced gentlemen with great reputations have been seen at our running tracks. He has started the trotters on many occasions, and has been very successful. The Breeders Association has been fortunate in securing Mr. Havy's services and the drivers no doubt will willingly obey him, as they know he knows his business.

C. A. DUFFEE, who is now located at Portland, Oregon, with his great horse McKinney, reports that the horse is making a heavy season there and is getting an excellent class of mares. Mr. Duffee was offered $1,000 cash by the horse breeders of Spokane, Washington, if he would take McKinney to that city and give them his services for one month. Mr. Duffee was compelled to decline the offer. Horsemen in the Northwest are acting wisely in breeding to a horse like McKinney this year. His produce have been among the best money winners in California the past few years, and are steadily marching to the front wherever they are started. At Colorado Springs and Denver recently, Hazel Kinney and Geo. W. McKinney won their races and reduced their records. Hazel Kinney won a seven-heat race, beating such good ones as Dione, Stamboulette and Dr. Leek and now has a record of 2:14½. Geo. W. McKinney won several good races, taking a record of 2:14½, which is a pretty good mark for a green horse to get this early in the year. McKinneys are all right.

FOUR members of the Golden Gate Driving Park Association of this city met the other evening and as a result of a hot but friendly discussion as to the merits of their horses, put up $25 each towards a purse of $100 to be trotted for at some future date. Mr. Gallagher named his handsome chestnut trotter, Admiral Dewey, Mr. Stewart nominated Dandy Pat, whose record is 2:26½, Mr. Mead put up the money on his old horse Haverly, 2:25, and Mr. Ohlandt backed his horse Haviland, 2:27, in this race. After the match was made, it was agreed by all to allow Mr. Parks to start his mare Lottie in the race, by putting up $10. Should Lottie win Mr. Parks to draw down $50 of the stake, and the remaining $60 to go to the second horse. If any of the others win, the owner to take all. Should the Breeders' Association secure this race to come off over the Oakland track during the meeting which begins to-day, it will be a big drawing card and will, without a doubt, be one of the best betting races of the meeting. The horses are not only equally matched, but there is such a feeling of rivalry between the owners of the animals, that it would be the hottest kind of a contest from start to finish.

THERE is a little bay gelding over in Alameda owned by Mr. Hunter, the insurance agent, that is a wonder. He is called Coal Oil Tommy for the reason that he was formerly employed to pull a coal oil wagon about town. Tommy is about eight or nine years old, and weighs somewhere in the neighborhood of 900 pounds. He was sold a few months since to the oil dealer for the munificent sum of $1250 and the seller thought he had made a fair sale. This gelding is not afraid of anything and will stand with his head down and his eyes closed within two feet of a track as a train goes by. When driven on the streets he always showed considerable speed, so Mr. Hunter took him to the Alameda track out of curiosity and after hitching him to a bike drove him a quarter. The distance was made in 33 seconds, and as the owner could not believe his own watch and timing, gave the horse another trial, with several watches held on him. He covered the quarter this time in 32½ seconds, none of the timers making it slower. The owner does not know the breeding of Coal Oil Tommy and there is no chance of ascertaining it. He is a fast horse, however, whose light has been hid under a bushel, (or an oil can) for some time. He goes without boots or hoppers and can pace as fast or faster than he can trot.

A QUER accident happened Silver Ring, Mr. P. Williams handsome trotting mare, at the Oakland track last Monday. She has been carrying in her front foot one of those little steel spring spreaders used by so many trainers for the purpose of spreading or widening a contracted foot. The spring broke and a portion of it was driven into the foot near the heel of the frog for at least an inch. She immediately trotted lame and was pulled up and her foot examined. Mr. Williams pulled out the offending steel, poured a little turpentine in the wound and placed the mare in her stall. She showed no signs of lameness Tuesday afternoon and there was no fever or swelling in the foot. In this connection it is apropos to refer to a remark made by a friend who has had an extended experience in training and campaigning harness horses. "How can a little spring that does not exert an energy of over three or four pounds' pressure spread a hoof that has a shoe nailed to it? It takes several hundred pounds pressure to spread an ordinary shoe and the shoe is bound to hold the hoof as long as it is nailed to it. My plan to spread the heels of a horse is to have the shoe cut in two at the toe and then rasp the points where divided so that they will be like this > <. Now when the foot touches the ground the pressure will spread it naturally and the division at the toe will act as a hinge and allow it to do so. I had my mare shod that way and it took but a short time for her heels to widen out to where I wanted them."

BREEDING THEORIES.

The Past Our Only Guide—How the Greatest Galloping Celebrities of the Past Half Century Were Bred.

While there will probably ever be a mystery shrouding the breeding of good race horses with any degree of certainty, the past teaches many things that the breeder can profit by. It shows that the near ancestors of all good race horses were possessed of racing merit of no mean order. The mediocre racer generally has mediocre racing descendants, and we have yet to see the pedigree of any racing celebrity that did not have the blood of clinking good racers less than three generations away. With this in view it seems to us that if only the very good individuals are used in breeding establishments, and those animals had a sire or dam or both that possessed racing abilities above the average, the result will be a performer of more than mediocre ability. Take the great producing mares and observe the record of their foals. Almost without exception the best performer will be the one sired by the best race horse she was mated with. Pocahontas, Emma, Alice Carneal, Heraldry, Nina, Reel, Margaret Wood, Topaz, imp. Britannia, Young Maid of the Oaks, Rowena, Nevada, Salina, in fact any mare of note you may mention, all threw their best performers when mated with the stallion having the greatest racing ability.

Tillo, winner of the very rich Suburban Handicap last Saturday, is by Leonatus (son of Longfellow, he by imp. Leamington) out of Puritan Lass, by Spendthrift (son of imp. Australian); second dam Phoebe Mayflower, by imp. Phaeton (son of King Tom). Pink Coat, winner of the $12,000 St. Louis Derby last Saturday, is also by Leonatus, dam Alice Brand, by Hindoo, son of Virgil, by Vandal, he by imp. Glencoe, second dam Lady of the Lake, by Hyder Ali (son of imp. Leamington); third dam Addie Warren, by Prolific whose dam was by imp. Glencoe.

Jean Beraud, the best two-year-old of the year, is by His Highness (son of The Ill-Used, by Breadalbane, he by Stockwell), dam Carrie C., by Sensation, who was never beaten; second dam the great race mare Ferida (holder for a long time of the record for mares at four miles) by imp. Glenelg; third dam of the famous La Henderson, by Lexington. His Highness, Jean Beraud's sire, was the best two-year-old of his year, winning The Futurity and about $114,000 during his turf career, his dam by an unbeaten race horse, his second dam renowned as a racer and producer, his third and fourth dams phenomenal producers. He is another example of correct breeding and comes by his racing qualities honestly. It was a case of mating a good mare by a phenomenal race horse to an almost invincible racer, and the result was what might reasonably be expected—that is, if all conditions were favorable at mating-time. If Carrie C.'s next foal by His Highness were not so successful as Jean Beraud in the line of racing we would attribute the lack of ability to unfavorable conditions at the time she (Carrie C.) was bred. That, in our opinion, accounts for the fact that full brothers and sisters to great racers are not always successful race horses. And there comes the need of a skillful man in charge of breeding establishments—one who knows just the proper time a mare should be mated with a stallion. It takes years of experience for anyone to master the many details of a breeding farm, to know the most propitious period for the mating of mares and stallions, and it strikes us that it would pay the owners of the large stock farms to employ, from February to June, at least, a competent veterinarian to look after these most important matters. We believe that the result would be most encouraging to breeders and that the weeds of the breeding garden would be reduced materially, the flowers be in profusion.

It struck us that the breeding of the principal money-winners in the history of the turf would be good object lessons for our breeders to master. In England Isinglass heads the list with $290,000, Donovan being second with $275,765. Then follow Ayrshire with $179,600; La Fleche, $174,300;

Gladiator, $150,135; Ormonde, $142,325; Surefoot, $138,380; Lord Lyon, $127,825; Galtee More, $125,000 (estimated); Seabreeze, $121,330; Achievement, $112,225; Orme, $105,985; Formosa, $105,400, and Sgnorina, $104,380. These are the only winners of over $100,000 on the English turf. In America Domino heads the list with $202,000 in round figures. Sir Walter, bred in California, has won $128,450; Hanover, $120,912; Salvator, $120,365; Potomac, $115,825; His Highness, $114,000 (estimated); Tournament, $108,773, and Dobbins about $100,000.

The only Australian horse to go over the $100,000 mark that we positively know of was Carbine, with $147,380. Grand Flaneur, unbeaten, may have won $100,000 in the Colonies, for he captured all the big events. Abercorn is another that might have won $100,000 in stakes and purses.

We will take the top crosses of some of the celebrities, and it shows that they were bred to be winners of renown:

Isinglass, by Isonomy (twice winner of the Ascot Gold Cup, of the Goodwood Cup, Cambridgeshire Stakes, &c.) out of Dead Lock, by Wenlock (winner of the St. Leger, &c.).

Donovan, by Galopin (winner of the Derby, &c.), dam Mowerina, by Scottish Chief (winner of the Ascot Biennial Stakes, Chesterfield Stakes, Ascot Gold Cup, &c.); second dam Stockings (dam of Exminster), by Stockwell (winner of the St. Leger and 2,000 Guineas).

Ayrshire, by Hampton (winner of the Goodwood and Doncaster Cups, Northumberland Plate, Goodwood and Metropolitan Stakes, &c.); dam Atalanta by Galopin (winner of the Derby, &c.); second dam Feronia, by Thormanby (winner of the Derby, &c.); third dam Woodbine, by Stockwell (winner of the St. Leger and 2,000 Guineas).

Gladiator, by Monarque (winner of the Goodwood Cup, &c.) out of a mare by Gladiator (second to Bay Middleton for the Derby of 1836 and sire of the wonderful Queen Mary, &c.).

La Fleche, by St. Simon (winner of the Ascot Gold Cup, Goodwood Cup, &c., and never beaten), dam Quiver, by Toxophilite (sire of Musket, &c.).

Ormonde, by Bend Or (winner of the Derby), dam Lily Agnes (winner of the Doncaster Cup, &c.) by Macaroni (winner of the Derby).

Surefoot, by Wisdom (a superior sire), dam by Galopin (winner of the Derby).

Lord Lyon, by Stockwell (winner of the St. Leger and 2,000 Guineas), dam Paradigm by Paragon (son of Touchstone (winner of the St. Leger, Doncaster Cup, &c.).

Galtee More, by Kendal (winner of the July Stakes, &c., and brother in blood to the unbeaten Ormonde) dam Morganette, by Thormanby (winner of the Derby); second dam Morgan la Faye, by Cowl (son of the unbeaten Bay Middleton and Cobweb, winner of the Oaks and 1,000 Guineas).

Seabreeze was by Isonomy, Achievement by Stockwell, Orme by Ormonde, and one can go right in, showing that all these great winners were by superb race horses out of mares that either raced well or were sired by wonderful racers.

Domino, our largest winner, was by Himyar (winner of the Belle Meade, Phoenix Hotel, Merchants', Turf, January Stakes, &c.) out of Mannie Grey, by Enquirer (best race horse of his day); second dam by War Dance (one of the best sires of his time); third dam by the great Lecompte, &c.

Sir Walter is by imp. Midlothian (winner of the Brocklesby and Corporation Stakes, Stewards' Cup and Chesterfield Cup) out of La Scala, by Joe Hooker (whose get have won nearly $500,000); second dam Abbey, by the unbeaten Norfolk; third dam the great producing mare, Ada C., by Revenue (sire of the champion, Planet).

Salvator is by imp. Prince Charlie (winner of the 2,000 Guineas, unbeaten at two and four years of age and winner of eight out of nine starts at five), dam Salina (a great stake-winner and sister to the celebrities Sprightly, Crucifix and Nevada) by the practically unbeaten Lexington.

Kingston (who won eighty-seven races) is by Spendthrift (best racer of his day) out of imp. Kapanga, by Victorious (son of the St. Leger winner, Newminster), Potomac was by imp. St. Blaize (winner of the Derby in England), dam Susquehanna (a great race mare in both this country and England and an own sister to the unbeaten Sensation and the scarcely less famous Onondaga).

His Highness is by imp. The Ill-Used (a good race horse that won the Kenner and Sequel Stakes) out of imp. Princess by King Tom (a great sire, half-brother to Stockwell and Rataplan).

Tournament is by imp. Sir Modred (winner of the Canterbury Derby, Canterbury Cup, Dunedin Cup, Metropolitan, Craven and Champagne Stakes), dam Plaything, by the grand race horse and sire Alarm; second dam The Pet, by Vandal, &c.

Hanover is by the mighty Hindoo (best race horse of his generation) out of Bourbon Belle, by Bonnie Scotland and winner of the Doncaster Stakes, &c).

Dobbins is by imp. Pickwick (a winning son of Derby winner Hermit and Tomato, latter winner of the 1,000 Guineas and Ascot Stakes, by King Tom), dam of the American turf queen Thora, by the mighty Longfellow.

Carbine was by Musket (winner of the Alexandra Plate, &c.) out of M. rsey, by Knoweley (son of Stockwell)

Grand Flaneur was by Yattendon (a superior race horse and sire) out of First Lady, by St. Albans (winner of the St. Leger in England).

Abercorn was by Chester (best race horse of his day in the Colonies, Chester's dam by Stockwell), out of Cinnamon by Goldsbrough (winner of the A. J. C. St. Leger and sire of many great winners).

It will be seen from the above list that all were bred right—by great race horses from mares phenomenal as winners or producers. And if one desires to breed a really high-class race horse he must not mate a "scrub" mare with a stallion that was nothing but a "skate." Mated when it is known the conditions are favorable, a stake mare bred to a stake horse should throw a stake-winner nine times out of ten, and it is our opinion that there is more in mating good individuals that possessed extraordinary racing ability than in mating animals on theories regarding certain lines of blood possessing this merit or that merit. The breeding illustrations given above, the leading money-winners of the three great racing countries—teach us that all sorts of breeding has produced good results. We have seen the crack race horses that were inbred and those that were not, and the idea that this cross will bring you speed and another "staying" power is generally fallacious. The reason we do not have more great race horses is that breeding establishments too often have incompetent managers and too ignorant stud grooms—men that are prone to mate animals at the wrong time—the outcome being very ordinary race horses, where, if there were a clever veterinarian on the ground to direct matters, the number of "stake horses" would far overshadow the list of "skates" foaled on the place. Individual merit in both sire and dam will win nearly every time, and the breeder who places individuality (physical strength and good shape) first, next considers the racing ability of stallion and stud matron, and then learns when to mate his animals, will beat all his friends with fads regarding certain blood lines having certain merit hollow, where the aim is to breed race horses which excite the admiration of the world.

RALPH H. TOZER.

THE SUBURBAN HANDICAP OF 1898.

Won by An Outsider, Tillo, in Good Style and Time—The Race—Some History.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Not a favorite "in the money." Ornament, that the public had rushed headlong to back, hopelessly beaten from start to finish; Ben Holladay gallantly striving to get within striking distance of the flying leaders, but absolutely without avail; Imp. never a contender—such is, in brief, the story of the Suburban of 1898. Yet the crowd cheered, as Suburban crowds only can cheer, when Tillo, a despised outsider, beat another long shot, Semper Ego, home in a furious finish.

It was a crowd, the memory of which will live long in the minds of all who saw it. Probably Sheephead Bay race course had never before held so many persons. The actual count will show that more than 20,000 persons saw the race. The lawn was a level sea of straw hats that looked like gigantic mushrooms. And of all this mass of humanity the percentage that had taken advantage of the 15 to 1 offered by the layers against Semper Ego for place must have been infinitesimal. But it was a gallant race from the spectator's standpoint, though full of faults viewed technically.

The field for the big race fully came up to expectations. A handsomer and better prepared lot of horses have never gone to the post. It was the fortuitous circumstance of a very tedious delay at the post that spoiled the race from the critic's point of view. From the time the horses went into the starter's hands to the moment he got them off was only about three minutes short of an hour. In all there were a dozen false breaks.

At last the right moment came. Ornament wheeled and joined his horses, with Peep o' Day and the rest all moving and Fitzgerald was rewarded for his long labors by securing an excellent start.

Tillo was a shade in front when the flag fell, but Clayton was content to fall into a comfortable position on the rail, his position having been No. 2. Doggett shot to the front with Royal Stag and next came Peep o' Day. Semper Ego was last away and Imp. was next to him. Tragedian fell back to the last position, and just in front of him was Semper Ego and before the latter were the favorites, Ornament and Ben Holladay.

The first furlong was slow, 0:13 2-5, but the next was very fast, the time to the quarter being 0:25. Ogden was slipping away in front, going well within himself, as he swung into the back stretch. Royal Stag and Peep o' Day were still close up, while Imp had passed Royal Stag and Peep o' Day, the latter falling back into the ruck in evident distress. Meanwhile neither Taral nor Sloan had been taking matters easy with the favorites. They both saw that they had to improve their positions if they were to be anything but on-lookers. But work as they could, the pace makers seemed to be going too fast for them. The three furlongs were run in 0:38 2-5, the half in 0:51, the five furlongs in 1:03 and the six furlongs in 1:16. Ornament never did improve his position, but gradually Ben Holladay drew away from him a little.

Into the stretch swung Ogden a length in the lead and still going strong to all appearances. But at his heels was Tillo, who had raced up to and passed Imp, who was tiring to nothing. Then came Don de Oro, with Sims' whip going like a flail, and then Ben Holladay, on whom Taral had been busy for a quarter of a mile. Semper Ego was sixth. Royal Stag and Peep o' Day, their bolts being shot, had fallen back to the far rear.

Through the stretch it was a three-horse race. So well had Ogden been going it was a surprise to see Hamilton go to the whip on him comparatively early. Many blamed Hamilton for his finish, but he says that when straightened for home he found Ogden had nothing left to finish with. It was a hard task anyhow for the pacemaker to stall off the challenges of two horses—Tillo and Semper Ego. The latter came from the ruck like a whirlwind, and was going the fastest of the trio at the finish. From the furlong pole home it was nip and tuck, each jockey flogging for dear life. Clayton rode the strongest finish, as was to be expected, for he is a splendid horseman, and got the verdict by half a length. Ogden hung on gallantly, and a few strides from home looked like securing the place, but Semper Ego's rush was irresistible and the decision was a head in his favor.

Behind the placed horses came a woeeful procession. Three lengths away from Ogden was Don de Oro, then Ben Holladay, Imp and Peep o' Day, and in a bunch by themselves, huddled up in hopeless plight, were Ornament, Tragedian, Havoc and Royal Stag.

The times for the latter part of the race were: Seven furlongs, 1:28 3-5; mile, 1:41; mile an eighth, 1:55, and the full distance in 2:08 1-5.

The pace was not extraordinarily severe at any one part, though the time of the entire race was creditable, considering the condition of the going. That the race was satisfactory or carried out expectations is not to be said. The best horse may have won, but the delay at the post was killing on the top weights. Ornament and Ben Holladay, furthermore, wore themselves out to a great extent by their fractiousness. That either Ben Holladay, Ornament or Imp ran their proper races is incredible, and were the race to be run over again half a dozen times the result would probably never again be the same.

Following are the positions occupied by the horses at different stages of the race:

Starters, Weight, Jockeys.	St. 1/2	Str. Fin.
Tillo, 119 (Clayton) .....	1 5 2 1 1/2
Semper Ego, 103 (Maher) .....	10 10 6 2 3
Ogden, 109 (Hamilton) .....	4 1 1 1 1 3
Don de Oro, 115 (Sims) .....	5 7 4 4
Ben Holladay, 123 (Taral) .....	9 8 5 5
Imp, 104 (Clawson) .....	8 6 3 6

THE WINNER AND A SHORT HISTORY OF THE RACE.

Tillo, now a four-year-old, was a good colt last year, out of twelve starts winning seven races, running second in two races, third three times, therefore being "in the money" every time he started. He ran a mile and an eighth in 1:54 1/2 at Latonia, 125 lbs. up, a mile in 1:41 at same place, 122 lbs. up; mile and a furlong in 1:53 1/2, 102 lbs. up; at a mile and a quarter, run in 2:07, was beaten two lengths by Rensselaer (116), Tillo carrying 124 lbs.; won the Oceanview Handicap at Brooklyn with 118 lbs. up, mile and a sixteenth, defeating Imperator, Rensselaer, Dr. Catlett, Howard S. and others, and beat the Brooklyn Handicap winner, Sir Walter, and others at a mile and a sixteenth over the Brooklyn track. This season he had run third, won and run unplaced, his win being at a mile, with 126 lbs. up, over Morris Park track in 1:41 1/2, defeating a good field.

Tillo's breeding is very "taking" to the pedigree student, though he is inbred to a marked degree. We note that Tillo has two crosses of imp. Phaeton (sire of Ten Broeck King Alfonso, &c.) in the third remove, two crosses of Faugh-a-Ballagh, two of Lexington and no less than four of Glencoe. Little wonder that Tillo is a high-class race horse! He is one by inheritance, his sire being Leonatus (winner of all his races as a three-year-old, ten in number and unquestionably the best of his age in America), his dam Puritan Lass, by Spendthrift, the best race horse of his day and the sire of the champion, Kingston, as well as the record-breaker, Lamplighter. Leonatus' sire was the mighty Longfellow (the greatest race horse of his time), his dam Semper Felix (a half-sister to Fairplay, Blanche J., Quito, Cortez and Maria D., latter grandam of Ornament), by imp. Phaeton (sire of Ten Broeck, Lisbon, Aramis and King Alfonso). The second dam of Tillo was Phoebe Mayflower (dam of Masterpiece, Eva Rogers, Bennett and Silver Prince) by imp. Phaeton (spoken of above), Phaeton by King Tom (sire of three winners of the Oaks and of King Ban and Great Tom, successful sires in America). In the third generation, besides two crosses of Phaeton, we find the blood of imp. Leamington (for many years the champion sire of America), Nantura (great race mare and dam of Longfellow, whose get won $1,400,000), Crucifix (dam of half a dozen superior race horses), Aerolite (dam of Rutherford, Fellowcraft, Miser and Spendthrift) and imp. Cicily Jopson, by Weatherbit. In the fourth generation there will be found lots of blood of such good sires as Faugh-a-Ballagh, Lexington (two crosses), King Tom (two crosses), Brawn's Eclipse, West Australian and Weatherbit, so that he has stout backing surely. Following is the pedigree of Tillo:

TILLO, b, c, 4 (2)	Puritan Lass	Phoebe Mayflower	Spendthrift	Semper Felix	Longfellow (26)	Imp. Leamington .....	Faugh-a-Ballagh (11)
						Nantura .....	Daughter of Pantaloon (17)

The race has been run thirteen times, and four-year-olds have been successful no less than ten times, five-year-olds four times and a six-year-old once. This goes far to prove that a horse is at its best as a four-year-old. A California-bred horse (Montana) won the event in 1892 and imported horses flashed in front at the finish on two occasions. Salvator, now in California, and owned by an old Californian, ran the best race from a time and weight standpoint. Gen. Monroe's race was the slowest, considering the track was put down as "fast." Troubadour and Eurus won in the mud. Three times there were twenty starters, but there had been a remarkable dwindling in the size of the fields since 1888. Two real champions were winners of the race—Salvator and Henry of Navarre. The victories of Eurus, Elkwood, Loantaka and imp. Lowlander were great surprises. Lowlander was as good as 300 to 1 once in the winter books, yet in a review in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN early in February, 1893, "Rezo!" declared that Lowlander had the best chance at the weights, considering his performances in 1892. A three-year-old has never been better than second in the race in all these years, and it will take a rare good one to win the race. Foxhall is one of the very few three-year-olds that ever captured any of the big English handicaps, and in Australia Newhaven and Wallace were exceptions.

It is to be regretted that most of the racing associations throughout the country impose a penalty for wins in the various Derbies. In doing so they fail to settle the three-year-old championship of America. When a colt wins the Kentucky Derby, for instance, and moves up to run for the Oakley Derby, he is forced to take up a five-pound penalty or carry 127 lbs., and some gelding that has never won a stake gets a five-pound allowance and romps home with his 114 lbs. up, just as Han d'Or did this year with Plaudit and just as Pink Coat did at St. Louis when pitted against Plaudit. That the latter is the best colt most people assume to believe, but whether they are or are not right in their assumption will perhaps never be known. Such a thing as penalties for stake wins in the the three-year-old division should never be allowed, likewise allowances for not having finished first in a stake race. There is no penalty attached to winning the Derby, Oaks or St. Leger in England, and it is therefore not hard to determine which is the best three-year-old of a particular season. In this country, owing to this penalty-and-allowance calculation-killing contrivance, we are kept in the dark as to the capabilities of our two and three-year-olds, and we will experience delight when the racing clubs throughout the land cut penalties and allowances out of the conditions of two and three year-old stake events. Then we should know whether Ben Brush, Ornament and Plaudit were the champions of their respective years or not. There is also a scarcity in this country of weight-for-age races at the longer distances, and we would like to see our local clubs inaugurate a two and a quarter mile ("cup distance") race, to be run either the last week in November or the last week in April, where the contestants—four-year-olds and upward—would be called upon to carry their entitled weight for age, no more and no less. If $7,500 to $10,000 were hung up there would be a notable list of entries, and if both clubs had races of this description and the same horse was victorious the champion "cup horse" of this section would be known. Two and a quarter miles is a distance to the liking of race-goers, too, and such races would, in consequence, be drawing cards of the finest description. We are glad to note the action of the C. J. C. in doing away with the $1,000 and $1,200 races dignified with the name "stake." The managers saw that these races did not draw the crowds while drawing money out of the pockets of the stockholders, and wisely concluded to have a few number of stake events and an increase in the amounts added to those offered to the owners of the flyers. That the change will be one beneficial in many ways we feel certain, and interest will be centered in the stake races from this time forth, as it should be. A turfman can hereafter afford to save his horse for a particular event and have the flyer trained to the hour, as it should be. Besides, the paper will discuss the chances of the contestants for weeks in advance, and if "future" books were opened on these races even more interest would be felt—a financial as well as a sentimental one. The "future" book makes the Melbourne Cup what it is—of interest to nearly every man, woman and child in Australia—for all have their "bit" upon the outcome and turn out to see the "run for their money." What can be accomplished in Melbourne can be done here, and our clubs can well afford to pattern after their cousins of the Colonies.

Answers to Correspondents.

W. G., Los Gatos, Cal.—Will you kindly inform me through your paper on the breeding of Buffalo Girl, also the breeding of the stallion Boots? Give day, month and year foaled and breeding back for five dams. Answer—Buffalo Girl, b m, foaled 1873, by Pocahontas Boy 1790, dam K. J. Freeman, by Tom Hall 3000. Her record is 2:12 1/2, pacing made at Buffalo, N. Y., August 3, 1882. Boots was a bay horse, foaled in 1878 (the exact date of his foaling we cannot state), by imp. Hercules, dam Emma Barnes, by Norfolk; second dam Evadne, by Winnebago; third dam, Maid of Athens, by imp. Priam; fourth dam, Lady Chesterfield, by Arab; fifth dam by imp. Knowsley, &c.

WANTAGE, second in the 2,000 guineas this year, is by Sheen, out of Satchel (grandam of imp. Sain), by Galopin. Sain is now owned by Barney Schreiber.

PRESSURE of business affairs has forced Col. W. S. Barnes to the conclusion that he cannot spare the time to act as presiding judge on the Montana Circuit, though he had given a provisional consent to do so some time back. It is a matter of strong regret to Col. Barnes because of his strong desire to oblige his friend Ed Tipton.—Racing Form.

Saddle Notes.

BANGLE (by Iroquois—Bracelet), a good colt last year, was a winner at Latonia on the 15th inst.

HANLIGHT, a recent winner at Latonia, is a half-brother to McLight, being by Hanover out of Longlight.

TOMMY BUTLER, the San Jose featherweight, who can do 80 pounds, has been riding at the Denver meeting.

LOUIS EZELL'S Espirage won the Banner Stakes at Detroit last Saturday, McCarren second, Pell Mell third.

JOHNNY WOODS, the little Californian, rode Loving Cup to a six-furlong victory at a good price last Monday, at St. Louis.

BONEY BOY, a recent winner at Harlem, is by "Virginia" Bradley's "iron horse," Blitzen, out of Sue B., and belongs to Mrs. Bradley.

DON CLARENCIO won a mile and a furlong race at Detroit last Saturday in 1:55, which is probably pretty close to the Highland Park track record.

BARON DE ROTHSCHILD, who won 200,000 francs by the victory of Le Roi Soliel in the Grand Prix de Paris, has given his winnings to the poor of Paris.

RICHARD J., the Morello—Bonnie Leaf colt, won again last Saturday at Harlem—six furlongs in 1:14½. It was a mere gallop for him. Bellicoso ran third.

THERE are very few thoroughbreds in training in California at this writing, the owners of flyers having shipped to the far East, Middle West, Montana and Oregon.

COVINGTON KY. won the first race at Latonia, June 16th, beating a field of twelve. He is a chestnut colt by El Rio Rey, out of Hypatica (half-sister to Iroquois) by imp. Woodlands.

It is reported from the far East that W. B. Sink Jr., has refused an offer of $12,500 for his Conveth colt, Formore. This is pretty good for a two-year-old that cost but $360 as a yearling.

FLYING DUTCHMAN, who was recently retired, is at the Runnymede Stud. He arrived too late to make a regular season, though three mares have been bred to him—Thoroughbred Record.

MR. J. N. CAMDEN JR., has sold to Mr. T. C. McDowell, of Lexington, the chestnut colt (full brother to Her Excellency), by imp. Esher out of Excellenza, by Excel.—Thoroughbred Record.

LEONATUS died last week in Kentucky, and on Saturday the great Suburban Handicap at Sheepshead Bay and the $12,000 Derby at St. Louis, Mo., were won by Tillo and Pink Coat, sons of Leonatus.

W. H. TIMMONS, who created no little excitement here last winter by running up horses in selling races, has transferred his string to John Delong at Harlem (Chicago) and departed for the far East.

MARCUS DALY'S good English-bred horse, Isidor, has rounded into shape, and last Monday he won the Grass Inaugural at Coney Island, beating a fair lot of sprinters at six furlongs. His forte is a distance, too.

FRANK JAUBERT, who raced here during the winter-spring season of 1896-1897 in Alex. Shields' colors, won a mile and a half race at Highland Park, Detroit, last Monday, beating Royal Choice, Don Clarencio and others in 2:37½.

SHIELDFARER, well remembered here when he raced in Frank Phillips' colors, won a six furlong race at St. Louis June 16th at odds of 100 to 1. H. Wilson, who rode here considerably, piloted the winner, who ran in the colors of E. F. Smith. Can that be our "Daggie?"

PINK COAT, the bay colt by Leonatus—Alice Brand won the $12,000 St. Louis Derby last Saturday; ridden by Willie Martin. Plaudit, who was conceding a lot of weight, was beaten a length easily. It is now quite apparent that Mad-den's colt is not the "phenom" he was cracked up to be.

WHEN Charley Thorpe arrived in Chicago from Whiting, Ia., late last week he weighed 117 lbs. in his clothes, but declared his ability to "do" 102 lbs., by the next afternoon, or less than thirty-six hours thereafter. He went on to St. Louis to ride Bannockburn for McGuigan in the $12,000 Derby, winding up third.

WILLIAM FITCH, the well-known bookmaker and auctioneer who spent last winter in California, has been booking at the Toronto, Hamilton and Detroit meetings, and writes us that he has held his own. He leaves shortly for Butte, Mont., where his voice will probably be heard in the auction box. He officiated there last season.

MESSRS. JAMES BURKE and John Brenock, stockholders of the Chicago Racing Association, owners of Hawthorne track, applied for an injunction, June 15th, to restrain Ed Corrigan, J. Milton Davis, Harry Kuhl, Richard Fitzgerald and J. Noonan from disposing of the association's property. Judge Ball granted a temporary injunction.

B. C. HOLLY has been employing a boy named Blair as a rider at Denver, and the lad has done good work. Another boy that has been in the saddle for the Floden turfman was Derby, who piloted two winners for him on the 14th inst. and also rode Jim Gore to victory for another man. It was a case of three mounts and three wins. He is indeed a Derby-winner.

AT the third and last day's sale of J. B. Haggin's yearlings, held at Sheepshead Bay on the morning of June 20th, those selling for $500 and upwards are: Brown colt by imp. Watereress—Sabrina, H. Theobald, $1,600; chestnut colt by imp. Watereress—Rosalind, J. Murphy, $1,100; bay colt by imp. Sir Modred—Schoolgirl, H. Theobald, $2,100; chestnut colt by imp. Golden Garter—Shasta, A. J. Joyner, $500; bay colt by imp. Goldfinch—Springlike, G. D. Wilson, $1,500; brown colt by imp. Artillery—Venture, W. Lakeland, $500; chestnut filly by imp. Goldfinch—Yum-Yum, W. L. Powers, $1,600; bay colt by Chorister—Zodiac, W. Lakeland, $775.

THE Watereress and Goldfinch colts were in great demand at the Rancho del Paso sale on the 17th, 18th and 20th in New York. Several of the English horses went over the $1,000 mark. Burns & Waterhouse were heavy purchasers.

THIS season's Rancho del Paso sale of thoroughbred yearlings is the best had for many years, and shows that The Jockey Club has done good work and made gallopers worth what they are, to a great extent—this, through building on a solid foundation. While the full details of the sale are not to hand, we believe the average for the 129 head offered will be over $800—certainly satisfactory.

TORSION won a five and a half furlong race for By Holly last Saturday at Denver. The string of the veteran and that of Ned Lannigan, the political boss, are nearly even on wins, and will probably rank one-two on the winning owners' list at the end of the season to day. Rubicon made a new track record at five furlongs (1:01) and Lucky Star at seven furlongs over the inside course—1:29.

PRINCE PONIATOWSKI of San Francisco was at Harlem yesterday. He has a farm at Burlingame, and Magnet is at the head of the stud. The Prince has five two-year-olds by St. Carlo, which he expects to race in the East this year. Two of them, St. Kristine and Tenebrae, are at Harlem in charge of Jimmy Coffey, who trains Dr. Rowell's horses.—Daily Racing Form, Chicago, June 18th.

AT the second day's racing at Ascot Heath (June 15th) Leopold de Rothschild's four-year-old colt Jaquemart won the Royal Hunt Cup, value 500 sovereigns, with 1500 sovereigns added. Twenty horses ran, including James R. Keene's bay colt St. Cloud II and the Lorillard-Beresford stable's chestnut colt Berzak. H. I. Higham's chestnut colt Foston was second and Reid Walker's six-year old brown horse Dinna Forget third.

"BROAD CHURCH" says in the Spirit: "Speaking of Clawson, he is a great little lightweight, the best of his pounds now in the West. He can ride at 88 lbs., and his work at Harlem has been nothing short of gilt-edged. By common consent he outrode W. Martin in a two-year-old race on Thursday. Cambrian should have won, but as it turned out, Santello, ridden by Clawson, got there first. Clawson is in the employ of Sam Hildreth."

THE American Turf Congress is opposed to the practice which some owners have of using initials or numerals for names of their horses. The following is the rule on the subject which might well be adopted by the Jockey Club next winter: "Neither initials or numerals will be considered or accepted as a name for horses foaled after December 31, 1896." The rule is a good one and will put a check upon a practice which is annoying not only to the Secretaries, but to the public as well.

TRAINER MCCORMICK looks pretty well, better than could be expected of a man who almost reached the verge of the grave during his severe sickness last year. His case has been referred to by the medical journals as an almost exceptional one—the recovery of a man whom death had well-nigh claimed as his own. Blood poisoning was the trouble, and its aggravated development necessitated surgical operations that almost cut the patient to pieces—desperate remedies for a desperate case. At that, it looks just now as if Mac will live for many years in the new century.—"Broad Church."

ED PUER, the well known plunger, appeared at Overland yesterday, and will likely remain through the meeting, if he finds things to his liking. He spent most of yesterday getting pointers on the horses and making a few bets to see how it seemed to go. He took all the field bets against Fortuna, which turned out bad investments. His most famous betting feat was in New York, where he took in $23,000 on one race. He is a tall, fine appearing young man with a clean-cut and intelligent face, and is a good hand at storytelling and is an excellent listener.—Denver News, June 15.

R. E. DE B. LOPEZ, of Pleasanton, has bred his young Merriwale, Kayula, to imp. Cliveden, and declares that if the foal should be a colt and live he should have both a high-class race horse and a sire of great ability. He bases this upon the fact that the youngster would have three crosses of Yattendon and four of Stockwell, two of the latter received through Blair Athol, the greatest son of "the Emperor of Stallions." Imp. Cliveden is by Yattendon out of Lady Chester, by Stockwell. Kayula's sire, imp. Merriwale, is by Goldsbrough, out of Habana, by Yattendon, her dam Atholene, by Blair Athol. Luna, the dam of Kayula, is by Sweet William (son of Yattendon and Lady Hooton, by Stockwell); second dam Latona, by Epigram (son of Blair Athol).

CHARLES T. PATTERSON has bought of Mrs. E. F. Clay the yearling full sister to Ben Brush. This filly is a brown (a shade darker than Brush), with stripe in her face, while Brush has only a small star. She is, however, strikingly like her great brother in conformation and action. Col. Clay presented the filly when a suckling to his wife, and she was sold as Mrs. Clay's personal property. Col. Ernest Marx, the animal photographer, and a warm personal friend of Mr. Patterson, has suggested for this filly the name Benita Brush. Mr. Patterson has also bought of Col. W. S. Barnes the chestnut colt Prince of Melbourne, by Bramble out of Maid of Balgown, by Hindoo; second dam the great mare Ballet by Planet. Col. Barnes thinks so highly of this colt that he was anxious for him to bear the name of his farm.—Thoroughbred Record.

QUITE a number of runners arrived at Irvington the past week, mostly from California, and there are several more carloads on the way. Among those who arrived are M. D. Miller's horses Metaire, Senator Morrill and Barnato. R. Morris' Navy Blue and Tennessee; Sandy McNoct's Ping, Fred Hancock's The Dragon, Mr. Bullock's Laura Lee; Tug Wilson's Scorchier and Roy Carruthers; Emmett Dolan's Howard, Lee Kylo and Nervoso; Arthur Harrison's Walter J. and Wenoms; A. Powell's La France; Jake Krouse's Gold Bug and Kitty Brady; Henry Brown's Oahu; Frank Starkey's Jim Bozeman Santa Paula, Bottle Washer and Much Love, a two-year-old; Chas. Spooner's Socco; W. P. Fine's Tortoise and Uncle True; Penn Moore's Sardou; A. C. Calkin's Commission, J. L. Crook's New Moon; Jack Burns' Jim Brownell; Lee Shaner's George Palmer, Florimel, Little T. G., Alcatraz, Miss Remsen, Dunraise, Red Spinner and Pescador.—Rural Spirit.

IT now seems certain that, among others, the following bookmakers will cut in at Washington Park, says the Inter-Ocean: George Rose, Barney Schreiber, C. O. Smith, Bob Rose, W. E. Applegate, W. H. Laudemann, C. S. Bush, Dave Gideon, J. D. Seagram, A. J. Levy, Phil Archibald, Harry Perry, Jack Newman, Riley Grannan, Joe Ullman, George Bennett, Harry Holland, Ike Thompson, Marsh Redon, Pete Riley, George North, Joe Rose, John Humphrey, Maxey Blumenthal, Ben Falk, John Coleman. Besides those named, a number of others, enough, it is thought, to swell the number to thirty five, will "cut in."

CAPTAIN J. H. REES, who presided so capably in the judges' stand at Oakley at the recent meeting, was at Latonia yesterday. He is authority for the statement that he has been engaged as presiding judge for the meeting which will be held at Hawthorne, Chicago, this summer. Captain Rees also stated that he has been engaged to fill the position by Barney Schreiber, one of the promoters of the meeting. The meeting at Hawthorne will probably follow that of Washington Park. James Caldwell, who handled the flag at Oakley, is slated for the startship at Hawthorne. There is now but little doubt that there will be a meeting at Hawthorne this summer. Ed Corrigan, while here last week, announced that the Hawthorne track would run this summer, and the engagement of Rees and Caldwell is another straw which shows the way the wind is blowing in Chicago turf circles.—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

TOM LANDREGAN'S scheme to open poolrooms at Emeryville received scant consideration last Monday night at the meeting of the Town Trustees of Emeryville. The committee report was adverse and the Board adopted it by a unanimous vote. An application from Landregan to build a race track was speedily tabled and the Board adjourned. Half of the residents of Emeryville were present at the meeting. Landregan did not succumb without a hard fight. He took A. L. Frick out to help him, but Frick failed to make any impression on the Trustees. President W. H. Christie was in the chair and Trustees J. S. Emery, W. Fieldwick and F. J. Stoer in their places. Trustee J. T. Doyle was absent. When the committee report on the petition was read, Frick presented Landregan's argument. Trustee Fieldwick replied briefly that poolrooms would attract to the town a very undesirable class of people, and could not for a moment be tolerated. Without further ado the Board voted solidly to reject Landregan's petition. Frick then asked if an application for another race track would be granted. President Christie replied that if it were made in good faith it would, but a race as a subterfuge for a poolroom would not meet with favor. Thereupon Frick made a written application for a permit to build a track for contesting the speed of horses, dogs and other animals, which shall be neither a merry-go-round nor whirlingig. President Christie remarked that there was no evidence of good faith, and, on motion of Fieldwick, the petition was laid on the table. Emery alone voted no, explaining that he wanted the matter referred to the Ordinance and Judiciary Committee.

AFTER discussing the merits of Newhaven and other Australian racers in England, "Ranger" had the following to say regarding the use of the blood of Australian horses: "At the same time I am a firm believer in using Australian sires, and in some cases, perhaps, mares as well, in this country, to strengthen the parent stock. They are identically the same blood as our own, it must be remembered, only the difference of climate and perhaps treatment, have produced a slightly different and in some ways a superior type of animal. Two hundred years of breeding for speed alone has evolved in this country a breed of horses which, as mere racing machines, have no equal, or at any rate, no superior, in the world; but this has been brought about at much sacrifice of soundness, stamina and courage. The Australian thoroughbred, on the other hand, is essentially a sound, stout and brave hearted animal, so that certainly a little infusion of his blood, with its attendant good qualities, into our speedy, spindly-legged and hysterical breed could not help to be an advantage. And in this connection I am reminded that I have just seen two good yearlings at the Beenham Stud by the Australian sires Carbine and Carnage, respectively; and I certainly advise all yearling buyers not only to go and see Mr. Waring's youngsters, who are a really good-looking and beautifully-bred lot, before they are sent up to Ascot to be sold during the race week, but to look especially at the two I have just mentioned. And while I am on the subject I may also state that Mr. Waring's yearlings this year are a remarkably well-grown, big-boned lot, the best I can remember to have ever seen from this stud, which turns out more winners from time to time, than people generally seem to think of. There is also a beautiful foal by imp. Trenton among those I have lately seen here."

THE Washington Park Club yesterday sent word to Latonia, St. Louis, and New York advising bookmakers operating thereabouts that there would be open bookmaking at the swell local course. The causes leading up to this determination on the part of the Washington Park Jockey Club are easily traced. Chicago race-goers have had a try at and a surfeit of the syndicate system of betting. With a population of close on 2,000,000, the Harlem race track, where the syndicate system obtains, has averaged less than 2,500 attendance a day. The Harlem management in an effort to justify the syndicate system puts forward the plea that under the recent Turf Congress ruling, providing for not less than $400 purse, it is impossible to make a race track pay—unless the betting is controlled and the odds kept within bounds. This may or may not be so. Patent, however, is it that Chicago wants none of it. * * *

THE Board of Stewards of the Washington Park Club, at a meeting Sunday afternoon, determined on the course taken yesterday, notifying bookmakers throughout the country that competitive bookmaking would be the system at Washington Park. There will be no public exhibition of prices—that is to say, there will be no slates displayed with the odds marked upon them. As on the Eastern tracks, each bookmaker "on the dead line" will be supplied with the racing cards of the day, printed on cardboard slips four inches wide by eight inches long, with margins on either side, and these will be slipped into little wooden contrivances with handles. Mr. Jones, who wants to make a bet, will go up to Mr. Brown, and will be handed a little incased slip with the prices—straight, place and show. If the prices suit, he will hand up his money and the bet will be registered. If not, Mr. Jones will go to Mr. Smith, Mr. Johnson, or anybody else in the line.—Chicago Inter Ocean. Clearly there is much in the old saying, "Competition is the life of trade."

Notice—Change of Ownership.

Owing to business interests which will require my constant attention in the East, I have disposed of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to Mr. Frederick W. Kelley, of this city. Mr. Kelley has been so closely associated with the publication in the past that I am confident the paper will continue to improve in every respect and maintain the position it has always occupied as the leading organ of its kind on the Pacific Coast.

In severing my connection with the paper I desire to express my thanks to its patrons for their support, and respectfully solicit a continuation for my successor.

All accounts due the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN are payable to Mr. Kelley, who does not assume any obligations due from the paper prior to this date.

JUDSON K. MOORE.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20, 1898.

If there has been any one thing which more than all others has kept alive the vital spark of the horse-breeding industry during the last few years of depression, it has been the weekly journal devoted to that and kindred interests. When panic seemed to have stricken a majority of horse owners, and they were tumbling over each other trying to get from under the walls which they were convinced would surely fall and cover them, the journals devoted to the breeding interest stepped to the front and assured the frightened breeders that not one who had built his structure on a solid foundation had cause for fear that the temblor would do it any material damage. It was at times very hard for a journal to stand, in the face of lessening receipts and unpaid subscriptions, and boldly express hope for the present and faith in the future, but they did it, and the revival in the horse industry is proving that there were solid reasons for their faith, and in the business sure to come to them in the future they will reap their reward. No journal has fought harder during the depression than the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, which in season and out of season has been to the front in the upbuilding of the great industry of horse breeding, in this, the country of all others on earth best adapted to that pursuit. This year is rapidly developing the theory that in the future two-thirds of the great States beyond the Mississippi will come to California for their light harness and other horses, as well as for their supplies of live stock of all kinds. This is the breeders' paradise, and we hold that it is the duty of every person engaged in that business on this Coast to lend his aid in some manner to the journal which is constantly toiling to uphold and upbuild that interest. While the district fairs, so long one of the great aids to the improvement and sale of well-bred live stock of all kinds, have, through adverse action, been stopped entirely this year, the probabilities are that next year will see them restored, and if the breeders, in co-operation with this journal, will make a united and intelligent effort to that end there is no question but the district fair will in 1899 be a feature of the State's progress, and the good times once enjoyed be fully restored. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN'S extensive circulation all over the East is a particular reason why every horse breeder in California should be represented in its columns. It will be the policy of this paper to labor assiduously and energetically in the interest of the breeders of this Coast and it asks that its hands be upheld by such patronage and good will as it deserves. We believe that with the assistance of those interested in the horse industry, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN can accomplish results in the future that will be of actual benefit to every person interested in any manner in the progress and stability of the business. We shall in any event make an earnest effort to do our part.

WHEN the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association opens its summer meeting at the beautiful grounds of the California Jockey Club at Oakland to-day history will be made in the light harness affairs of this State. After nine years of existence the Association will this year enter upon a new era in its life, having recently incorporated under the laws of the State, and at this, the first meeting given since making that change, the system of racing is to undergo a radical reformation, and many new methods are to be given a trial. Since its incorporation the P. C. T. H. B. A. has been a progressive organization, and its Board of Directors have been ever ready to do all in their power to uphold the horse breeding interests and adopt any plans that seemed likely to benefit horse owners.

In accordance with these principles the Association this year canceled all the old bills for unpaid entrance which were on its books prior to 1897, amounting to many thousands of dollars, and there are neither persons nor horses now under suspension for unpaid entrance money due the P. C. T. H. B. A. except for sums contracted last year. In obedience to what seemed a universal desire for a change of methods that would do away with the long drawn contests which have been the bane of trotting meetings heretofore in this State, the Association decided to make a radical departure and have adopted the dash system for both trotting and pacing races. Four or more of these dashes will be given each day, the distance being one mile, and in addition one race of heats, best two in three, will be on the card.

Then instead of the old system of auction pools and Paris mutuels, which for years has been about the only means of laying a wager on trotting tracks, there are to be bookmakers, and odds will be written against each and every horse in the race. It has been demonstrated here in California that the public has a preference for the books, and where bookmakers, auctioneers and Paris mutuel boxes have been ranged side by side, as at the State Fair, the books have had nine-tenths of the play. Recognizing this fact, though not necessarily endorsing the booking system, the Breeders Association has this year decided to allow books to be made at their meeting. There will be no mutuel boxes, but an auctioneer will be on hand to sell pools to those who desire to make their own odds and pay a percentage of five per cent. for the privilege. In short, the methods employed on the running tracks which have proven so popular and drawn the crowds, are to be adopted and carried out at this summer meeting of the harness horses. From the interest that is being shown it looks as though this the opening day will see a larger crowd at the Oakland track than has been seen at a trotting meeting in California for years, and if the officers can carry out their intention of having none but honest racing, quick action, no delays and strict enforcement of the rules, we predict that the light harness horse will soon regain his former position as a popular idol in California, as the vast crowds which now assemble at the numerous meetings in the East prove he has again reached there.

NOTHING is more certain than that the doctrine of "the survival of the fittest" is being exemplified in the horse breeding industry in this country and especially in California this year. The depression which began in 1893, resulting partly from financial conditions and partly from an overproduction of horses unfit for the work they were intended by their breeders to perform, finally resulted, as such movements generally do, in a panic, and horse owners rushed to the market everything and anything in the shape of a horse that they considered was better sold than kept. All the culls of the old breeding farms went to the retired list, and from there when times continued to grow harder and feed scarcer to the salesring, the huckster wagon and the creamatory. In Southern California, where the hay crop has been particularly light this year, and pasturage scarcely obtainable, thousands of horses have been killed and their flesh rendered into chicken feed. It is perhaps a good thing for the horse industry, and the improvement of the noble breed that such a state of facts exist. The ranks of the skates have been so depleted during the past few years that they will not be able to reproduce themselves in such numbers as in former times, while the horse breeders have learned a lesson from the past and will be more strict in demanding that sire and dam shall have the proper qualifications before deciding to mate them that they may bring forth after their kind. There is no great loss but brings with it a small gain, and the losses to individuals who made heavy investments in horse flesh during boom times will be offset by the vast improvement in the average quality of the horses that are left to perpetuate the race.

Col. Park Henshaw.

The gentleman whose likeness appears above has been commissioned Colonel of the new regiment of California Volunteers now being mustered in in response to a call of the President. He was Colonel of the fifth regiment of this State for several years, during which time, owing to his energetic work and military acumen, it became the crack regiment of the State. He is one of the most popular horsemen of the Coast, being a Director of the P. C. T. H. B. A. and the owner of Mamie Griffin, 2:12½, and many other well-bred trotters and pacers.

THAT there is a demand for good horses at the present time is evidenced by the fact that there is now in this city Mr. David Seligman of New York, a gentleman who has purchased and shipped to the European markets many of the fastest trotters and champion carriage horses exported during the past ten years. He came to this State for the purpose of buying horses to ship to Europe, and is ready to pay a fair price for such animals as will come up to his requirements. He wishes fast animals with records, and they must be sound, stylish, well trained and good-gaited. Horses that can trot in three minutes or better that have no records, if they possess the above requirements, will also be purchased. Mr. Seligman is buying for gentlemen who are critical, and as he is a shrewd judge of a horse himself, he knows just what he wants. Parties that have animals that come up to the requirements of the European market will be placed in communication with Mr. Seligman if they will send to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN a description of the animals they have for sale.

ENTRIES for the five fixed events for trotters and pacers at the Los Angeles meeting do not close to-day, but on Monday next, the 27th of June. Now, don't forget this, and bear in mind the fact that these purses are all $1,000 each and the entrance fee is but three per cent. If you have thirty dollars and the best horse you can win a thousand dollars. The Los Angeles meeting will be one of the best held this year in the United States, as the purses will be large for both runners and harness horses and the attendance—well, we all know what crowds turn out to the races in the City of the Angels. Read the conditions in the advertisement and send your entry to Secretary Lewis Thorne, accompanied with the coin.

ON Monday last the sixty-four yearling colts and fillies bred at the famous Belle Meade Farm, to be sold at Sheepshead Bay, New York, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, were shipped from Nashville and landed at Jersey City on Wednesday morning, thence proceeding by float and road to the Easton Company's paddocks at Sheepshead Bay. This gave those interested a week in which to inspect these sons and daughters of Iroquois, Great Tom, Loyalist, Inspector B., Longstreet, Luke Blackburn, Tremont, Top Gallant, Clarendon and Dandie Dimont; and intending buyers could then judge for themselves as to the individual merits of these youngsters.

THIS is the last call for the Minnesota State Fair Entries. The program is published in the advertising columns of this paper and the entries close next Saturday, July 2d. The purses are very liberal and there is an opportunity to win big money. E. W. Randall is the Secretary and his address is Hamline, Minn., where the meeting will be given.

For a Change of Rules.

A meeting of the members of the San Francisco Kennel Club will take place at the Occidental Hotel next Wednesday evening. Action will be taken tending to bring together a meeting of representatives of show and specialty clubs on the Pacific Coast, which latter meeting it is proposed to hold on or about July 27th. The purpose of the July meeting will be to formulate and agree upon a set of rules acceptable to the majority of fanciers particularly interested. Should such understanding be arrived at, the matter will be submitted to the American Kennel Club for consideration and acceptance.

The Pacific Derby.

On July 1st the entries for the Pacific Coast Derby, to be run next January will close. Indications point to the large entry of a promising lot of pointers and setters, including a few from the East, who are heralded as coming cracks. The grounds this year over which the trials will take place show at present every promise of being in far better condition than those worked over last January. The location selected has every natural advantage in favor of bringing out the best results in field trial competition. This tract has been set aside for the exclusive use of the club and will not be used for pasture nor disturbed in any manner, thus ensuring a sufficient number of birds and providing good cover for them.

Manitoba Field Trials.

The Northwestern Field Trials Club will hold their annual Champion Stake on September 12, 1898, near Winnipeg, Manitoba. This stake is open to any pointer or setter that has won first or second prize in any field trial. The club's patron, Edward Dexter, Esq., of Boston, Mass., has donated a magnificent trophy for the competition, it is claimed, one of the most valuable ever given for a field trial. The trophy and the club's engrossed and illuminated diploma go unconditionally to the winner. There will be no entry or starter's fees in this stake, everything being free to contestants. The club has no running rules. They will engage competent judges and instruct them to give every dog a thorough trial, but to give greatest credit to fast, wide ranging dogs that work to and for the gun; that are game finders and can handle their game in a high-class finished manner.

A notable representation of the coast kennels, heretofore mentioned in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will no doubt make a creditable showing in these trials. A letter received from Thos. Johnson, Esq., Honorable Secretary-Treasurer of the club, conveys the following additional information: "The Verona Kennels, purpose, I am informed, sending a string of dogs to compete in the Manitoba trials this fall. They will be warmly welcomed and will receive fair play, but no favors. You will note that our trial is simply for the glory and prestige such a win gives. We run the trials to encourage good breaking and to demonstrate what a high-class dog can do. Our club will see that every handler and dog gets an even chance in every respect. An amateur handler can do as well near as the best professional, if he has the material—our judges are specially instructed to judge the work of the dog—not the dog and handler—except to protect from jockeying and noise indulged in (or at least that used to be indulged in by certain handlers). If this is repeated at any of our trials then the dog will be made to suffer for the indiscreetness of the person handling him. We are in it for the love of the sport it gives and for nothing else, and we think in our trial the best dog always gets the prize.

A Great Run.

At Union Park last Sunday the longest course ever seen on an inclosed field in California was that between Blackette and Glen Roy. The hare took them all over the field until at the end the hare could hardly move and the dogs were run to a standstill. Both stopped together and Glen Roy fell to her haunches. The hare got into a brush escape and Blackette was picked up nearly dead, and was worked on all afternoon by Billy Trade and Billy Creamer and her life was barely saved.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Chas. Dresser recently sold a fine Newfoundland pup to J. W. West, of Soulsbyville, Tuolumne county, Cal.

L. C. Clawson purchased a promising fox terrier dog from Mr. Dresser last week.

In addition to developing interest in field sports, broadening men's views, dispelling antiquated and often erroneous ideas, encouraging breeders to turn out a higher grade of pointers and setters and affording an annual gathering for kindred spirits—in addition, we say, to these features, there is a great educational work to be performed by State field trial organizations. Sportsmen who have been reading the American Field for ten, fifteen or twenty years probably have forgotten their own verdant days, and it takes such a letter as the subjoined to bring them to a realization of the great opportunity for missionary work:

SELMA, IOWA, May 23, 1898.

F. H. PERRY, ESQ., DES MOINES, IOWA: I understand that there is going to be a race between Bird dogs some time this fall, and as I have the best all around dog in this part of the county I would like to run him provided I can get fair play now I called on William Elliot of Selma (who is said to be the leading Breeder of Pointers and setters in the state) a few days ago also brought along my dog to show him to see what he thought of him and also to see what his chances would be running in the Bird dog race but he would give me no encouragement and had the cheek to tell me that he was not good enough to make a respectable sausage although he gave me your address.

now the fact of the matter is He is afraid of my Dog and knows if I ran Him that His would not be in it mine is a very handsome setter although He shows a little of the shepherd but not enough to Hurt Him His Father was Imported but I cannot find out anything about His mother

He is the greatest all around Dog I ever saw and I would not take $500 00 for him now I have seen Elliotts dogs in the field and I would not trade my Tommy for the whole of His dogs put together

Tommys great Hold is Rabbits and He is not very slow on squirrels He will not stay as long on a point on quails as some dogs I have seen. But he just stays long enough to show you where the Birds are and then he will spring in and the Chances are even that he will catch one or two in his mouth

He is as nimble as a cat and I actually saw him last winter take after a partridge and run it down now I have not much money to throw away but if you think my Chances are good and will guarantee me fair play I will have my Dog entered and I will show Elliott that all his dogs put together would not make a respectable sausage How would you like a picture of Tommy

I had a few tintypes taken of Him last fall at the Eldon Fair and I have just one left which I will send to you if you say so.

Yours truly,

Such a letter positively beggars all comment. There is only one thing to do with a man like that, and that is to induce him to enter his dog and attend the trials. Unkind as it may appear on the surface, it would be kindness really, and if he is made of the right stuff he will quickly learn a lesson which in after years he will realize was worth more than all the dogs he ever saw.

The Stow Lake Contests.

Members of the San Francisco Fly-casting Club met at Stow Lake last Saturday and Sunday in competition during the events scheduled for the ninth of this season's series of contests. Whilst Champion Mansfield held first place in long distance casting during both days, the efforts of Dr. Lowry, H. C. Golcher, A. E. Lovett, H. E. Skinner and others were creditable. The scores and averages of the members who are regular in attendance at these contests are visibly increasing. A high wind on Sunday interfered with the casting materially, coming in gusts and frequently carrying a line thirty feet beyond the buoy and buoy line.

The tenth contest will take place on Saturday and Sunday July 16th and 17th. A business meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday evening, June 28th.

The scores for both days' fly-casting in detail were as follows:

For the Medal Contests.

The classification tables given below show the complete record of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club for the first seven contests of the club held at Stow Lake, Saturdays and Sundays on the following dates: First, Feb. 26th-27th; second, March 12th-13th; third, March 26th-27th; fourth April 23d-24th; fifth, April 30th-May 1st; sixth, May 7th-8th; seventh, May 22-June 4th.

These seven club contests determine the class standing of the fly-caster during the five concluding competitions of the club medal series. There are three fly-casting events in each contest: distance, distance and accuracy, and accuracy and delicacy.

In the first event there are three classes: First—the championship class, consisting of those who have averaged 95 per cent or more in the first seven contests; second—first class, composed of those who have averaged between 80 and 95 per cent; third—second class, consisting of those who have averaged less than 80 per cent.

In the second event there are two classes: First—the championship class, consisting of those who, during the first seven contests, have averaged 85 per cent or over; second—first class, who are those that have averaged less than 85 per cent.

In event number three are two classes, viz.: First—the championship class, those who average 80 per cent and over; second—the first class, consisting of those who during said contests average less than 80 per cent.

From and after the eighth contests the club was divided into the classes above mentioned, the members casting during the last five contests in the class or classes in which they have qualified.

After the twelve contests are finished, the winners in the respective classes of the Saturday contests and also the winners in the respective classes of the Sunday contests meet in competition for the club medals.

The following tables prepared by President W. D. Mansfield show the standing of the members entered in the seven contests mentioned and the percentage used as a basis for classification purposes.

The members (commencing with the eighth contest, June 4th-5th), have been classified as follows: For the Saturday contests: Event No. 1, Long distance. Championship class—Mansfield, Lowry, Golcher and Bacheller. First class—Lovett, Skinner, Muller, Mocker, Smyth and Young. Second class—Battu. Event No. 2, Distance and accuracy. Championship class—Mansfield, Low y, Golcher, Bacheller, Lovett, Skinner, Smyth, Young and Battu. First class—Muller, Mocker and Hibbard. Event No. 3, Accuracy and Delicacy. Championship class—Mansfield, Lowry, Bacheller, Skinner, Muller, Smyth and Young. First class—Golcher, Lovett, Mocker, Battu and Hibbard.

The Sunday contest classifications are: Event No. 1, Long Distance. Championship class—Mansfield, Lowry, Golcher and Daverkosen. First class—Reed, Young, Muller, Turner, Huyck, Grant, Everett and Smyth. Second class—Haight. Event No. 2, Distance and Accuracy. Championship class—Mansfield, Lowry, Golcher, Reed, Young, Huyck, Haight, Battu and Smyth. First class—Daverkosen, Muller, Turner, Grant, Everett and Hibbard. Event No. 3, Delicacy and Accuracy. Championship class—Mansfield, Lowry, Golcher, Young, Muller and Smyth. First class—Daverkosen, Reed, Turner, Huyck, Grant, Haight, Everett, Klein and Hibbard.

It will be noticed that Smyth's scores are at present incomplete, he will, however, be entitled to cast up the back scores on his return from the East, from the character of Mr. Smyth's work in the past he will no doubt qualify for the respective classes in which he has been placed.

The tables, etc., in detail are as follows:

Point that I expected any moment that it would force the kelp towing this run. It repeatedly rushed in on me, a movement that all black bass fishermen will remember with delight, then it circled round the boat rushing down like a tiger, then away again, coming at me from unexpected quarters to dash down or out as the case might be in a manner that was bewildering and exhausting. Time and again I had the fish within one hundred feet of the boat, then it would rush away and only the most constant watchfulness saved the thread of a line. In this fight of circles and rushes the fish occupied three hours, or from 6:30 to 9:30 and the most remarkable feature to me was that there was a gradual and unmistakable increase in its fighting strength until my own powers were on the wane. Three hours from the start the fish appeared to be five times as strong and active as he was at first, and he had then towed the boat at least five miles. This in itself, seems remarkable, but when I add that my oarsman was holding his oars against the fish most of the time and that the fish was not only moving a heavy boat and two men stern first against oars backing water and the break, some idea can be gained of the power and strength of this remarkable fish. At about 8:30 o'clock the fish headed out to sea again, but I succeeded in turning it, and finally it headed in the direction of Avalon and surged ahead, making a run of five miles so rapidly that the launch of Mr. Dorr, containing Mr. Scudder and Mr. Orr of Pasadena, and the launch of Mr. Heverix, who were watching the contest, were obliged to keep up at more than half speed. During this last hour the tuna repeatedly played upon the surface, rushing in on me making a magnificent fight and one which, to my mind, places it at the head of the game fishes of the world and I confess that at the end of four hours I was completely exhausted while I believe the fish was still in the full possession of its powers, as we had the greatest difficulty in taking it in, it making repeated rushes away, but finally my efficient boatman gaffed it but the gaff went to pieces under the strain and we supposed the fish was gone, but "Jim" was equal to the occasion and a larger gaff was used and in a heavy sea that threatened to fill the boat he slid the fish aboard directly off Avalon bay, and we then saw that there was some reason for the fight; that the fish was of unusual size. Counting the turns, I am confident that it took the boat (part of the time against the wind) for ten miles, during the most of which time Gardner was holding against it with his oars, and I am confident such a fish unfought could tow a boat thirty miles. It weighed 183 pounds, was about four feet in girth and measured six feet two inches in length, and is the largest tuna ever taken here and I believe it to be the hardest fighting game fish ever taken with rod and reel and a 21 strand line. The tuna is an oceanic fish only found in the high seas, which explains its presence at Catalina and no where else in Southern California. An illustration of the remarkable strength of the fish is seen in the catch of Mr. C. R. Scudder of St. Louis. After he played a one hundred and twenty-five pound fish for four hours, I was put aboard their boat, wishing to note the fighting qualities of the fish. It had then towed the boat four miles off shore, and for three hours longer the fish fought, wheeling about constantly, so that it was continual work, and when we were picked up we were out of sight of Avalon, and as near as we could judge nearly half way across the channel in a rough sea that made the outlook far from pleasant. All the tunas caught are shipped to San Francisco, where they bring a good price. In France they are the most expensive fish. The meat is rich and of excellent quality, resembling beef more than fish, and I am glad to say that none caught at Avalon go to waste. Scientifically the fish is known as Oreochromis thynnus, though I believe our Pacific fish differ specifically from the Atlantic form. I have sent data to the Smithsonian for comparison with the specimens there."

Coming Events.

July 16-17.—San Francisco Fly-Casting Club. Eighth series of Saturday and Sunday contests. Stow Lake, Golden Gate Park.

At the recent Grand Rapids fly-casting tournament, the Chicago sportsmen carried off the honors in the principal events. Averages of scores were rather less than anticipated, no records were broken.

The Game Law.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October.

The clerks of all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us that no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, Yolo and Yuba.

The changes are as follows: Alpine—Deer, Sept. 2 to Oct. 15. Alameda—Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 15. Colusa—Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 15. Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Contra Costa—Deer, July 20 to Sept. 2. (Use of dogs prohibited). El Dorado—Doves, July 20 to Feb. 1. Fresno—Market hunting and shipping game out of the county prohibited.

Humboldt—Grouse and Wilson snipe, Sept. 1 to Feb. 15. Killing of waterfowl prohibited between one-half hour after sunset and one-half hour before sunrise.

Kern—Shipping game out of the county prohibited. Lake—Deer, Aug. 1 to Oct. 1. Los Angeles—Shipping game to markets outside of the county prohibited.

Marin—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 15. Madera—Market hunting prohibited. Monterey—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1st. Orange—Doves, Aug. 1 to Feb. 1. Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).

Riverdale—Shipping game out of the county prohibited. San Benito—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. (Market hunting prohibited). Santa Barbara—Deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 14. Use of hounds prohibited. (Market hunting prohibited).

San Diego—Shipping quail out of the county prohibited. San Luis Obispo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. Doves, July 15 to Dec. 1. (Use of hounds prohibited). Hunting for markets situated outside of the county prohibited.

San Mateo—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. (Use of dogs prohibited). Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. (Shooting from boat at high tide prohibited).

Shasta—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. Sierra—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Sutter—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Doves, July 15 to Jan. 1. Trinity—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Tulare—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Shipping game out of the county prohibited.

Ventura—Deer, July 15 to Sept. 1. (Market hunting prohibited).

California Wing Club Shoot.

The live-bird shoot of the California Wing Club at Ingleside on Sunday last, had a somewhat smaller attendance of sportsmen than usual. A strong wind blowing across the traps and a lot of the fastest pigeons released from the Ingleside traps this season had a tendency to cut down scores materially. In the club medal race at twelve birds, not a man of the eleven who faced the traps was credited with a straight score. Ed Fay and A. M. Shields with eleven birds each were high men. Frank Vernon, Jackson and H. F. Wagner were next up, with ten birds each. C. A. Haight lost his sixth and tenth birds, dead out of bounds, thus keeping company with "Slade" in the nine hole. The scores, in detail, of the club race were as follows:

The Lincoln's Shoot at Alameda.

The regular monthly shoot of the Lincoln Gun Club at Alameda Junction last Sunday drew forth a large attendance of the members, representatives of other gun clubs were also in evidence on the grounds. The first event of the forenoon, the club medal race, at twenty-five birds shows an entry for thirty-five rounds at twenty-five blue-rocks, seven of the shooters shooting up back scores. Clarence Nauman shot in fine form and made the only clean score of the match. A reference to the scores made shows a high average by over fifty per cent of the shooters. Sport at Suisun.

A large gathering of sportsmen and trap-shooters were in attendance at the live-bird and blue-rock shoot held at Suisun last Sunday, under the auspices of the Suisun Shooting Club. A number of pool events were shot out at both sets of traps. Several shooters from this city were present, so also were representative trap shots from Dixon, Woodland, Sacramento, Stockton, Antioch, etc. The meeting was a success and everybody had a good time. Bill Nye officiated as yardmaster and Hello Eaton was the clerk of the course; great credit is due these gentlemen for the efficiency of their efforts. Otto Feudner was appointed secretary of the hammer Verein. His position on the fence was graceful and meditative; Feudner accepted the honors thrust upon him with some little reluctance, he was there to shoot and not to look on, the instigators of the shoot having advertised the game open-to-all. Feudner was barred because they thought he was too hard an opponent in the pool events. Stelling managed to pike in on one ten-bird event, the carelessness of the shooters cost them $22.00. Stelling made a straight score in the race. Stelling was immediately barred and took a seat on the fence with Otto. The inference drawn is that the Suisun shooters are not very skillful or perhaps that they love one dollar just as much as they do two.

Famed O'er Land and Sea.

The enterprise of the Hunter Arms Company has recently been shown in a most unique and interesting souvenir issued as a reminder to the public at large that the L. C. Smith gun "still leads." The portfolio contains eight superb water-color views of the principle battleships of the United States navy. These beautiful pictures of our armed leviathans of the deep whose work and actions are at present the cynosure of the world and whose glorious national history building is the pride of the American nation, commend themselves alike to our patriotism as well as to the artistic tastes of the American home.

The supply for distribution, is, of course, limited. The Hunter Arms Co, Fulton, N. Y., will furnish further particulars.

Good Scores in the Wind.

The regular semi-monthly shoot of the Stockton Gun Club at blue-rocks was held last Sunday afternoon on the grounds at Jackson's baths, in a gale of wind. Despite the heavy blow the scores made were above the average. Following are the scores: Longers 21, Jessen 19, Barnett 19, Turkham 19, G. Dietz 19, Brown 18, Mustro 18, Rich 18, Keyes 16, Umlsuff 16, Connors 16, W. Ditz 16, Jackson 15 and Welb 15.

Doves are very plentiful in the vicinity of San Pedro, San Mateo county.

Model Dairy Cow.

The model dairy cow is the Jersey. There has long been breeding to form, to color, to "points," to sundry specific ideas, but it is only since about the beginning of the current decade that breeding for productive profit has been made a well-defined purpose.

The Chicago Columbian Exposition undertook to emphasize this point, and tests there instituted ignored the fancy points of the several breeds, and asked for the cow which, being of an established heredity, would show the most valuable product for the least expenditure. The largest money's worth for the lowest cost was the keynote of the contention, and the question was, which breed of cows would carry off the palm?

Without attempting to go into detail of these tests, it may be of interest to quote the unquestioned conclusions of Mr. Fuller, the superintendent of the Jersey herd, confirmed by all the figures of the exactly kept record, which were these, as given in his report: Taking each separate test and taking all of them in the aggregate, the results conclusively show that the Jerseys

1. Gave more milk.
2. Made more cheese.
3. Made more butter.
4. Gave more solids than other butter fat.
5. Required less milk to make a pound of cheese.
6. Required less milk to make a pound of butter.
7. Produced a pound of butter at less cost.
8. Made cheese of a higher quality.
9. Made butter of a higher quality.

10. Demonstrated their ability to profitably assimilate a greater quantity of feed and return a net increased profit.

The tests prove these to be facts, and in proving them give the stamp of publicity and authenticity to the Jersey cow as the greatest dairy cow in all essentials that the world has ever produced.

Science has decreed that only the most economically productive dairy cow can be of profit to the farmer. And such a cow has to be more than the sporadic "phenomenon," the freak of the breeders' luck, which gives an enormous quantity of milk under forcing, and for a single week, or possibly month. Such a cow must have a record, both by right of heredity and the right of performance. By both only can she claim a warrant for a faith in her posterity. And the same are also demanded of her consort, with even more emphasis. The sire must have pedigree or he can not claim prepotency. And heredity for both sire and dam must evidence persistency and profit—for profit cannot come without persistency. In other words, only that cow can be profitable that shows a net excess of product over cost for the entire year, and for successive years. A month or two of large yield in fresh lactation, or under high feed, and a rapid dwindling after that, and "early going dry" does not make a profitable cow. It is the cow that yields a large average of rich milk, and whose year's work shows a large margin over her "keeping" and who can be expected (barring accident) to do this every year that the dairyman must look to for business success.

A butter cow is valuable in proportion to the smallness of feed required by her to make a pound of butter, as opposed to the prevailing custom of valuing cows by the number of pounds of butter they have made in any given time, regardless of the feed they have consumed in doing it.

Other things being equal, breeding animals are of value in proportion to their near relationship to great performers, and the number of the animals close up in their pedigrees, which are also of such blood as in great performers, and to the volume of that blood in each of their ancestors.

The longer the period of usefulness of a cow the more valuable she is, and furthermore some allowance ought to be made for the age as well as for the feed of a cow in valuing her test.

After a cow's ten-year-old form, add ten per cent. and for her product for each year after her tenth year, to ascertain her probable butter yield at her prime.

In the final estimate of cows, their breeding value should be rated in the order of the smallness of the food consumption to the pounds of butter made by them or by their ancestors.

Look for Some Advance in Wool.

Silberman Bros., wool merchants, Chicago, state their views relating to the outlook for business thus: "The actual results so far in our war with Spain make it patent to the most indifferent spectator that the final outcome in favor of this country is assured. The favorable conditions resulting from these circumstances will unquestionably tend to relieve the minds of timid manufacturers. The temporary interruption to the prosperous condition of this country prior to the threatened beginning of hostilities and since the actual outbreak of war has already experienced a vast improvement. The outcome of the victories already won will have on our industries and trades a far-reaching and beneficial effect, the full extent of which can not as yet be comprehended. We can see in the present situation certain factors that augur well for the coming of an era of prosperity, an era that is already exerting its favorable influences upon many industries and trades. These are the favorable conditions prevailing at the present time. Agricultural products, including our great staple wheat, are commanding prices that assure profit and prosperity to producers; enormous expenditures of ready money by the government; restored confidence in financial circles; enormous exports and greatly reduced importations of foreign goods; expansion of the country; new markets for our food stuffs and manufactured goods; relieved labor markets; busy mills, factories and shipyards; no over-production. These healthy conditions which confront us are all factors that will put an increased volume of money into circulation through innumerable channels, and we predict the largest trade for this fall that this country ever had. The business of the woolen mills in the last few months has been somewhat retarded, due to slack demand for their product and some countermanding of orders by clothing manufacturers, which has made less demand for wool. As a result of this prices have declined and are considerably lower than in December, 1897, but it is our opinion that with such conditions as above mentioned nothing will prevent wool from advancing several cents in the near future."

Last Monday's arrivals of horses at the Chicago market broke all records. The brisk demand for horses for Government service induced dealers to gather them up by the carload, and the total reached 1,608 head, an excess of 120 over any previous day's receipts. The glut and the withdrawal of the purchasing agents on Government account broke the back of the market badly. Receipts last week were the largest on record for the season, reaching a total of 3,900 head, which is nearly twice as many as arrived on the corresponding week last year. This general cleaning up of horses on the farms that were of common grade but suitable for army work ought to relieve the situation materially. With Maj. Aleshire and his assistants out of the market shippers will do well to refrain from sending medium class horses. It is not unlikely at all that more troops will be called into the field, and in that event the demand for army horses will be renewed. In such case it is probable that Government agents will have to be less particular in their requirements and accept a class of horses that they have been rejecting. It need scarcely be pointed out that the war promises to make a heavy drain on our already diminished stocks. The breeding season should not be neglected. Surely the signs of the times may be discerned by even the dullest observers. The steady depletion of our horse stock by the large export trade, the marked improvement in the demand for horses for business and pleasure purposes, and finally the call for horses for war all indicate the necessity for a resumption of breeding operations on the farms of the country. —Breeder's Gazette.

When churning the temperature of the cream should be sixty degrees in summer and sixty-two degrees in winter. A barrel-churn is my favorite. When the butter comes in small globules, draw off the milk, throw in a handful of salt and a bucketful of cold water. The salt will help separate the milk from the butter. Sway the churn back and forth gently, and draw off and put in more water until it runs off clear. Spread the butter evenly over the bottom of the churn, and with a paddle cut it up fine. Sprinkle with fine dairy-salt, according to taste of customers. One dealer wants an ounce to the pound, less than this suits most people. Then cut it in sections, placing one on the other; then chop fine again, until the salt is thoroughly distributed. Then pat and work gently into a long roll. Cut into pound sections and print. Chopping will not break the grain like working. Butter treated thus is firm and yellow, with no streaks, needs no working over and when broken apart shows the fine golden grain and has the sweet, rich butter flavor so highly appreciated by customers.

Sheep men in West Texas and in New Mexico are now sowing rape seed to provide green food for their flocks. Experiments have proved entirely satisfactory. It matures and is ready for use in six to eight weeks, and will provide several cuttings until frost appears. It takes about five pounds to the acre, when sown broadcast, but when drilled one half that quantity is ample. Some West Texas farmers think that in time, rape will supplement alfalfa. This, however, is not probable as alfalfa is of perennial growth, and does not need planting when once a stand has been obtained.

One year ago the demand was for heavy, fat and unfinished cattle, and such stock commanded the highest price. At present the demand is for light to medium weights, and heavy, fat, well-finished cattle are not wanted on most markets and when sold the price is far below that paid for light to medium weights. Every shipper knows only too well that the demand is always for what he does not have and the present market conditions prove the truth of the assertion. Knowing this to be the case it is well to look for the cause and endeavor to profit in the future by the lesson now being learned and too often dearly paid for. We suppose that by next year the demand will switch around the other way and thus vice versa we may never take on just what the packing house buyer pretends he wants. At best we are at his mercy the hour we arrive on the market.

Geldings that weigh a ton and over they call draft horses nowadays. Of course they are not as easily produced as "chunks," but they bring the price. The market at public sale was topped for the season last Thursday by a six-year-old chestnut Percheron gelding that weighed 2,100 lbs., and brought $325. He was in a lot fed by Biers & Peterson, Tonica, Ill., and was taken by Neumond Bros. for export to Germany. He was a "topper" in conformation and quality as well as weight.—Chicago Breeders' Gazette.

In the Eastern and Middle states sheep have ceased to be grown for mutton. All the mutton used is that of old and discarded ewes, unless it comes from the far West. The retail markets want only lambs. Mutton isn't "in it." It is wisdom to push lambs to a finish as soon as possible, for a six months' fat lamb will pay better than to keep it a year, and a two months' fat lamb, if reasonable, will bring more than a six months' lamb.

The English say that the best mutton in the world is produced by the use of a Southdown ram with a Merino ewe, and their butchers claim they not only give the finest quality of meat, but have the smallest per centage of offal and a desirable lightness of bone. With these sheep there is a certainty that their good qualities will in a great measure be transmitted to their offspring.

GEO. SHERMAN, Berkeley, says: "Send another 25-lb. box of Wellington's Improved Egg Food. With Roup or Cholera it is a sure cure and makes the flock all right in a few days." Remember—Insist upon having Wellington's Improved Egg Food and no other. If your dealer does not keep it, insist on his getting it.

Coach Horse Notes

Dufor & Co., exporters to Antwerp, Belgium, and Adam McHattie, exporter to Glasgow, Scotland, both operating on the Chicago market, last week bought handsome, large pairs of half-bred French coachers. The pair that went to Belgium was shipped to market by G. W. Tagard, El Paso, Ill.

It is all against the dealer to admit that he cannot buy as many good horses as he needs, no matter what the sort, but the dealer has finally been forced to admit that he cannot get nearly enough ones, especially of the carriage and coach type, to meet the demand. Under such circumstances no one who owns a nice, full made, upheaded, stylish, highstepping gelding need begin a hurry to accept the first bid made him. He will find plenty of men willing to bid up full value, if he will only set about that he has such a one for sale.

It Never Fails to Cure.

SINKIN, Mo., Nov. 10, 1897.

The Caustic Balsam you sent me is the best liniment I ever saw. It is all that you claim for it. I have tried it on horses, and my family have used it, and it never fails to cure. I do not intend to be without it. I am doing all I can for it, but people are afraid of it.

EUGENE STEERS.

No occasion to be afraid, as it is absolutely a safe and reliable remedy for any one to use.—L. W. Co.

GENEVA, N. Y.

I have used Absorbine, with excellent results, for Puffs and Soft Enlargements.

Yours truly, S. H. BEAR.

THE officers of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club will be the same as last year. At a meeting of the stockholders held last Thursday, Major S. A. Androus was re-elected President and F. H. Green Secretary, and all members of the Board of Directors were re-elected. The affairs of the Club are in a most prosperous condition, and there are but few changes contemplated. It has been decided to offer no purse of less value than $400 at the coming winter meeting, while it is intended to offer tempting specials from time to time. There is to be a reduction in the number of stakes, but the value is to be increased. By offering the same sum of money for a two instead of a four-furlong race, the Ingleside Stake should secure a splendid list of entries the coming season. The California Derby and California Oaks are still to be retained. The present calculation is to announce about twelve stakes.

Southern Oregon Program.

Secretary Pendleton of the First Southern Oregon Agricultural District sends the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN the following program of the races to be held on the Association's track at Medford, Oregon, September 27th to October 1st inclusive. The Secretary fails to state the date of closing the entries to these purses, but that will doubtless come later on.

First Day—Tuesday, September 29th—

Trotting, 2:20 class, 2 in 3, purse $175.
Running, one-quarter mile and repeat, purse $75.

Running, one mile dash, purse $125.

Second Day—Wednesday, September 28th—

Trotting, 3:00 class, 2 in 3, district, purse $125.

Trotting 2:30, class, 2 in 3, purse $150.

Running, one-half mile dash, purse $75.

Third Day—Thursday, September 29th—

Trotting, 2:50 class, 2 in 3, district, purse $125.

Running, three-quarter mile dash, purse $100.

Running, mile race, purse $20.

Fourth Day—Friday, September 30th—

Trotting, 2:25 class, 2 in 3, purse $150.

Trotting, two-year-olds and under, 2 in 3, purse $125.

Running, one and one-eighth mile dash, purse $150.

Fifth Day—Saturday, October 1st—

Trot and Pace, free for all, 3 in 5, purse $200.

Running, five-eighths mile dash, purse $75.

Running, Consolation Novelty, one mile, purse $100.

Note—In all harness races, pacers with records five seconds slower than the class are eligible.

THE Rural Spirit says the track on which Chehalis recently paced a trial in 2:10½ is a one-half mile cow trail, and that if Chehalis can stand such punishment it would like to see the pacer that can beat him over a smooth track.

GAUDAUR, a three-year-old by Guy Wilkes, dam by Le Grand, trotted a half for Harry Sti son at the Cleveland track in 1:08½.

LENA WILKES, who broke down at Cleveland last year, after lowering the matinee record to 2:15½, is now going sound.

STAR POINTER will go against the Peoria track record of 2:05 the week of the summer meeting, which opens on July 12th.

JOHN TILDEN thinks that Ella T. 2:08½, by Altamont, will be a better mare this year than ever before.

NANDY LEE, dam of Nancy Hanks, 2:04, died at I. H. Supplee's farm at Bryn Mawr, Pa., on June 3d.

ADWILD, by Advertiser, in James Golden's stable, died last week. She was a promising mare.

BETONICA 2:10½, has arrived at the Dover, N. H., track and is now in training.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 64,430
Annie A. Ackerman, plaintiff, vs. Charles E. Ackerman, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA send greeting to Charles E. Ackerman, defendant.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's desertion of plaintiff, said desertion having continued for more than two years last past and having been without the consent or connivance of plaintiff; also, for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 3d day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. No. 63,816.
Susie M. Lewiston, plaintiff vs. Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA send greeting to Thos. E. Lewiston, defendant.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days. The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's failure to provide for more than two years last past for plaintiff the common necessities of life, said failure to so provide being caused by the idleness of defendant. Plaintiff also asks for the custody of the minor child, the issue of the marriage, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made. All of which will more fully appear in the complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 14th day of April, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."

Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

10,000 ENDORSERS!

"I have thoroughly tested CONTINENTAL OINTMENT, and I have found it the best article for its purpose I have ever used. It keeps the hoof soft and healthy and growing, and for cracked heels, scratches and the like, it is simply perfect."

WM. B. FASIG,

(Then Secretary N. O. Fair Association)

"I had a fine pacer and his feet were sore and full of fever and corns; he was not fit to drive on the roads, and to-day I can drive him as far and as hard as anybody's horse, and it will not make him sore nor lame. He was cured with CONTINENTAL OINTMENT. Our druggist keeps it through my recommendation."

No. 1—Trotting, 2:12 Class.....	$1,000	No. 4—Pacing 2:12 Class.....	$1,000
No. 2—Trotting, 2:17 Class.....	1,000	No. 5—Pacing, 2:25 Class.....	1,000
No. 3—Trotting, 2:27 Class.....	1,000

ENTRIES CLOSE JUNE 27, 1898.

In order to make the coming Los Angeles meeting the most successful ever held in the West it has been decided to only charge three per cent. entrance for the above fixed events, but five per cent additional is to be deducted from money-winners. In a nutshell, it only costs thirty dollars to trot or pace in any one of the events, entrance money must accompany the entry or the entry will not be accepted.

Los Angeles Will Announce a Complete Harness Program in July.

CONDITIONS

American Association rules to govern. Mile heats, three in five to harness. Entrance fee three per cent., with five per cent additional from money-winners. Entries close on June 27th, and records made in 1898 will not constitute a bar.
